Reagan Claims 1987 Budget Meets Law

From Wire Reports

President Reagan sent the 1987 budget to Congress asking for close to a trillion dollars Wednesday morning after declaring Tuesday night in his State of the Union speech that his budget meets the deficit reducing requirements of the Gramm-Rudman bill.

Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger ignored a deficit-cutting ax poised over the Pentagon and presented Congress with a $311.6 billion budget for the next year, an 8.2 percent increase over 1986.

Weinberger insisted the increase represented only 3 percent real growth. The defense budget includes $4.8 billion for the SDI missile defense shield, 75 percent more than the $2.75 billion the Pentagon received for the program for the financial year beginning Oct. 1. It is the biggest single weapons research project.

The figure also included a 4 percent pay raise, or 2.6 billion, for the 2.1 million men and women in uniform.

Reagan's budget also seeks to cut the cost of federal health care expenses by proposing cutbacks in health programs for the poor and elderly.

Reagan asked Congress to require welfare recipients to work in return for their grants and require that single parents, who are minors, live with their parents to qualify for assistance.

The 1987 budget contained no cuts for Social Security recipients and included a cost-of-living increase for the millions of Americans receiving old age survivor or disability benefits.

Reagan, in his budget, also proposed consolidating all federal AIDS programs under one office and providing $213 million for research in 1987 into the deadly disease that attacks the body's immune system. In fiscal 1986 the funding level for AIDS programs was $193 million.

Political Writer Visits ECU Campus

By JAY STONE
Managing Editor

Michael Harrington, noted scholar and activist will present a lecture entitled: "Beyond Reaganism: Toward a New Democracy" tonight in Jenkins Fine Arts Auditorium. The lecture will begin at 8 p.m. and it will last until 9 p.m. A question and answer period will follow the lecture.

Harrington is the author of 12 books, including "The Other America," which is often cited for its role in inspiring the anti-poverty programs of the 1960s. His two newest books are "The New American Poverty" and

"Taking Sides: The Education Of A Militant Mind".

Harrington received his M.A. degree in English literature from the University of Chicago. He was later awarded an honorary Ph.D. in political science by Queens College and the Board of Higher Education of the City of New York.

He now teaches political science at Queens College. Harrington is also national co-chair of the Democratic Socialists of America. In addition, he is secretary of the Socialist International, the international umbrella organization for democratic-socialists.

Students Examine Business Park Idea

By DAWN STEWARD
Staff Writer

A proposed business park to be centrally located in the Greenville-Pitt Co. area is the focus of a survey being conducted by ECU's Regional Development Institute (RDI).

The survey has been mailed to over 800 industries, retailers and wholesale interests within a 15 county area surrounding Pitt Co. The purpose of the survey is to determine the feasibility of establishing a central business park. The companies that would make up the business park, a group of business in one area, would result from the survey's findings as to products needed by large business and industries.

The business park could supplement Greenville's economy. "More jobs should be available to the local community while also bringing in outside business," said Mack Simpson, RDI project manager. This growth is good not only for business, but also, for ECU. Moreover, increasing attention for the Pitt Co. area will draw more students to the University, he added.

The survey is being conducted by two ECU students. Political

Massage Clinics: The Right Touch

By PATTI KEMMIS
Assistant News Editor

The Physical Therapy Club raised over $300 at one of their regular massage clinics.

Twice a semester, the massage clinics offers students and faculty a chance for complete relaxation at the charge of $1 for every ten minutes.

"Our clinics are a great way to raise money while offering something that can really be enjoyed — but massage is only a small part of Physical Therapy," commented senior Karen Muir.

Working with physicians and other health professionals, physical therapists are involved in a broad field. Some areas of concentration include Pediatrics, orthopedics, sports, cardiovascular, and electrophysiology.

"Physical therapy is on the threshold of change as a result of the North Carolina Practice Act which provides for independent practice by physical therapists," remarked George Hamilton, head of the Physical Therapy Department.

ECU offers one of two undergraduate programs in the state, the other offered by UNC. A maximum of twenty students at junior level are accepted each year for the two year program. Six weeks of the junior year and ten of the senior year are spent doing special clinical work. Many students go out of state to places such as California, Arkansas, Tennessee or Colorado. During their senior year, the physical therapy majors are involved in individual research projects.

After graduation, job possibilities are great. A physical therapist can work in such areas as private practice, school systems or hospitals.

"I got interested in physical therapy through volunteer work," replied senior Janice Hoyt.

"Not only does it give me a chance to help others, but the job opportunities are great."

"I already have a degree in sports medicine, but I think

"Our clinics are a great way to raise money while offering something that can really be enjoyed..."

—Karen Muir

physical therapy can offer me more," senior Al Cujas said.

Massages being one of their specialties, the Physical Therapy Club has gotten a good response from their clinics. Proceeds go to charities such as Diabetes, The Ronald McDonald House, MS and the Linda Fay Arrington Scholarship. The next clinic will be held in late March or early April.

"You should give us a try," urged senior Jim Hunt. "You'll come back."

Living Off Campus Offers Benefits

By BETH WHICKER
Assistant News Editor

Nearly 95 percent of ECU students living in off-campus housing are happy with their living arrangements.

Eighty-eight percent of ECU students living off campus prefer the apartment complex to living in a house or trailer. Students chose apartments because of the convenience they offered. Most apartment owners fix any mechanical problem in the unit, maintain the yardwork, have the unit treated regularly for residents and care for the general appearance of the apartment.

Many students find the convenience of apartments far outweigh any disadvantages such as higher cost, less living space, tight parking and less privacy.

Apartment owners in Greenville realize the need for quality and convenience and some have tailor-made packages for the college student.

Seventy to 80 percent of renters at Eastbrook and Village Green Apartments are students, and according to Sue Holloman, manager, the students residing in the apartments are their best source of advertisement. "People move out here because they have friends. Most of our tenants knew someone before they moved in."

Village Green residents seem pleased with their choice in where to reside. Yet, three years after the explosion some apprehension still remains. "It's sort of an eerie feeling," described Linda Horowitz, a senior, management major.

According to Holloman the fall after the explosion some students were hesitant on living in the apartments where the 1983 disaster occurred.

Riverbluff Apartments advertise as "Greenville's Young Friendly Community," according to Martha Jones, a senior communications major, "the atmosphere is a nice, friendly, safe atmosphere."

Rose Cumpler, manager of Riverbluff said, "we feel our tenants are satisfied, we don't get a lot of complaints."

Ringgold Towers are located on the campus and can be sublet or bought. All units available at the Towers are completely furnished.

Ringgold resident Mike Espejo, a sophomore and business major, is highly satisfied with his housing. "I like being so close to campus and downtown. With the DWI law in effect, it's convenient and safe to be able to walk downtown."

Students were evenly divided among factors that determine their reasons for moving into a particular apartment.

Nearly 50 percent of those surveyed said the determining factor is cost. Twenty percent agree that the social factor is also very important in making the final decision. Ten percent of the students surveyed did not own a car; therefore, the location of the apartment and availability of bus service was instrumental in their decision.

Minority Survey Planned

By CAROLYN DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

The University Committee on the Status of Minorities at ECU will be conducting a survey of black students soon to "determine certain attitudes, perceptions, and feelings black students have about the university." According to Gordon Walker, a student representative of the SGA on the committee, over the past few years, black enrollment and the retention rate of black students are dropping significantly at ECU.

"The purpose of the survey," he says is to be able to draw some conclusions and make recommendations to enhance blacks' perceptions of ECU.

