Candlelight Vigil Held In Honor Of Abortion Case

By JENNIFER MYERS
Staff Writer

A candlelight vigil was held in front of the Pitt County Courthouse Wednesday night by the National Organization For Women to commemorate the anniversary of the Roe vs. Wade decision legalizing abortion.

The decision was passed by the Supreme Court on January 22, 1973, allowing women to have the choice of terminating pregnancy.

The vigil began at 5:45 with a few moments of silence for women who died due to illegal abortions.

National Organization For Women (NOW) chapters all over the United States, at the state and local level, held similar vigils. On March 9, a national vigil will be held in Washington, D.C. for chapters on the east coast, and one week later in Los Angeles for chapters on the west coast. One of the reasons for these vigils is the re-evaluation of the Human Life Amendment by the legislature. A possibility exists that the amendment may be changed.

According to Fran Parrott of the Greenville Chapter of NOW, "This could be a backward step. NOW believes in pro-choice. Right-to-life groups falsely say we're pro-abortion. We are not opting for abortion but believe that women should have the right to make their own decision without government interference."

"NOW believes that a pregnancy is a private matter, and we advocate responsible choice, one not to be made flip-pantly. It is a personal decision, and a woman should be allowed to make her own decision. Approximately 70 percent of the country's population believes in having the choice to make this type of decision."

Opposing NOW in the Greenville are the pro-lifers, the conservative churches, and the National Right to Life group. Two prayer vigils were scheduled Tuesday and Thursday for downtown, by opposing organizations. Also, this past Sunday, Sanctity of Life ceremonies were held in some Baptist churches. These are pro-life movements which coincided with the anniversary of the Roe vs. Wade decision.

The purpose of NOW is "to bring women into full participation in American society to have an equal relationship with men, and to be accepted as equals," according to Parrott. In the Greenville chapter, both men and women, young and old, participate.

SGA Recommends Fall Break Change

By LANCE SEARL
Staff Writer

Due to differing faculty and student interests, the ECU Student Legislature recommended a change in the 1986 Fall Break date from October 13-14 to October 23-24 or 27-28.

The original date set for Fall Break would apparently fall in conflict with Homecoming weekend which is scheduled for October 18-19.

SGA President David Brown said the calendar change would enable the Homecoming Steering Committee to prepare more adequately and would give ECU students a better opportunity to get into the Homecoming spirit. Otherwise, said Brown, "the students would be coming off a long, fun-filled weekend at the beach."

Attendance, especially of the parents would also most likely benefit from the date change. There would be a larger crowd at the Homecoming game, tentatively scheduled against Georgia Southern.

In other business, the Legislature appropriated $200 for a Bell Tower Design Contest. The contest would award $125 for the best design and $50 and $25 to the runner-ups. The contest is an attempt to find the top student ideas for a campus tower to be built in the future.

Also, $412 was granted to Nursing Student Organization enable nine of their representatives to attend state and national conventions later in the year.

Placement Center Prepares Students

By MIKE LUDWICK
Staff Writer

The Career Planning and Placement Office conducted a general information meeting yesterday in Mendenhall. The meeting was designed to acquaint students with the services provided by the Placement Office.

"The Career Planning and Placement Office serves the students said," Furney James, director of the Placement Office in an interview. "We're here to assist people in making a transition from education to the world of work," he added.

The Career Planning and Placement Office prepares students for the world of work by helping them with resumes, interviewing skills, company information, and leads to job openings.

However, before the office can help you, you have to register with the office. "You register with us by picking up a packet of registration materials, which includes a resume format, data sheet, reference forms and ad-information packet he/she returns it to the Placement Office, then they are registered Furney added.

One of the more valuable services the Placement Office provides is coordinating on-campus interviews. Companies from across the U.S. come to ECU to interview graduating seniors for possible positions with their companies. Some of the more prominent companies that will be here in January are Burlington Industries, Peoples Bank, Roadway Express and Planters National Bank.

Anyone can use the services and resources at the Career Planning and Placement Office; however, said Furney, a student must be a senior before they can register with the office and be eligible for on-campus interviews. Furney added that students should register with the office as soon as they become seniors in order to take full advantage of the office's services.

Besides receiving The Job Guide which lists job openings that a student can apply for directly, added Furney, seniors are able to research company backgrounds. He added knowing about the company is vital in an interview.

Furney said that the Career Planning and Placement Office regularly conducts resume writing and interviewing skills workshops. Resume workshops will be held Jan. 24 and 30 at 3 p.m. and interviewing skills workshops on Jan. 20 and 28 at 3 p.m. All the sessions are held in the Bloxton House. Furney urged all seniors to come by and register with the Placement Office as soon as possible.

Most Americans Diet, Weight Conscious

By CAROLYN DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

According to a report recently published in Time, almost 90 percent of all Americans think they are overweight. The same reports states that four-fifths of all girls in the fourth grade are dieting.

These facts may explain why dieting and fitness have become two of America's favorite pastimes. However, despite the $5 billion we spent last year trying to slim down, the U.S. population has been called the world's fattest.

"We are a population of overabundance," explains Susie Bredderman, MSRD, a nutritionist with the Department of Family Medicine at the ECU School of Medicine. She concludes that the weight problem in our country is a result of both hereditary and environmental factors. This opinion is shared by Mary Elesha-Adams, Health Educator with the Student Health Services at ECU.

States Elesha-Adams, "When parents have poor eating habits, they are passed on to the children." In addition, they have a 40 percent chance of being obese as well. This risk doubles when both parents are obese.

Hereditas aside, according to Bredderman, people may overeat for several reasons, including the influence of commercials on TV and radio, stress at home and on the job, and boredom.

It has long been noted that the emphasis Americans place on being thin, especially through the media, has a great influence on how we see ourselves. "Americans are brainwashed," says Bredderman, "into thinking we all need to look like the media tells us we should."

Continual dissatisfaction with ourselves leads to the frequent "discoveries" of new dieting gimmicks, such as eating kelp or grapefruit to burn fat, and diets which recommend eating one thing all day, such as ice cream or cookies.

"People want a quick way to lose weight rather than take weight off the right way and stay happy with themselves," says Bredderman. However, the most effective way to lose weight and keep it off is not to do it quickly. Experts recommend a goal of 1-2 pounds per week. To lose more than that may result in water loss in which case the weight will be

Candidates For Shuttle Ride

By BETH WHICKER
Assistant News Editor

A dream may come true soon for two people at ECU's school of Medicine. Janice Shipley and Lee Williams will find out today if they will be aboard the space shuttle in 1987.

Shipley, a physician in the Family Medicine Program and Williams a research associate in microbiology and immunology, were nominated to fill two technical positions aboard the shuttle in the May 1987 mission.

Both were chosen by ECU Assistant Professor Carlo V. Bruschi, whose research project will be aboard the 1987 shuttle flight.

Bruschi, upon learning of his projects place on the shuttle placed an ad in the Daily Reflector asking for applicants who were qualified to conduct the experiment in space.

Bruschi interviewed 20 applicants for the job. "All of the applicants seemed to be highly motivated and dedicated individuals, not simply curiosity seekers."

For Shipley and Williams the competition has just begun. Today, the group will be cut from 20 semi-finalists to eight. The final cut will determine the two who will be aboard the shuttle will be made later in March.

The position involves dedicating two years to the shuttle program. The first year will involve training at NASA labs around the country and a few labs in Europe. Both Shipley and Williams describe the shuttle flight as "the dream of a lifetime."

"I guess all of those childhood fantasies were brought back up when I saw the article," said Shipley. "I thought, what a neat thing to do — the excitement of combining something scientific with the excitement of going."

