A foreshadowing of things to come? The Carter-Finley scoreboard tells the brighter half of Saturday evening's story: ECU 32, NCSU 14 (above left). But N.C. State campus security found themselves outnumbered when the flood of people surged over a fence and onto the field near the end of the game. Officers had the messy job of breaking up fights such as the one above right.

ECU-NCSU game is cancelled over Sat. riot

By MICKI BURBELL

North Carolina State University officials have decided to call off the 1988 football game with ECU as a result of the post-game fracas at Saturday's game.

The North Carolina State University athletic council decided, unanimously to recommend that NCSU not play ECU during the 1988 football season. NCSU Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton concurred with the recommendation.

After ECU's 32-14 victory over NCSU Saturday night, approximately 2,000 ECU supporters rushed onto the field, destroying a fence in the south endzone and two goal posts. Estimated damage to Carter-Finley Stadium is $7200.

Several fights resulted between fans and NCSU campus security officers. Officer Robert W. Malason was reportedly injured trying to pull a man, wearing a purple T-shirt, off of one of the goal posts. Malason said the pole climber struck him in the head.

The blow shattered his glasses, lodging fragments in his eye. He was treated and released from Rex Hospital, but he reportedly received no permanent eye damage. Malason has now identified the face of the man with the help of a videotape of the game made by WRAL-TV and still pictures taken by a "Raleigh News and Observer" photographer.

Major Larry Liles, in charge of the investigation for NCSU Public Safety, said his department is handling the investigation and has involved ECU Campus Police in it.

"We are not investigating under the assumption that he (the suspect) is an ECU student," said Chief John Rose of ECU Campus Police. "What we're trying to do is set up a photo line-up. If it is an ECU student, we will handle it; if it is not a student, we will turn it (the case) over to Greenville (police department)."

ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin is still concerned about Saturday's events.

"Unfortunately, the behavior of a group of fans after the game has detracted from the efforts of the team and has brought embarrassment to this university. I deeply regret the unruly conduct and have expressed that regret in an oral apology to Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton of North Carolina State," Eakin had said in a press conference Monday.

Eakin spoke with Poulton Wednesday afternoon and told reporters at a Wednesday evening press conference that he was disappointed with the decision to cancel the 1988 game. Eakin had "hoped for the opportunity to discuss this matter more fully prior to a formal decision."

"I don't believe we should tolerate either the destruction of property or the inflicting of personal injury to those who attended an athletic contest. East Carolina coach Art Baker said, 'It was very embarrassing with absolutely no class' — he was correct," Eakin said at the Monday conference.

Both Eakin and Thomas have offered apologies to their NCSU counterparts and have opened negotiations for communication in 1989. Several ideas are being discussed which may make resuming the series in 1989 a possibility.

"It's been a matter of discussion over the last several days, and several suggestions have been offered," Eakin said. "One is that we should try to schedule this game to be played in the daytime; there are questions about whether or not the fans should be seated on the grassy slope."

Thomas said he and Kevin Howell, NCSU SGA president, have exchanged ideas and Thomas stated that Howell understood the situation and realized the SGA "could not be responsible for every fan."

Eakin maintains that more important than the revenues of the cancelled game is the rivalry between the "two sister universities of North Carolina."

Officers and legislators elected Wed.

There were few hotly contested races in Wednesday's SGA legislature and class officer elections. In fact, there were scarcely any contests at all.

All students who registered as candidates for legislature offices won their offices by default.

Furthermore, some students will win offices as write-ins on the basis of less than 16 votes, according to election committee members.

Lab fee issues raised, who should pay?

By JEANETTE HERRERA

Over 7,000 students were charged a $25 lab fee this semester for the use of lab materials and computers. But in one accounting class, the students are being charged for a lab they won't be using.

This $25 lab/computer fee came as a surprise to many students who registered for classes which in the past didn't have a lab assigned to them. For some courses the students still may not have to meet for a lab but will be required to pay the $25 lab fee for the use of equipment such as computers and materials supposed to be used during their class.

Dean Ernest B. Uhr of the School of Business explained that students enrolled in classes with the $25 lab fees will only have to pay the fee once per semester, regardless of the number of classes with lab fees they are taking.

A senior taking an accounting class said he does not believe he should be charged a lab fee for a class which doesn't presently use lab facilities. "There are 12 sections of (the class) with a $25-a-person (lab fee). This runs into the thousands of dollars," the student stated in a letter to The East Carolinian.

The student would only comment on the condition of anonymity.

Classes requiring a lab fee can be found in departments ranging from physics to music.

A faculty committee was formed two years ago to research the possibility of a lab/computer fee for students at East Carolina and to study how lab fees are handled at other large universities said Dr. William A. Bloodworth, acting Vice Chancellor of Academic Affairs.

The committee found that the $25 lab/computer fee was necessary to cover the cost of maintenance and supplies for existing computers and labs and "to bring the Universities' computer and science labs up to par," said Dr. Robert L. Bernhardt, Chairman of the Laboratory Fee Committee.

He pointed out that ECU was one of the few larger universities in the State that did not have an "across the board fee for labs and computers as of 1986. Bernhardt added, "We're still the best bargain in the state."

Approximately 424 courses were designated by the committee to carry a lab/computer fee Bloodworth said. He explained that there were two criteria used to designate which courses would have a lab/computer fee.

1) The class is a lab-type course which consumes a significant amount of lab material.

2) The class makes significant use of computers.

"Where does the $25 go, exactly?" That is what a lot of students are wondering. Bloodworth explained, "The $25 does not go directly back to each department. It goes into a pool used

Fundraiser benefits Greenville support home

By MICKI BURELLA

The Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity plans to contribute an estimated $4,000 in pledges from this past weekend's football run to the Greenville Ronald McDonald House, according to the fraternity's president.

The donation is to help cover recent construction costs of the newly built house, said Matt Hermes, president.

Twelve former patients of the Ronald McDonald House began the run Friday afternoon around 2 p.m., and different runners carried the football to Carter-Finley Stadium in Raleigh in time for the NCSU-ECU football game Saturday.

Several local personalities ran in the event, but Chancellor Richard Eakin and Greenville Mayor Leslie Gardner had to cancel due to schedule complications.

But several television celebrities did run in event, and Hermes ran the last mile of the event into the stadium and passed the ball to Eakin at Carter-Finley.

According to Price, the fraternity came to Kathy Brown, who is in charge of fundraising for the Ronald McDonald House, with the idea of a football run.

"It really excites me to see the University students involved in something outside of classes... to see students go beyond life on campus and help out the community," Price said.

Price hopes to see other groups get involved, noting that the Ronald McDonald House is affiliated with the ECU School of Medicine.

"We're serving not only the county hospital, but hematology/oncology and the ECU Med. School," Price said.

Price also recounted the story of how the Ronald McDonald House got started.

Fred Hill, a player for the Philadelphia Eagles, had a daughter with leukemia in 1973. After going through the ordeal, he went to the team to organize a place for the families of seriously ill children to stay; the franchise of McDonalds restaurants also backed the idea. The name for the houses was taken from the McDonald's trademark clown because of the cheer he represented, Price said.

According to Price it is a misconception that the house is a place for families, who cannot afford other accommodations, to stay.

"We create a family atmosphere," Price said. "The house is like a support group, the families are close. They share their thoughts with each other — people in the same situations as they themselves are."

Any other organizations interested in supporting the Ronald McDonald House can contact Kathy Brown (830-0062) for more information.

Studies have suggested that nicotine, which occurs naturally in the tobacco plant, reinforces and strengthens the desire to smoke and causes users to keep on smoking. The nicotine in cigarettes reaches the brain faster than in cigars, chewing tobacco and snuff because it is inhaled.

When a smoker smokes, the following events occur:

-The first cigarette of the day sends a burst of nicotine to the brain which produces an almost immediate feeling of satisfaction and euphoria.

-For the rest of the day the smoker tries to maintain this feeling by manipulating his or her intake of tobacco smoke. The smoker may inhale more or less deeply, take more or fewer puffs, or smoke at different intervals of time.

-If the smoker exceeds a certain number of cigarettes, sudden side-effects may occur, including nausea, light-headedness, and a marked rise in the heart rate.

-When the smoker smokes less than a minimal amount of cigarettes (around 10 cigarettes a day), the amount of nicotine in the blood drops and the smoker begins to experience distress.

Nicotine can affect the body in different ways. It can act as an anti-anxiety drug in stressful situations, or it can act as a stimulant in serene situations. Some people enjoy the psychological effects of smoking such as handling cigarettes, matches, lighters and ash trays.

When a person tries to stop smoking, a number of physical and emotional reactions may occur during the first few days:

- occasional headaches.
- mood changes such as irritability, aggressiveness, anxiety and difficulty in sleeping.
- gastrointestinal disturbances such as nausea, bloating, constipation.
- increased or decreased appetite.
- weight gain.
- a feeling of loss.

OPINION

Responsibility

Student rioters should be punished

The decision made by the North Carolina State University Athletic Advisory Committee to put a one year moratorium on the ECU-NCSU football series may have been hasty, but it well may have been just the slap students at this university needed.

The debacle that occurred after the game Saturday night shed a bad light on the university and the football team, overshadowing what should have been a great victory for both. Instead we found ourselves once again faced with the ominous task of explaining how the gross behavior of a few drunken, overzealous fans should not be held against the school as a whole, or even the athletic department.

This time we couldn't pull it off.

Instead ECU has been under attack all week from all sides, including NCSU Athletic Director Jim Valvano. Before we go any further it should be noted that this is the same Valvano who has never said word one about the destruction of the Brickyard at NCSU and downtown Raleigh after several basketball victories. The News and Observer, another of ECU's constant detractors, also boarded the bandwagon with a hasty editorial and coverage that is normally reserved for a presidential death.

Regardless, it is the actions of those 2,000 fans that got us into this mess. Unfortunately no arrests were made during Saturday's melee since the police were overwhelmingly outnumbered, or some students could be brought in front of the Honor Board for their actions.

Still, it seems that with the number of photos taken and video-tapes made during the riot, a number of fence crashers and goal post wreckers could be identified. The SGA Attorney General should look into this and see what students were involved. These students should be brought in front of the Honor Board to face charges of vandalism and destruction of state property. It seems insane that the perpetrators of the vandalism walk away scott free, while the football players and the true Pirate fans are left to pay the price.

And that, after all, is the ultimate result of all this. The football team pays the heaviest price—next year's seniors don't get their crack at our only in-state rival—and they had nothing to do with it. The true Pirate fans, those that stick with the team through thick and thin and celebrated privately Saturday night are also denied the chance to see another great ball game to kick off the 1988 season.

The concept of playing in-state rivals brings up another point. The stampede has simply given other universities more reasons than ever not to schedule ECU for football. The safety of their fans and their fields are a legitimate concern if the actions of Saturday and of the post-game brawl in 1985 are any evidence.

We don't believe they are, however. The many are once again being mistakenly blamed for the few. Admittedly, punishing the group may end the problems with the few, but is it fair, just or truly the only possible solution?