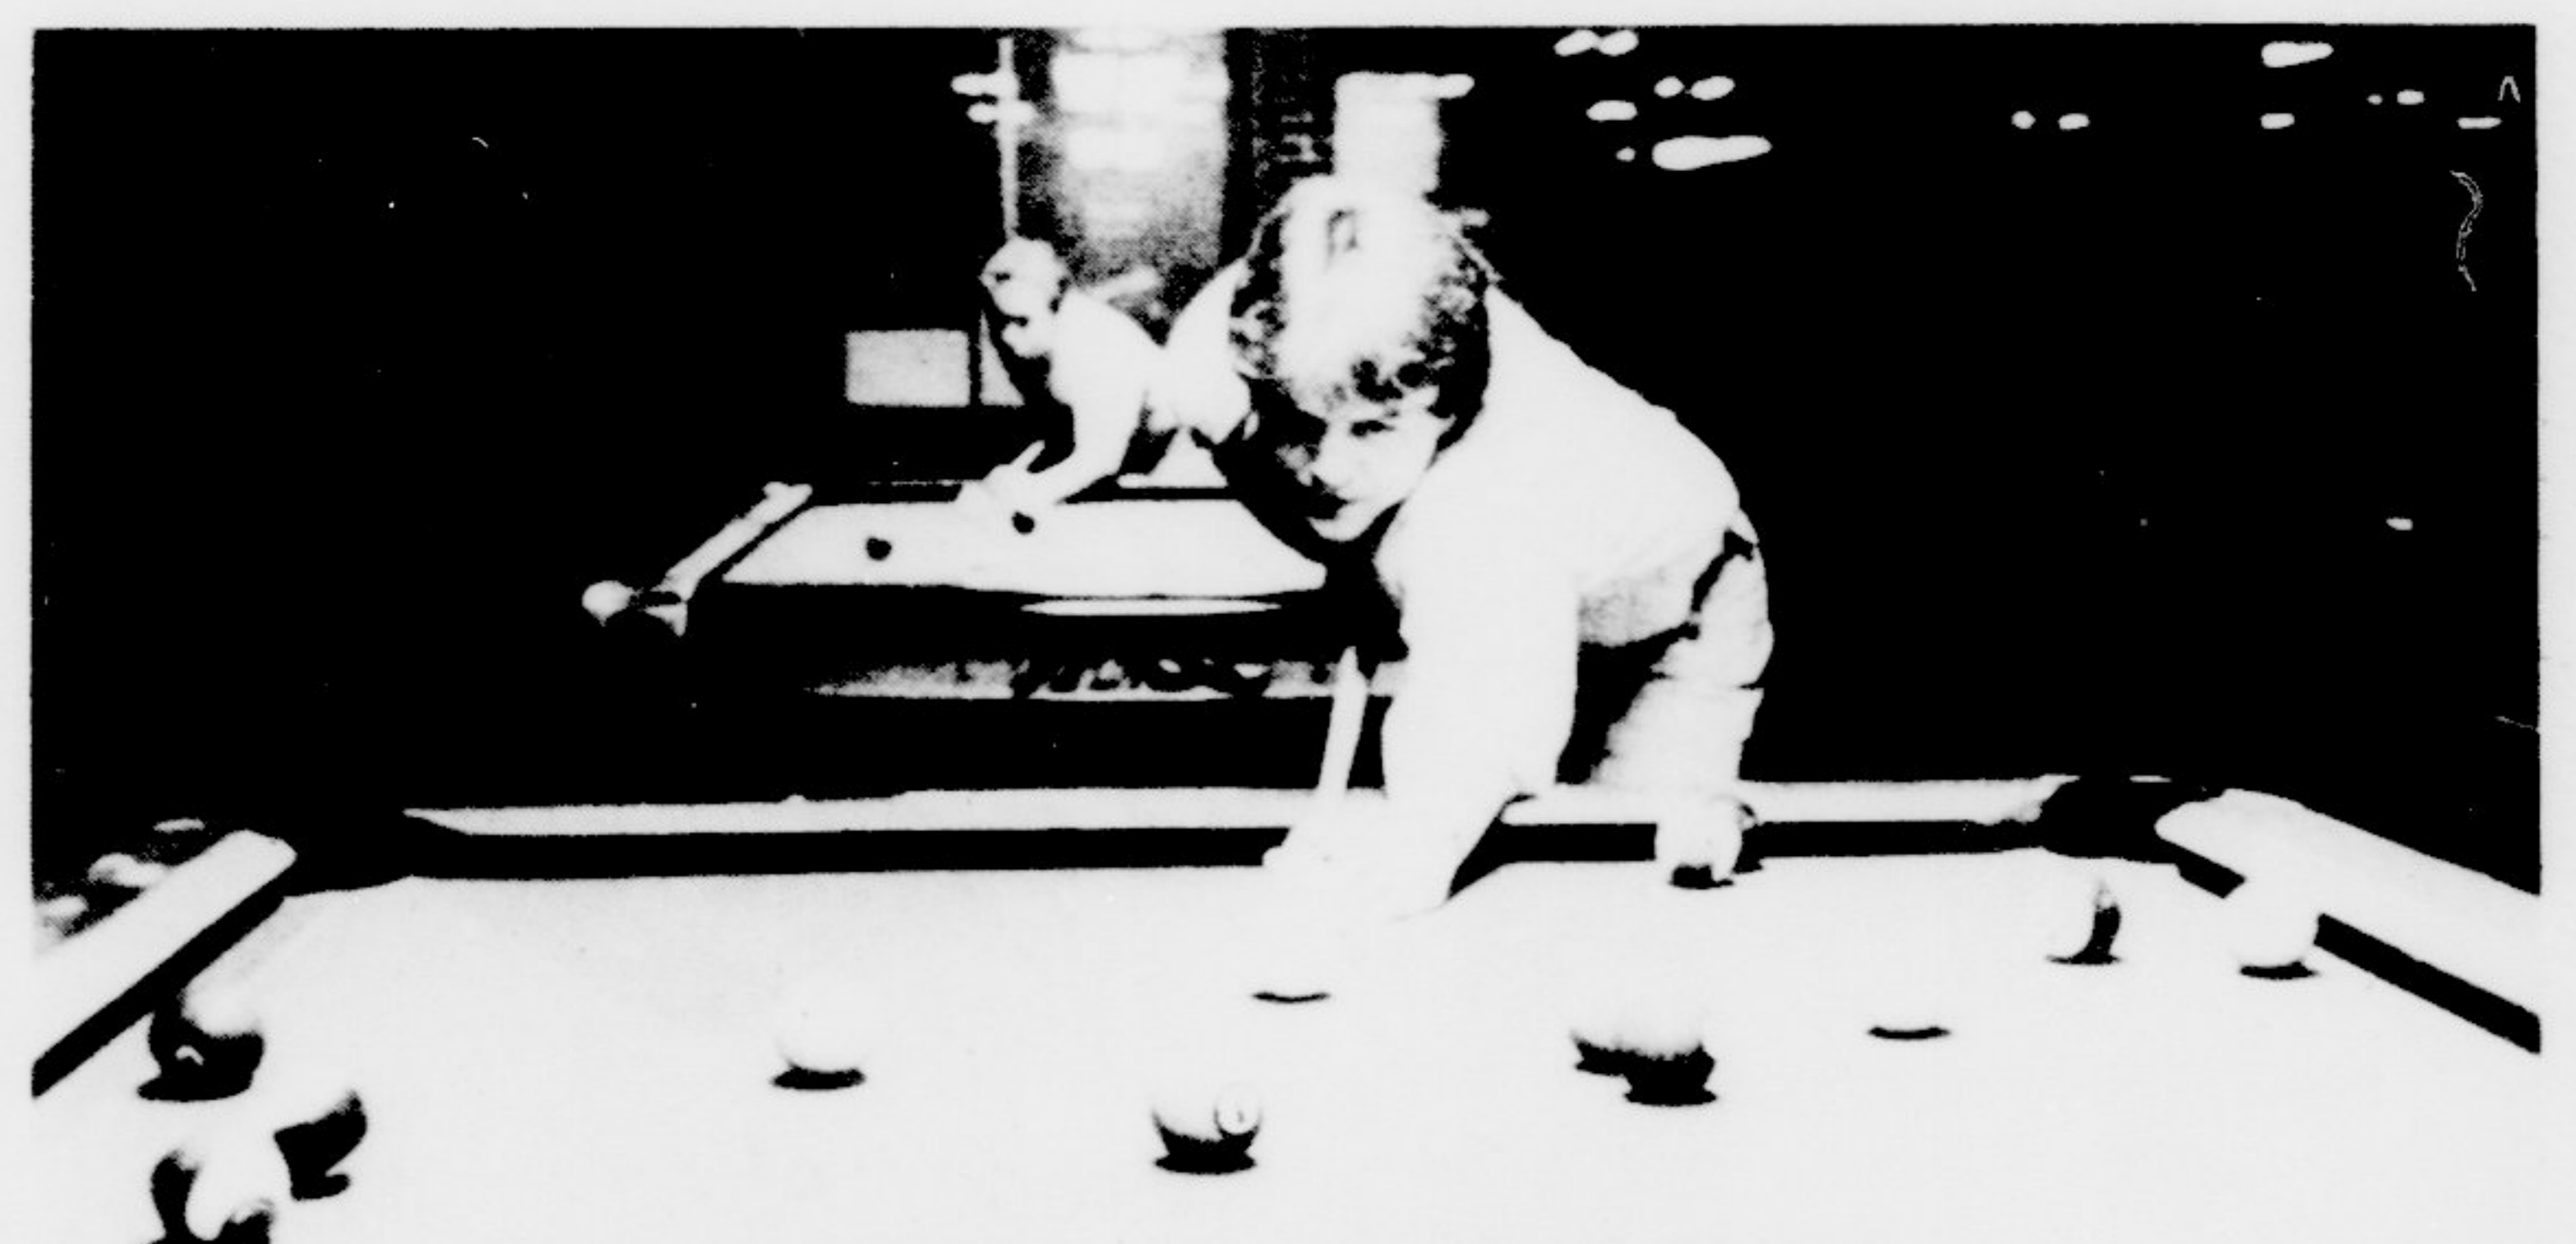

He stresses, "we are really hoping to get enough responses to make significant conclusions."