Bruschi said both of the candidates are well qualified on scientific grounds. Williams, who holds a Ph.D. in medicinal chemistry from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, has the skills required for the shuttle mission.

Shipley holds a medical degree and undergraduate degrees in biology, languages, and a graduate degree in microbiology. She serves as co-chief of the medical school's largest residence program.

Williams claims to have no fear of the shuttle mission. "They've been sending up astronauts for I don't know how long and they've never had anybody go up that has not come down."

Shipley, who is taking flying lessons admits being selected for the space duty made her realize the involvement of the job.

When it finally came down to it and Bruschi said "Do you really want to go?", I did have to sit and think about it because that is scary. But all I could think is that it would be great."

Interestingly, smokers have been proven to burn 10 percent more calories than non-smokers. This may explain weight gains people experience when they quit smoking.

Methods for solving a weight problem range from diet aids to fad diets to surgery. Gastric bypass, stapling the stomach to reduce the amount of food it can hold, has been used in the past for the massively obese. Another operation, the lipectomy is used to suck fat cells from fat deposits. Once the fat cells are gone, fat cannot form in that area again.

"You can't help but think that because of the level pornography has invaded our society, they just felt like it's an area government shouldn't be messing with," Spivey said. "That's certainly not my position."

"I do think maybe there is a feeling that as long as people don't force it on me or force my kids to see it, if someone wants to show it in the privacy of his own home, they are going to be more tolerant."

Students Earn Credit In Italy

By JENNIFER MYERS

The College of Arts and Sciences, as it has in the past two years, is planning a summer school session in Ferrara, Italy. The College of Arts and Sciences offers six hours of course credit in humanities and fine arts through the summer session abroad.

The summer session, from May 14 to June 18, will be held at the University of Ferrara with classes being taught by ECU professors in Italian Art, and Italian Literature and Culture, as well as a class in conversational Italian, taught by an Italian professor.

Students will live at a hotel in Ferrara, and eat meals at the university, which will allow them to interact with the Italian students.

Along with class instruction, field trips are scheduled to Milan, Florence, Venice, Ravenna, and Bologna. Studies are planned to tie in with the beautiful surroundings the students will experience while in Italy.

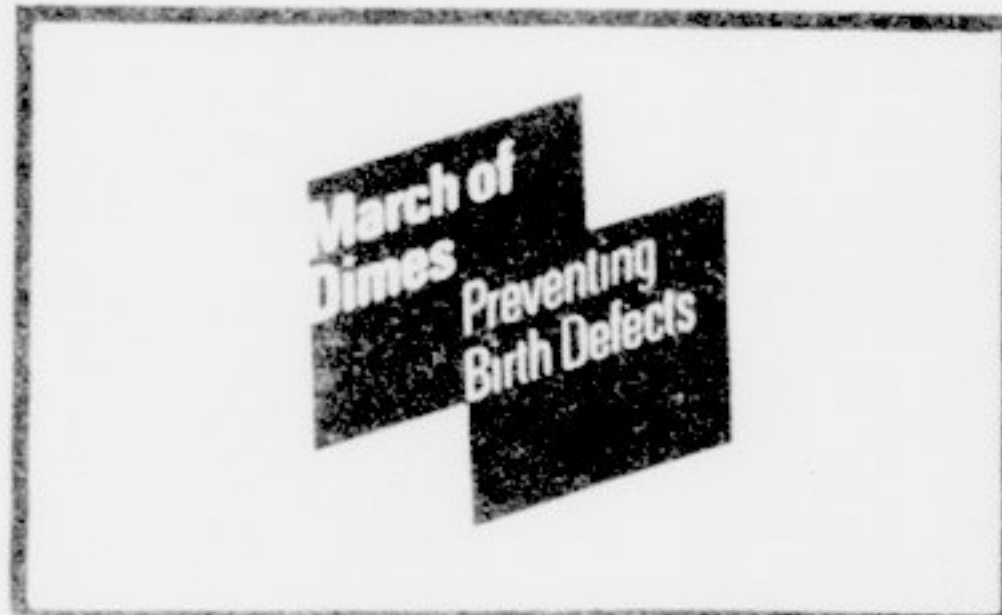

Eugene Ryan, Dean of the College of Arts & Sciences, originated the program two years ago. He was the chief organizer, and previously taught class in the program, according to Ryan, "Ferrara is the most beautiful city in Italy. The students have plenty of opportunity to get to know the Ferrara students. This is an excellent program."

Anyone who is eligible to attend summer school may apply for the classes in Italy. Fifteen students attended last year, and eight the year before. Applications are available in Brewster Building, Office of the Dean, College of Arts and Sciences. A $100 deposit is due with the completed application by February 14. Interviews will be held, and once selected, the student is required to pay the balance of $700, due in late April. The total cost of $800 includes lodging, transportation in Italy and fieldtrips. Additional costs include ECU summer school tuition, and roundtrip airfare between New York and Milan.

Re-Districting Plan For City

By MIKE LUDWICK
Staff Writer

The League of Women Voters sponsored a public forum Tuesday night to discuss the proposed re-districting plan of Greenville.

The proposal, said Patricia Dunn who organized the forum, is to divide the City of Greenville into four districts. The plan is to have one representative from each district plus two at-large council members and a mayor. Dunn said that the plan will keep the number of council members at six, plus the mayor. The League of Women Voters sponsored the forum as way to inform the citizens of Greenville about the proposal.

SGA President David Brown attended the forum at the First Presbyterian Church where about 40 people came to learn about the proposed re-districting. Brown said that the dividing line would divide ECU in half. College Hill would be in one district while Central and West Campus would be in another.

There had been speculation that ECU students might be subdivided in order to keep ECU students from having excessive political power. However, Brown said, "I wouldn't say the city has slighted the students. I think we came out all-right."

Because the City of Greenville comes under the Voting Rights Act of 1965, any proposed election method would have to get clearance from the Justice Department said Dunn. Therefore, in the next few weeks there will be numerous public hearings in various neighborhoods throughout Greenville. The purpose of these public hearings is to elicit citizen's feelings and gain their input into the districting proposal.

The American Heart Association recommends that people trying to lose weight should not eat at fast food restaurants more than once a month.

"Food Preoccupied People" includes what Elisha-Adams describes as "probably the rest of us." Those who are food-preoccupied "overeat in a lower level," and are mostly women. These people do not vomit or abuse laxatives like anorexics or bulimics, but they do not lose weight. Treatment for these people is not a diet but rather a change of eating habits.

Roe Vs. Wade Biology Is Not Destiny

When I was home over Christmas my sister, her husband and I got into a lengthy discussion that centered primarily on the topics of politics and religion. My sister calls herself a Christian of the "Born-Again" variety and she votes a straight Republican ticket as does her husband.

Since I have known this for some time it did not surprise me to find myself in disagreement with the two of them, though I have the utmost respect for both of them as human beings, quite apart from their philosophical and ideological convictions. What did surprise me, however, was to discover that my sister, who has never been in a demonstration in her life, had become an avid "pro-lifer" and is planning to march in a pro-life rally in Washington this spring.

In talking with her I conceded that I was on the opposite side of the abortion issue from her, but that I could understand her concern for human life. Then I asked her if she spent any time working to end world hunger or if she would be willing to do so. She replied that she would not because, according to the Bible, it is more important to save the immortal soul of a woman who is considering abortion than it is to save the mortal body of a child who is dying of hunger.

Now, my sister is not a bad person. In fact, I think that she is one of God's finer accomplishments. But, in this matter and in other political matters, she has been swept up in forces that are larger than the spiritual pieties to which she owes her primary allegiance. Hence, her reply.