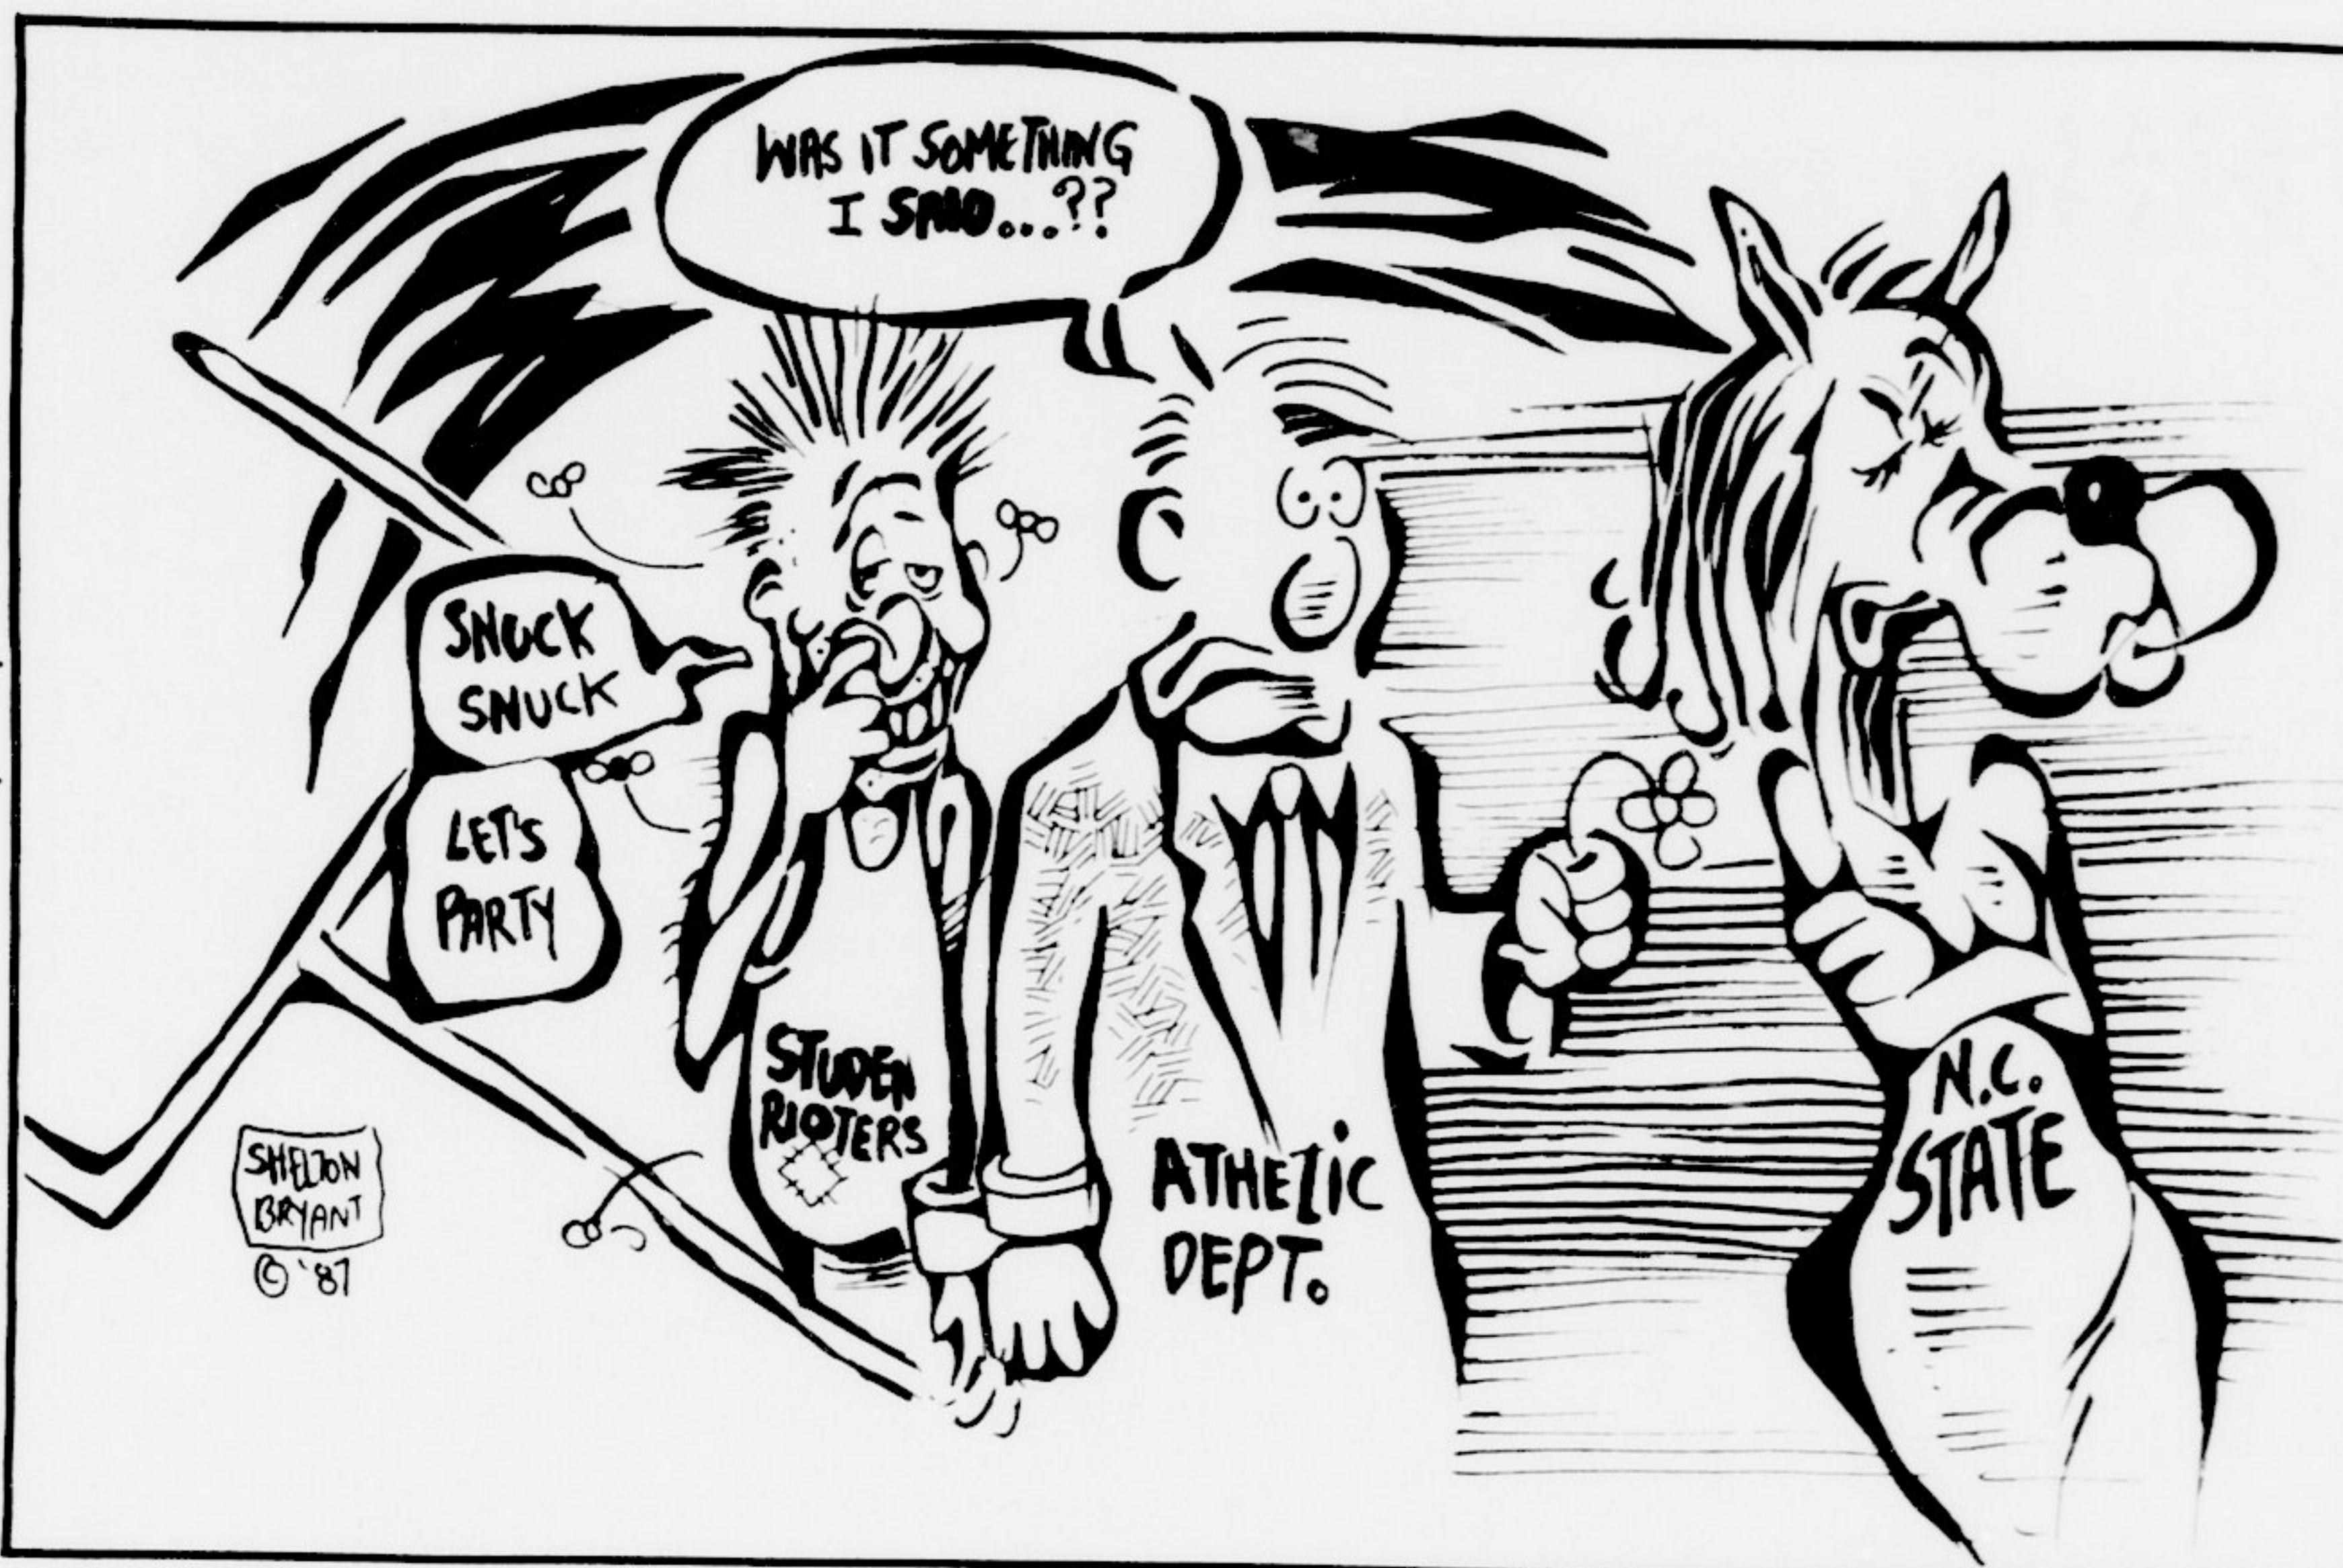

The first idea that comes to mind is to charge some of the ringleaders, the goalpost wreckers, from Saturday night. If we punish those that really caused the problem, maybe others in the future will realize they to could face stiff penalties for irrational action.

A second idea, which has been suggested before, is to move the game to the afternoon, increase security and quit selling tickets on the grassy hill. This seems a ridiculous solution simply because it should be unnecessary when dealing with grown college men and women. If those steps are needed to protect the integrity of the game and the entertainment of the average fan, though, then they should be taken.

The NCSU council acted hastily in making such strident recommendations so soon after the incident took place. It would have been wiser to wait for more rational heads, consultation with ECU officials and student leaders, and time for an in-depth study on the events leading to the riot. They cannot shoulder the blame for the decision, though, since we brought it upon ourselves.

The point is moot. The damage is done. To the students, fans and administration of NCSU all we can say is we are truly sorry that this happened. To the ECU football team we are also sorry that you must bear the brunt of the punishment which should be directed towards drunken fools. To the drunken fools, we hope you are satisfied with what you have wrought.

Was it really worth it?

Violent students spoiled victory

To the editor:

There is nothing more enjoyable than a good football game played with sportsmanship between two arch rival teams. A game such as this occurred between ECU and North Carolina State University until the last minutes of the game, and the result was catastrophic.

Never in my years at East Carolina have I ever been ashamed to wear our purple and gold until Saturday night when the game ended. The embarrassment that overwhelmed me made me wish that the "Rack the Pack" shirt I had worn so proudly throughout the game would simply disappear. I put on my raincoat and tried to exit the stadium as discreetly as possible. The ECU football team had just experienced a true victory but the fans had intervened and soured the taste of success.

As of today, the heated rivalry that draws one of the largest crowds of any in-state game may be nearing its extinction. It is a shame that the football rivalry has expanded to the fans at an intolerable level. A strong rivalry is only natural in collegiate football but the fans' reaction to the competition in this case was totally senseless.

I do not understand why security guards could not have done more to stop the riot before it began. The security guards who were posted at the bottom of the hill entered the field and stood in a group around the goal post. At the 1986 meeting of these two teams, I remember the police being more forceful and keeping the crowds under control.

As I stood helpless in the stands, I watched the fans completely demolish a field. Overtaken by anger, a State fan seated behind me reminded me that every school has a few "sunshine fans" such as these; the ones who cheer when the team wins but are the first to criticize and complain when the final score is not in ECU's favor.

I am truly sorry that the incident occurred and I hope that in the future, we at ECU can still have a "Beat State" party. A "Beat Georgia Southern" party just won't hold the same meaning. I surely hope that a few hundred students' actions will not ruin the fun of the competition for the remainder of the 56,800 people who attended the game.

I can't understand how any college student could act in such a childish manner. What makes a person want to destroy someone else's property especially without cause? It is one thing to rush onto the field after a victory to greet your players, but in this case, the players were not even glad to see them. They, too, seemed to be embarrassed by their fans.

Our purple and gold victory shone with pride until the crowds tarnished it. I dare say that the destruction of the field overpowers the Pirate victory in most minds, mine included.

To those of you who participated in this exhibition of ignorance, I say grow up, friend—don't let the administration solve your problem like your daddy did when you were 10-years-old. You are college students—act like it. I hope those who rushed onto the field have realized that the repercussions of their actions tremendously outweigh the fun they received from doing it.

It's obvious that those who seemingly cared so much about their school that they had to run onto the field to express it are the ones who don't care at all. They can't see past the present. ECU has long been considered a second-rate university, a title that does not reflect the university, but instead only a few hundred of its fans. The majority of us are proud of our university and feel it is very underrated.

An image is something difficult to create but easy to destroy. It is very disheartening to see a group of people damage something that it takes so long to rebuild. However, the damage has been done but I do appeal to everyone not to let this reflect on the university but only a few "second-rate" fans who didn't consider the damage that would be endowed upon the university.

Black eyes

To the Editor:

Fall semester has just begun and already the image of our university has received two black eyes. The first of these being the so-called "Biltmore Massacre." Unfortunately, there was not even time to recover from the Biltmore incident before another blow was struck at Carter-Finley Stadium. Sad to say, the entire student body suffers for the actions of a small minority of irresponsible students (and overzealous fans).

Concerning the Biltmore incident, there has been a great outrage over the fact that a student was injured by police officers. Yet, everyone seems to have forgotten that the authorities were there because laws were being violated. We emphasize that this is not an attempt to justify the use of violence by the police. But let's be fair and remember, the police were there because neighbors legitimately complained that they were unable to drive down their own street.

Let us also recognize the fact that a permit for this party was denied, yet the party was held anyway—an act of rather blatant defiance toward Greenville City statutes. Wouldn't you agree? And speaking of blatant defiance, throwing eggs is not the most diplomatic way to deal with the police.

On the heels of Biltmore came the unforgivable actions of some fans (mostly ECU students) following Saturday's game. Destruction of property, fighting with other fans, and assaulting campus police officers seems an odd way to celebrate. The foolish actions of these "fans" leaves a bitter aftertaste following the sweet savour of victory. Because of this fiasco, the ECU-State rivalry may be finished. Pirate and Wolfpack fans everywhere have these 2,000 morons to thank.

It is impossible to examine these two events without noticing the large role that alcohol has played. At both the Biltmore party and the State football game, alcohol was illegally consumed. At both events many students were highly intoxicated, and in each incident this state of drunkenness led to irresponsible behavior (such as throwing eggs and ploughing down goal posts). The solution does not lie in increasing security at athletic events. Nor does it lie in teaching police to better understand the needs of students as was suggested in last Thursday's Forum. Rather, the solution lies with students examining their own behavior, and taking responsibility for their actions.

If ECU students desire to be treated with respect, perhaps they might consider acting in a manner that deserves respect.

Cheerleaders

To the editor:

We, the cheerleaders, are trying to motivate you, the crowd, and get you more involved in the football games. Last Saturday night at Carter-Finley Stadium, the fans did a terrific job of cheering with us and that enthusiasm had a very positive influence on our team.

Throughout the first three quarters, the crowd was great. But as the clock ran down, that enthusiasm got out of hand. The unfortunate events that took place with approximately 10 seconds left in the game and thereafter have brought embarrassment and disgrace to this university.

We would like to continue to involve you in the games but we ask that you act in a manner that is appropriate. This Florida State game is one of the biggest in Ficklen Stadium history, and the team needs your positive support and enthusiasm "without incident." So, be there early for special crowd cheers in the stands before the game.

Both sides responsible

To the editor:

Having witnessed last year's loss to State but unable to attend this year's game, my husband and I listened excitedly to the radio Saturday night as our alma mater achieved such an overwhelming victory. On Sunday, however, our bubble was burst as State fans related the destruction of our students had caused yet again at Carter-Finley Stadium. We felt just awful. Then, on Monday, I spoke to a friend and fellow Pirate fan who did attend the game. He gave me a new perspective on the incident that I thought I ought to share with you.

First of all, at the end of the game, See OPINION, page 5

there were students on both sides of the field yelling "Tear it down! Tear it down!" While this fact does not excuse our students' destruction of the fence, it certainly hints that there might have been other parties involved—collaborators, if you will—the NC State students themselves.

Secondly, when I mentioned the extent of the damage—an alleged $7,000, my friend noted that he'd be happy to buy a new fence and two new goal posts, if State would only give him the tens of thousands of dollars they made on the hill that night. Again, that State's financial gains far exceed their losses does not excuse us.

But perhaps part of the blame should be dropped at State's administration's doorstep; perhaps tickets for seating on the grassy hill should never be sold in the first place. It is certainly obvious that the less restricted atmosphere of the hill, as opposed to the regular stadium seats, is more conducive to trouble.

Please don't see this letter as an attempt to condone the post-game incident at Carter-Finley. I am still embarrassed and resentful of the damage, both to the stadium and to the image of our victory. Yet there are two sides to every story, and I felt that sharing these matters with you might lessen the blow.

Let us all hope that the ECU-State football series can continue and that our students can learn restraint, maturity, and good sportsmanship. When they do, irresponsible actions on the part of either State's students or administration will have no effect on us.

New goal

To the editor:

As a fifth year senior and lifetime resident of Greenville, I would like to say that I am in no way proud of the behavior exhibited by my peers at the ECU vs. State game this past Saturday night. It seems that if a person is "mature enough" to go to college, then he is mature enough not to participate in that kind of behavior. These are the people that are possibly taking away opportunities for our football team.

Obviously, the Pirate football team worked hard to achieve a victory like the one we attained only to have the "loyal fans" label us as destructive and immature and not able to wear the mark of a superior school. We, the students, make this university what it is and we must strive to display the kind of training we receive not only from this university but from our parents. How can we justify exhibiting this kind of behavior?

May I suggest that we contend to take on a new attitude and not be so pompous that we forget to be considerate of our fellow school. As long as we continue to participate in these kinds of behaviors, we will have to bear the reputation that comes along with it. No doubt fans that share in these kinds of activities would be highly insulted if one of our rivals did this to us. I don't think this is the impression we want our future employers to have of East Carolina.

Let us challenge ourselves to a new goal. As well as being able to enjoy a victory over a great team like NC State, let us pride ourselves in having good upstanding behavior so that ECU will carry that reputation long after we are gone. Let others see the real spirit of ECU as it is an upright, respectable university that we are proud to attend and would be proud to have our children attend.

History repeats

To the editor:

Everyone who reads this letter knows full well that the actions of a few, throughout history, have oftentimes reflected on the masses as a whole.

In Raleigh, on the 5th of September, that very scenario presented itself again.

There is really no reason to chastise the students who were involved, because most of them will never admit to being a part of that ugly scene.

Having been at ECU from 1972-76, and having wrestled on four Southern Conference Championship teams, teams that also beat NCSU four times in that span, I can't say that the enthusiasm associated with winning against NCSU isn't hard to control. I doubt that I could have controlled my own as a student.

What everyone must realize is that beating NCSU in football isn't that large an accomplishment for ECU football. Our program is on a par with theirs, and we should expect to win against them as frequently as we lose.

To get involved with the activity that has occurred the previous two times that we have won in Raleigh, is to admit to NCSU that the game is bigger for ECU than it is for NCSU. The simple fact is, it's no bigger a game for ECU than for NCSU. Until the entire ECU family realizes this, this behavior has the potential to continue.

No one and everyone could be blamed for this occurrence, but that's nonsense because it would serve no purpose.

The graduates of ECU who choose to support ECU through the Pirates Club, crying ask that this be the last time that you allow the accomplishment of the team and coaching staff to be so blemished as to disallow them the due credit they deserve.

It's very apparent that Art Baker and his staff have East Carolina football heading the right direction. Not only winning-wise, but sportsmanlike-wise as well. What a well-behaved group of players performed for ECU Saturday night.

Let's get behind this team like never before and show them that ECU is a Division I-A school in every sense of the word.

CIA will go to colleges to recruit interns

(CPS) — Despite campus protests and budget cuts, the Central Intelligence Agency plans to accelerate its recruiting of college students, an agency spokeswoman said.

Plans for a new eight-week summer internship program — in which students must promise not to divulge what they're doing or how much money they're making — were revealed in a letter sent to campus career counselors.

In addition, the agency will recruit at 200 campuses this academic year to seek out "the best and the brightest students" interested in careers with the CIA, spokeswoman Sharon Foster said.

"If the agency needs employees with math backgrounds, for example, recruiters will visit schools with outstanding mathematics programs," Foster said.

Shouting opposition to U.S. policy in Central America, students at the universities of Colorado, Minnesota, Massachusetts and other schools protested the agency's recruiting on their campuses during the 1986-87 academic year. Demonstration, however, won't persuade the agency to stop recruiting at colleges, Foster said.

The CIA is invited by college officials to recruit at schools, Foster explained. "We're happy to go where we're invited. Even though there have been a lot of demonstrations at the University of Colorado, we'll still recruit there because the university invited us."

Education

GREENSBORO (AP) — In the 14 months before the 1988 presidential election, the American public can expect to hear a lot about education.

"I've not seen a survey in the last year that education was not the first or second (most important) issue," said William Friday, retired president of the University of North Carolina. "It rotates with the economy and defense."

While it is not unusual for governors and state legislators to campaign on education, presidential candidates have tended to focus on issues such as economy, defense and foreign affairs. But already in this young campaign, the presidential candidates are staking themselves out on the three Rs as never before, observers say.

And on Friday, nine of them — seven Democrats and two Republicans — will be at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill for a debate that will deal only with education.

Political analysts say there are several reasons for the increased attention paid to academic issues. Foremost, it's an issue close to America's heart.

And on Friday, nine of them — seven Democrats and two Republicans — will be at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill for a debate that will deal only with education.

Political analysts say there are several reasons for the increased attention paid to academic issues. Foremost, it's an issue close to America's heart.

"Public schools are arguably the No. 1 domestic concern of the American people," Education Secretary William J. Bennett said in a back-to-school address at the National Press Club in Washington Tuesday.

That concern has been raised by more than 100 national, regional and state reports on educational quality in the last seven years.

One of them — "A Nation At Risk" — called for sweeping educational reforms. As a result, several states, including North Carolina, have taken steps to overhaul their educational machinery.

Now, the same factors that have made education the No. 1 issue at the state level are coming into play nationally.

And in the process, presidential candidates have discovered that education is the only way to deal with one of the nation's chief problems — international competitiveness.

"The drive to be more competitive has just jelled in the last four or five years," said former Gov. Jim Hunt, who will quiz the Democratic candidates in Friday's debate.

"It all goes back to economics," Hunt said. "If we want to have good jobs that pay high salaries, we've got to learn to think for a living."

In addition, candidates have learned that education has a sash-over effect — it's at the core of some of the nation's other problems.

"Education has everything to do with the strength of defense, with the growth of the economy and with what we are doing to achieve peace," Friday said. "It's the engine that causes these things to happen."

Friday is heading a national commission that will issue a report next month calling for a renewed partnership among the state and federal governments, the corporate community and colleges and universities.

Many people charge that the federal government significantly reduced its role in the educational partnership during the Reagan administration.

"In the past eight years, there has been a pullback in federal involvement," said John Dornan, head of the Public School Forum in Raleigh, a group made up of business people, elected officials and school leaders that does research on programs in public primary and secondary schools.

"That's what makes this election really critical," Dornan said. "Will education continue to be a state and local problem, or will the federal government come back as a partner?"

In his speech, Bennett said presidential candidates should support holding teachers and principals accountable for student performance; giving parents their choice of schools; wider testing and comparison of states, districts and individual schools; and state takeovers of "bankrupt" school districts.

"We've got to have candidates who understand what we have to do to reform education in America and put that very near the top of their priority list," Hunt said. "Red lights ought to go off when candidates give us easy, simplistic answers."

Education to be debate focus

GREENSBORO (AP) — In the 14 months before the 1988 presidential election, the American public can expect to hear a lot about education.

"I've not seen a survey in the last year that education was not the first or second (most important) issue," said William Friday, retired president of the University of North Carolina. "It rotates with the economy and defense."

While it is not unusual for governors and state legislators to campaign on education, presidential candidates have tended to focus on issues such as economy, defense and foreign affairs. But already in this young campaign, the presidential candidates are staking themselves out on the three Rs as never before, observers say.

And on Friday, nine of them — seven Democrats and two Republicans — will be at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill for a debate that will deal only with education.

Activists claim ruling will boost animal rights efforts

PALO ALTO, Ca. (CPS) — The Santa Clara (Cal.) County Board of Supervisors ruled Aug. 25 Stanford University has to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement before it can build a new animal research lab.

The decision, Stanford officials say, effectively will stall building the lab at least until 1988.

The decision, rights activists say, will give them a new weapon — statements never have been needed before to build such facilities — in their effort to stop scientists nationwide from experimenting on animals.

The activists' efforts were centered in northern California in July and August, where various humane groups lobbied against building new facilities at Stanford, the University of California at San Francisco and Cal at Berkeley.

The conflict is representative of the growing national debate about animal research that swept through many campuses during the 1986-87 school year.

Demonstrators marched at UCLA and the universities of Minnesota, Utah and Arizona, among dozens of others, during the year.

At California-Davis, a group called the Animal Liberation Front freed turkey vultures from their lab cages and set fire to a veterinary laboratory to protest the school's use of animals in research.