The survey, which will be mailed to one-third of the blacks on campus, includes questions which will hopefully determine attitudes about all aspects of campus life, from inter-student relationships to academic programs.

For example, one question asks if students agree or disagree with the statement, "Blacks are welcomed and encouraged to participate in extracurricular activities such as Student Government Association, fraternities, sororities, etc."

Another question inquires, "If given the opportunity, would you join a predominantly white social fraternity or sorority?"

The results of the survey will be distributed to several departments and organizations on campus. "Hopefully," adds Walker, "this will give us a good idea of what is needed to make ECU more attractive to black students and to enhance their perceptions of the university."

Oil Dro

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mexican officials told a creditors committee that falling oil prices will have a "serious" impact on the nation's economic program, forcing Mexico to borrow up to $9 billion this year.

Jose Angel Gurria, director of Public Credit at the Finance Ministry, led a Mexican delegation in what was called an "informal" meeting with the committee of major creditor banks that broke up late Tuesday with plans to meet again in the near future.

Banking sources said much of the meeting was devoted to discussions of oil prices and Gurria outlined the impact that they would have on its ability to meet foreign commitments.

Oil Drop Has Impact

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mexican officials told a creditors committee that falling oil prices will have a "serious" impact on the nation's economic program, forcing Mexico to borrow up to $9 billion this year.

Jose Angel Gurria, director of Public Credit at the Finance Ministry, led a Mexican delegation in what was called an "informal" meeting with the committee of major creditor banks that broke up late Tuesday with plans to meet again in the near future.

Banking sources said much of the meeting was devoted to discussions of oil prices and Gurria outlined the impact that they would have on its ability to meet foreign commitments.

Gurria told the committee that lower prices for oil, Mexico's major foreign exchange earner, would "have a serious impact" on the economic program that was part of its plans to meet terms of the refinancing agreement, banking sources said.

Mexican officials had said the country would need as much as $4 billion in new financing in 1986 but banking sources told The Washington Post the amount could be between $8 billion and $9 billion because of plunging oil prices.

Gurria reportedly told the committee Mexico expects to average $16 per barrel this year after charging $25 or more before the price war.

Gurria said Mexico is making progress in talks with the International Monetary Fund and World Bank.

The IMF confirmed that talks with Mexico are continuing in an effort to agree on terms that would enable the country to resume drawing on a Fund Credit Line.

It was disclosed that Mexico drew $300 million last month from a disaster relief fund set up by the IMF following the devastating earthquake that hit the country in September.

The World Bank, which was asked by Treasury Secretary James Baker to take a more active role in helping resolve the Third World debt problem, has been discussing developing loans with the country.

There also is speculation that the World Bank will be asked to guarantee some of the new bank money Mexico will need.

Mexico completed a refinancing of roughly half of its $96 billion foreign debt last year of which U.S. banks hold roughly $25 billion.

Even though the refinancing stretched out much of the principal and granted easier interest terms, Mexico's interest payments still amount to roughly $10 billion a year, a burden that many think it will be unable to meet.

But many analysts also noted that Mexico is the largest supplier of oil to the United States.

New UNC President Elected

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The gavel changed hands Wednesday at the State Board of Education when Mehane Pritchett took over as chairman, succeeding C.D. Spangler, the University of North Carolina's new president.

The Board unanimously approved Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's nomination of Pritchett, the Board's Vice Chairman and Director of the Morhead Foundation of the University of North Carolina. Pritchett also was Gov. Jim Martin's choice for Spangler's post, said Gene Baker, one of Martin's education advisors.

The Board elects its chairman, but has traditionally abided by the Governor's choice when making its decision.

Barbara Tapscott, a fifth-year board member, was unanimously elected Vice Chairman. Tapscott is Assistant Superintendent for Instruction for the Burlington City Schools.

"In choosing me (as President of the University of North Carolina System), the Board of Governors gave a clear signal to the state that they believe in public education," said Spangler, elected last week to replace UNC President Bill Friday.

They gave a clear signal that they expect a close tie between the University System and the State Board of Education," Spangler said.

Spangler, who plans to assume his new duties March 2, said the Education System in North Carolina — from elementary schools up to universities — forms a circle.

Reagan's Budget

No Surprises Here

That President Reagan's new proposed budget will meet the target of the new Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law of reducing the federal deficit to $144 billion in fiscal 1987, if enacted, may cause joy in some quarters, but not in others. For, the President's budget calls for a 12 percent increase in defense spending while completely eliminating federal programs such as Amtrak rail passenger service, the Small Business Administration, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Economic Development Administration and others. The Reagan budget would also sharply reduce funding for the federal housing program, health and agricultural programs and funding for the building of dams and flood control projects by the Army Corps of Engineers.

The elimination of the programs mentioned above would, of course, be ludicrous as would the continuation of the sharply escalating U.S. arms build-up. The News and Observer reported in its February 5 edition that Reagan's budget calls for actual defense outlays of $282 billion in 1987, an increase from the present level of $266 billion. Yet, the Raleigh based paper adds, the budget also calls for giving the military authority to contract to spend even more in 1987, for a total of $320.3 billion — a boost of nearly 12 percent from the current level and about 8 percent more than the level of inflation.

These defense increases are justified by the Reagan administration as a necessary means of demonstrating American resolve to the Soviet Union. Whether or not the astronomical military spending increases asked for by Reagan will make the Soviets more amenable to the idea of making concessions during up-coming arms talks is a subject that is open for debate. But what current levels of military spending are doing is weakening the American economy. Though high military spending does promote some growth in the economy, a dollar spent on rebuilding the infrastructure or improving schools is more likely to provide a foundation for future growth than a dollar spent on MX missiles.

That is because arms production is more automated and employs fewer people than other industries, the research that is involved in weapons production has very few commercial applications and military goods are basically non-consumerable goods. I say this notwithstanding the fact that the United States is the world's largest exporter of arms. Still, the income derived from arms sales is small indeed compared to the cost of their production.

Of course the economic costs of maintaining a strong national defense should not deter the nation from meeting its security needs. But reality dictates that there is a point at which the economic well-being of a country intersects with the vitality of its security apparatus. I say this notwithstanding the fact that the United States is the world's largest exporter of arms. Still, the income derived from arms sales is small indeed compared to the cost of their production.

Of course the economic costs of maintaining a strong national defense should not deter the nation from meeting its security needs. But reality dictates that there is a point at which the economic well-being of a country intersects with the vitality of its security apparatus. That point has been reached by this nation.

While the sum of the national debt has increased to in excess of 40 percent of GNP and interest payments on the national debt have increased by $70 billion since the beginning of the Reagan era military spending has increased relentlessly. This means that money that might have gone into laying the seeds for future economic growth was spent instead on arms procurement. Thus it is unlikely that we will be able to grow enough in the future to compensate for current expenditures. The reasons for this are essentially twofold:

First, in mid-1985, the United States officially became a debtor nation for the first time since 1914. This development has been directly related to the trade deficit which is in turn related to the strength of the dollar relative to other currencies. And the dollar is strong now because of high real interest rates and a successive string of federal deficits. The strong dollar, which has seen its real value rise approximately 60 percent between 1980 and March 1985, has caused foreigners to be reluctant to buy overpriced U.S. goods. This has caused the trade deficit to move from $36 billion in 1982 to approximately $130 billion in 1985. And it has motivated foreigners to invest in U.S. assets like government bonds, for which they can collect high interest rates, rather than in U.S. products.