The abortion debate hinges on two fundamental arguments: 1) The fetus is a human life and abortion is murder. 2) A woman has the right to choose whether or not she wants to have a child since she will have to carry the fetus for nine months, give birth to the baby and possibly raise it. Most of the time the people who advance these two points of view spend their time arguing past one another.

The primary problem with the so-called "pro-choice" argument is that nobody in that camp really seems to be addressing the fundamental premise of the "anti-choice" camp. In other words, nobody has put forth an argument to explain why a fetus is not a human life and thus why abortion is not murder. It seems to me that that is an unavoidable issue that must be addressed by anybody who sanctions legalized abortion.

Since yesterday was the 13th anniversary of Roe Vs. Wade and I do not want to see the Supreme Court reverse itself I will attempt to do so myself, though I do not relish the prospect. At this time the conventional wisdom is that human consciousness is a developmental phenomenon. There is, in fact, a whole school of developmental psychology founded by such thinkers as Jean Piaget. The developmental school advances the notion, generally speaking, that human consciousness and the individual's conception of his environment, time and himself is not fixed and set for all time but that it evolves and develops.

With this understanding it is possible to see that human life is not something which is from the moment of conception, but rather it is something which comes to be. This is true because when people speak of human life they are really talking about that which distinguishes human life from other forms of life — human consciousness.

While there is no evidence that God has ordained, as the Supreme Court did, that human life begins at the point of viability, (or when a fetus becomes capable of sustaining its own life) there is no real evidence to refute that. Of course, as "pro-lifers" or "anti-choicers" are quick to point out, where human life is concerned the burden of proof is on those who argue in favor of legal abortions.

Yet, evidence from the medical community which suggests that higher brain activity (The activity of the neocortex and the conscious centers of the brain) begins sometime during the second trimester adds considerable weight to the pro-choice point of view. For, since the brain activities that are operating before this point only control reflex and involuntary functions rather than conscious activities, it cannot be said in any meaningful sense that human consciousness is present.

To me what that means, at the risk of sounding disingenuous or even glib, is that those who are expending their moral fervor in the "pro-life" movement would do better to become vegetarians and join the animal rights movement. It is clear, after all, that cows and chimpanzees have more highly evolved brains and consciousnesses than a two-month old fetus. Of course I realize that this is never going to happen. Christians believe that the fetus has a soul, a concept which is more ambiguous and difficult to define than consciousness, if that is possible.

While it is not prudent to get into metaphysics because of limits on space, suffice it to say that it is not untenable to suppose that there is an element in human beings which survives death and precedes birth. But the burden of proof for such things is on those of us who believe in them and then we must argue the laws, mechanisms or processes by which they operate. Unitarians and Quakers, for example, do not share the same metaphysical outlook as Mormons or as Baptists.

What we can empirically verify here and now is that the fetus is not a human life and cannot be proven to be a human life by virtue of any known measurement. Yet, the mother is clearly a human life and to rob her of control over her own body would be to create an error and to perpetrate a grave injustice. It would be the supreme act of arrogance. Perhaps when we have fed the hungry, healed the sick and sheltered the homeless we can indeed begin to seriously discuss an alternative to abortion. But, in a world where social programs, which have children as their beneficiaries, are raped by the same folks who clamor for an end to legal abortion, adding more unplanned-for children to the population seems like a less than inspired idea.

Campus Forum

Republicans Launch Counterattack

Having carefully analyzed the thoughts expressed in the Tuesday edition of CAMPUS FORUM, I once again concluded that liberals set their agenda around criticizing Conservatives. Maybe they have just read the East Carolinian for too long? I have yet to here one single comprehensive proposal from the leftside of the ECU community. It only seems that they can continually blame conservatives for this or blame conservatives that.

If they intend to become critics by trade they probably should get their facts straight! First of all, Mr. Chenery, Ronald Reagan has never voted on a tax proposal in his life. Unlike Tip O'Neal and Dan Rostenkowski, President Reagan has never run for, nor been elected to Congress. If you will refer back to your Pals 1010 text you will see that all taxing originates in the US House which remains in the control of Tip O'Neal and the liberal Democrats, not conservatives (Be they Republicans or Democrats). More specifically taxing power is channeled through the House Ways and Means Committee, that is Tip's House NOT the White House. Secondly, Mr. McCrady, while you make the statement that Ronald Reagan and Senator Helms are stripping individuals of their rights by seeking to ban Abortion, what they are in fact doing is trying to protect the life of innocent victims that do not yet have the capacity to speak for themselves. If you will refer to the US Constitution, you will find that one of the explicit duties of our federal government is to protect the lives of all Americans. The Constitution, unlike modern man, makes no attempt at playing God. It makes no distinction between the born and the unborn.

Personally, I enjoy hearing the rhetoric which flows from liberal ideologues. Their continuous efforts to down grade the conservative youth movement only seems to give our numbers added strength. Having been a College Republican for three years I am proud to say that our movement is gaining momentum and one sweet day will run all pacifists, lazy liberals, and moral outcasts back into the closet:

A) Pacifists — People who would tell you that contrary to Soviet expansionism and the very edicts of THE COMMUNIST MANIFESTO, the threat of the end of free speech, freedom to travel, freedom to set your own career goals, and to worship the God of your choice will never come to American soil. They say that we really do not need a strong national defense because no communist movement is really interested in the vast amount of natural and human resources which the USA has been so richly blessed with.

B) Lazy Liberals — These are the people who do not believe in the "American Dream." They do not think that a man should be able to achieve anything he desires. Instead they would say that government best knows your needs as an individual, so just let them tax away your income and let the bureaucrats provide for our social needs.

C) Moral Outcasts — You guessed it!! Homosexuals, secular humanists, and baby-killers. These are the types who have no respect for their fellow man. While people should have the freedom to do as they choose, should that freedom infringe on the rights of others? These people reply by saying,

"Me first!"

If you share my distaste for these types of attitudes, then you too belong in the ranks of the College Republicans. To express the urgency of conservatives staking their claim in the political process, consider our opposition the "Three Little (Liberal) Pigs" described above. One more thing, you don't have to have a $20.00 haircut to join. I never pay more than $5.00. College Republicans... The New Republican Generation!

Gordon Walker
Senior, Economics

Republicans Defended

Mr. Chenery's letter scurrilously attacking our (The College Republicans) membership chairman, Lance Hardin, was unfortunate. After reading Mr. Hardin's letter over again, I can't see how it is an "insult to thinking Americans," "pompous rhetoric," or how it "broadcasts the fact that he lacks any personal original thought." Any intelligent man can read Mr. Hardin's letter and discount those ludicrous assertions.

Next, Mr. Chenery, you should look in a biology book and read what "genus" and "species" are. Your knowledge of Republican philosophy is highly sophomoric. Government is supposed to dictate some morals; the debate is which morals. Mr. Hardin's letter states his personal thoughts on the "basic differences" between the two parties. It was not meant to be read with the impact of a doctoral dissertation.

Also, I have a razor-cut hairstyle which cost me $4.00. I bought my five Polo shirts from Hyman Brody on sale at $17.50 apiece. My penny loafers cost $23.00 in 1976. I have had them resoled twice and I keep them shined.

Mr. Chenery must be embarrassed that he ignorantly said the President votes on bills. He doesn't; he signs them into law or vetoes them. As for Mrs. Burford, her E.P.A. administration made former Governor Hunt promise before construction to bridge 400 acres of wetlands in the F7 corridor of I-40 to receive federal funds for the project. He promised to do it and received the funds. His Department of Transportation destroyed the wetlands and paved it over anyway. No politician or party holds a monopoly on environmental issues.