The Stanford, Berkeley and Cal-San Francisco rallies suggest protests and civil disobedience will continue during the 1987-1988 academic year.

Stanford officials hope to build a $17 million facility to house 51,000 rodents used by campus researchers in scientific experiments. Cal officials want to build a $14.3 million facility to house rodents, cats and primates at the Berkeley facility.

At Berkeley, animals now are housed at 22 different sites around the campus, said Dr. Roy Hendrickson, the director of the university's animal office who is overseeing efforts to centralize its animal facilities.

Hendrickson says a new lab will improve the animals' lives.

Spurred by complaints from animal rights advocates, the U.S. Department of Agriculture last year fined Berkeley $12,000 for placing animals in overcrowded, unsanitary quarters. The USDA mandated that $10,000 of the fine should be used to improve animal facilities.

Berkeley officials responded by hiring Hendrickson to oversee the improvements.

Now Hendrickson wonders, "Why are they opposed to the building when they said the facilities are so terrible?"

It's because much campus animal research is "stupid and redundant," countered Dr. Elliot Katz of In Defense of Animals, which opposes the construction of the Berkeley facility and ultimately wants to stop campuses from experimenting on animals.

Ronnie Zanko of Minnesota's Animal Rights Coalition agreed, noting scientists use monkeys to study the effects of alcohol or cocaine addiction while "there are millions of humans addicted to cocaine and alcohol. Why do they need to use a monkey? For the sake of science? That's not okay with me."

"We find it inhumane that dogs live their entire lives with no sunlight, fresh air or exercise," added Lise Giraud, a Stanford employee who opposes the new animal facility. "It's not humane to keep long-lived animals in these cages all their lives."

"There is no reason for animal experimentation," said Susan Rich of the Washington D.C. based People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

Katz believes much of it is done to win grants rather than to study serious medical problems.

"Grants are issued based on the validity of a project," said Margo Tannebaum of California's Action for Animals. "There are many alternatives that are much less expensive than using animals, but that includes additional experimentation. Animal research is tried and true. If you do research a different way, you won't get the grant."

Other scientists remain unbowed. "Research without animals is idealistic but a bit naive," asserted Dr. Cynthia Gillett of the University of Minnesota.

Cal-Berkeley spokesman Wallace Ravven added, "University researchers are eager to find new, less complicated and less costly ways to do research."

"If there was convincing evidence that other research areas were cheaper, they would be grabbed up."

Jackson to be candidate

RALEIGH (AP) — After originally planning to announce his presidential candidacy on Labor Day, the Rev. Jesse Jackson has decided to wait until the national convention of the Rainbow Coalition, which will convene next month in Raleigh.

"I suspect he and his national staff chose Raleigh because it is in the South, and it is a pivotal political state," said Bruce E. Lightner, the convention's local coordinator. "Raleigh in particular has the physical facilities necessary to host a major convention."

The convention will give Jackson an audience of his key supporters from around the nation, Lightner said.

"I think the consideration was that No. 1, here in Raleigh during the convention he will have most of his national supporters, meaning key people from virtually every state in the country," Lightner said.

"Also, there will be a much larger forum in terms of media exposure, and he wanted to do it in the South, I think," Lightner said.

Jackson, 45, said on Labor Day he would formally announce his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination on Oct. 10, the second day of the Rainbow Coalition's three-day convention.

Jackson, a South Carolina native and a graduate of N.C. A&T State University in Greensboro, has strong support in North Carolina, Lightner said.

"You have to bring into consideration that Reverend Jackson is a guest in the state frequently, he has a lot of friends here — he has strong roots in North Carolina," Lightner said.

The expected announcement will boost interest in the convention, organizers said. Convention planners had expected about 1,200 for the convention before Jackson's announcement.

"It's a safe bet" that 2,600 to 3,000 people could attend the gathering, Lightner said.

"We anticipate that because of the energy and excitement that traditionally surrounds Reverend Jackson that the attendance will be dramatically higher," Lightner said.

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal judge today struck down Georgia's new law requiring minors to notify their parents before having an abortion, ruling that two provisions of the law are unconstitutional. U.S. District Judge Robert Hall left the door open for state officials to amend

The judge said either side may appeal his ruling to the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. However, he noted that the U.S. Supreme Court is to consider a similar case from Illinois within the next year and that the decision in that case will be binding on the Georgia case.

He said the Georgia General Assembly can solve that problem by amending the law to allow

He also found an unconstitutional violation of a juvenile's right to anonymity. The law allows a judge to approve a minor's abortion if parental notification is not feasible in some cases, but Hall noted that Georgia Supreme Court rules do not provide for the sealing of juvenile court documents.

Colleges in U.S. prepare for papal visit

(CPS) — Amid fears of campus gridlock, worries about how to get football sod to recover quickly and lingering questions about what to do with a $500,000 altar, four colleges are getting ready to host John Paul II during the Pope's September 10-19 visit to the United States.

On his multi-city tour, the Catholic leader will drop by the University of South Carolina at Columbia, the University of New Orleans, Xavier University and Arizona State University, in some cases for only a few hours.

To students at the four campuses, the papal visit will mean canceled classes, changes in parking arrangements, new construction and, in one instance, eviction from their dorm rooms.

To administrators, the visit means a lot of meetings and extra expenses.

The University of New Orleans, for one, has spent "about $100,000" on landscaping, estimated UNO's Bill Racek; meanwhile Xavier, also in New Orleans, has been "cleaning up the place, sandblasting buildings and doing some landscaping," said spokesman Richard Tucker.

John Paul II will be at South Carolina for only about five hours, where he'll make two addresses and meet privately with non-Catholic religious leaders.

USC, city, state and archdiocesan officials started planning for the five-hour visit six months ago.

The objective, said Ann Hill, a USC news writer, was "to let the largest possible number of people see the Pope without causing major gridlock in all of South Carolina."

On Sept. 10, the day before the visit, students who live in dorms near the site of John Paul II's first campus speech will have to leave their rooms for two days. On the morning of the visit, the Secret Service will "sweep" nearby buildings, and seal them until he leaves.

Nevertheless, "the students and everyone on campus are excited and looking forward to the visit," Hill maintained.

Similarly, the University of New Orleans — where John Paul II will visit Sept. 12 — will cancel classes and close its offices and library in anticipation of an influx of some 30,000 visitors, Racek explained.

After the Pope and the visitors leave, however, UNO will still have a $500,000 altar the archdiocese is building for the occasion.

"The university will have to decide what to do with it," Racek said of the structure, which encloses showers and parking for the "Popemobile," the pontiff's special limousine.

Racek said it's possible the altar may become a dressing area for athletic events.

It will take about a week to restore the grounds, Racek said.

Xavier's Tucker said it's all worth it. "This visit has been a great opportunity for exposure, for getting some things done that needed to be done."

A few students will be among the 4,500 people who hear John Paul II speak at Xavier, but most of the audience will consist of members of the National Catholic Education Association and the Association of Catholic Colleges and Universities.

Both groups have criticized the Vatican in recent years for its proposals to bring Catholic campus courses under church control, a move many American officials say would undermine the value of degrees granted by U.S. Catholic colleges.

"Our only regret," Tucker said, "is that so few Xavier people will be able to attend, but we are not in control of the invitations. Xavier is only serving as host. If more tickets become available, more Xavier people will be able to be there."

The Pope's last campus appearance will be at Arizona State, where he will celebrate Mass — oddly enough — in Sun Devil Stadium on Monday, Sept. 14.

ASU will cancel classes on the 14th, but has not declared a campus holiday. Classes will be rescheduled for a "reading day" later in the semester, said ASU spokesman George Cathcart.

ASU will encourage students, staff and administrators to take the day off or leave campus as early as possible on the 14th.

The Secret Service also had asked the school to close some parking areas near the stadium. ASU is getting less sprucing than the other campuses the Pope will visit, though Cathcart reported the diocese is installing a 65-ft. copper cross in the stadium.

University officials okayed the cross after church leaders agreed to take "great care" to prevent damage to the football field.

More cash is spent on school

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS) — Students, parents, state legislatures and the federal government will spend $124 billion on higher education this year, or $14,294 for each full-time student, the U.S. Department of Education calculates.

In its annual back-to-school forecast, the department — in recent years a severe critic of college spending — also noted this year's higher education costs represent a 7 percent jump since 1986-87.

Announcing the forecast last week, Secretary of Education William Bennett argued the expense of higher education does not justify the return.

"The American people have made a tremendous financial commitment to education," Bennett said of the record $308 billion the nation will spend on all levels of education this year. "We know what makes for a good education. The generous investment is there. It's time we started getting a much better return on that investment."

Bennett's numbers, however, contradict another report released last week by Research Associates of Washington, a private research group that studies higher education.

According to Research Associates head Kent Halstead, it costs public colleges and universities only 4 percent more than last year to educate its students, an increase "similar to that of many industries."

Halstead concluded public campuses "remain as productive as other sectors" of the economy. He compliments campus officials for keeping costs down even while state and local governments allocated "a seriously declining share of their tax revenue budgets to public higher education — 8.1 percent in 1986-1987 compared to the recent peak of 9.2 percent in 1980-1981."

Education costs per student doubled in the last nine years, from $2,554 in 1977-1978 to $5,035 in 1986-1987, while tuition during the 1986-1987 school year rose just 4.4 percent, the lowest increase in tuition revenues in a decade, Halstead reported.

Both the Education Dept. report and the Research Associates study state that college enrollees, despite a shrinking pool of 18-to-24-year-olds, have remained steady.

Anti-drug ads aimed at school

WASHINGTON (AP) — An association of state boards of education is complaining that a new federal anti-drug advertising campaign mistakenly suggests that schools are where most teenage drug trafficking and abuse occurs.

The ads urges students to "slam the door on drugs in our schools."

"The cynical message behind this campaign would have us believe, comfortably and erroneously, that schools are at the center of this nation's drug problem," said Phyllis Blaustein, executive director of the National Association of State Board of Education.

The association was among 14 national education groups that signed on as co-sponsors of Education Secretary William J. Bennett's anti-drug drive, called "Schools Without Drugs: The Challenge." The association, based in Alexandria, Va., said it would remain a co-sponsor of the campaign, despite its misgivings.

"I must tell NASBE that drugs are a problem in our schools. There is no doubt about that," Bennett responded in statement Monday. "NASBE's unwillingness to accept this reality is the kind of denial that has hurt our ability to deal effectively with this problem. Shame on them!"

China suffers quake problem

BEIJING (AP) — A series of earthquakes has destroyed more than 1,400 houses and injured 87 people in the past month in east China's Jianxi province, a newspaper reported today.

A quake measuring 5.5 on the Richter scale — signifying a temblor capable of causing considerable damage — struck the province's Xunwu county on Aug. 2. Since then, nearly 400 quakes of varying intensity have hit the county of 230,000 people, said the official English-language China Daily.

The newspaper said 560 houses were demolished in the original earthquake, and about 840 were destroyed by later temblors.

Fraternity Life . . .

To be in a fraternity is not merely to be in a social club. Fraternities are a way of life. We share expenses as well as experiences, and we are responsible to each other for our own actions. We live off campus, for the most part, yet we are very active on campus. We enjoy a good relationship with our university's administration and, in the past few decades, have become a major part of the university's student life.

Athletics . . .

Fraternity men enjoy an active athletic existence. Whether it be track meets, field events or intramurals, we enjoy competing against one another in one sport or another.

Social Life . . .

It never can be said that fraternity people don't enjoy a good social life. Getting to know many different people is only natural among such a close-knit group. One seems to fall into a wealth of opportunities for things to do with his spare time. Events such as Greek Week is just an example of some of the activities that fraternities plan during the year.

Will fraternities hurt my grades?

- No, there's every evidence that joining a fraternity improves your chances of graduating.
- 33% of men on campus without fraternities will graduate, and
- 47% of non-members on campuses with fraternities graduate, but
- 65% of all fraternity members graduate.
- Scholarship programs of fraternities produce greater academic success, and better achievement for you.

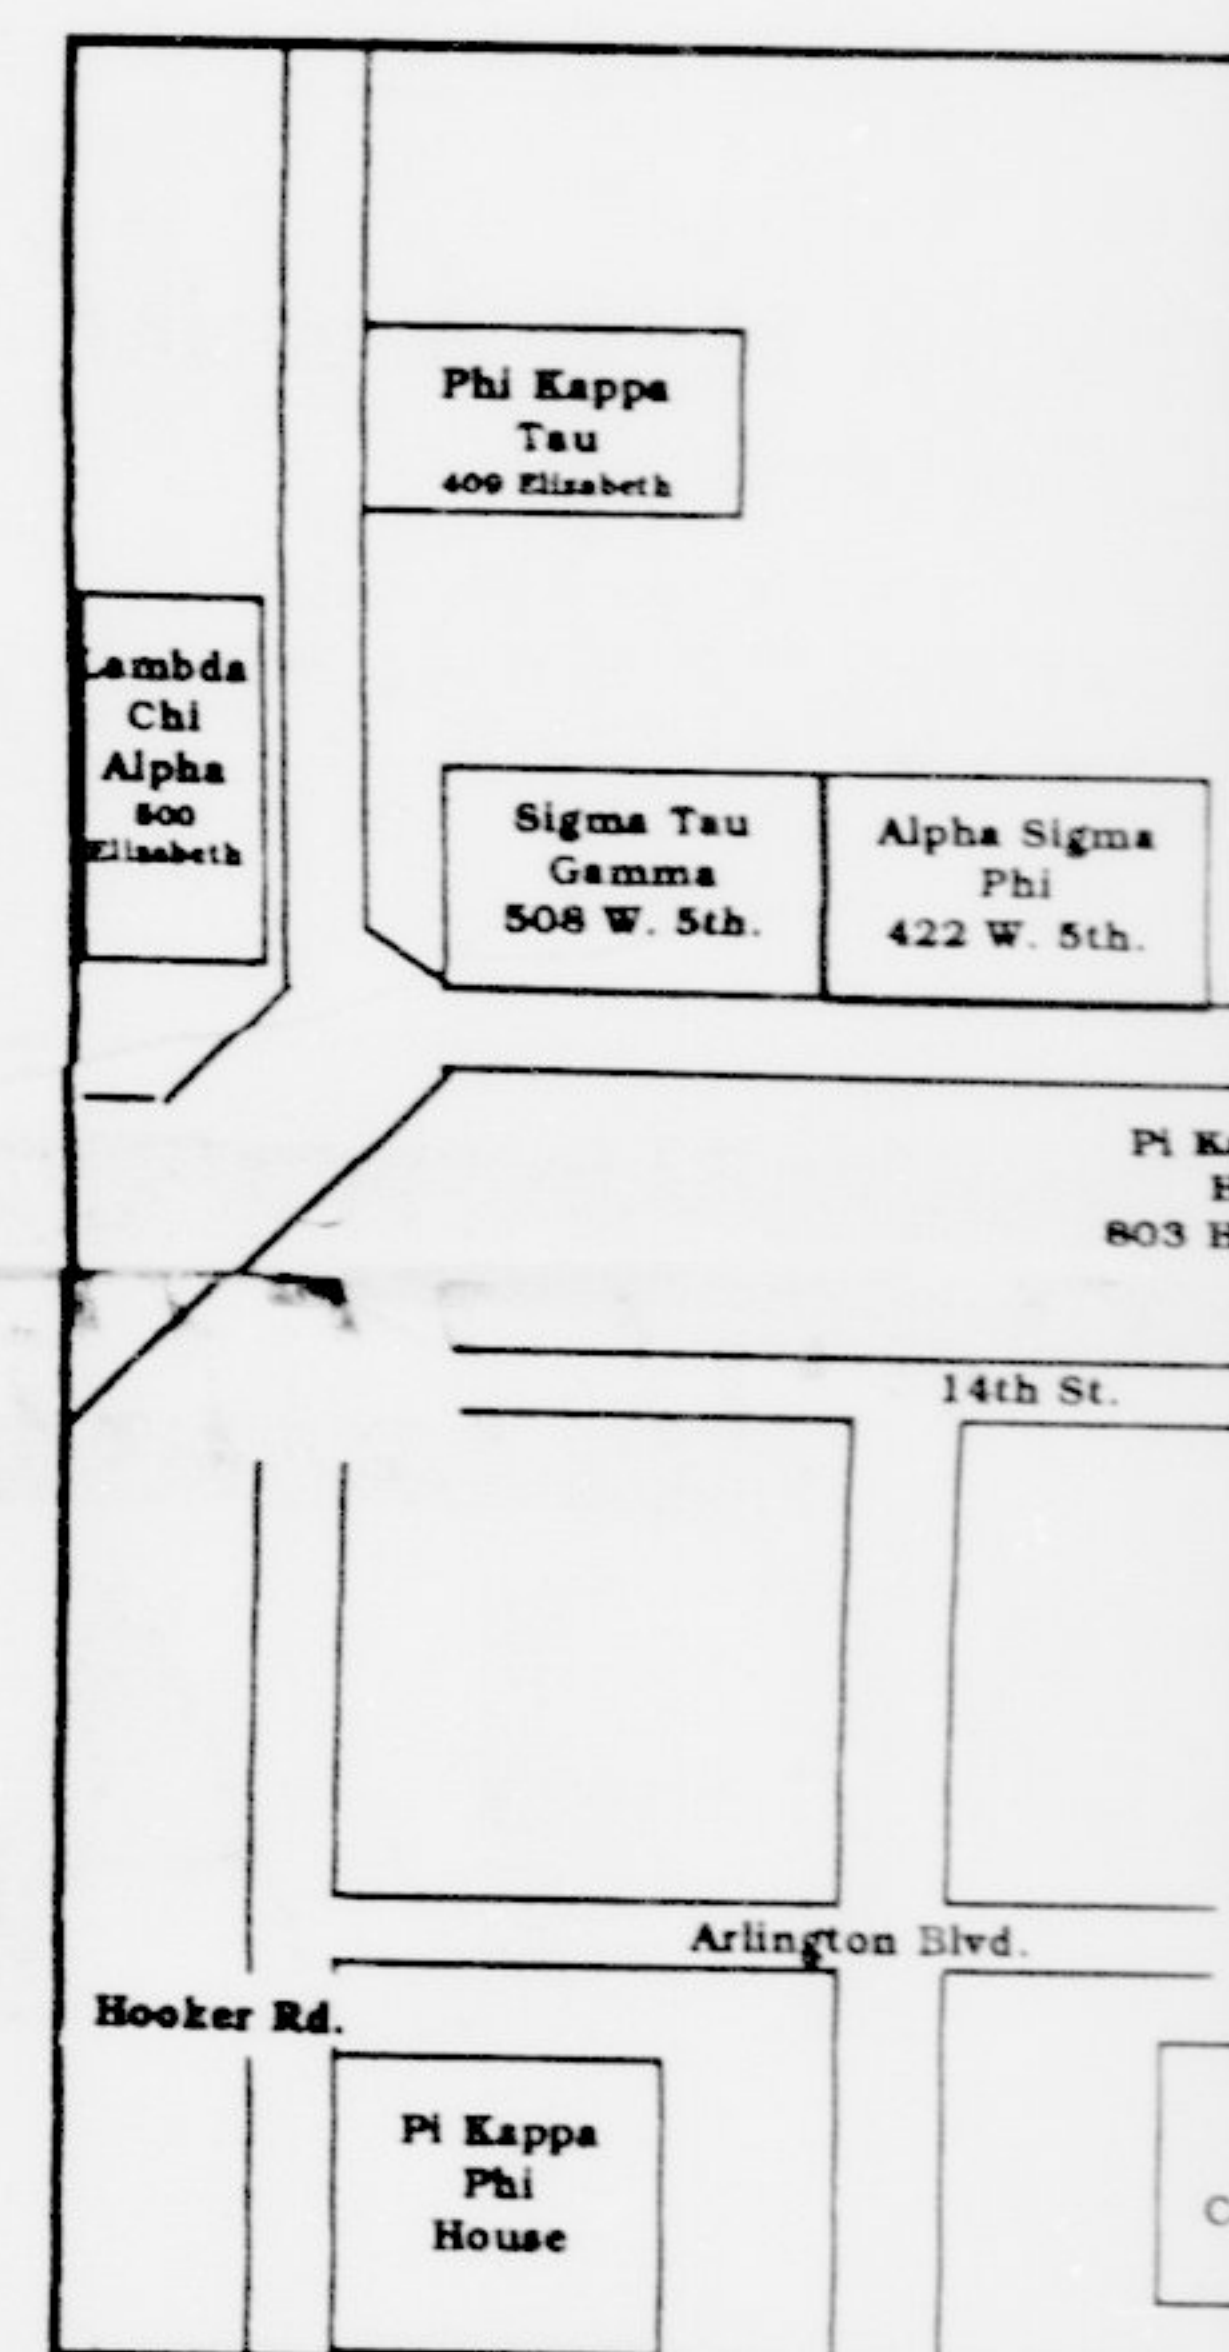

General Fraternity Facts

- All but two U.S. Presidents since 1825 have been fraternity men. Sixteen Vice-Presidents have been fraternity men.
- 63% of the U.S. President's Cabinet members since 1900 have been fraternity men.
- 71% of the Who's Who in America listees are fraternity members.
- 76% of the U.S. Senators & Representatives are fraternity members.
- 85% (40 of 47) of the U.S. Supreme Court Justices since 1910 have been fraternity men.
- 85% of the Fortune 500 executives are fraternity members.
- Of the nation's 50 largest corporations, 43 are headed by fraternity members.