The outcome of all this is that the buildup of foreign debt that is presently occurring is threatening U.S. economic security even if measures are taken to restrain deficit spending. This is particularly true because the foreign debt is presently growing faster than the economy as a whole. Moreover this basic trend is likely to continue into the foreseeable future because of the high level of military spending relative to spending which promotes sizeable economic growth and meets human needs. At present even if the value of the dollar is made to decline a financial panic could be set off that would cause foreigners to withdraw their holdings in U.S. assets as they see those assets decreasing in value. This sell-off of U.S. assets would lower the demand for dollars even more, hastening its fall. Such a panic might result in substantial financial disruption — high unemployment, low productivity, and diminished international trade. Yet, such a panic would only be likely if the value of the dollar falls precipitously.

Even if the value of the dollar declines gradually, however, problems await. The drop in the dollar could help restore a normal balance of trade and make U.S. goods more competitive, but a decline in the value of the dollar will also increase the rate of inflation in the United States by making foreign goods more expensive. The increase in inflation might move the Federal Reserve to tighten domestic credit supplies at the same time that foreign lenders are cutting back on their loans to the United States (because of the weaker dollar). The resulting credit squeeze could easily be severe enough to counteract any employment gains that result from the normal value of the dollar and increased trading overseas. It could also throw the economy into a full-blown recession. Thus, regardless of how the dollar behaves the current policies of the Reagan administration make it clear that workers and farmers will continue to bear the brunt of any outcome produced by the economy's crisis managers.

A Requiem For The Astronauts

I have listened to countless stories of friends, teachers, family members, and even strangers, concerning how they reacted upon hearing the loss of a public figure. I remember one high school friend crying over the loss of former Beatle, John Lennon, while working on a bulletin board. I remember a friend recalling how she felt watching her third grade teacher weep after hearing that President Kennedy had been assassinated.

It's amazing that with each story, we remember the exact locations, whether it be a nostalgic scene of sitting at a school desk, hearing a principal's voice over the intercom, or watching a live broadcast on a black and white television in a dorm room.

I can now understand the national despair that these people have felt. In my 21 years, I have never experienced the sense of loss so much as with the space shuttle disaster occurring Tuesday morning, Jan. 28.

Along with millions of viewers, I sat frozen in front of a television screen at the sight of twisted white clouds replacing the Challenger spacecraft. And just as any jet streaks the sky, the Challenger streaks have lingered a little longer for those watching the broadcast.

Tears have filled my eyes as I flip channels one week later. There are non-erasable clippings of mourning family members, President Reagan delivering a memorial speech, newscasters with model rockets reliving the tragic incident, the faces of classroom students watching their teacher with proud smiles and then heart-breaking frowns.

The loss of the seven astronauts indeed a loss all Americans share; the funeral, one that we all attend. America will hopefully lift its black veils and again look into the skies with optimism — not reminiscent of a fatal vision. But until that day, I console fellow mourners grieving after every news release, especially the recent findings of human bone fragments along the coast of near Daytona Beach, in saying, we share your loss.

More About Republicans

This letter is in response to the College Republicans who have recently had letters in the East Carolinian. I will never cease to be amazed by the ludicrous statements they make. To begin with, some of these people claim to be conservatives, when in fact they are really right wing extremists. Sandy Hardy claims that most conservatives hold the views stated in Lance Hardin's letter, but this is far from the truth. Mr. Hardy fails to understand that he and his College Republican pals are not conservatives, but are right wing extremists. True conservatives, such as William F. Buckley, Barry Goldwater, and Robert Dole, would never make a radical statement such as "sweep all pacifist, lazy liberals, and moral outcasts back into the closet." Yes, Mr. Hardy, Barry Goldwater and William F. Buckley did say the things mentioned in my letter. If you would look back to last summer when the Reagan Administration urged the Supreme Court to overturn its abortion ruling, you might notice a large list of people that was immediately sent to the Supreme Court. This list consisted of Senators and Representatives who did not agree with the Reagan administration's abortion stand. Along with several other Republicans, Barry Goldwater was on the list. Also, when Jesse Helms proposed a measure that would prevent the Supreme Court from ruling on school prayer cases, Goldwater stated that he would have been ashamed to propose such an idea. As for Mr. Buckley, I suggest that you watch Firing Line on PBS and read Mr. Buckley's syndicated column. There you will find numerous discussions of Mr. Buckley's views on taxes and the deficit. In the future, Mr. Hardy, I suggest that you find yourself "a complete text of what these men have said" before you claim otherwise.

I have been extremely entertained by the emotional, irrational exclamations made by these "conservatives." For example, Jill Averett claims that "we can't have good weapons, we can't have better weapons, we have to have the best weapons and we can't settle for anything less." Bah-rah-sis-boom-bah! Let's hear it for weapons!

The all-time classic, though, was Bob Lucas' statement that "only liberals approve the cowardly act of suicide." Any intelligent person should know that suicide is a national tragedy, committed by desperate, sick people, not "cowardly liberals." Jan Higginbotham was only using humor to make a very good point; life in a society dictated by ECU's College Republicans would be very difficult to take. Of course, there are still those who claim that abortion is a one-sided black and white issue, and that people who have abortions are "moral outcasts." God bless the College Republicans (they sure need it).

Lastly, I would like to thank Mr. Hardy for his statement that I would be offered a scholarship from the political science department for graduate work. Considering the overall quality and superior intellectual ability of the faculty in this department, I have been paid a tremendous complement. Appreciate it, Sandy.

Abortion

After reading Miss Shearin's editorial response about abortion in the February 4 edition, I now realize how some people misinterpret life. Yes life, the rights of the born and the unborn.

First the born, you, me, and everyone around us. Where do we stand? Especially the women who have to face the abortion issue. The women who have conceived these babies do have a say about the child they are carrying although God has the ultimate say for it is His child like you and I. Blow the dust off of your Bible Miss Shearin and read how immoral abortion is. We are not talking about a hog, a bull, or a cow, but an innocent unborn human being.

The unborn have no say. In many cases they are aborted so early that their sex is unknown. Think of them as babies that have been aborted; future pre-idents perhaps, scientists, doctors, lawyers, educators, and more. Our future is with our children.

The woman that faces the abortion issue should take some things into consideration. Just look at the adoption agencies. There are many people that would love to have newborn babies to adopt. A lot of these people are not able to have children of their own who want children. In most cases, the mother having the baby is paid a very reasonable amount of money to do so. You must admit that this is a better and more moral alternative than abortion. I'm sure you are a nice person Miss Shearin. How would your family feel if your mother had decided to have an abortion while carrying you? You should ask them sometimes. That goes for other pro-abortionists as well.

Therefore, we cannot play God. There are other alternatives to consider before abortion and even before conception. People should be more careful before getting so intimate with each other. Perhaps then, less women will have to face the abortion decision.

The Reagan Administration again submit a budget to which calls for $60 million military aid to the Nicaragua rebels who are, in President's clouded mind, "the moral equivalent of our founding fathers." If Congress quiesces to the administration's demands, the United States will be new, but not altogether in phase of U.S. hegemony in America.

Indeed, the U.S. has a long political and economic history in Nicaragua. As early as 1850, the economic interests of Vanderbilt (shipping) and the U.S. Company dominated the Nicaragua was of great significance to the U.S., partly of America's desire to build through the Isthmus of Panama. For a brief period, the American William Walker Nicaragua and attempted to have it incorporated into the United States.

Communism

When considering whether to send financial aid to Nicaragua should know some of the history. On July 19, 1979, a revolution took place. A group of rebels, known as the Sandinistas, overthrew the established government headed by Somoza. Somoza had been in power for decades and was a democratic values. Thus, when the Sandinistas ran Somoza out and were establishing a democracy, Somoza was glad to help. President Carter, upon this pledge of democracy, increased financial aid to five times before the revolution. Over eighteen months, the Carter administration would give over $140 million in financial aid and airlift in 100,000 tons of food to the Sandinistas.

From The RIG

By LANCE HARDIN

In late 1980, however, it became clear that the Sandinistas were not what they had promised. The Sandinistas were engaged in a huge build up. They were taking over the radio and TV stations. They already executed over 8,000 people. Sandinistas no longer represented majority of the people. There were no more free elections.

The Sandinistas, who received massive financial aid from the U.S., they pledged to establish a democracy in fact doing exactly the opposite. The Sandinistas, now also Cuban and Soviet troops, had established a totalitarian regime in Nicaragua. Not only totalitarian, but also supported by the Soviet Union. Nicaragua had become a pawn game of Soviet expansion. They had once again used their successful technique: the teleguided d'etat. This is the same method used to infiltrate Afghanistan, Yemen, and Ethiopia. The Sandinistas using money and equipment provided by the Soviet Union managed to overthrow the government. Then, once they were in power, the Sandinistas had turned Soviet Union for aid, this aid was being the first.