As for Mr. Chenery's ideas on foreign policy, some of us believe in helping people fight communism to be or remain free so that American will set the standards for freedom in the world instead of being the refugee camp of the world. Mr. Chenery, you have no right to impose your immorality or lack of character on me I could say, but you do. You never answered the question, "Do you consider communism as one of the greatest problems of our world?"

Mr. Chenery the most hypocritical thing you said in your letter was "let there be an end...to ignorant prejudice."

As for Mr. McCrady's letter, I want you to know that Mr. Hardin's letter was endorsed Tuesday night by the ECU College Republicans and our state and national organizations plan to use his letter as an example of a good recruitment letter, so it is not an embarrassment to Republicans. Also most conservatives hold the views stated in his letter. If they do not we consider them liberal or moderate. Moderate being what liberals are currently calling themselves to the detriment of true moderates. Mr. Hardin stated that "a liberal society more resembles what Lenin had in mind;" he did not say Democrats support the doctrine of Lenin as you claimed.

Mr. McCrady saying that conservatives want to deny education by making student loans more difficult is wrong. Conservatives have been instrumental in making loans more available to poor and truly needy students instead of those who want to send their children to expensive private out-of-state institutions and maintain their current income. Those who are able should pay even if it is difficult for a few years.

I challenge you, Mr. McCrady, to back up your allegations of what Barry Goldwater and William F. Buckley completely said. I don't have a complete text of everything these men have said; however, I find it unlikely they said what you claim. They may have and I'll believe it when I see it.

If you raise taxes the deficit will grow because the Democrat House of Representatives in its typical irresponsibility will continue to spend more and more. A precedent must be set by halting taxation. (Mr. McCrady, with your views I predict you will be offered a scholarship from ECU's political science department to be a graduate student. That is where you will be least harmful to us with your views.)

Swimming

In the Jan. 16 issue of the East Carolinian we were informed that ex-swim coach Dr. Martinez was preparing to retire from the university. What caught my attention was his comments about sports in general and particularly those addressed towards swimming. Mr. Martinez says that he has never really been impressed with sports and that to watch the young kids competing at age group swim meets is about as exciting as watching the grass grow. As a former scholarship swimmer for ECU I have to find myself more than slightly perturbed at his attitude. In my 13 years as a swimmer this is my first encounter with such a negative attitude in a person so well respected in the sport of swimming. What a facade his 32 years of involvement in the sport must have been. How can ECU recruit top notch athletes when the chairman of the department of health and physical education finds sports unimpressive. Imagine how much he must have hated his job all that time. It is sad to see a man who has built his entire life and career upon the sport, express his views of swimming in such negative terms. Maybe he finds grass growing more exciting than watching the development of fine young athletes, aspiring Olympians, in action.

First Porn Case Fails

WILMINGTON, N.C. (UPI) — The state's new anti-pornography law has failed its first criminal court test but the district attorney on the losing side said Wednesday prosecutors won't give up the battle against smut peddlers.

"I don't think after one trial and one jury verdict we can throw in the towel and say this is a bad blow," said New Hanover District Attorney Jerry Spivey. "As other cases are developed — and I'm sure other charges will be filed — we have to keep presenting them (court cases) to the jury and determine what our community standards are in the state of North Carolina," Spivey said.

But Spivey said he thought if ever there was a business the pornography law was intended to regulate, your 421 Video News Center was it. The building had boarded up windows and a sign that read, "if nudity offends you, do not enter."

Inside, law enforcement officers found video viewing booths where they could insert a token and push a button for viewing a pornographic movie.

William Jackson, a clerk at the Video Center, was found innocent Tuesday of a felony charge of disseminating pornography after selling an undercover agent a videotape of a movie titled, "Battle of the Stars, Round Two: East versus West."

Spivey said the videotape depicted a broad range of sexual activity — including group sex, male and female homosexual love scenes and closeups of sexual organs. "It covered the whole waterfront," said Spivey.

But jurors spent the afternoon watching the film and heard two sex therapists testify for the defense about its positive benefits before returning the not guilty verdict.

Tim Britton of Lenoir Community College said the film could help couples learn "a healthy interest in new sexual alternatives."

David Knox of ECU said the videotape would have some political value because it showed "equality of gender role" in the sexual acts depicted.

Both therapists said the movie avoided sexual acts with prurient appeal such as violent subjugation, bestiality or sex with children.

Jackson's lawyers also argued he was only a clerk and did not know the exact content of the videotape.

The fact that Jackson was merely an employee may have played a role in the jury's verdict, Spivey said. But the laws also judges what is pornographic according to community standards, and Spivey said those standards may have been eroded by a deluge of pornography, particularly in urban areas.

Mysterious Fighting Continues

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Rival Marxist factions fought in South Yemen's capital Tuesday and both sides claimed victory, but diplomats in the Red Sea area said it was impossible to tell who was winning the power struggle that began more than a week ago.

Diplomats in San'a, capital of neighboring Yemen, said his country and the Soviet Union were trying to arrange a cease-fire. South Yemen, a small Arab nation on the Arabian Peninsula's south-western tip, is allied with the Soviet Union and provides it with two strategic military bases.

The diplomats said many fighters supporting President Ali Nasser Mohammed were believed holed-up in the outskirts of Aden, a position easy to defend because of difficult access.

Civilians evacuated from Aden described the seaside capital as a "city of death," its streets full of bloated bodies and burned-out tanks.

Rebels led by Abdul-Fattah Ismail and Ali Antar appeared to be gaining ground both in Aden and the provinces, the diplomats said. Ismail is a hard-line former president who opposed Mohammed's recent overtures to the West, and Antar is vice chairman of the ruling presidium.

The battle began with an attempt to assassinate President Mohammed on Jan. 13. The diplomats said he was operating from his hometown in Abyan Province east of Aden.

Mohammed made a brief visit to Ethiopia, another Marxist ally of the Kremlin, last weekend, and the official radio there claimed his side was winning.

On Monday night the Ethiopian radio read a statement attributed to Mohammed saying that, except for Aden, the country was under the "legitimate control of the Yemen Socialist Party and government."

Rebels began broadcasting Sunday night on the frequencies used by South Yemen's government radio. They said a "new collective leadership" had emerged. The radio is said to operate from a rebel stronghold in Lahaj, 32 miles north of Aden.

Arab and Western diplomats in Yemen, who said they were in close touch with developments across the border, described the picture as too confused to assess with certainty.

"The situation in South Yemen is a mystery to many of here, and there is no way of knowing who is winning or who is losing," an Arab ambassador said. "Army units with tribal

Rear Adm. John Garnier, captain of the British royal yacht Britannia, which has been evacuating foreigners, said Tuesday that he had seen fighting around the Soviet Embassy near the beach at Khormadsar, Aden's embassy row.

"The Soviet Embassy was actually pinned down by rifle fire while we were talking to (the embassy personnel)," he told the British Broadcasting Corp. in a ship-to-shore radio interview.

The Britannia, on its third rescue trip, was forced to stand off the port, waiting for the fighting the abate.

Public Opposed to Radioactive Site

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Opponents of a Bladen County low-level radioactive waste incinerator have mobilized thousands of critics at public hearings, but state officials said Wednesday they are caught in the middle on the issue.

"Opponents have said if we issue the permit they'll take us to court, and if we don't issue the permit U.S. Ecology might take us to court," Human Resources Secretary Phil Kirk said Wednesday.

"I'm in a challenging position on this issue and, yes, it gets frustrating at times."