Judge says Bork tried to shift decision in ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — A retired federal judge says Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork once tried to shift the decision of a judicial panel that both men served on to reflect Bork's own, differing viewpoint, according to a published report today.

The Washington Post said the criticism of Bork's "basic honesty" came in a letter to the Senate Judiciary Committee from retired U.S. District Judge James F. Gordon about a 1983 case.

Bork served with Gordon and the late Judge Roger Robb on a three-judge federal appeals court panel that heard a lawsuit by Republicans challenging their committee assignments in the Democratic-controlled House.

In writing the panel's decision,

Bork tried to sidestep an agreement among the three judges and replace the majority view with his own opinions, wrote Gordon.

Gordon said he was "shocked to say the least" when he discovered that Bork was trying to shift the decision to reflect his own views. Gordon said he objected and eventually ended up writing the majority decision, with Bork filing a concurring opinion.

Bork declined to comment directly on Gordon's assertion, but his office released a letter which it said he sent to Gordon at the time, saying "it occurs to me too late that I should have notified you in advance that I was changing the rationale."

Gordon, however, said he never received the letter.

Assault charge

N.C. Reverend arrested

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Rev. James Council Stirewalt has been fined $25 after pleading guilty to simple assault in touching an undercover vice officer's genitals in a Charlotte adult bookstore last month.

Prosecutors said Stirewalt, minister of Trinity Lutheran Church in Landis for 13 years, improperly touched the officer as an X-rated movie played in a private booth.

Stirewalt, a minister since 1956, had said he visited the Joy Adult Bookstore to observe what went on at such businesses.

Stirewalt said his hand may have brushed against the officer as the minister was leaving a booth where X-rated movies were viewed in privacy.

But Officer Chris Couch testified Tuesday that Stirewalt had tried to unbutton the officer's shirt and had placed his hand on Couch's genitals. Couch said Stirewalt was masturbating.

District Court Judge Leonard VanNoppen fined Stirewalt $25 and ordered him to pay court costs. VanNoppen suggested that Stirewalt consider another line of work and counseling.

Stirewalt refused to comment when asked if he would resign his church post.

"Rev. Stirewalt acknowledges he made a terrible mistake," defense attorney Harry Faggart said. "He apparently got carried away with what he saw there. ... He got carried away by things he does not yet understand."

"He now faces ruin and disgrace as a result of this unfortunate event," Faggart said. "A good man has made a mistake. ... This is not a time to gloat that a man has fallen. It is a time for sympathy."

Hart apologizes on TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Democratic presidential front-runner Gary Hart, grappling with the issue that drove him from the 1988 campaign, admits he has committed adultery and says he doesn't plan to re-enter the race even though he still wants to be "part of this debate" over the country's future.

"I'm not running for president," Hart said in a 60-minute appearance on ABC-TV's "Nightline" program Tuesday night. "I have no plans to run for president."

The former Colorado senator was contrite and defiant by turns during the question and answer session, which he concluded with an emotional apology to his children, Andrea and John.

"I just want to say to one very special young woman and young man how sorry I am for letting them down for many others like them. Have courage, we are not defeated and we will not be. I will find some way, I promise you, to continue on," he said.

Thus ended an extraordinary late-night television session in which Hart took full responsibility for the "serious mistake" of keeping company with Miami model Donna Rice. Questions about his relationship with Rice led to Hart's withdrawal last May 8, at a time when he was the prohibitive front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I made a serious mistake. I should not have been in the company of any woman who was not a friend of mine or my wife," Hart said. "I should not have been with Miss Rice."

"I am totally and fully responsible for my own actions and I want to say to everyone how sorry I am. I want to apologize to you for those actions," Hart said.

Hart has stayed out of the public spotlight since his withdrawal from the race, and his appearance on the television program marked the beginning of his re-emergence as a public figure. He said he plans to meet later today with New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, and has scheduled a speech in Philadelphia on Thursday that marks the start of a series of such addresses.

Asked by interviewer Ted Koppel whether he had an affair with Rice, Hart refused to answer directly.

"If the question is in the 29 years of my marriage, including two public separations, have I been absolutely and totally faithful to my wife, I regret to say the answer is no."

"But I also am never going to answer any specific questions about any individuals," he said.

Hart also said the question was improper and should not be put to another candidate.

As for his political future, Hart said that while he has no plans to run for president, "I want to be part of this debate."

He also offered an explanation for a widely circulated photograph showing Rice on his lap. He said he had been posing for pictures with several people who recognized him at a boat dock, and she sat down on his lap unexpectedly. "I was embarrassed. I chose not to drop her off," he said.

Even as he apologized, Hart sought to score political points against President Reagan.

Hart admitted he made mistakes, but added that, "No troops were sent into combat to die unnecessarily. No laws were broken. No papers were shredded. No money changed hands. No one lied to Congress."

"And every one of those things happened under this (the Reagan) administration."

Noura's Kitchen breaks burger habit

By GRETCHEN JOURNIGAN
Staff Writer

Eating well balanced meals and avoiding the boredom of fast food restaurants is often a common dilemma for the average college student trying to manage a budget.

Break away from the ordinary and try Noura's Kitchen, at 405 S. Evans, a new Lebanese restaurant serving lunch on weekdays from 11:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. The food is creative, different and most of all affordable. Prices of main courses served with an appetizer and salad range from $2 - $3.75.

The daily special "from the broiler" (Shish Taouk) for $3.50 is an excellent diversion of taste from the plain "chicken fillets." Shish Taouk is chunks of marinated chicken, grilled and served with rice.

They also serve side orders of Spinach fatayer-tangy spinach in Filo dough, Arayess-arabic bread spread with spicy meat, yogurt, and Hommos-pureed chickpeas with lemon, garlic and tahini.

The Hommos is similar to a vegetable dip but is served with bread-Arabic bread.

If your taste buds are hesitant towards tasting new foods, two spicy tasting sandwiches are offered — Kofta and Shish sandwiches.

For desert, the Baklava — made of walnuts wrapped in flakey pastry with a touch of honey syrup, is only 95 cents.

Other deserts include cake, bran muffins and scones.

Noura's beverages are basically the same as the American beverage - fresh juices, tea, coffee and milk. The only unusual, but refreshing, beverage is the mint tea.

The distinct taste in the foreign food is a combination of spices such as the cardamon, saffron, nutmeg and the Jamaica spices-which comes from a Jamaican tree.

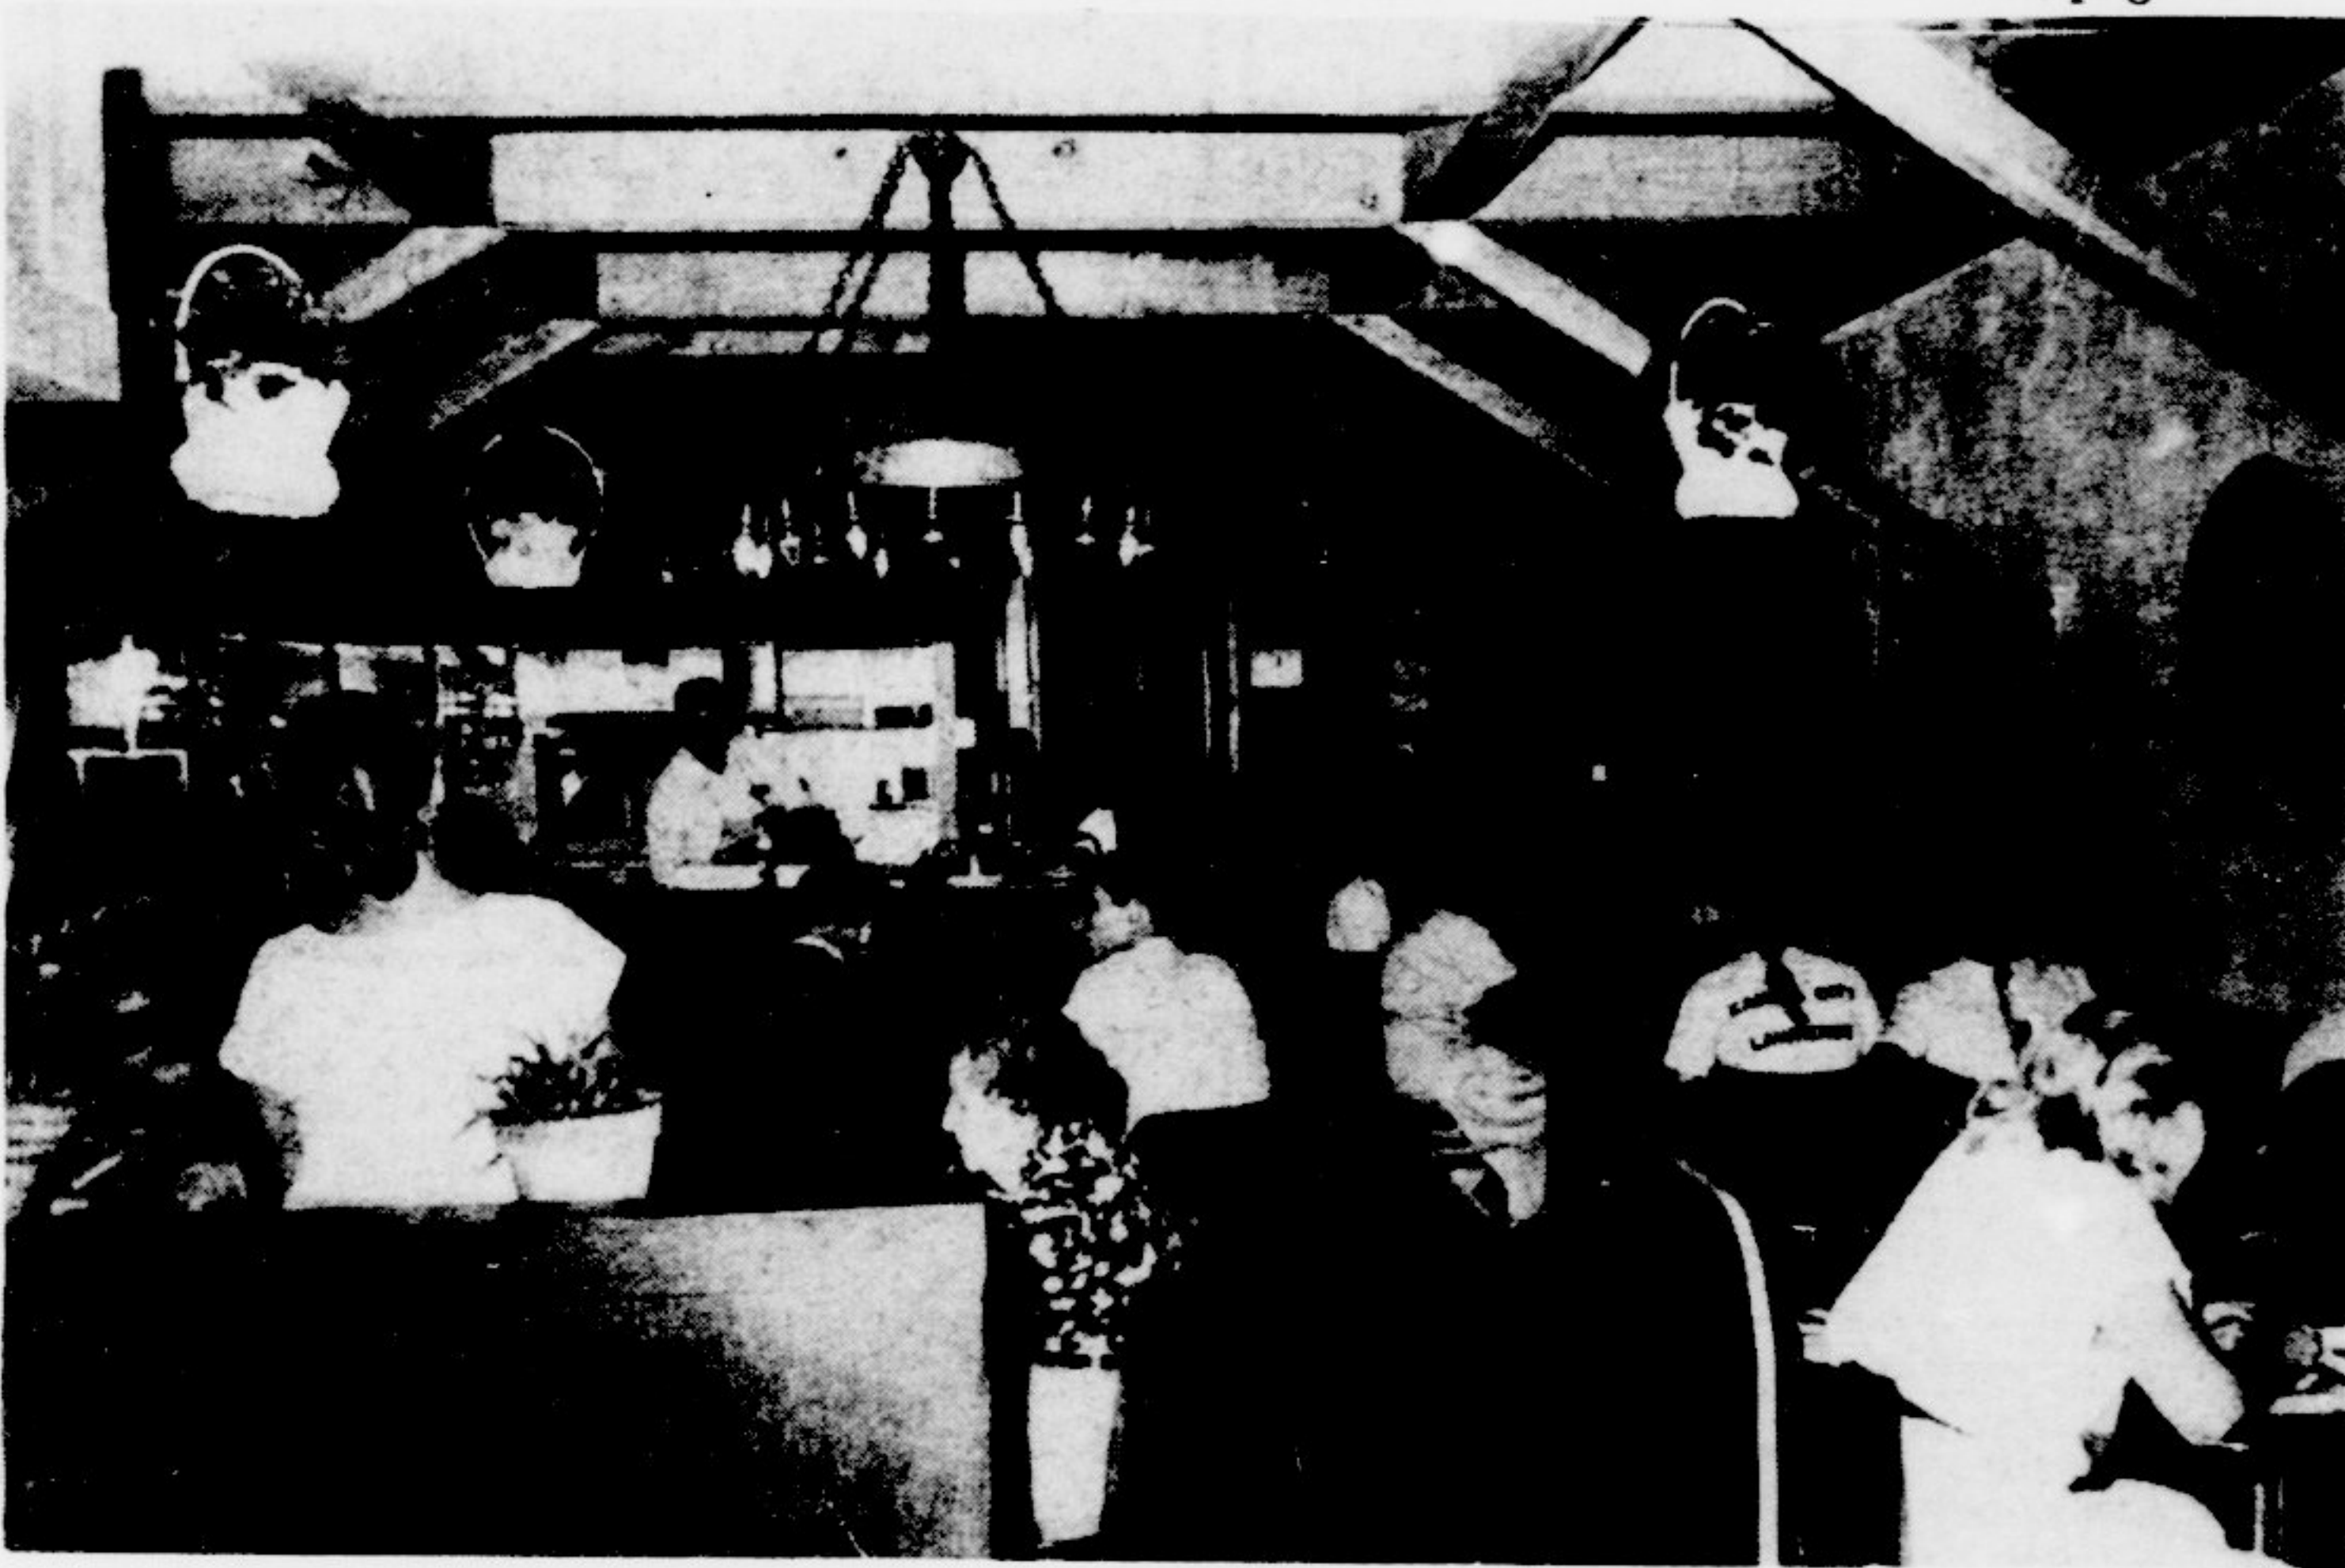

Issami Hamze, owner of restaurant, says that the establishment is doing very well for the area.