With the help of their ally, the Soviet Union, the Sandinistan government is in power now for over 10 years. Let's review two aspects of Sandinistan government: their military and their 'foreign policy.'

As far as the military is concerned, the Sandinistas have been building up since they came into power. The Sandinistas currently have 190,000 soldiers operating from 40 new military bases.

U.S. Role In Nicaragua Strengthens Communism

Contras Not Like Our Founding Fathers

The Reagan Administration will once again submit a budget to Congress which calls for $60 million in direct military aid to the Nicaraguan contra rebels who are, in President Reagan's clouded mind, "the moral equivalents of our founding fathers." If Congress acquiesces to the administration's demands, the United States will enter a new, but not altogether unfamiliar, phase of U.S. hegemony in Latin America.

From 1911 to 1933, Nicaraguans were subjected to U.S. military occupation. The United States quelled revolutions and installed governments sympathetic to Washington in order to create a stable environment for their economic interests.

According to historian Walter LeFeber, the United States solved the dilemma "of how to inject force to stop revolutions without having a long-term commitment of US troops" by using "native, U.S.-trained forces." The U.S. solution created the hated Nicaraguan National Guard, led by Anastasio Somoza. By 1933, Somoza had destroyed his opposition and was firmly entrenched as dictator with full U.S. support.

Nicaragua bankrupt and destitute.

In the 80's, the United States has once again resorted to the use of native, U.S.-trained troops to overthrow a revolution. Reagan calls these troops "freedom fighters" and now asks Congress to fund them. However, a brief look at the makeup and motives of these "freedom fighters" should cause Congress instead to question the motives of the Reagan administration.

In 1982 the Contras were 500 men who supposedly existed solely to interdict the flow of arms to El Salvador. They were first funded covertly by the Reagan administration and then overtly by Congress. The Reagan administration's claim that the contra's purpose was to pressure the Sandinistas into democratizing Nicaragua held little substance after the disclosure of the secret CIA mining of Nicaraguan harbors and a CIA manual instructing contra rebels in the fine arts of murder and terrorism. Moreover, the Reagan administration has repeatedly blocked Nicaraguan attempts to obtain economic aid from so-called non-political international lending institutions. This American "pressure" for Nicaraguan democracy has only served to drive the Sandinistas further into the Soviet-Cuban camp and to give headline Sandinistas an excuse to continue their repression of the opposition, the press and the church. It seems all too obvious to me that the Sandinistas will look for economic and military assistance wherever they can when the United States continues a policy of military aggression and economic strangulation.

Today the contras number 15,000. According to Edgar Chamorro, who served as a contra director from December 1982 to November 1984 until being fired for opposing CIA control, by mid-1984, 46 out of 48 of the contra comandantes were former Somoza National Guardsmen.

The human rights atrocities perpetrated by the contras have been well-documented by numerous, legitimate human rights organizations such as Americas Watch. On the other hand, Amnesty International and Americas Watch have issued reports showing that the Sandinistas have a vastly superior human rights record to the El Salvadoran Government, which the United States supports. The Reagan administration, however, attempts to discredit these reports by questioning the motives of those who gather the information.

A newly declassified CIA document attempts to deny charges that the contras often slit the throat of captives despite arguments by Chamorro and former FDN officer Salvador Icaza that slitting throats was a favorite method of killing prisoners. The document further states that "there is nobody in the FDN who is there against his or her will — it is an entirely voluntary organization." Chamorro and numerous other ex-rebels have said that the FDN does practice forced recruitment. Even a November White House report said "instances of forced recruitment and summary execution of prisoners . . . may well have occurred." So much for the "founding fathers" rhetoric.

By continuing a time-dishonored policy of military aggression and economic blackmail, while adding a new twist of terrorism, the Reagan administration is doing everything possible to add Nicaragua to the list of "dominoes" it wishes to prevent from falling. Americans of conscience abhor our role in the region, which does not, as President Reagan claims, make America stand tall. Hopefully Congress will see through this administration's despicable charade and seek other, more sane methods to help bring peace with justice in Nicaragua. Somehow I just can't imagine George Washington slitting the throat of a Tory sympathizer.

As early as the mid-1800's, the economic interests of Cornelius Vanderbilt (shipping) and the U.S. Fruit Company dominated the region. Nicaragua was of great political significance to the U.S., partly because of America's desire to build a canal through the Isthmus of Panama or Nicaragua. For a brief period in 1856, the American William Walker ruled Nicaragua and attempted to have the nation incorporated into the Union as a slave state.

During the period of 1934 to 1979, Somoza and his sons ruled Nicaragua with an iron fist. The family seized most of the nation's wealth and a land area equal to that of Massachusetts, leaving 200,000 peasants without land. The major causes of death in Nicaragua during this period were gastrointestinal and parasitic diseases, and infant maladies. U.S. support for Somoza was unwavering, partly because, as LeFeber argues, "no regime in the world cooperated more fully with the United States." When the Somoza family was deposed in 1979 by the Sandinistas, they left

In late 1980, however, it became evident that the Sandinistas were not doing what they had promised. The Sandinistas were engaged in a huge military build up. They were taking control of the radio and TV stations. They had already executed over 8,000 people. The Sandinistas no longer represented the majority of the people. There were to be no more free elections.

The Sandinistas, who received enormous financial aid from the US because they pledged to establish a democracy, were in fact doing exactly the opposite. The Sandinistas, now also employing Cuban and Soviet troops, had established a totalitarian regime in Nicaragua. Not only totalitarian, but also financially supported by the Soviet Union. Nicaragua had become a pawn in the game of Soviet expansion. The Soviets had once again used their most successful technique: the teleguided coup d'etat. This is the same method they had used to infiltrate Afghanistan, South Yemen, and Ethiopia. The Sandinistas, using money and equipment secretly provided by the Soviet Union, had managed to overthrow the Somoza government. Then, once they were in power, the Sandinistas had turned to the Soviet Union for aid, this aid supposedly being the first.

With the help of their ally, the Soviet Union, the Sandinistan government has been in power now for over five years. Let's review two aspects of the Sandinistan government: their military and their "foreign policy."

As far as the military is concerned, the Sandinistas have been constantly building up since they came into power. The Sandinistas currently have over 190,000 soldiers operating from more than 40 new military bases. Somoza never found it necessary to have more than 14,000 troops at eleven bases. Why do the Sandinistas feel it is necessary to have almost 20 percent of the entire population enlisted in the military? (contrast that with the United States, which has less than one half one percent enlisted). Why do the Sandinistas have 350 tanks, more than all of the other Central American countries combined? Somoza got along fine with only 28 tanks. Why are the Sandinistas building the longest runway in Central America, much larger than they need for their aircraft? One can only speculate, knowing that the Soviets have huge aircraft which require just such runways.

When it comes to "foreign policy" the Sandinistas have but one thought: expansion. This they hope to accomplish by promoting and supporting guerrilla warfare in all their neighboring countries. Indeed, the Sandinistan interior minister, Tomas Borge, said in 1981 "This revolution goes beyond our borders." It is a well-known fact that the Sandinistas are aiding guerrillas in El Salvador, Columbia, Peru, and Chile. What do the Sandinistas stand to gain by giving this aid? They are trying to create the same situation in other countries that enabled the Soviets to take control of theirs. A Soviet control of Central America would be a nightmare for all citizens of the United States. The Soviets would take control of the Panama Canal, through which passes 40 percent of all the foreign tonnage entering the US as well as 50 percent of all our imported oil. It would put the Soviets dangerously close to the Mexican oil fields, a major source of US oil. Also, it would put the Soviets on the same continent as the United States. Anyone who saw the movie "Red Dawn" can imagine the possibilities of that situation. In the movie's realistic scenario, it was Nicaraguan and Cuban forces that attacked the US from the South as Soviet missiles struck from the North.

These are but two facets of the Sandinistan government. There's not room here to tell of all the mass graves, unexplained deaths, torture, and illegal arrests. There's not room to describe the burned churches and murdered priests. There's not room to tell how food production has fallen 50 percent since the revolution, or to describe how Sandinistan soldiers locked the men in barns and raped the women for a month.

One would think that after an individual learned the facts, he would implore our government to rush our forces into Nicaragua to put an end to this murderous, conspiratorial regime. In spite of the impending threat a communist Nicaragua makes to America, we also have on our consciences the gross injustices to human rights that are going on right now in that same country.