Some 1,000 people jammed a Bladen County gymnasium Tuesday in a boisterous show of force against U.S. Ecology's plans to build a low-level radioactive waste incinerator 20 miles southwest of Fayetteville.

"I did not appreciate political threats of voter retaliation or being called a fool or implications that I was not religious for trying to listen to both sides of this," Kirk said. "I tried very hard not to take those things personally by it's difficult, particularly after seven hours."

A hearing last week in Fayetteville drew 4,000 vocal critics.

But Kirk said even though opponents had succeeded in creating a political issue in southeastern North Carolina, the decision would not be based on politics.

"Many people last night said they voted for Governor Martin but wouldn't again if he didn't put a stop to this," Kirk said. "We're trying to keep politics out of the process."

The Human Resources Department is the lead permitting agency for the incinerator proposed for the northwest corner of Bladen County. But Kirk said the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development and the Federal Environmental Protection Agency also have permitting responsibilities.

"There are so many different agencies involved in the permitting process. I don't even know when we're going to be ready, much less the other two," Kirk said.

The proposed incinerator would take low-level radioactive waste from nuclear power plants, hospitals and research institutions. Non-radioactive garbage would be burned away and radioactive ash buried in a landfill.

But opponents fear the incinerator would threaten the environment and public health by spewing wind-borne radioactive waste from its smokestack.

They also assail U.S. Ecology's safety record at other disposal sites.

"There is nothing in the laws that were written by the General Assembly that allows public opposition as such to be a factor in the decision making process," Kirk said. "However, the value is the number of issues and questions which are raised, which the staff then follows up on."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Problems with the Internal Revenue Service's computer system has cost the government more than $100 million above the original $280 million estimate, it was reported Wednesday.

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Some remains of American missing in action in the war in Vietnam show evidence of having been "stockpiled" by the Hanoi government, members of a U.S. congressional delegation said earlier this week.

The four-man delegation, which held talks on MIA's over the weekend in Vietnam and Laos, also reported that both countries rejected appeals to have an independent international organization investigate the remains of Americans still held alive in doctina.

Asked whether evidence showed that MIA remains remained from Vietnam have been stockpiled by the Vietnamese government for later delivery, delegation member Senator Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., said, "My own opinion is yes, they have been."

IRS Computer Delays Tax Refunds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Problems with the Internal Revenue Service's computer system has cost the government more than $100 million above the original $280 million estimate, it was reported Wednesday.

"Knowing everything I know today, I'd say we certainly have a lot to learn about (equipment) procurement," USA Today quoted IRS Commissioner Roscoe Eggers.

Problems with the IRS computer supplied by the Sperry Corp. became well known in 1985 because of serious delays in refunds — 25,000 taxpayers were still waiting for their money last month — and for sending out incorrect delinquent notices to 26,000 businesses in 1984.

The newspaper said problems in 1985 meant the IRS bought $33 million in extra computer equipment; paid $21 million more in penalties than in 1984 on late refunds; spent $10 million more for employee overtime; and lost $38.6 million in productivity for a total of $102.6 million.

The newspaper, citing information from current and former IRS officials and government audits, some obtained under the Freedom of Information suits, said an IRS audit urged the agency to void its contract with Sperry in 1981 unless the firm supplied at no cost $54 million in additional equipment. Sperry responded with $12 million in equipment.

The Treasury Department is investigating a former top IRS computer official, Joseph Bishop, for possible improper dealings with Sperry, USA Today reported.

It said IRS officials the following year urged the Sperry contract be dropped and a more expensive but superior system be ordered from the Japanese firm of Hitachi.

The contract was weighted up to 80 points for low price and only 20 points for technical quality, IRS officials said, and the Sperry bid was so low, the Hitachi quality was not enough to win.

The newspaper reported that Sperry should not get all the blame.

MIA Remains Stockpiled By Vietnamese

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Some remains of Americans missing in action in the war in Vietnam show evidence of having been "stockpiled" by the Hanoi government, members of a U.S. congressional delegation said earlier this week.

The four-man delegation, which held talks on MIAs over the weekend in Vietnam and Laos, also reported that both countries rejected appeals to have an independent international organization investigate reports of Americans still held alive in Indochina.

Asked whether evidence showed that MIA remains returned from Vietnam had been stockpiled by the Vietnamese government for later delivery, delegation member Senator Dennis Deconcini, D-Ariz., said, "My own opinion is yes, they have been."

"But I don't care whether they have them (remains in storage) or they don't," Deconcini said at a news conference. "What I want to do is encourage them. And it is encouraging they are returning some (remains) and may return more."

Deconcini, who earlier this week visited the U.S. Army's Central Casualty Identification laboratory in Hawaii, where recently returned MIA remains were examined, said it was not U.S. government policy to question Vietnam publicly on stockpiling remains. "It is important that we get the remains back," he said.

Congressman Michael Bilirakis, R-Fla., another member of the delegation, said identification cards returned with remains supposed to have been recently uncovered after more than 10 years did not show much sign of weathering.

"Draw your own conclusions, but we saw a group of identification cards that looked like they were in pretty darn good shape," Bilirakis said.

Vietnam has repeatedly rejected accusations it stockpiled remains to use as bargaining chips in negotiations. It insists that remains are returned to the United States as soon as possible after they are found.

U.S.-Vietnamese relations plummeted in 1980 after a Vietnamese mortician appeared before a congressional committee and testified that about 400 sets of remains had been stored in a Hanoi building.

A later inspection of the building by a United Press International reporter showed no evidence that bodies had been stored there.

Delegation leader, Senator Frank Murkowski, R-Ala., cautioned that the current U.S. objective was to "encourage an atmosphere where as many remains as possible can be returned to the United States as rapidly as possible."

Rob Lowe, pictured here with co-stars Cindy Gibb and Patrick Swayze, plays an amateur hockey player who strives to make the pros in United Artists' latest film, 'Youngblood.'

Rob Lowe:

A Look At 'Youngblood'

"Over the years, I've learned that pursuing a goal is never easy. Talent isn't enough — and the love of your craft will not take you the distance. There are prices to be paid along the way, and those prices are sacrifices, compromise, and hard, hard work," explains actor Rob Lowe, who stars in the title role of the New United Artists' colorful and action-packed drama, "Youngblood."

To portray a talented amateur ice hockey player who is striving to prepare himself for the challenges of professional competition, Lowe worked closely with writer/director Peter Markle during the initial stages of the production period. In order to satisfy Markle's vision of authenticity for the film, Lowe quickly discovered he would have to acquire a significant level of proficiency on the ice.

To meet this challenge, the actor undertook what would become a grueling and obsessive two-month training program in Los Angeles. "At first, I only intended to improve my skating techniques, and to build up some muscle-tone with weights. As I started to see results, however, I became more demanding with myself," he explains.

"I never saw myself going as far as I did for the film — I never said I was going to gain fifteen pounds, put two inches on my arms, take two inches off my waist, or skate for three hundred hours before traveling to our Toronto location. I just seemed to get more obsessive as I went on."

Acknowledging that "nothing else really existed" in his life during this period, Lowe's daily regimen began at the Culver City Rink each morning at 9:30, and ended late in the day when he staggered home to bed — only to awaken early the next morning and start all over again.

"I lived out of my car," Lowe recalls with a laugh, reflecting on his weeks of self-imposed purgatory. "I'd eat in the car on the way to the rink each day, skate all morning, grab a quick bite on the way to the gym, work out for two and a half hours, and then go back to the rink for the rest of the day. Occasionally I'd take time to see a movie, but usually I just went home and straight to bed. At first, my body ached so much that I didn't think I could go on — but I didn't give up. For eight weeks, this was my life."