He said the restaurant, which now serves only lunch, will expand its menu to include dinner items next month.

Noura's is small, but Hamze says it seems to be the proper size for business.

He has no future plans of expanding the business regardless of its popularity. The size allows Hamze to be active in all areas of the restaurant-serving, cooking and planning meals.

Noura's seems to be somewhat crowded as some people partake of the lunch-only menu.

It's not easy being 'Big Easy'

By CHRIS MITCHELL
Staff Writer

When Jim McBride took on the job of finding a working title for his new film, he found one to reflect the convergence of Dennis Quaid and Ellen Barkin poured upon the seediest parts of New Orleans: "The Big Easy."

McBride's title comes from what New Orleans is all about. Time and again characters remind us New Orleans is the Big Easy, that you eventually fall into its rhythm, ways of thinking, ways of life. The Big Easy also refers to Dennis Quaid's being a slightly crooked cop on a very crooked police force. And, of course, the Big Easy for most will mean how Ellen Barkin eventually submits to both Quaid and her own lust in a predictably steamy sex sex sex scene.

Quaid's character hails from a family of Cajun cops. As Cajun is a rage these days, the producers make sure we get the idea New Orleans is nothing but Cajun. Lots of real Cajun music, real Cajun cooking, and a very surreal Cajun accent stumbling out of Quaid. So where dat Bojangle?

Being only a slightly crooked cop, Quaid is bad only in a "traditional" sense. Since he began on the force, the lieutenant has participated in protection for local businesses. His share of the extortion profits is his share of the "Widows and Orphans Fund". That's the way of the Big Easy, and Quaid has accepted it and profited by it. After all, it's long hours, short pay, and the crooks out there never go away.

But someone is killing "Wise Guys" (lingo for the Mafia). Quaid and his band of wise-cracking, hip-Southern clowns feel certain the Wise Guys have begun a drug war with each other. But witnesses insist the murderers are plainclothes cops. Police corruption? Call in the D.A.!

Ellen Barkin: uptight, not indigenous to the Big Easy, lawyerish, uptight, professional, uptight, uptight. The D.A. associate must work with the lieutenant to sort out any police corruption, especially if connected to the Wise Guy murders. Quaid and Barkin share a mutual attraction, she loosens up, they go to bed, they solve the Wise Guy murders. Big deal, you know who heads the corruption before the exposition concludes.

Flaws run much of the film. Quaid smiles his unbearable smile too much, much more irritating than his ludicrous accent. His brother in the film must have been raised by the gators, 'cause he don't get de accent. Barkin, the ever-professional lawyer, resorts to Laverne and Shirley schtick to "lighten up" those tense moments when her life is in danger. Ned Beatty, as the head of the homicide department, relies too much on his character from "Deliverance." The mystery plot is no mystery — you take no time to figure the really bad guys. Suspense in "The Big Easy" does keep you on the edge of your seat — are they ever going to bed again?

Though McBride dresses a fifteen-minute soft-core flick as a two-hour romance/suspense/action/adventure romp, style does come out strong. The Cajun music flavor doesn't step into the light much; its quality remains a backdrop with the mood swings of the streets and sultry interiors.

When the romance dominates everything looks inviting, subtle. The same alleys and bars convey danger and intrigue in the chase scenes; McBride accomplishes this through a slight shift in the music, camera angles and editing.

McBride retains control whether we find Quaid and Barkin bantering in bed or engaging in legal intercourse in the courtroom.

"The Big Easy" never absolutely bores and shouldn't offend. Its draw is Quaid's grin and conquest of Ellen Barkin. Its quality of film-making shows through in director Jim McBride's style. Not much on plot, but the producers felt sure you wouldn't care anyway.

Movie review:

New Bond celebrates 25th year

By MICAH HARRIS
Staff Writer

This year marks the 25th anniversary of the world's most successful movie series and arguably cinema's most successful character. Hint: he's not Luke Skywalker, Indiana Jones, Rambo or any '80s pop culture hero. He debuted in 1962 in a film which was titled, not after him, but the villain. The villain's name was Dr. No. The hero's?

Bond James Bond. That's how Sean Connery introduced himself to movie goers in 1962, and 25 years later Bond fans wait with delightful anticipation the utterance of this verbal calling card in each subsequent adventure.

Sean Connery, who has created the somewhat impossible standard against which all new Bonds are measured, was ironically not the producers' first choice. That was Roger Moore who had to pass because of other obligations.

You wonder if Moore's good-hearted, cultured playboy interpretation would have taken off in the early '60s. Connery, whose tongue-in-cheek wit was a thin venture over a saurian-type killing instinct, scintillated like a Roman Candle. By "Goldfinger" in 1964, Bond was riding the crest of a wave of spy-mania.

James Bond influenced pop culture in the '60s in a way similar to "Star Wars" in the late '70s.

Mattel released a line of Bond toys: radios and cameras that folded out into guns (and who ever got mine at a yard sale — I want 'em back!).

There were beacoups of movie imitators, most notably the "Matt Helm" and "Flint" series. The comics had Marvel's "Nick Fury" and Tower's "T.H.U.N.D.E.R. Agents." TV was crowded with spies: "The Man From U.N.C.L.E.," "I Spy," "Mission Impossible," "Wild, Wild West" and even today, soap opera spies Robert Scorpio and Shane Donovan are video descendents of Bond.

Connery left after five movies, perhaps feeling his character was becoming restricted by elaborate gadgetry. The producers attempted to get Moore again, but had to settle for George Lazenby for "on her Majesty's Secret Service." Lazenby's glib characterization just didn't cut it. Co-star, Diana Rigg (judo-mistress Emma Peel from "The Avengers") would have made a far more interesting Bond than Lazenby.

Despite his claims to the contrary, Connery returned for 1971's "Diamonds Are Forever" and for one more performance (hence the title of his 1983 Bond film, "Never Say Never Again"). Finally, Moore stepped into the role and brought 007 through his '70s and early '80s adventures.

Moore's interpretation of the character remains a subject of debate among Bond fans. Many want to believe the series officially ended with Connery. Others preferred Moore's suave demeanor. The facts remain that during his tenure, the series began to become almost keystone cop style slapstick. There were attempts to reverse the trend, but Moore's tongue-in-cheek approach was already too much of a trademark to invite much corrective surgery. A transplant was needed.

It came when Roger Moore finally kept his promise to quit and 40 year old Timothy Dalton took part. Here, at last, was a return of the '60's Bond from "Dr. No", yet tempered for the '80s with a human warmth. Dalton's first adventure was toned down from the epic scale of "Moonraker" or "The Spy Who Loved Me"; the new Bond is more apt to rely on his wits and prowess than gadgetry, and the delightful result is a suspension of disbelief not felt since the early Connery films that the spy's adventures could really happen.

Additionally, the youthful Bond is joined by a new, young Miss Moneybags and C.I.A. agent Felix Lighter which adds a fresh touch, allowing an appropriate rejuvenation to the stories at its 25th year.

Company brings Shakespeare to East Carolina on Wed.

Mendenhall Press Release

The North Carolina Shakespeare Festival will present "A Midsummer Night's Dream," a romantic comedy about love's foibles and follies, in Wright Auditorium Wednesday. The play is the opening event of the 1987-1988 Department of University Unions' Theater Arts Series.

The North Carolina Shakespeare Festival was organized in 1977 in the hopes of providing students and citizens of North Carolina and the Southeast with a consistent program of classical theatre productions, particularly those of Shakespeare's plays.

Since its inaugural season, the NCSF has grown substantially. The company's annual program has grown from a three-play season lasting four weeks to a four-play season lasting 13 weeks.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" is Shakespeare's fairy-tale literature. One could hardly imagine a more unlikely combination of comic plot materials than that of classical Greek mythology, English fairy-tale lore, Italianate love intrigue, and Elizabethan amateur theatricals. Yet, these are the elements that Shakespeare combines in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." It is a tale of marriage and the competing claims of love and friendship.

The success of this production lies in the blending of Shakespeare's disparate plot and fairy-tale elements with the expertise of the NCSF into a unified whole. Join the NCSF as they weave the threads of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" into a tapestry of magical enchantments and courtly festivities that everyone will enjoy.

This production is funded in part by a grant from the North Carolina Arts Council and The National Endowment for the Arts, Washington, D.C., a federal agency.

Tickets for this enticing performance can be purchased at the Central Ticket Office located in Mendenhall Student Center, Monday-Friday 11 a.m.-6 p.m. Ticket prices are $10 for general admission, $8 for ECU faculty/staff, and $5 for all ECU students and youth high school and under. Wright Auditorium provides free, convenient parking and easy access to the building for handicapped patrons.

For tickets and more information call 757-6611, ext. 266, during the above hours. There will be a fifty cent handling fee for all Mastercard/Visa telephone orders and on all mail orders.

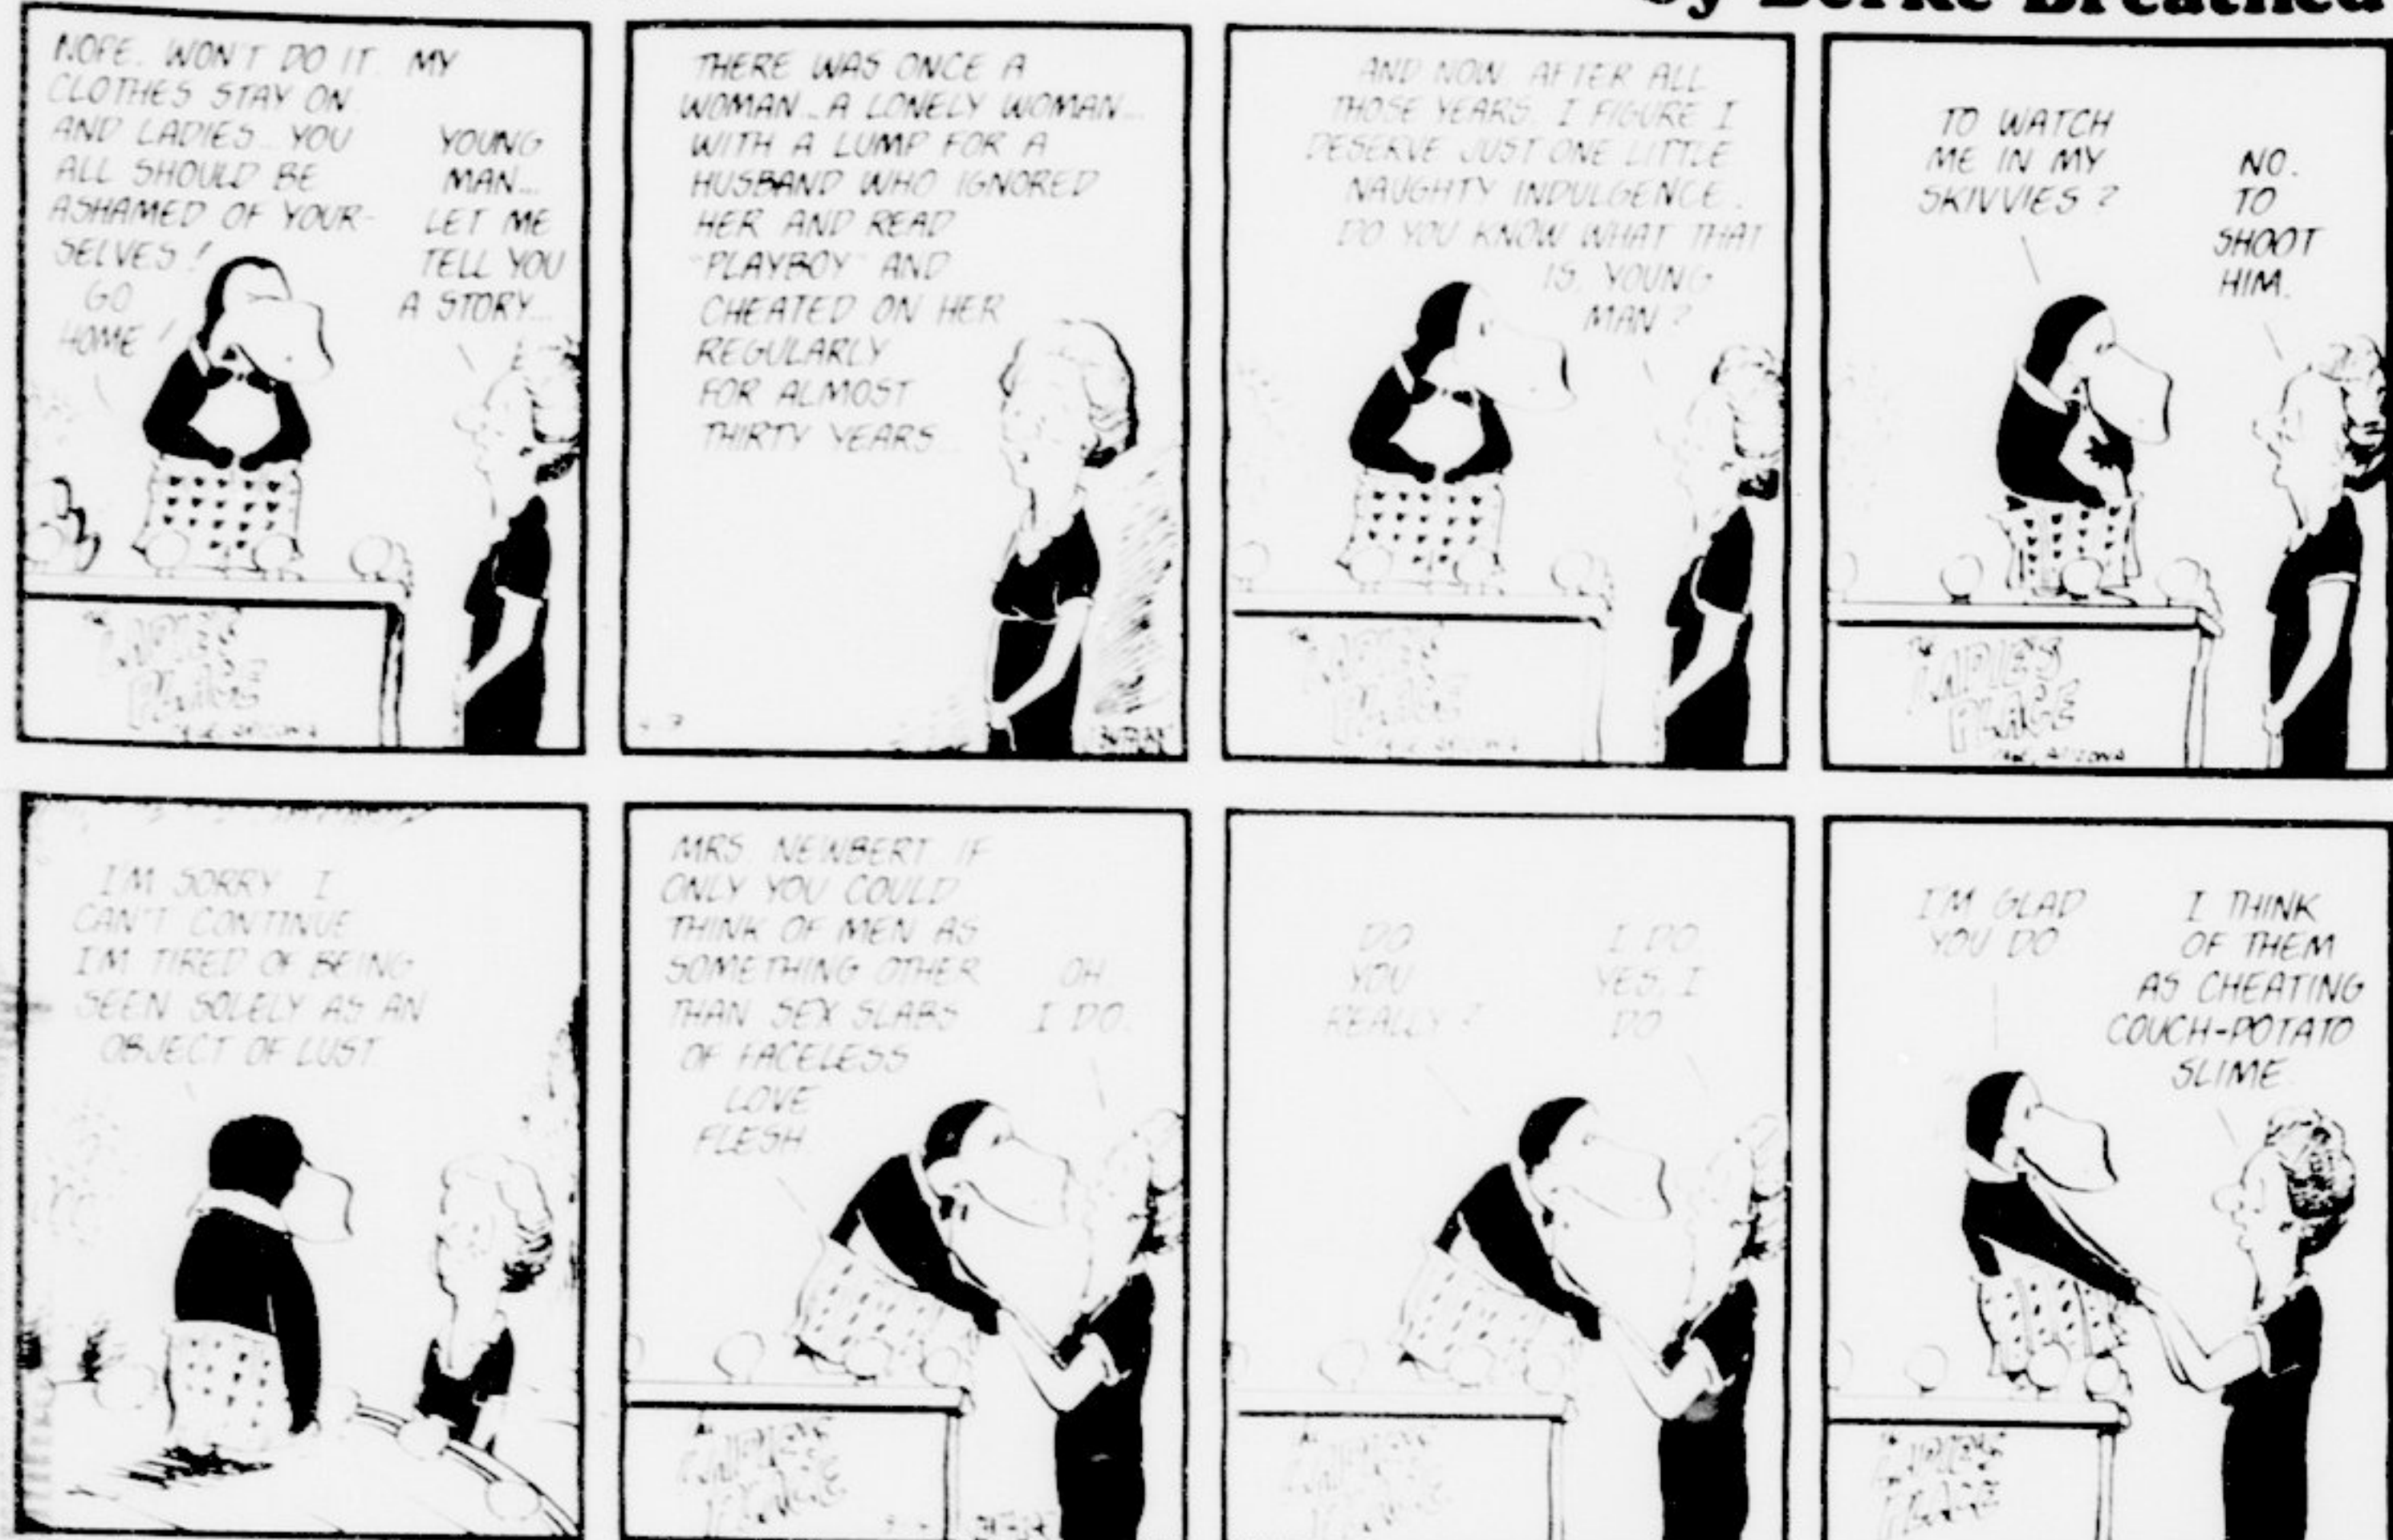

Players from the N.C. Shakespeare Festival enact a scene from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at a television studio.