But we, as American citizens, do not have to make that terrible sacrifice of going to war against the evil Sandinistan government to protect human life, dignity, and freedoms. Currently in Nicaragua is a group of brave freedom fighters, also known as "contras" (for contra-communism). These freedom fighters are vastly outnumbered, but they are gaining strength as more and more people realize that the Sandinistan government would mean a life of hell. As American citizens, we need not risk our own lives or our children's lives fighting the Sandinistan cancer; we can help the true Nicaraguans and ourselves merely by sending financial aid to the freedom fighters. With our help, they can win. They've got the courage, the spirit, and the perseverance necessary for victory. All they need is money and equipment to win this battle against communism. Let's give them our country's support.

It's time we take a hard look at the facts and make the right decision. What's the difference between innocent people starving in Ethiopia and innocent people getting raped and shot in Nicaragua? President Reagan has called for our support for "those who are risking their lives — on every continent, from Afghanistan to Nicaragua — to defy Soviet supported aggression." Let's help President Reagan fight communism. Let's help the Nicaraguan citizens. Let's help the world remain free. Let's support the Nicaraguan freedom fighters.

"The University of North Carolina gets its students from the public schools," he said. "If public schools do their job well, the universities will have good students. If the universities train good teachers, those teachers will become your teacher."

"Any part of that circle that gets strengthened, strengthens the whole state, the whole circle," Spangler said.

Pritchett, Jordan and State Public Instruction superintendent Craig Phillips praised Spangler's 3 1/2 year tenure on the Board, saying his strong leadership sparked much public focus on education in North Carolina.

Spangler "focused public attention on many steps (taken by the Board), resulting in unprecedented political and financial support of public schools," Pritchett said.

Jordan, struggling for a title by which to address Spangler, "you're no longer chairman, you're not yet president" he said, "Mr. Normal Citizen, we are indeed fortunate that you're here, and we look forward to working with you and the university."

"We like to run the gamut... do things both brutish and pretty," remarked lead singer Jeff Calder of the Swimming Pool Q's who, along with The Three Hits, left the Attic's Saturday night crowd both exhausted and satisfied.

The Swimming Pool Q's is a veteran group of eight years who

The group began in Atlanta, Georgia in 1978 when Calder, writer/singer Jeff Calder, combined his talents with that of friend and guitarist Bob Elsey and keyboardist/vocalist Anne Richmond Boston. With support from a bassist and drummer, who both eventually retired from the band, their first single, "The Bells Ring," was released. This led to the formation of their first album, Deep End, which was released in 1981 on DB Records.

In April of 1982 the group picked up two locals from an Atlanta band, J.E. Garnett, became the group's new bassist.

Pool Qs, Three Hits Take Attic By Storm

By WALT RISHEL
Staff Writer

"We like to run the gamut... do things both brutish and pretty," remarked lead singer Jeff Calder of the Swimming Pool Q's who, along with The Three Hits, left the Attic's Saturday night crowd both exhausted and satisfied.

The Swimming Pool Q's is a veteran group of eight years who have produced two albums and toured nationally.

The group began in Atlanta, Georgia in 1978 when song writer/singer Jeff Calder combined his talents with that of friend and guitarist Bob Elsey and keyboardist/vocalist Anne Richmond Boston. With support from a bassist and drummer, who both eventually retired from the band, their first single, "The Bells Ring," was released. This led to the formation of their first album, Deep End, which was released in 1981 on DB Records.

In April of 1982 the group picked up two locals from an Atlanta band, J.E. Garnett became the group's new bassist and Billy Burton was installed as the new drummer to maintain the group's active status. Shortly thereafter the Q's played in Greenville at what was then called JJ's.

Since their last performance in Greenville, the band's popularity has spread. They signed with A&M Records and produced their second album, Q. To promote their second album they landed a tour with folk/jazz artist Lou Reed.

The Q's have just released a double single record in England which was the first ever mixed digitally on the digital mastering console in London. The double single will be available in America as an import this month. The band is concentrating more, however, on their newest album, Blue Tomorrow, which is due out in March.

The Three Hits

The Three Hits, who consider Greenville as their hometown, set the mood for the Swimming Pool Q's Saturday night with their REMish accent and a strong influence of country rock mixed with progressive rock intentions.

The two year band from Raleigh has played at the now defunct Premiums, The New Deli and The Attic and consider this as a home base and favorite place to play.

Jeff Calder of the Swimming Pool Q's in action at the Attic.

Sheila Valentine, the bassist and co-lead singer, keeps a sense of modesty and style to the band. Mike Kurtze, lead guitarist and co-lead singer, writes most of their material and provides the backbone to the group's initial sound. Mike's brother Danny plays rhythm guitar, and Jim Biddell paces the group on drums and in his refined back-up vocals.

The band is looking forward to playing the 688 Premier Club this month, and to their up-coming tour of the East Coast.

Hollywood Corrects Asian Stereotyping

(UPI) — The growing Asian population in the United States has finally rung some bells in Hollywood's executive chambers. An increasing number of films now involve Orientals.

To be sure, the numbers are still small, but in relatively little time Asia and Asians have played prominent roles in Rambo: First Blood II, Year of the Dragon, The Killing Fields, The Karate Kid and The Year of Living Dangerously.

Completed but unreleased are Gung Ho and The Karate Kid II. On the production schedules are Tai-Pan, The Last Emperor, China Marines, Empire in the Sun and The Golden Child.

Most films involving the Orient are tailored not for Asian-Americans but for the rest of the nation. Many are flawed by inaccuracies, prejudice or stereotyped characterizations and events.

The Hollywood mentality has traditionally focused on the cliché of the "inscrutable" Chinese or Japanese going back to The Hatchet Man, The Bitter Tea of General Yen and The Mask of Fu Manchu.

For years, there weren't enough Asian moviegoers in the United States to make a difference at the box office and too few of them to register a significant voice of protest. Consequently, producers and studios became careless in the depiction of Asian minorities. During World War II every "Jap," of course, was a heavy and usually a sadist.

But increasing trade and cultural relationships with Japan and detente with China, begun by President Nixon, have opened new vistas of understanding and respect for Asians.

The flood tide of boat people and others from Southeast Asia and the growing Korean and Filipino populations, especially in Los Angeles, have further exposed Americans to Eastern cultures.

At long last, Hollywood is catching up with the reality of the expanding Asia influence in this country. Director John Carpenter, who recently completed Big Trouble In Little China, calls this the era of the Asian.

His fantasy film, starring Kurt Russell, involves a cast of 200 Asians in an adventure-drama about a mythical city beneath San Francisco's famed Chinatown.

The cast is principally Chinese but includes Japanese, Koreans and Filipinos.

To prepare for the film, Carpenter spent months of research and endless hours in conference with his associate producer Jim Lau (a scholar, master of martial arts and historian) and project coordinator Daniel Kwan (a journalist and actor).

"I wanted to be as accurate and fair as possible in representing Asians in this country as they really are," said Carpenter during a break in post-production work at the 20th Century Fox commissary.

"We are seeing more pictures about the Far East than ever before. There is a great deal of curiosity about that part of the planet thanks to renewed ties (with) China and (to) the Vietnamese War."

"I get the feeling Asians are coming into their own with their

Dorsey Band To Play TW's

There is something unique about the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra which is conducted by Buddy Morrow and will be appearing in Greenville, at TW's Nitelite on Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Morrow is a veteran of the Big Band era and himself a member of the original Dorsey brigade. However, people often expect to see the orchestra comprised of men the same vintage as those in the original band and are surprised at the number of younger members on board.

Most of these younger musicians are graduates of the many fine music schools throughout the country and, strange as it may seem to some fans of the 1940s, are often older than were some of the original Dorsey-ites — Buddy was still in his teens when he was with Tommy Dorsey!

Morrow, as leader of the one and only Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, insists that the band retain the authentic sound and style of the late Tommy Dorsey and still have the elasticity to meet almost every musical situation. They can play a college prom, a country club, a scholastic clinic, a policeman's ball or play a jazz concert for non-dancing audiences all with expertise.

They can play a college prom, a country club, a scholastic clinic, a policeman's ball, or play a jazz concert for non-dancing audiences all with expertise.

His repertoire embraces not only the classics of the original Tommy Dorsey Orchestra but a spectrum of popular music from Dixieland, rhythm and blues, and intricate ballads to progressive jazz or current rock tunes. His library also has a nostalgic representation of those familiar tunes of the 40s so irreplaceable to the many who loved and remember Big Bands.