Lowe's determination in preparing for the role of Dean Youngblood is an accurate reflection of his approach to his career as a whole. "I've been involved in this business for twelve years now — I've never wanted to do anything else, and I'm not trained to be anything other than an actor. It hasn't been easy, but I made my choice a long time ago. As an actor, I intend to go the distance," he explains.

Born in Charlottesville, Virginia, Lowe's family later moved to Dayton, Ohio, where he made his first stage appearance with a summer stock company at the age of nine. The young performer added more than thirty stage plays to his credits over the next three years, when he began his television career with such well-received programs as the Emmy Award-winning "A Matter of Time" and "Schoolboy Father," both After-School Specials for ABC.

Following his starring role opposite Eileen Brennan in ABC's "A New Kind of Family," Lowe made his motion picture debut as Sodapop Curtis in Francis Ford

To read different reviews of the recently released film Out of Africa is to be exposed to a wide range of opposing and often adamant opinions. Film critics such as Stanley Kauffman of The New Republic, Andrew Kopkind of The Nation and virtually every critic writing in the New Year's edition of The Village Voice has either praised or panned the film. It has been called everything from a meretricious bourgeois bore to the best cinema of 1986. Why the diversity of opinion? First, American cinema has been going through a long dry spell for some time now. For well over a year, barring a few exceptions, the film industry has abandoned even the pretense of making serious films which cater to an adult audience. In recent times movies such as Wired Science, Back to the Future, Risky Business, and others have been indicative of Hollywood's attempt to capture a potentially lucrative youth market.

Simultaneously, films like Rocky III, Rocky IV, Rambo, the Halloween series, the Superman series and others of this genre are indicative of a trend in the film industry to stick with tried and true formulas. In other words, the trend has been to cater to the lowest common denominator of popular tastes with enough sensationalism and schmaltz to sell tickets.

Secondly, serious, well-made films which have aspired to social commentary, such as Reds, Ragtime, and Sophie's Choice have not been unmitigated successes at the box office.

Reds, for example was widely reported to have lost money, though it is arguably one of the best American-made films to have made its debut in recent times.

What then does it all mean? Is Out of Africa a film worth seeing? To put it simply — yes, but with reservations.

Out of Africa is, in essence, a love story set in Kenya during and after WW I. It deals with the relationships between the Danish Baroness Karen Blixen (Meryl Streep), her Swedish husband Bror Blixen (Klaus Maria Brandauer), and her presumably American lover Denys Finch Hatton (Robert Redford).

In the film, Streep's Swedish husband proves to be a disappointment in running the large plantation that her family has put up the money to finance. She, in turn, takes over the task of managing the farm and, falls in love with the people, the animals, and the natural environment of Africa.

Later on, she contracts syphilis from her husband and, after tolerating a series of infidelities, leaves him for Robert Redford. The rest of the movie deals mostly with the romance between Redford and Streep and with the conflicts that arise between them. It is in these conflicts that the essence of the film dwells.

Streep believes in teaching the natives to read and write, practicing Christian charity and introducing the local inhabitants to all the niceties of European civilization. Redford, on the other hand, believes in leaving the natives and their culture to themselves. He is deeply ambivalent about civilization and modern technology (though he is not anti-technological), and he is fearful about the impact that progress is having on Africa.

The conflict described above spills over into Redford and Streep's relationship with one another and manifests itself as a philosophical difference. Redford seeks to avoid all structure and commitment while Streep seeks a more defined relationship with more intimacy and security. The decision as to who is right and who is wrong is left up to the audience, since the characters are not two dimensional and the philosophical differences are legitimate.

In the end, Out of Africa

leaves one feeling that the tenor of Streep and Redford's rapport was almost buddhist in its subtlety and minimalism. Thus, it is as much from the things suggested, as from the things that are said, that Out of Africa derives its moral force.

There is a respect for individual intuition and also simply a quality of vacuousness that go hand in hand to embellish the vivid African landscape with a quiet finesse, but they do so without conviction or power, and therein lie both the film's strengths and its weakness.

It is steeped in all of the contradictions of the present age; seeking to be both nonchalant and passionate, both socially concerned and generically palatable. It's virtue is that it doesn't entirely fail in the attempt, grandiose as it is.

Crazy Gameshows Anything For A Buck

By PAT MOLLOY
Staff Writer

Well, I've been lying rather low as of late. As expected, certain parties didn't take to my critique of their, shall I say, "ill-desired" drinking atmospheres. Tough shit. That's old news — on to different, more exciting spectrums of life. On to glamour and riches. On to fame and immortality. On togameshows.

From The Not So Right

Ahh, yes, gameshows — those wonderful slices of Americana that so many consider "quality television." I would imagine gameshows (and Gene Rayburn) existed long before television. Hell, let's throw caution to the wind and say they existed before...well, before Chancellor Howell, okay. Gameshows are based on a very simple premise, being that we, you and I, will do most anything for a buck — no matter how silly or undignified it may be.

Now I can't vouch for all of you, but I'll be damned if I'd go on stage for half an hour and pretend to actually respect Pat Sajak. And for what? All anybody ever wins on "Wheel of Fortune" is a trip to San Francisco or a porcelain statue of a dalmatian. Those prizes simply couldn't reimburse me for the emotional trauma I'd sustain from being forced to converse with Pat and Vana White.

And just where did they find that stud, Pat Sajak. It certainly wasn't in a personality contest — he seems about as much fun as a coma. How about Vana White? God help us all if she ever articulates more than one syllable at a time. Look at what the woman wears. I think we've discovered where Michael Jackson's other glove went. And I know for a fact that the wench uses Day-Glo on her teeth. Let's all pitch in and give Vana a plastic dog, and Pat a trip to San Francisco — certainly they've earned both prizes.

Speaking of Charles, who picks his wardrobe? Now I'll be the first to admit I lack a fashion sense, but this guy dresses like he went wild in K-Mart's Junior's section. And lord, why doesn't he get a real job? The Love Connection just doesn't seem respectable, know what I mean? I can't imagine how he holds a straight face while some babe tells him how she got the herpes from a guy Chuck Woolery like he's some sort of friggin' demigod. Publeecase.

Artists Series Presents The Bach Aria Group

Devoted Bach fans take note: the Bach Aria Group will perform at East Carolina University on Jan. 27 at 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theatre. They are sponsored by the Department of University Unions as part of the 1985-1986 Artists Series.

The ensemble was founded in 1946 by William Scheide, a devotee of Bach's little-known cantatas and arias. Scheide united a nine-member group of vocalists and instrumentalists capable of the rigorous soloistic demands and the needed ensemble skills.

The Bach Aria Group was reorganized in 1980 following Scheide's retirement. They have expanded their repertoire to include other Bach works as well as his arias. Playing under the musical direction of flutist Samuel Baron are violinist Daniel Phillips, cellist Timothy Eddy, oboist Ronald Roseman, keyboard player Yehudi Wyner, soprano Sylvia McNair, contralto Janice Taylor, tenor John Humphrey, and bass Thomas P. A. U. I.

The Bach Aria Group attempts to cultivate appreciation of the Bach arias. The artists feel that through the reconciliation of the verbal and musical meaning of these complex textual works, musicians and audiences alike are brought to a new understanding of his other compositions.

Tickets to the Bach Aria Group are available from the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, beginning Jan. 6. The Ticket Office is open Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. — 6 p.m. Ticket prices are $5 for ECU students and guest, $5 for youth (high school and under), $8 for ECU faculty and staff and $10 for the public. All tickets are $10 at the door. For more information, please call 757-6611, ext. 226.