New videos range from fruit to sound and fury

By MICAH HARRIS
Staff Writer

Bananas are good all year, but it seems the public only has a taste for Bananarama during the summer. Their previous two U.S. hits, "Cruel Summer" and "Venus", have played over the summer months, as does their latest, "I Heard a Rumor". The two songs they released over the previous nine months did nothing. Perhaps in an attempt to capture the success of "Venus", they have created a video in a similar vein, featuring the former models in a myriad of outlandish costumes. There is more of an old movie theme here, though, with a nice effect of projecting black and white films live on the dancing set's background.

"If There Was A Man" - the Pretenders. This Love Theme from "The Living Daylights" isn't played in the movie until the film's end, but it's worth sitting through the end credits to hear. In fact, the gorgeous architecture and romantically lighted fountain that the music is dubbed over at the end of the 007 picture rivals the visual presentation of this Pretender's video. The trouble with movie theme videos in general is that they seem hamstrung by the commercial obligation of including promotional film footage and not having the actors present on the video set.

Occasionally, they do get around this (as Starship did with "Nothing's Going to Stop Us Now"). The Pretenders, through no fault of their own, do not. Still, the misty incorporation of film of Timothy Dalton as James Bond with the softly sensual performance of Crissy Hines is a somewhat fitting 25th anniversary tribute to the female fascination with James Bond.

"Little Lies" - Fleetwood Mac. Their best video from the new album yet, featuring another solid pop love song, from Christine McVie. The photography is wonderfully low-key and the special effects of the group, wraith-like, fading in and out of existence enhance the haunting audio dubs and are much more to the point than the mini-2001 Kalidoscope of "Big Love". It's also nice to hear Fleetwood Mac functioning vocally as a group, something they haven't done on a single since "Hold On To Me." Lindsey Buckingham's strength has always been more his vocals than his guitar playing. Now, he's left the group, and ironically, the word is he's being replaced with two guitar players. Hopefully, this will help Mac be a tighter band in concert, but Buckingham's voice, as much a signature of the group as McVie's and Nicks, won't be as easily replaced.

"Doing It All For My Baby" - Huey Lewis and the News. Sort of Michael Jackson's "Thriller" crossed with an episode of "The Monkees," or a climatic chase scene from "Scooby-Doo" in which Shaggy and the gang are pursued by some "monster" to the tune of something that's supposed to be "pop" music. The Huey Lewis song is the best thing about this video, and, happily, the plodding lead-in has been excised and now we get right into the music. Otherwise, it's silly, predictable, and only notable for a character who looks like Quasimodo as portrayed by George "Goobur" Lindsey.

"I Want Your Sex" - George Michael. Michael's song was controversial from the word go because of its seemingly causal attitude toward intimacy in these days of AIDS and roses. Michael responded with a little prologue to the video urging people to "explore monogamy." Michael's summary of sexual issues of past decades, ending with the statement that nowadays sex can kill you, is an unwittingly sad social commentary. In the '80s, monogamy is being "explored" primarily as a survival tactic, with such things as - oh, I don't know - commitment? being secondary.

"U Got The Look" - Prince. Typical Prince video - full of sound and fury, signifying nothing.

Mojo Nixon plays 'Bo Day Shus'-ly

After dinner entertainment will include a fond waltz backward to your childhood as Skid takes on lead vocals with "Lincoln Logs", and then a stunning leap back into the Sizzlin' Seventies with the "Polka Polka." Lawrence Welk was never this good, but then he didn't have a stumpfiddle.

As the album segues into "Gin Guzzlin' Frenzy" perhaps you and your friend will be encouraged to have an alcoholic beverage. Be 21! And make it a real drink with a real hangover please, as Mojo and Skid have dispensed with the yuppie world of wine collars.

For the more...intimate moments, "In gin oblivion", Mojo and Skid will serenade you with the dipsty-dumpster romance of "Positively Bodies Parking Lot." The soft guitars and washboard provide you with five minutes of cigarette craving music while reminding you to "Be young... Be happy... Be foolish."

For that painful morning after, amidst the headache scramble for classes, perhaps a reprise of "Gin Guzzlin' Frenzy" or the cutting sounds of "Wash No Dishes No More" will clear your heads.

As you drive off into the blinding sunrise, pop in "We Gotta Have More Soul" a scathing attack on the Muzak-minded mediocrity of society. It won't help your head, but you'll know your'reat least feeling something.

All through the day, you can hum refrains and choruses, they're so catchy. You can reflect on how far Mojo has come since his early hits, "Stiffin' Martha's muffin" and "Burn Down The Malls".

Think about his insightful and almost childish punk phrasing. Think on how far you can go in this world with guts, guitars and Skid's washboard.

Think about these things and maybe when you grow up you can write a song called "Bruce is Everywhere."

Mojo Nixon plays 'Bo Day Shus'-ly

By CHIPPY BONEHEAD
Staff Writer

You'll realize from the opening strains of Mojo Nixon and Skid Roper's "Bo Day Shus" that its an album to take on a date. Especially if you want to get laid.

You and the human (or plastic inflatable) of your choice will have a blast dancing to the hit single, "Elvis is Everywhere." You'll get in touch with the Elvis in you.

You'll both want to help defeat the evil Anti-Elvis and purge the Elvis from Joan Rivers. Good King karma with a great beat and loads funnier than Priscilla's video tour of Graceland.

For your date's social conscience, Mojo presents THE protest song for the Eighties, "I Ain't Gonna Piss in No Jar." Together you can write Congress, sending them little nuggets of Mojo's wisdom.

Surely when the Senate hears the lines, "I ain't gonna pee-pee in no cup/unless Nancy Reagan's gonna drink it up" and "Thomas Jefferson's gonna be mighty pissed/ when he hears about this/ come back from the dead/Tom/ sock 'em in the head!" they'll repeal those aggravating laws.

After your country saving efforts you'll be hungry. For your dining pleasure, the guys will send you to B.B.Q. U.S.A. You'll have your choice of anywhere from Walter's Bar-B-Q (an REM allusion?) to Hog Heaven for your dining pleasure, courtesy of Mojo and Skid's guitars and congas.

After dinner entertainment will include a fond waltz backward to your childhood as Skid takes on lead vocals with "Lincoln Logs", and then a stunning leap back into the Sizzlin' Seventies with the "Polka Polka." Lawrence Welk was never this good, but then he didn't have a stumpfiddle.

As the album segues into "Gin Guzzlin' Frenzy" perhaps you and your friend will be encouraged to have an alcoholic beverage. Be 21! And make it a real drink with a real hangover please, as Mojo and Skid have dispensed with the yuppie world of wine collars.

For the more...intimate moments, "In gin oblivion", Mojo and Skid will serenade you with the dipsty-dumpster romance of "Positively Bodies Parking Lot." The soft guitars and washboard provide you with five minutes of cigarette craving music while reminding you to "Be young...Be happy...Be foolish."

For that painful morning after, amidst the headache scramble for classes, perhaps a reprise of "Gin Guzzling Frenzy" or the cutting sounds of "Wash No Dishes No More" will clear your heads.

As you drive off into the blinding sunrise, pop in "We Gotta Have More Soul" a scathing attack on the Muzak-minded mediocrity of society. It won't help your head, but you'll know your're at least feeling something.

All through the day, you can hum refrains and choruses, they're so catchy. You can reflect on how far Mojo has come since his early hits, "Stuffin' Martha's muffin" and "Burn Down The Malls".

Think about his insightful and almost childish punk phrasing. Think on how far you can go in this world with guts, guitars and Skid's washboard.

Think about these things and maybe when you grow up you can write a song called "Bruce is Everywhere."

Myths about apathetic college students are dispelled in new book on PIRGs

NEW YORK (AP) — A persistent myth about college students is that they are selfish, apathetic and politically passive — certainly no match for those who rocked campuses with protests during the radical 1960s.

You can sell a lot of books these days by belittling students as shallow and uncommitted. That was one message in University of Chicago professor Allan Bloom's vitriolic book, "The Closing of the American Mind," which has topped best-seller lists this summer.

But another new book, "More Action for a Change" (Dembner Books, $8.95), by Kelley Griffin, presents a startlingly different picture of students as among America's most potent civic movers and shakers of the '70s and '80s — a period when toga parties had supposedly replaced sit-ins.

The book is a history of "PIRGs," public interest research groups, which have blossomed on 175 campuses in 25 states and in Canada since 1970. Inspired and nurtured by consumer advocate Ralph Nader, PIRGs have teamed students with lawyers, scientists and other professionals to do battle on a host of safety, environmental and consumer issues.

In short, Griffin's book, with an introduction by Nader, suggests that the current myth of campus apathy is a canard.

"The press has defined student activism as picketing, demonstrating and taking over buildings," Nader said in an interview. "But meanwhile the PIRG movement is using lobbying, litigation, referenda, all the mainstream ways to change society. But that isn't considered news."

Griffin, reached by phone at the University of California at Berkeley where she is completing graduate work in journalism, first came in contact with PIRGs during her undergraduate years at the University of Houston. She eventually went to Washington where she worked for columnist Jack Anderson and later, Nader.

Griffin's history of PIRGs chronicles a remarkable record of student-generated social change. Its roots were in Nader's $425,000 court settlement over General Motors in 1970 in an invasion of privacy case. With the money, Nader founded the first PIRG in Washington, staffed with young students and professionals and quickly dubbed "Nader's Raiders."

He took his fight to campuses. Finally, at the University of Oregon in Eugene in 1970, he got enough support to form the first of many college-based PIRGs. Minnesota followed shortly thereafter.

"The key to the success of PIRGs" writes Griffin, is the professional full-time staff which gives them consistency and expertise. Students set the priorities and do important, if not always glamorous volunteer work — ringing doorbells, distributing petitions, lobbying legislators.

Politically conservative student groups such as the College Republicans and Young Americans for Freedom have objected that colleges have no business acting as collection agents to finance organizations of which they disapprove.

"More Action for a Change" is a valuable book which reveals the potential of student political and social action. It's must reading, especially, for today's college students who perhaps didn't realize their own strength.

Trading jokes. "We got the idea and sat down and wrote the comedy routines, then got a professional production company to do the filming," Hornsby said.

The audience, consisting of about 50 "pretty sympathetic" friends, was invited to a Chicago nightclub rented for the evening and treated to both routines, he said.

Hornsby conceded there is one potential problem with the videos. If the would-be comedian reads the jokes too fast or too slowly, the timing can get mixed up, and the audience might start laughing before the comedian gets to the punch line.

But said Hornsby: "Who cares anyway? It's all in the privacy of your own home."

Both tapes have themes and categories like the "smart dog" category.

"My dog is a great watchdog," the viewer reads, for example. "So far, he's watched my home get burglarized three times."

Then there are the airplane jokes, dozen of them.

One goes like this: "I was on a plane. The weather was rough, and the plane starts going up and down and sideways."

The lady next to me gets nervous and shouts, 'Everyone on the plane, pray!'

"I say, 'I don't know any prayers.'"

"She says, 'Well, do something religious!'"

"So I started a bingo game."

The idea for the videotapes, which became available two weeks ago, was hatched about a year ago when the 35-year-old Hornsby and Kaufman, 37, were

Jokesters make you Letterman

CHICAGO (AP) — Did you hear the one about the two guys who created a set of video tapes they claim can make amateur stand-up comedians stand out?

The tapes, called "Laugh Tracks" and "Laugh Tracks Blue," are the 1980s answer for frustrated comedians and entertainers everywhere, says lawyer Will Hornsby, who created the tapes along with his former college buddy, computer systems designer Jim Kaufman.

The two are partners in Humor Us Enterprises of Chicago, which sells the tapes for $24.95 each.

"There are a lot of people out there who are envious of comedians who would like to take the stage and get the admiration for themselves," Hornsby said Monday night. "This is the way to do it."

The video works by providing not only the jokes, printed across the bottom of the television screen, but the audience to laugh at them as well.

"Jim and I have always liked to tell jokes, and we saved up our best, plus others we compiled from magazines and things," Hornsby said.

It isn't just any old group of people chuckling and occasionally clapping, either. These audience members sit at nightclub tables, grinning, giggling, and sipping drinks. They guffaw when the jokes are good, writhe and moan when they're corny.

They respond like a comedian's dream. Read a line like, "He's so rich..." and the audience answers in chorus, "How rich was he?"

"He's so rich, he gets TV Guide in hard-cover," the viewer replies, and they go wild.

The jokes in "Laugh Tracks Blue" are off-color, while "Laugh Tracks" uses straight humor, Hornsby said.

Ceramic sculptress uses natural tools to create works on display in world galleries

OCOTLAN, Mexico (AP) — Josefina Aguilar makes a point of saying the only tools she uses for her ceramic figures seen in museums and boutiques far from this southern Mexican town are a shard of metal, a thorn from a cactus plant and her hands.

But then, she says, you also need just a little bit more.

"It's like I tell the children," the soft-spoken artisan recently said, "you've got to put in some soul." That soul is apparent as soon as one reaches her home and studio, on the main road from the city of Oaxaca about 15 miles to the north.

There is a cheerful welcome sign. The fence posts are topped by the brightly painted figures that have made her famous, and larger ones are scattered about the cluttered yard that fits between her home and studio.

Aguilar seems most at home as she kneels gracefully with her legs folded on a mat on the corner of the studio's cement porch, working with deft fingers as she talks.

One figure just about ready for sale, that of a woman nursing a baby and carrying a basket, rests nearby. The woman's headdress and necklace are clearly defined in the simple clay.

Aguilar's work has been exhibited in such places as the Museum of Cultural History at the University of California Los Angeles, and the Museum of International Folk Art in Santa Fe, N.M. It can also be purchased at boutiques on such trendy thoroughfares as Los Angeles' Melrose Avenue or New York's Columbus Avenue.

The artist and her husband, Jose Garcia Cruz, keep a cardboard portfolio of the business cards from crafts shops that sell her work, including such places as West Berlin and Montreal. The American Southwest figures prominently on the list: Santa Fe, N.M.; San Diego and Long Beach, Calif.; San Antonio and Austin, Texas.

"I started when I was very little - his age," said Aguilar, pointing to her 4-year-old son, the youngest of nine children. There are eight boys, the oldest 20, and one girl.

All help out at least by painting some of the figures, she said. Her husband also works full time in the business.

Aguilar's parents were utilitarian potters in Ocotlan, whose decorative figures became popular. The tradition was passed on to their children.

"I used to like making brides and grooms out of clay," the 44-year-old Aguilar said of her beginnings as a ceramist. "Then I just liked working with clay."

Aguilar's three sisters also make figures but she is the only one in the family who works without molds.

Enrique Audiffred, director of the Oaxaca state artisanry agency, said the family's work reflects Oaxaca's rich Indian culture.

Josefina's figures are baked in the wood-fueled kiln for seven hours. Most used to be kept in their natural earth colors, but more durable paint in bright colors now is used unless the client requests an unpainted figure.

History's highlights:

200 years ago the Constitution was signed and a nation born

Today is Thursday, Sept. 17, the 200th day of 1987. There are 105 days left in the year.

Today's highlights in history: Two hundred years ago, on Sept. 17, 1787, the Constitution of the United States was completed and signed by a majority of delegates attending the constitutional convention in Philadelphia.

On this date: In 1862, Union forces hurled back a Confederate invasion of Maryland in the Civil War Battle of Antietam.

In 1939, the Soviet Union invaded Poland.

In 1947, James V. Forrestal was sworn in as the first Secretary of Defense.

In 1949, more than 130 people, most of them U.S. citizens, died when the fire gutted the Canadian passenger steamer "Noronic" at a pier in Toronto.

In 1957, two male attorneys

"stood in" as actress Sophia Loren and producer Carlo Ponti were married by proxy in a ceremony in Juarez, Mexico (however, Italian authorities did not consider the couple legally married until 1966).

In 1962, space officials announced the selection of nine new astronauts, including Neil A. Armstrong, who would become the first man to step onto the moon in 1969.

In 1976, NASA publicly unveiled the space shuttle "Enterprise" at ceremonies in Palmdale, Calif.

In 1978, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin concluded their Camp David summit with the signing of a framework for peace in the Middle East.

In 1980, former Nicaraguan president Anastasio Somoza was assassinated in Paraguay.

In 1983, Vanessa Williams of New York State became the first black contestant to be crowned Miss America. (The following July, she also became the first Miss America to resign in the wake of a "Penthouse" magazine scandal.)

In 1984, Brian Mulroney was sworn in as Canada's 18th Prime Minister, succeeding Liberal John N. Turner.

Ten years ago: The government of South Africa acknowledged there might have been irregularities in the way police handled the case of black activist Steven Biko, who died Sept. 12 while in custody.

Five years ago: The U.N. Security Council condemned Israel for its military incursion into west Beirut following the assassination of Lebanese president-elect Bashir Gemayel, and demanded the Israelis' withdrawal.

One year ago: The Senate confirmed the nomination of William H. Rehnquist to become the 16th chief justice of the United States. Seven people were killed, 51 injured when a bomb exploded outside a department store in Paris.

Today's Birthdays: Former Chief Justice Warren Burger is 80. Actor Roddy McDowall is 59. Actress Anne Bancroft is 56. Actress Dorothy Loudon is 54. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, is 54. Author Ken Kesey is 52. Actor Paul Benedict is 49. Actor John Ritter is 39.

Thought for Today: "The people made the Constitution, and the people can unmake it. It is the creature of their own will, and lives only by their will." — John Marshall, fourth chief justice of the United States (1755-1835).

First generation punker Billy Idol has mellowed, but still proud to be punk DALLAS (AP) — Billy Idol may have mellowed, but he's still proud to be a punk.