The "Sentimental Gentleman of Swing" has able representation in Morrow's extraordinary trombone playing. Coupled with these solos, the Dorsey sound stresses the ensemble feel featuring the brass and reed sections. This fine blend of instruments brings to life once more such great, undying original Dorsey arrangements as "Marie," "Song of India," "Opus 1," "I'll Never Smile Again" and many more.

Once this band starts to blow, there's no doubt that the drive and spirit behind the musicianship of the original Tommy Dorsey Orchestra reign once more. Good music knows no generation gap in its ability to swing, and swing it does under Morrow's direction.

The Dance, benefiting the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, will last from 8 p.m. until midnight. The Doors will open at 7 p.m. Tickets are $5 for ECU students with a valid ID and $8.50 per person for non-students or $15.50 per couple.

Playhouse Presents Moliere

"A little learning can be a dangerous thing," or at least that's what the ECU Playhouse hopes to demonstrate when it produces Moliere's delightful 17th Century comedy The Learned Ladies, in McGinnis Theatre, Feb. 12-15, at 8:15 p.m.

Audiences the world over have come to know The Learned Ladies as one of Moliere's brilliant comic plays that pokes fun at phony learning, fake poetry and pseudo-intellectualism.

The topic is also one of early feminism as Moliere has some fun at the expense of women who fancy themselves intellectuals. Lusting for learning, they convert an upper-middle-class household into a high fashion school. The usual order of the house is turned upside down; the women of the house become the rulers and the man their slave.

Some lines about the proper feminine role may make 20th Century women bristle, as when the husband in the play mocks his wife's intellectual interests — "I don't know what your soul's been eating of late, but it's not a balanced diet, at any rate."

Despite such sentiments, the play isn't an attack on educated women, but on pretentiousness. Moliere ridicules the women only because they stumble so ludicrously in their pursuit of culture.

Director Edgar Loessin calls The Learned Ladies "the equivalent of 17th Century Vaudeville, with farcical characters who behave as if they were in a cartoon."

Moliere, whose real name was Jean-Baptiste Poquelin, is generally known to have been the greatest comic dramatist of France and the author of some of the most brilliant comedies of all theatrical history. Some of his best known plays include The Imaginary Invalid, Tartuffe and The Misanthrope.

The ECU production of The Learned Ladies marks the second time this particular translation has been used in North Carolina. Dr. Wallace Fowle, distinguished professor of romance languages at Duke University, is the translator, and he has given his permission for this work to be used by the ECU group.

"Dr. Fowle has an extraordinary feeling for the humor in this play," said Loessin. "That it is such great fun is in large measure due to him. We are very fortunate he has allowed us to use his translation."

The script's translation is not the only story involved with the production. Because the play is set in fashionable 17th Century France, the requirements of the costuming and decor are particularly demanding.

Costume Coordinator Keith Lewis estimates that the actors will be wearing costumes and wigs valued at more than $10,000. Some of the women's period silk dresses are from the NC School of the Arts, and both men's and women's human hair wigs have been especially designed for the production in New York.

The scenery staff of McGinnis Theatre has raised the height of the stage floor and extended it out some 10 feet beyond its usual boundaries, over the orchestra pit, so that the actors will be much closer to the audience than is often the case in McGinnis.

The Learned Ladies is the third major production this season by the ECU Playhouse. Reserved seat tickets are currently on sale in the McGinnis Theatre Box Office. The Box Office is open Monday through Friday, from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. For reservations and group sale information, call 757-6390.

From The Not So Right

Commercial Criticisms

By PAT MOLLOY
Staff Writer

"What the hell is this?" My editor, Dan, was a trifle upset. I can tell when Dan gets angry because he turns a greenish color — kind of like Gummy, but not as cute.

He continued, "I asked you to write an article on game shows; and I asked you to make it funny. I assumed you could do that. Pat, I assumed you had a trace of a sense of humor in you. What did you give me? You gave me a monotonous piece of crap on Pat Sajak that was as funny as a tumor."

He screamed, "A break! You want a break?" By this time, his eyes had swollen up like a couple of golf balls set on fire. "I don't give breaks, Molloy. Now drop that beer, spit out that pizza, and write me an article on commercials."

"Okay, okay, Dan," I said. "Say, Dan, would you please quit dripping blood on my rough draft?" Alright, here's an article on commercials — I know I did one last year, but times change, and so do the advertisements. Hopefully, these commercials will touch a nerve in you as much as they did in me.

The Sine-off commercial: probably the most asinine piece of advertising ever created. In this commercial, a platoon of Army women is standing at attention while their platoon sergeant, one of the ugliest people ever to be born of flesh, is screaming, "What do you take for sinus pain?"

Now, like the true simpletons they are, the platoon answers, in harmony, mind you, "Sine-off, Sine-off." My God, where are people's brains? Any person in her right mind would kneel that ugly she-wolf in the chest and give her the number of a plastic surgeon.

Another commercial that just makes me cry is the ad for Furniture Plus. It's the one with the effervescent "Billy-Joe Bob."

You know, when I first came to North Carolina, I pictured everybody as being in his image. Of course now I know I was wrong. However, why a state with the academic reputation of North Carolina allows this pin-headed yahoo to mock it is beyond me. Seems to me good old Billy-Joe spent just a bit too much time in the mountains before he found civilization — probably frolics with Bigfoot....Those crazy mountain boys.

Next is any commercial having to do with Nissan. Good Lord, where did they find that guy

IRS Arm-Wrestling Tourney

By STEPHANIE DEW

For those of you that have developed a definite muscle from lifting Budweisers to your mouths, put your strength to a test!

That's right, the Intramural-Recreational Services invite you to enter the annual arm-wrestling tournament, sponsored by Budweiser. So you're not a serious athlete... this could be your chance! There will be a variety of weight classes in both the men's and women's divisions. And just by entering, you will receive a free IRS t-shirt. Registration will be held this week in room 204 Memorial Gym.

A friendly reminder... today is the registration deadline for water basketball. Want to show off your basketball talents while floating on an innertube? Go by the IRS office today.

Do you consider yourself outgoing? Here's your chance — by joining a sports club! Such events as Frisbee tournaments (some of which will be held out of the state) and Women's Soccer (which has recently affiliated itself with the United States Soccer Association via membership in the North Carolina Soccer Association.)

For more information about individual clubs, how to join, what is offered, etc. contact the Sport Club Office, room 105 Memorial Gym. The following is a list of clubs available and persons to contact if interested:

Club	President
Surfing	John McCann
Frisbee	Bob Sewan
Ice Hockey	Mike White
Cycling	Mark Taylor
Lacrosse	Mark Seasholtz
Racquetball	Raymond Song
Karate	Chuck Johnson
Wm.'s Soccer	Lisa Grosshandler
Water Skiing	Bill Leitch
Scuba	Wade Bunting

Want an original Gold's Gym t-shirt? It's yours by just participating in the annual strong man and woman competition. Gold's Gym and the IRS are together sponsoring the event.

Last year Amy Bowen captured first in the women's division, breaking former all-campus records. Robert Washington won in the guy's division.

For those interested in the weight lifting meet, pick up your information packet in room 204 Memorial Gym. The participants meeting will be held Monday, See NEW, page 12

Deacons Slip Past Pirates

By BILL MITCHELL

WINSTON-SALEM — The Wake Forest Demon Deacons used a hot-shooting second half to get past the ECU Pirates 65-60 last night in a non-conference matchup.

The Deacons connected on 53 percent of their field goals throughout the game, including a red-hot 75 percent mark in the second half. This was their best second-half shooting effort of the year. This marks Wake Forest's second best field-goal night of the season. It was also the first time that the Deacons have hit over 50 percent since Dec. 27.

Wake was led by freshman Rod Watson's 19 points and senior guard Tyrone "Mugsy" Bogues' 18 points and eight assists. Cal Boyd, who connected on five of seven shots, added 10 points.

The Pirates, who ended a three-game road stint, stayed close throughout the contest, despite shooting just 38 percent in the opening half. In fact, ECU had an early lead as a pair of Leon Bass free throws put the Pirates up 8-2 with 16:08 left in the first period.

The Deacons roared back, outscoring the Bucs 8-2 over the next few minutes. Charlie Thomas, who returned to action after being out with an ankle injury since Dec. 29, sank a pair of free throws to knot the game at 10-10 with 13:32 left until intermission.

Both teams traded baskets over the next eight minutes of action.

The Pirates had some success getting the ball inside, but were being matched by Wake's fine outside shooting. Marchell Henry's free throws once again tied the game, 19-19 with five minutes remaining.