Lowe's determination in preparing for the role of Dean Youngblood is an accurate reflection of his approach to his career as a whole. "I've been involved in this business for twelve years now... I've never wanted to do anything else, and I'm not trained to be anything other than an actor. It hasn't been easy, but I made my choice a long time ago. As an actor, I intend to go the distance," he explains.

Born in Charlottesville, Virginia, Lowe's family later moved to Dayton, Ohio, where he made his first stage appearance with a summer stock company at the age of nine. The young performer added more than thirty stage plays to his credits over the next three years, when he began his television career with such well-received programs as the Emmy Award-winning "A Matter of Time" and "Schoolboy Father," both After-School Specials for ABC.

Following his starring role opposite Eileen Brennan in ABC's "A New Kind of Family," Lowe made his motion picture debut as Sodapop Curtis in Francis Ford

Lowe Prepares For Challenging New Role

Coppola's 1983 drama, The Outsiders, a film which also featured his Youngblood co-star, Patrick Swayze.

Within the next eight months, Lowe completed The Outsiders, earned a Golden Globe nomination as Best Supporting Actor for his role in the CBS movie for television, "Thursday's Child," and began work on his second feature film.

Over the past few years, Lowe's back-to-back performing commitments have thoroughly tested his stamina and resilience as an actor. Yet when it came time to begin filming Youngblood in July, 1984, his athletic abilities as well as his acting talents were on the line.

"For the physical side of my performance, I had to at least feel that I was a decent skater," Lowe explains. "My daily training had given me a sense of confidence on the ice, and I think this carries over to the screen. Making the mental stretch from being a non-skater to playing a great hockey player was hard enough, but by becoming fairly good on the ice, playing Dean Youngblood became less of a jump in my imagination," Lowe relates.

Through his training program and his attention to the dynamics of his role, Lowe accomplished the principle goal he sets for himself with each film — to stretch as an actor. "It doesn't matter what you want to be in life — a doctor, a teacher, a hockey player or an actor — the challenge is to be the best you can be. You have to learn to find a balance between ideology and reality, and you have to learn to compromise."

You have to find a way of conforming to situations while maintaining your integrity. This is what Youngblood is about, and this is what I am about," Lowe concludes.

Many's the night I've dreamed even I am plopped down in a bean-bag chair with a bag of popcorn in one hand and a brew in the other — you know, to kind of make a night of it. Well, I've often awakened screaming, "door number two, Jim. It's door number two!" I swear, it's my

Brockschmidt Leads Talented ECU Team

Lions Maul Pirates

Bucs Face Mason Saturday

By SCOTT COOPER
Sports Editor

A balanced Nittany Lion scoring attack was good enough to give Penn State an 85-57 victory over the ECU Pirates Monday night in University Park, Pa.

The Pirates only led once in the contest, after a Bass jumper just 22 seconds into the game. From this point on, the Nittany Lions built as much as a 19-point lead in the first half. ECU battled back somewhat, cutting the halftime margin to 38-23.

"I'm upset with the way we've played," ECU coach Charlie Harrison said. "It was the worst we've played all year. Our offense was very sloppy and we were impatient."

"The first 12 minutes were bad, and that carried over for the rest of the game," Harrison added. "but we can't look back, we've got to look at what's in front of us."

The second half was no better for the Pirates as they trailed by as many as 30 points with 4:48 left to play. With the game easily in the control of the home-team

Lions, Penn State defeated the Bucs 85-57.

Junior forward Marchell Henry was the only Pirate in double digits with 14 points, including a 10 of 10 performance at the charity stripe. Senior Scott Hardy chipped in eight as Keith Sledge added seven. Senior guard Curt Vanderhorst, the Pirates' leading scorer (for two consecutive seasons), was held scoreless in the contest — which hasn't happened in the past two years.

With the victory, the Nittany Lions are an even 8-8, while the Bucs slip to 7-9.

Although the loss was not a conference one, ECU faces a tough home CAA battle when they host George Mason Saturday night in Minges Coliseum.

Coach Harrison and the Pirates ended a five-game road swing and are pleased to be at home, but a large task still awaits the Bucs.

"I'm glad that we are home. I hope the kids can regroup and play well," Harrison said. "We need to scrap and scrape — then we can have no complaints.

"We need to get back to playing basketball like we had before the sickness and injury (to Sledge and Bass) occurred. We've got to get more consistency," Harrison continued. "We need good student and fan support as much as anything."

According to coach Harrison, ECU will have their hands full when they host the 9-8 (3-2 in CAA play) Patriots. Harrison feels that GMU may be one of the most gifted teams around.

"They're the most talented team one through five, and by far the quickest," Harrison said. "They've got two all-conference players that are seniors. They've got good talent at all positions."

In order for the Pirates to have success against the powerful Patriots, ECU must play smart and to their ability, according to Harrison.

"We can't get into an unintelligent transition game with them, that is their strength — pressing, gambling and running the floor," Harrison remarked. "We're going to have to play extremely well and extremely hard."

Fan Support

Perhaps part of the Pirates' success Saturday night could be in the hands of ECU fans. As coach Harrison feels that a large crowd would be extremely helpful, so does ECU's Pirate Club.

Along with the vocal support lent to the Pirate hoopers, a halftime show and a possible car giveaway are scheduled attractions.

The Pure Gold Dancers will be making another encore performance. The 12 young ladies should provide a great deal of entertainment with their precision dance routines.

Pirate supporters should also remember that they may have a chance to win a brand new Chrysler Fifth Avenue. Three lucky fans need to sink four shots to win. So come on out and enjoy yourself while supporting the Pirates.

Ladies Roll Over American Monday

By TIM CHANDLER
Sports Writer

The Lady Pirates continued to roll in the Colonial Athletic Association (CAA) Monday night, as they defeated American University 77-73 on the road. Their conference mark now stands at 4-0, and their overall record to 14-5.

The Pirates, who shot 53 percent for the game, had to rely on some key defensive plays to win. ECU led by as many as 12, 62-50 with around eight minutes to play, but saw that dwindle down to two, 72-70, with under two minutes to play. After a Pirate basket that put the score at 74-70, Delphine Mabry came up with the clutch play of the game. She stole the ball from American's Beth Shearer with 1:26 to play, and from there the Pirates were able to close the game from the free throw line.

Coach Emily Manwaring said that the quickness of ECU made the difference for the game. The Pirates had 14 steals, six by Mabry, compared to only five by American.

The Pirates were paced by four players in double figures with Loraine Foster leading the way with 18. Lisa Squirewell, who was named CAA player of the week, had 16, as did Sylvia Bragg. Delphine Mabry was the other Pirate in double digits with 15 points.

Rounding out the scoring for the Pirates was Alma Bethea, who led the team in rebounding with eight, had five points, followed by Chris O'Connor with four, and Therese Durkin with one.

ECU has two road games coming up this weekend, both CAA games. Saturday the Pirates travel to George Mason, and Monday they play at James Madison.

James Madison just missed getting into the top 20 this week. The Associated Press ranked them 21st on their latest poll.

Although the game at James Madison will be for the conference lead, Coach Manwaring says that the Pirates can't look past George Mason. "Last year when we came up here, we had to go into overtime to beat them," stated Manwaring.

The Lady Pirates will be back home again for a Feb. 1 game against American.

Brockschmidt Leads Talented ECU Team

By DAVID MCGINNESS
Assistant Sports Editor

"He's the most talented all-around swimmer ever to swim at ECU," said Pirate swim coach Rick Kobe of sophomore sensation Bruce Brockschmidt. "He is a natural... probably one of the best athletes on the ECU campus."