"It is definitely 10 years since punk rock happened. For a lot of people, it's something they've only read about in rock 'n' roll books," Idol said in a recent interview, as he neared the end of his U.S. tour before heading for Australia. "The fact that there are a few people like me around does sort of keep that attitude and spirit going. But it has transformed itself as an ongoing thing that's just as alive in 1987 as it was in 1977."

The 31-year-old Idol has changed also. Critics say his latest album, "Whiplash Smile," is his most human and vulnerable effort, an emotional departure from his three earlier records which portrayed him as a rock 'n' roll bully.

His bleached, blond hair still is spiked and his self-described "filthy humor" still is evident, as when he begins concerts by emerging from between a huge pair of legs made of wood. But offstage, Idol wears wire-rimmed glasses and his trademark sneer is often replaced by a smile.

The change in image was widely noticed by critics when

"Whiplash Smile" was released last fall with its hit singles, "To Be a Lover" and the lyrical ballad, "Sweet Sixteen."

However, Idol dismisses the change as a natural progression that didn't surprise his fans.

"Rebel Yell," Idol's 1984 Grammy-nominated album, had the hits "Eyes Without a Face" and "Rebel Yell" and went double platinum in the United States. With the LP, he became "established," a survivor of punk rock.

Inspired by the Beatles, David Bowie, Gary Glitter, Iggy Pop, the Sex Pistols and, to a greater extent than is immediately evident, the late Elvis Presley, Idol started in pop music in London in the late 1970s by forming a band with Tony James called Generation X.

"That's really a punk rock attitude," Idol said. "It's to bring back that sort of need for artists to respect their own rights, rather than carelessly throwing them away to a record company or some kind of system they don't like."

Idol accepts the punk roots he secured in Generation X with pride.

"It's fantastic to think that what we said in 1977 is true," he said. "You can break into the music world when there's a stranglehold. You can start new movements and they will keep going. They won't necessarily self-destruct even if the original groups did. The difficult thing is to impart the spirit that it had. And I was definitely a part of it."

"Punk rock isn't dead. It just smells funny."

Jim Belushi shapes up and gets exec. desk

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — It's surprising to find Jim Belushi occupying an office in the Myrna Loy building at Lorimar studios or any office, for that matter.

Belushi behind an executive's desk? He would seem more in character behind a row of beer bottles at a saloon.

Yet he can be found these days in the White Horse Productions suite of the Loy building. Lorimar, new owner of MGM studios, has renamed landmarks after MGM immortals. Just so you won't think that he has gone too straight, the office contains such mementos as a football autographed by Chicago Bears star and a genuine Jim McMahon headband.

It does appear that Belushi has changed his act, despite a recent misdemeanor battery and assault charge stemming from a traffic incident. He's even billed a James Belushi in his new Tri-Star film, "The Principal."

Belushi stars with Lou Gossett Jr. and Rae Dawn Chong as principal of a seemingly unsalvageable inner-city high school. He describes his role of Rick Latimer as "a lost soul, as I was a few years ago."

"I got fired from 'Saturday Night Live' at the same time as I was getting a divorce," he said. "It was a period of my life when I wouldn't grow up. It was the same thing with Rick Latimer. You need something to turn you around, and the responsibility of the school does it for Rick Latimer; he realizes that these kids need a lot."

Belushi admitted that the 1982 drug death of his brother, John, contributed to his tailspin. Jim dabbled in the drug culture during his "hip period" in the 1970s but has not had a drug problem. Beer was something else.

"I did this play in which I drank three beers a show, eight shows a week," he said. "After the show I'd have a couple of beers. I was in that show for four months, and by the time it ended I was a heavy drinker."

"Then I went on 'Saturday Night Live,' and it had gotten away from me. At one point I got fired. It wasn't because I was drinking ... I wasn't playing the game; I wasn't playing by the rules. ... I was being a punk."

"When I got fired, it really slapped me around," he said.

For East Carolina head coach Art Baker, Saturday's game against Florida State in Greenville will mark the second straight week that he has matched wits against a former coaching counterpart.

"For the second week in a row I'll be coaching against an old friend, and someone I have great respect for in Bobby Bowden," said Baker at his weekly press conference. "I had the chance to coach along side of Bobby Bowden (in 1984 at Florida State as offensive coordinator) and I felt like I was at a coaching clinic because I learned so much from him about the passing game."

But, friends or not, Baker and his troops will have but one thing on their mind Saturday. Winning. And with the victory over N.C. State last week under their belt, the Pirate football team is looking to Saturday's matchup against the eighth-ranked Seminoles with a lot of confidence.

"For the second week in a row I'll be coaching against an old friend, and someone I have great respect for in Bobby Bowden," said Baker at his weekly press conference. "I had the chance to coach along side of Bobby Bowden (in 1984 at Florida State as offensive coordinator) and I felt like I was at a coaching clinic because I learned so much from him about the passing game."

But, friends or not, Baker and his troops will have but one thing on their mind Saturday. Winning. And with the victory over N.C. State last week under their belt, the Pirate football team is looking to Saturday's matchup against the eighth-ranked Seminoles with a lot of confidence.

"Obviously it is easier to prepare for a team such as Florida State when you have a big win," said Baker. "We realize that we will have to be even better prepared in order to win, but just having that first win is a big incentive."

The Seminoles, 40-16 winners over Texas Tech in their opener last week, will bring a talented passing attack into Ficklen for the 7 p.m. kickoff, according to Baker.

"(FSU quarterback) Danny McManus has one of the quickest, strongest arms of anybody I've ever worked," said Baker. "They will throw the ball from anywhere at anytime on the football field." Last week, McManus was 19 of 34 for 275 yards and two touchdowns.

"They are going to move the ball," continued Baker. "They are a solid top-ten team. I would be very surprised if they don't contend for the national championship this season, and will certainly be one of the top bowl contenders this year."

It sounds like a tough assignment for ECU, but with the confidence gained last Saturday Baker and his players feel that they can win.

"I have always felt that anything can happen in any given game," Baker said. "We are going to have to cut down on our mistakes though in order to beat a team with the caliber of Florida State."

The Pirate players agreed. Tailback Jarrod Moody, who rushed for two touchdowns Saturday, said, "We are going to have to have a great, great offensive outing. You know Florida State is going to be one of the top teams in the nation and we are going to have to cut down on some of our mistakes."

"We will have to play a near-perfect game in order to win," concluded Moody.

Quarterback Travis Hunter said that the Pirates will have to vary their offensive scheme a little more in order to be effective against the Seminoles.

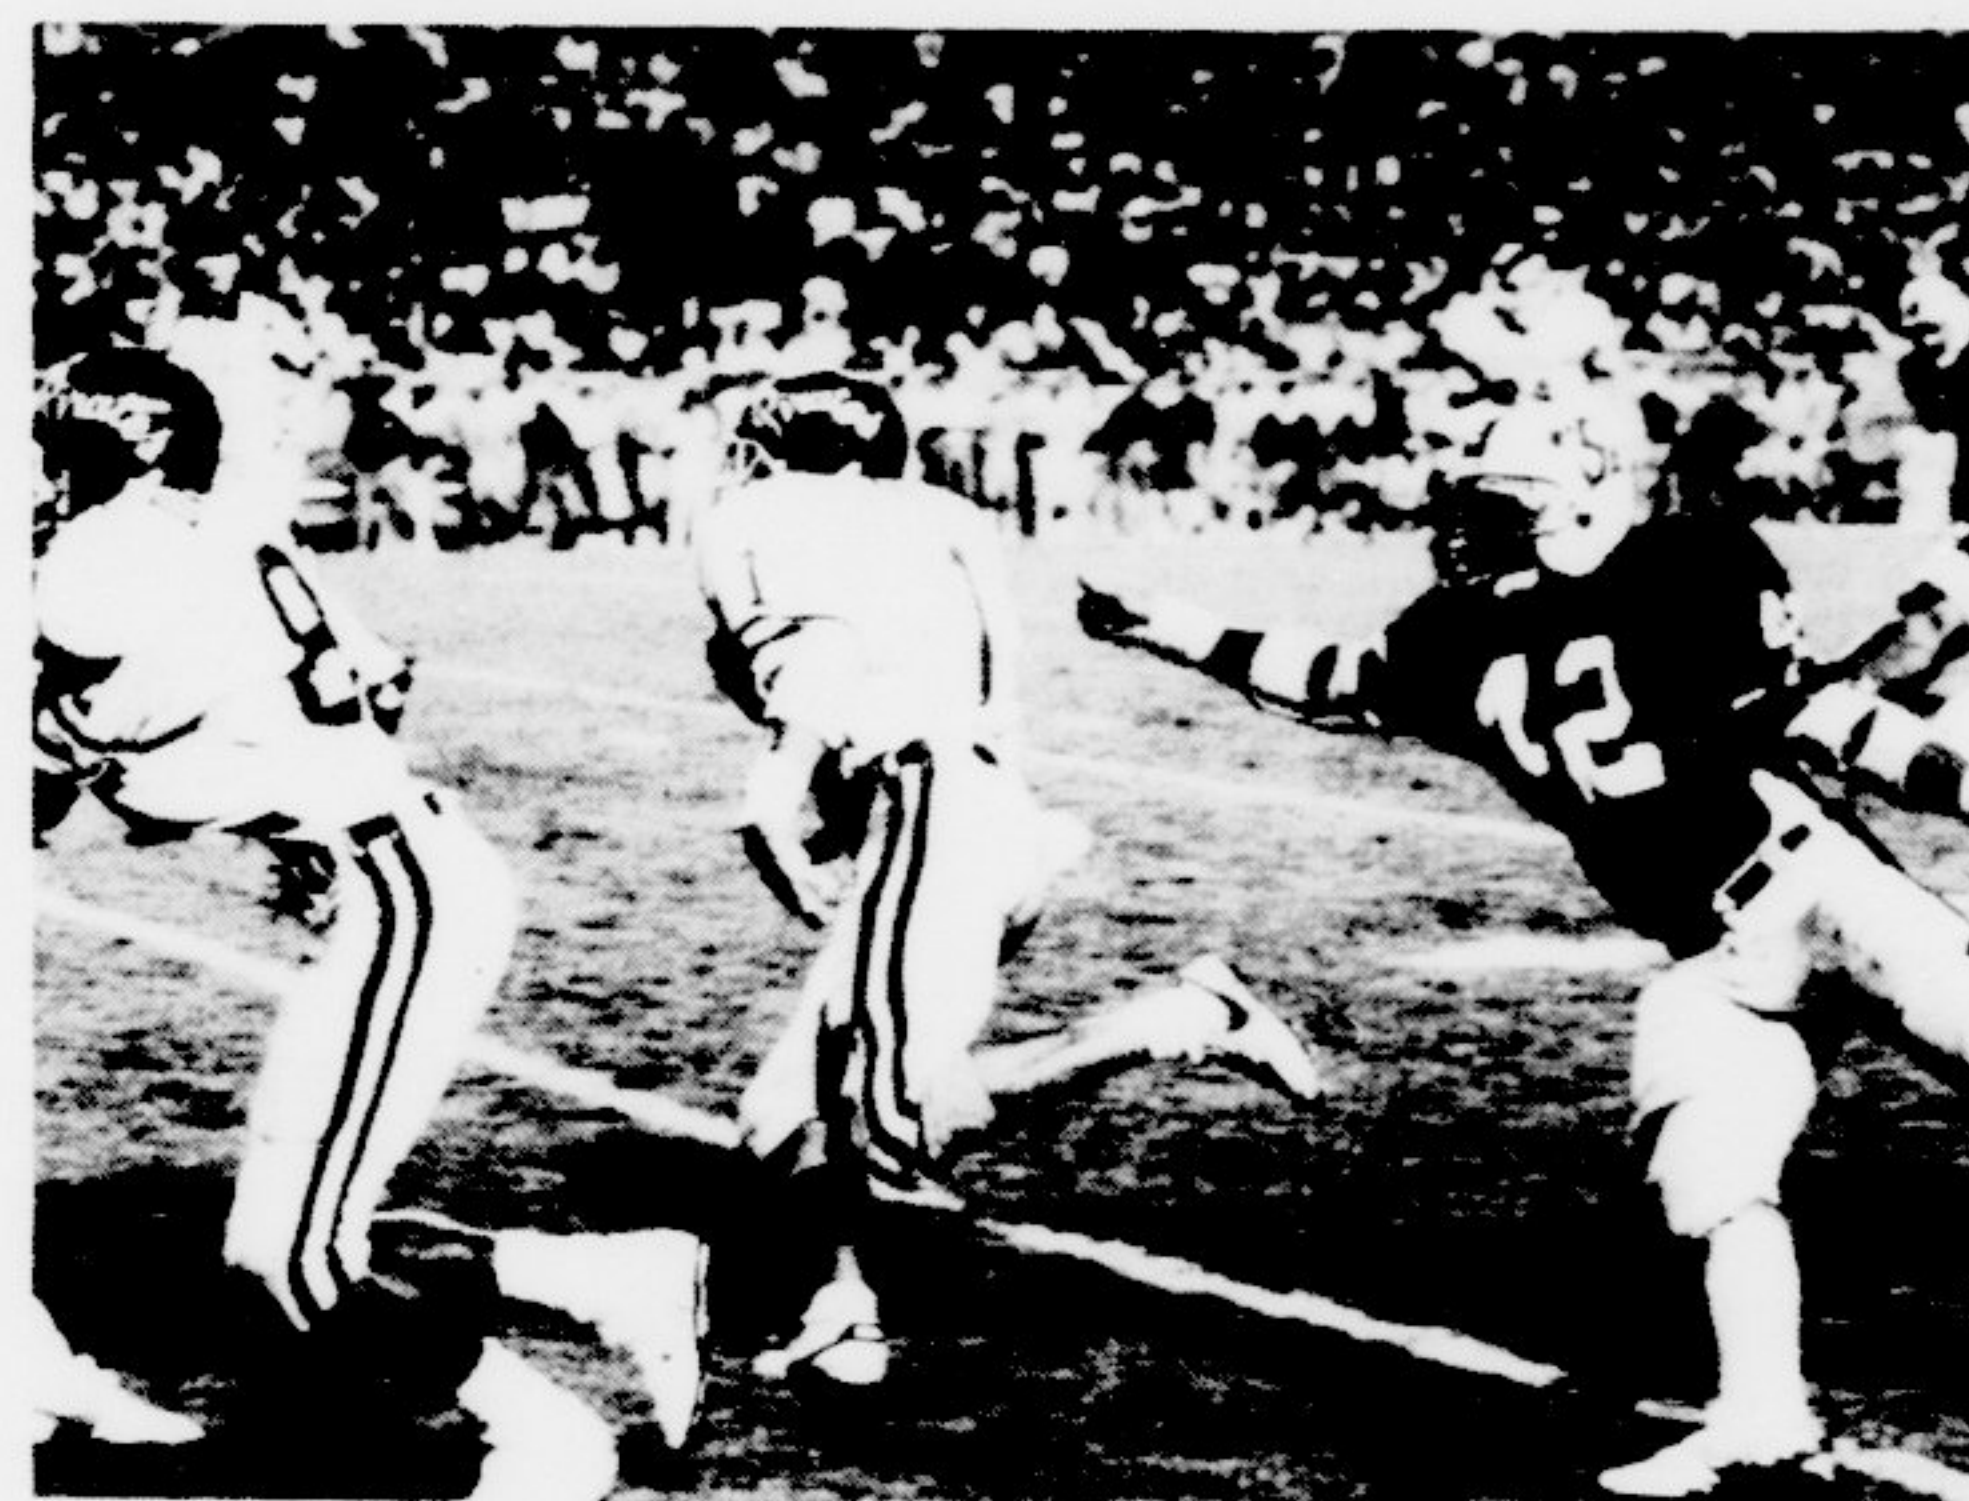

"We want to mix it (the offense) up against them and put it up in the air more," said Hunter. "We will need to be consistent and steady to have a chance against them. We are going to go out believing that we can win the game and not wait until the third or fourth quarter and say that we can beat these guys. We have got to go out believing from the start that we can win."

North Carolina transfer Mike Applewhite, a sophomore defensive end, and All-American hopeful Ellis Dillahunt, a senior cornerback, felt that just the mental attitude of being 1-0 when they go up against Florida State will make a big difference.

"We gained a lot of confidence by defeating State," said Applewhite. "It was very important to us to be able to play Florida State with a 1-0 record, instead of being 0-1. The win made all the difference. We now have the confidence and attitude that we can beat Florida State if we play the best ball possible."

"Last year, after we lost to State (38-10) everything was kind of negative," said Dillahunt. "This year, a lot of positive things came out of the game. Being 1-0 instead of 0-1 really motivates us as a team."

Hunter leads ECU to opening victory

By PAT MOLLOY
Assistant Sports Editor

Red-shirt quarterback Travis Hunter warmed the ECU offensive bench last year, receiving only limited playing time, as Charlie Libretto took the reigns of the gridders and lead them to a 2-9 finish.

This year, the Pirates are sporting a different attitude — and a different look. Hunter returns this season, only this year he returns as starting QB.

And this year, as opposed to last season, the boys look hungry. Really hungry.

In their season opener against N.C. State, the Pirates executed Art Baker's run-and-shoot offense to touchdown precision. East Carolina crushed the Wolfpack by 18 points, posting a 32-14 victory.

The sixth-largest crowd in Carter-Finley history (56,800) watched in disbelief as ECU performed play after flawless play, accumulating 295 yards on the ground. The vast majority of the yardage was run up by way of the option, which Hunter ran with poise and control.

"Our players played with poise," said Pirate coach Art

Baker. "There were two times in the game when we were behind, but I could see it in their eyes that it never bothered them."

Indeed, Baker's defensive unit was strong, giving up only one touchdown the entire evening. The second Wolfpack score "belonged to the offense," Baker said. The Pirate defense was extremely stingy in the loose ball area, forcing five State turnovers, resulting in 12 Pirate points.

Travis Hunter and the ECU defense were hardly the only things working well for the Pirates on Saturday night, though. Jarrod Moody (tailback), and Anthony Simpson (fullback) were in finely-tuned condition.

Moody scored two touchdowns, one on a run of six yards, and the other on a sprint of 39 yards. Simpson bulldozed a TD in from the three. Neither running back coughed up the ball, regardless of the rainy weather.

"I think our offense did an excellent job under the weather conditions of controlling the football. Our coaches had a good game plan and the players were able to stick

Libretto may leave Pirate grid squad

Sophomore, backup-quarterback Charlie Libretto may be calling it quits from the ECU football team.

Reports surfacing Wednesday around campus indicate that Libreto has been talking with both coaches and players about the possibility of leaving the team. However, Libretto was unable to be reached for a comment on the matter.

At a meeting of the Raleigh Sports Club Wednesday in Raleigh, Pirate head coach Art Baker spoke about Libretto.

"Charlie is having a very difficult time handling it (the demotion to second-string quarterback)," said Baker.

Baker went on to say at the meeting that he thought that it was possible that Libretto might be leaving the team, but he added that he wanted to talk further with him about the matter when he got back to Greenville.