The game remained close as a lone Herb Dixon free throw brought ECU to within one, 27-26 at the half.

The Pirates came out a bit hotter in the second half as they grabbed the early lead. After Henry scored inside, a Curt shot ended the scoring as Wake Forest prevailed 65-60.

ECU coach Charlie Harrison felt the Pirates could have been more assertive, but the Deacs played with the intensity of a that badly needed the win.

"We didn't play as aggressively as we have in the past five games," Harrison stated. "We were tentative, but I thought the kids gave a good effort."

"Wake was hungry and they needed this win. They (Wake) shot the ball very, very well. We Vanderhorst 18-foot jumper gave ECU a 30-27 advantage with 19:06 remaining to play.

Bogues retaliated for the Deacs by scoring four quick points and retaking the lead 31-30. ECU's Bass then hit a turnaround in the lane, giving the Bucs their last lead (32-31) with 17:30 left in regulation.

After the game was knotted at 45-45, Wake then went on an eight-point scoring binge. A Boyd 16 footer opened a 53-45 Wake lead with 4:13 remaining.

ECU could cut the Deacon deficit to only five late in the game. A Bass baselining jumper with 29 seconds left made it 63-58. After a pair of Bogues free throws, a Vanderhorst follow didn't expect Cal Boyd to shoot the ball that well," Harrison added. "And Charlie Thomas gave them some help inside."

The Pirates were once again led in scoring by Henry. He tossed in 19 while Bass added 16 and Vanderhorst finished with 14.

With the win, Wake Forest jumps to 7-15 while ECU falls to 10-11 on the season.

The Pirates will be at home for a pair of conference games when they host the best and the worst in the CAA. The league-leading and undefeated (CAA) Navy Richmond Spiders visit Minges Coliseum Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. The Bucs will host the last place William & Mary Indians on Monday night.

Spring Break Games

By CASEY LEYDON

DAYTONA BEACH — The National Collegiate Sports Festival will consist of as many as 20 different events which will include flag football, softball, (male and female) volleyball, soccer, tennis (male and female), golf (male and female), rugby, running 5K (male and female), sailing (co-ed), cycling (male and female), crew (co-ed), swimming (male and female), tug-o-war, racquetball (male and female), basketball, ultimate frisbee (co-ed), roller speed skating (male and female), and Trivial Pursuit (co-ed).

The Festival will be held from the weekend of March 8-9 to the weekend of April 5-6. Events will be held during the week from 9 am to 5 pm. No events will be held Saturday or Sunday unless inclement weather forces rescheduling.

All students who are currently enrolled in any college or university are eligible to compete. Varsity athletes are eligible only in sports other than those which they are competing on a varsity level. All intramural participants are eligible including club sports (e.g. rugby, frisbee, soccer).

The First Annual N.C.S.F. will hold weekly round-robin tournaments for all 20 events. Groups consisting of five teams or individuals will compete against each other (four guaranteed competitions). Winners of each group then face each other in single elimination play, culminating in a weekly champion. After the four weeks are over, the N.C.S.F. will fly weekly winners (expenses included) back to Daytona Beach for a "FINAL FOUR" tournament which will decide the National Collegiate Champion for each event.

Registration for this National Collegiate Sports Festival is $15.00 per competitor. Two dollars of each registration fee is retained by the intramural department as our contribution to help build the intramural club sports program. With each registration, the student receives a four-color custom T-shirt to wear during competition (if applicable), a map of Daytona Beach, a U.S. map leading to Daytona Beach, discount coupons to Disney World and Epcot Center, coupons for sun-tan products, gifts from our sponsors, and social events for teams and their supporters during their stay in Daytona Beach.

We see the opportunity to develop a long term relationship with the college athlete. This is your school's opportunity to enjoy a sports event and to have fun cheering fellow students in their competition with hundreds of colleges from across the country.

ACC Hoops Tops In NCAA

ATLANTA (UPI) — Surely no one can challenge the Atlantic Coast Conference's claim to currently being the best college basketball league in the nation — not with three of the top two teams.

The eight-team ACC is awesome. North Carolina is ranked No. 1, Georgia Tech and Duke share No. 2, N.C. State is No. 19 and Virginia is No. 20.

Consider the plight of the league's sixth-place team, Clemson. The Tigers are 14-7 and five of those losses were to top-20 opponents.

Tuesday night's North Carolina-Georgia Tech game was a fitting tribute to the strength of the ACC. No. 1 playing No. 2 before a sold-out crowd of more than 16,000 (in Atlanta's Omni) and No. 1 winning by one point, 78-77, in overtime.

"What more could you ask for?" Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said. "It would have been better if we could have won, but it was a fantastic basketball game; one of the best I've ever been involved with."

The ACC has been a basketball stronghold ever since it was formed in the early '50's. North Carolina (1957, 1982) and N.C. State (1974, 1983) have each won two NCAA championships.

North Carolina has been in the Final Four nine times, Duke four, N.C. State three, Virginia two and Wake Forest one.

In the 14 seasons previous to this one, North Carolina was No. 1 twice (1982, 1984) and a top-10 team nine times in the UPI rankings. N.C. State was No. 1 in 1974 after ranking No. 2 in 1973, and Duke has been as high as No. 2 (1966).

"It's a tough, tough basketball conference," Cremins said. "Georgia Tech knew when it joined (in 1979-80) that it would have to be very, very good to compete."

The Yellow Jackets were completely outclassed its first three seasons of ACC competition, winning only four of 42 conference games those years. The third of those was Cremins' first at Georgia Tech and the job — recruiting and coaching — he made a Cinderella story.

Tech had the ACC rookie of the year in 1983 (Mark Price), 1984 (Bruce Dalrymple), 1985 (Duane Ferrell) and is expected to make it four-in-a-row this season because of the sensational play of 6-8 freshman forward Tom Hammonds.

With that sort of recruiting, the Yellow Jackets were able to post a 27-8 record last season — tying North Carolina for the regular-season ACC title, winning the ACC tournament by beating the Tar Heels in the finals, and winning three NCAA playoff games before being knocked off by the Georgetown Hoyas.

Georgia Tech came into this season ranked No. 1 by some, and that concerned coach Cremins.

"The first thing that comes into my mind is the high rankings, the high expectations," Cremins admits. "We had a similar problem last year. But then we were dealing in terms of top-20. Now we're talking about top five, even No. 1."

The expectations weren't far fetched. After Tuesday night's overtime loss, the Yellow Jackets are 17-3 and all three of their losses (to Michigan State in the season opener and twice to the Tar Heels) were to teams that were ranked No. 1 at the time.

"Being No. 1 and No. 2 didn't enter into it," UNC center Brad Daugherty said. "It was just the idea of two good basketball teams going out and battling hard."

"We never thought of the rankings," Tar Heel coach Dean Smith said. "I know we didn't and I'll bet Tech didn't either."

North Carolina had to overcome a 13-point deficit in the closing 12 minutes to beat Georgia Tech Tuesday night and Carolina guard Steve Hale felt the Tar Heels tradition was the deciding factor.

"When you haven't done it, you can talk about coming back, but there's that seed of doubt in your mind," Hale said. "When you have the tradition of doing it, you have the confidence you can do it."

New Sports Medicine

Feb. 17 at 7 p.m. in Gold's Gym, located in downtown Greenville.

The IRS Sports Medicine Program is undergoing reconstruction. The name has been changed to the Division of First Aid and Physical Fitness.

Susan Durrwachter, assistant director in charge of the program has a qualified staff of student personnel to assist in immediate care and preventative taping at every intramural contest. Although the IRS provide no follow-up treatment or rehabilitation, they will refer injured participants to qualified physicians.

The First Aid facility is located in room 111 Memorial Gym and will be open Monday-Thursday from 2-6 p.m.

We remind interested swimmers that the scheduled IRS meet for Feb. 17-23 has been postponed. This gives you sufficient time to register before the new captain's meeting date, Feb. 13, at 6 p.m. to be held in the balcony of Memorial Gym. Go by 204 Memorial Gym and pick-up your packet today!

Next week, be sure to grab a Tennis Shoe Tidbits lying around. This is a bi-monthly IRS publication loaded with articles, pictures, and players of the month. That, along with the Tennis Shoe Talk Show, a bi-weekly campus radio program, hosted by our very own WZMB's Stephanie Luke, will keep you updated with IRS information.

Remember, the number for heavy breathing action is 757-6562, the Intra-Action Hotline. For daily facility hours, major team sport games, and cancellations due to inclement weather, just dial this number.