Kobe's estimation of the So. Winchester Va., native is well deserved. Brockschmidt's list of accomplishments is indeed impressive. One of which is the ECU all-time varsity record in the 200 individual medley, which he set last year at the Eastern Regional Invitational.

Along with his impressive 200-yard IM statistic, Brockschmidt's freshman year was undoubtedly one for the record books. During the 1984-85 season, he tallied the Pirates' best times in the 100 and 200-yard butterfly as well as the 100-yard backstroke.

This year the Pirate swimmer has continued to lead the way in what has been called by Kobe, "...our best year ever," and has a good chance at qualifying for the NCAA Regionals in Indianapolis, IN.

"I think I've got a pretty good shot," Brockschmidt said. "I'm only three seconds off the cutoff time right now, and I'm getting faster."

Should he qualify for the NCAA's, Brockschmidt's main goal will be, "Basically to go out and swim well compared to my other times. I'd like to swim my best times in the NCAA's."

Unfortunately, that is something that is not easy to do. A swimmer may reach peak performance levels only once and for a relatively short time during a season. A problem for many NCAA-qualifying swimmers is that they are at their best when they qualify, and are unable to better or even duplicate their qualifying time.

Another factor that makes scoring in the NCAA meet is that it is literally the fastest meet in the world. The times there are even better than those recorded in the Olympics, where cutoff times are different for each country's team, of which America's are the toughest.

Should Brockschmidt score in Indianapolis, he will be the only swimmer in ECU history to score at an NCAA meet, according to Kobe. Yet Kobe believes that if he qualifies, he will have about a 70-percent chance of doing just that.

"Last year Bruce worked hard and did very well, but not to his potential," Kobe said. "This year he is."

Brockschmidt's (and the team's) workout schedule means a lot of hard work almost every day of the week. The team swims for two-and-one-half hours every weekday, plus 90 minutes in the mornings on Mon., Wed. and Fri. They lift weights for one-half hour on Tues. and Fri. On Saturdays when they aren't competing, the team swims another two-and-one-half hours. This schedule often means that the Pirates will swim 60,000 yards, or 34 miles, per week.

An athlete as talented as

"He's the most talented all-around swimmer ever to swim at ECU...probably one of the best athletes on the ECU campus."

because we want to swim well as a team together. We're pretty close."

The friendships that the members of the team are an important part of their college lives. "Having good friends is just about the most rewarding part of it," Brockschmidt added. "If we weren't as close, it wouldn't be too much fun."

With the amount of time that members of the team spend practicing and competing, one might think that their academic work

Wilson Sees Shutout In Super Bowl XX

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Otis Wilson looked up from the floor of the Superdome at the banners with the scores of the previous XIX Super Bowls.

"There's never been a shutout until now," said the Chicago Bears' left outside linebacker. "I see a big goose egg. It's never been done, and we want to be a history-making team."

Wilson is known for his brash talk, a la Joe Namath, who guaranteed that his New York Jets, an 18-point underdog, would win the 1969 game.

The Bears are known for their shutouts.

Having already set a National Football League record by shutting out the New York Giants and Los Angeles Rams to get here, they want to complete a hat trick by blanking the New England Patriots Sunday.

History isn't as much against the Bears as it appears.

In Six Super Bowls, the losers have been held to a touchdown or less. In two, shutouts were spoiled by Garo Yepremian, the Miami Dolphins' place-kicker who ruined one by the Dallas Cowboys and another by his own defense.

The first was in 1972, when Yepremian's 31-yard field goal provided Miami's only points in a 24-3 loss to Dallas.

The next year, when Miami beat Washington 14-7, Yepremian spoiled the shutout when he tried to pass a blocked field-goal attempt, only to have Washington's Mike Bass intercept and return it 49 yards for a touchdown.

There was one other near-blanking, the 16-6 victory by Pittsburgh over Minnesota in 1975, the first of the Steelers' four Super Bowl wins. It was the most dominating defensive effort ever — the Steelers' "Steel Curtain" allowed Minnesota only 119 total yards from scrimmage, and the Vikings got their six points when Terry Brown recovered a blocked Bobby Walden punt in the end zone.

Which brings us to the Bears. They shut out the New York Giants 21-0 in their first playoff game, then blanked the Los Angeles Rams 24-0 for the NFC championship. Excluding their only loss, a 38-24 decision in Miami, they allowed just 20 points in six games against teams that made the playoffs.

One of those was a 20-7 win against the Patriots the second week of the season. New England's only points came on a 90-yard fourth-quarter touchdown pass from Tony Eason to Craig James that represented almost half of the Patriots' 206 total yards.

Wilson figures that's a good indicator of what will happen to James Sunday against defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan's complex "46" defense that shut down two other 1,000-yard rushers, Joe Morris of the Giants and Eric Dickerson of the Rams.

"Craig James got 27 yards the last time," said Wilson, a Pro Bowler who often comes flying into the backfield from odd angles.

"He's no different a man now. Just older and worn down because the season wears you down. Dickerson and Morris are better. If we play consistently, I see no problem."

Bears coach Mike Ditka sees no problem with Wilson's bragging — as long as he delivers, as Namath did when he engineered the 16-7 upset over the Colts that brought the old American Football League to parity with the NFL.

"One thing about talking — it's only good when you back it up," Ditka added. "You either end up as a champ or a chump when you say that."

Most of Wilson's defensive teammates would just as soon avoid being put in that position, although one offensive player suggests it could happen.

"They've gotten most of their points in the playoffs on turnovers, and we don't turn over the ball," said Walter Payton, Chicago's all-time NFL rushing leader.

But the defenders were more cautious.

"I'm not feeling shutout now, although I may be feeling it on Sunday once we get started," said Richard Dent, the All-Pro defensive end whose 17 regular-season sacks led the NFL. "If a shutout comes, fine. But I'll just take the win."

"A shutout? That's obviously a formidable goal," said Dan Hampton, Chicago's other defensive end. "The bottom line is a win. If we win the game, we'll be very, very happy. Defense is the horse we rode into the playoffs and the Super Bowl. We'll build on that."

And how do the Patriots feel about this?

"People don't expect us to come in here and score points," said James. "But in our heart and mind we feel we deserve to be here."

ECU's Women's Soccer Club may have given birth to the first female Pele, Renee Flessate. Sneaker Sam travelled with the team of fantastic booters to their first exhibition, held in Jacksonville, Nov. 20.

Flessate began scoring against the Unidas with an 18-yard shot. The Unidas returned the favor only to be crushed again by Flessate's finesse as she scored two more goals for ECU. Lady Pirates' Cheryl Higgins kicked for a score on an assist by teammate Connie O'Brien, ending the first half of play.

ECU refused to give the Jacksonville squad a breather as Dee Tropeano began the second half with a quick score. The Unidas, down by three, caught the Lady Pirates off guard and managed to add two goals to their total. In the surge, however, the Unidas fell to fatigue, enabling ECU's Connie O'Brien to add the sixth and final goal of the game.

Some outstanding performances were put in by other Lady Pirates, including: Kris Slacum, Marion Bailey, Lisa Grosshandler, Lillian Armour and goalie, Donna Selman. With this excellent show of talent, the Women's Soccer Club is looking forward to a very successful indoor and spring season. Anyone interested in becoming a member of this year's team should contact Pat Cos in Room 204 Memorial Gym.

With only two seasons completed (one of those only partially so), Bruce Brockschmidt should continue to be one of the top performers for the ever-improving Pirate swimmers. The dedication and talent he has displayed so far will hopefully only be a fraction of his overall contribution to ECU's swimming program.