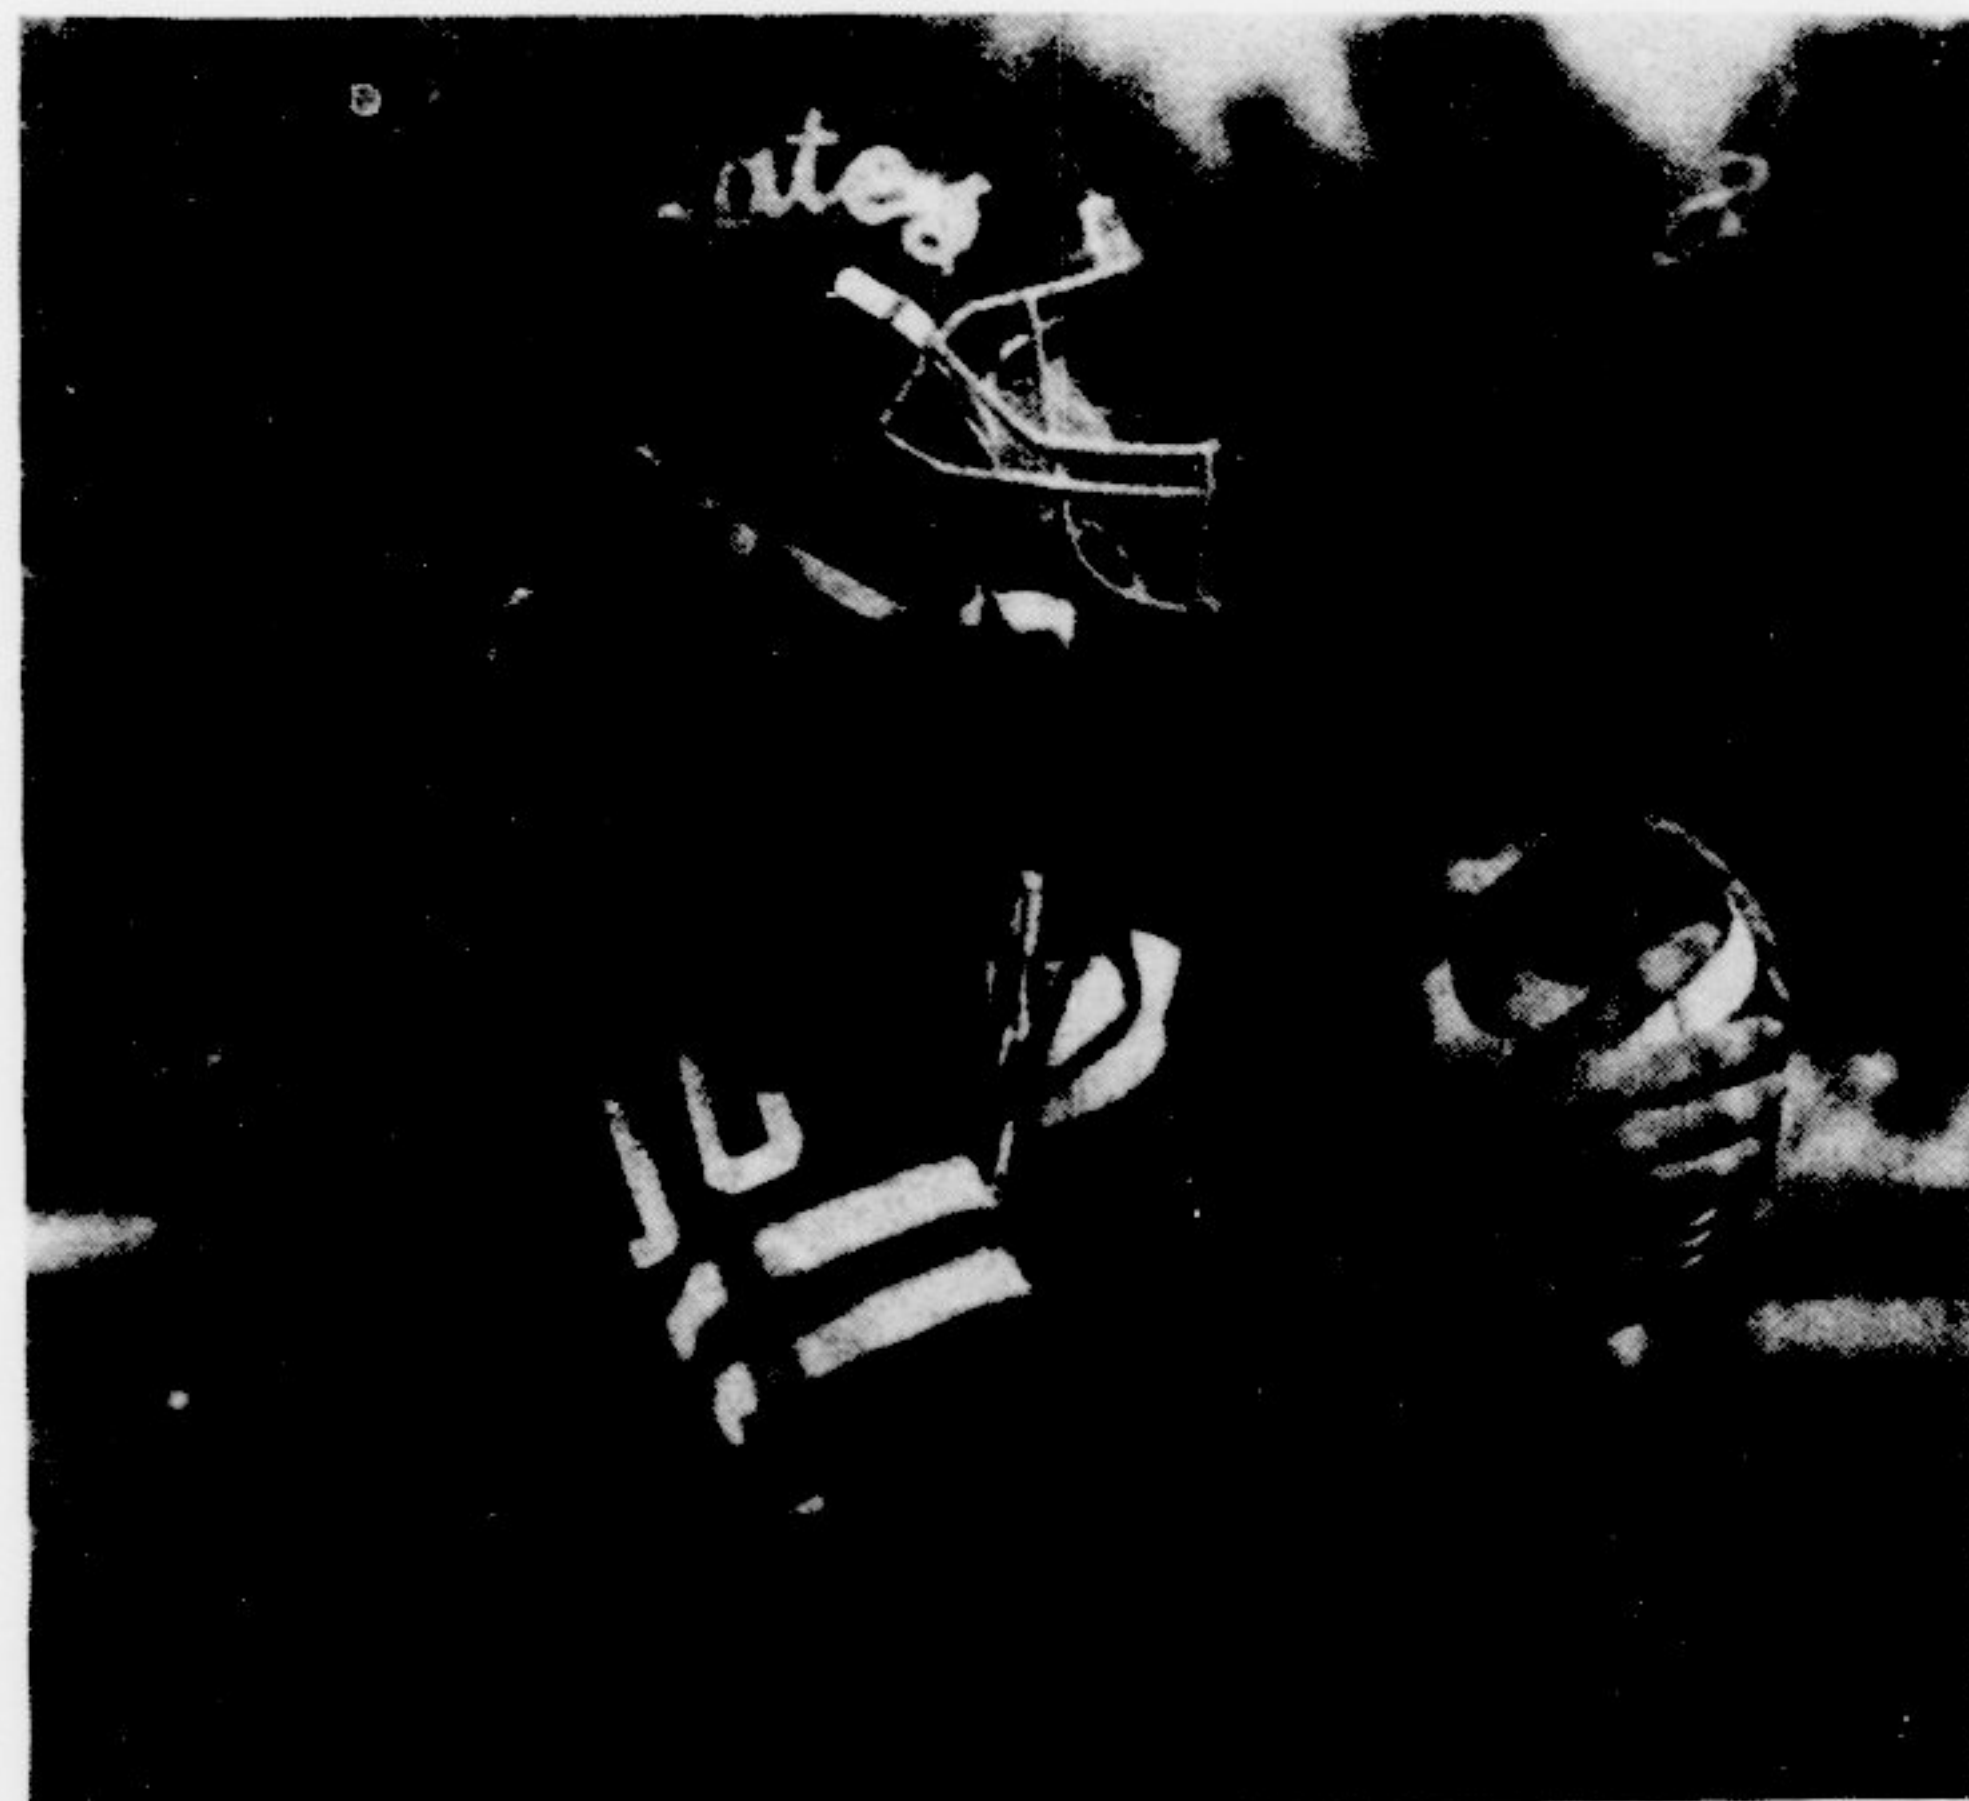

According to a reliable source, Libretto met with Baker early Wednesday morning about the possibility of him leaving the team and at that time he was told to take 24 hours to reconsider the matter before he came to a definite decision.

A definite decision about the status of Libretto should be released sometime today.

Last season, Libretto got the nod as starting quarterback in eight of the Pirates 11 contests. For the year he completed 71 of 148 pass attempts for 833 yards for a 48 percent clip.

Baker seemed pleased with Libretto's performance in spring drills this year even though the starting spot was given to Travis Hunter.

"Travis Hunter went through the spring drills and did the job needed to win the position," said Baker in a pre-season interview. "That is not to say that Charlie Libretto had a bad spring, because he did not at all. Both players improved tremendously from last year... Charlie started eight games for us last season and showed uncanny leadership qualities for a true freshman...."

Sophomore quarterback Charlie Libretto, who started in eight contests for the Pirates last season, may be leaving the team.

Miami time change

GREENVILLE, N.C. — The starting time for the East Carolina vs. University of Miami football game, scheduled to take place Oct. 31, 1987, has been changed to 12:10 p.m., ECU director of athletics Ken Karr announced.

That game, which had originally been scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m., was moved to accommodate a television contract for the game, Karr said. The game will be televised by the Raycom Network and will be shown in Florida.

Virginia Commonwealth University took the crown in the women's five kilometer event followed by Winthrop and Methodist.

In the men's division, Matt Schweitzer led the Pirates with a 17 place finish turning in a time of 28:24. Mike McGehee, 31st overall, ran a 29:55 and was the second fastest ECU runner.

The host Campbell Camels won the men's title with Virginia Commonwealth taking second.

This was the season opener for the Pirates and the times were slow for the entire field due to the rain and slick portions of the course. ECU travels to Pembroke State September 12 for the Pembroke Invitational.

Frances Marion tops ECU booters

By GEORGE OSBORNE
Sports Writer

East Carolina fell to Francis Marion College 2-1 in their season opener at Florence, SC.

The Pirates were unable to capitalize on scoring opportunities and were stymied by defensive miscues.

"We had a lot of times that we should have scored but didn't," Head coach Charlie Harvey said. "Too many times we had the shots but didn't take them."

Bob Beck scored the first Patriot goal on assist from Scott Swain to make it 1-0 at the half.

At the 27:01 mark in the second half Francis Marion struck again when Charlie Haines kicked in one off a pass from Andy Roxburgh.

The Pirates only goal came late in the match when Roy Andersens and Mike Dorin connected with only six minutes left.

Mental mistakes plagued the ECU defense more than the Francis Marion offense as both teams took an equal number of shots, 15 for ECU and 16 for FMC. Keeper Mac Kendall had a good outing making nine saves.

"Their goals (in the second half) were both on defensive mistakes," Harvey said. "We weren't ready to play mentally, but we will be ready Wednesday."

The loss puts the Pirates at 0-1 as they move into conference play against William & Mary Wednesday in Williamsburg. ECU will open its home slate Saturday fac-

Stiff challenge up next for Tar Heels

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Despite letting his defense practice all week against a freshman quarterback who ran the wishbone in high school, North Carolina football coach Dick Crum said simulating top-ranked Oklahoma's speed is next to impossible.

Crum said his scout team quarterback this week will be Deems May, a freshman who ran the wishbone at Lexington High School. However, Crum said May doesn't have the speed of Sooners quarterback Jamelle Hollieway.

"At 5-foot-10, 180 pounds, Hollieway is extremely strong," he added. "You just don't knock him down by grabbing him. He's like a tailback playing quarterback."

Some teams don't want their quarterback running the ball, but they want him to run the ball. "They (Oklahoma) wrote the book on it (the wishbone) and they know how to do it," Crum said Tuesday at his weekly news conference. "We don't see a lot of wishbone around here."

The last time Crum's team faced a wishbone offense was in 1980 when the Tar Heels traveled to Norman, Okla., and lost 41-7. At the time, North Carolina was No. 6 in the nation and 7-0.

"They are better than the team we played in 1980," Crum said.

"They are a very complete football team. They deserve to be No. 1."

Both teams are 1-0. Oklahoma crushed North Texas State 69-14 last Saturday, while North Carolina defeated Illinois 34-14.

"We feel good about going out there to play them—it's a challenge," Crum said. "I know we are the underdog, but so what, someone has to be the underdog."

This year's trip to Norman will be much different than in 1980, Crum said, noting that this year's game is much earlier in the season. "Back in 1980, all people wanted to talk about (the first six games) was Oklahoma," he said.

Crum also said he expects the Sooners to throw the ball more, probably to 6-3, 242-pound tight end Keith Jackson, who led the nation last season in yardage-per-reception. In the Sooners opener,

Stiff challenge up next for Tar Heels

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Despite letting his defense practice all week against a freshman quarterback who ran the wishbone in high school, North Carolina football coach Dick Crum said simulating top-ranked Oklahoma's speed is next to impossible.

Crum said his scout team quarterback this week will be Deems May, a freshman who ran the wishbone at Lexington High School. However, Crum said May doesn't have the speed of Sooners quarterback Lamelle Holieway.

"At 5-foot-10, 180 pounds, Holieway is extremely strong," he added. "You just don't knock him down by grabbing him. He's like a tailback playing quarterback."

"Back in 1980, all people wanted to talk about (the first six games) was Oklahoma," he said.

Crum also said he expects the Sooners to throw the ball more, probably to 6-3, 242-pound tight end Keith Jackson, who led the nation last season in yardage-per-reception. In the Sooners opener, Norman, Okla., and lost 41-7. At the time, North Carolina was No. 6 in the nation and 7-0.

"They are better than the team we played in 1980," Crum said.

"They are a very complete football team. They deserve to be No. 1."

Both teams are 1-0. Oklahoma crushed North Texas State 69-14 last Saturday, while North Carolina defeated Illinois 34-14.

"We feel good about going out there to play them—it's a challenge," Crum said. "I know we are the underdog, but so what, someone has to be the underdog."

This year's trip to Norman will be much different than in 1980, Crum said, noting that this year's game is much earlier in the season.

"Back in 1980, all people wanted to talk about (the first six games) was Oklahoma," he said.

Crum also said he expects the Sooners to throw the ball more, probably to 6-3, 242-pound tight end Keith Jackson, who led the nation last season in yardage-per-reception. In the Sooners opener, to it." At the end of the half, the Pirates lead the Pack 13-7; however, shades of last season soon began to creep in.

Pirates roll past Pack, 32-14

Emerging from the dressing room with a vengeance, the Wolfpack took the second-half kickoff and punched it in on six plays, topping off a 62 yard drive. Fullback Mal Crite dashed off 17 of those yards, resting the ball at the three. ECU was then penalized, and the ball was placed on the one. From there, Crite crashed through the middle for the score.

Placekicker Bryan Carter made the extra point, and gave State the lead, 14-13.

Baker's team took the score in stride, and marched off 77 yards on their first series of the second half to regain the lead — for good.

The drive was led by Hunter, who passed and ran his way to the two. The passes included a 20 yard reception by Moody. From there, the Pirates were penalized for illegal procedure, and brought back to the seven.

Hunter took the snap, and then made an option toss to Willie Lewis who scored, behind the blocking of Moody, around the left side. Instead of settling for the PAT, however, Baker decided to challenge the Pack defense with a two-point conversion. After three delays because of noise, Hunter took the snap, and attempted a pass. The ball was deflected at the line of scrimmage and ruled dead, leaving the score at 19-13.

Following the kickoff, ECU recovered a Tyrone Jackson fumble at the 18-yard line. From the 18, the Pirates lost ground back to the 24. Hunter then took two option keepers around the right side for ten yards apiece, and Simpson powered the ball in two plays later.

"Something of a significance that we have not done in the past years is that we played better in the second half than we did in the first half," Baker said in a press conference after the game. "The defense deserves the credit because they were so much improved. There were three new players in our defensive backfield, and that we were pleased with our recruiting effort this year.

The victory over N.C. State (who lost a one-point heartbreaker in the Peach Bowl to Va. Tech last year) may give the Pirates the incentive they need to take on the Seminoles of Florida State in ECU's home opener Saturday.

Sooners await Heels

Jackson caught three passes for a 31.7 average.

"Last time we played them they threw the ball twice, and we intercepted one of those," he said. North Carolina's main weapons on offense will be senior quarterback Mark Maye and tailback Tonn Dorn, who rushed for 165 yards against Illinois.

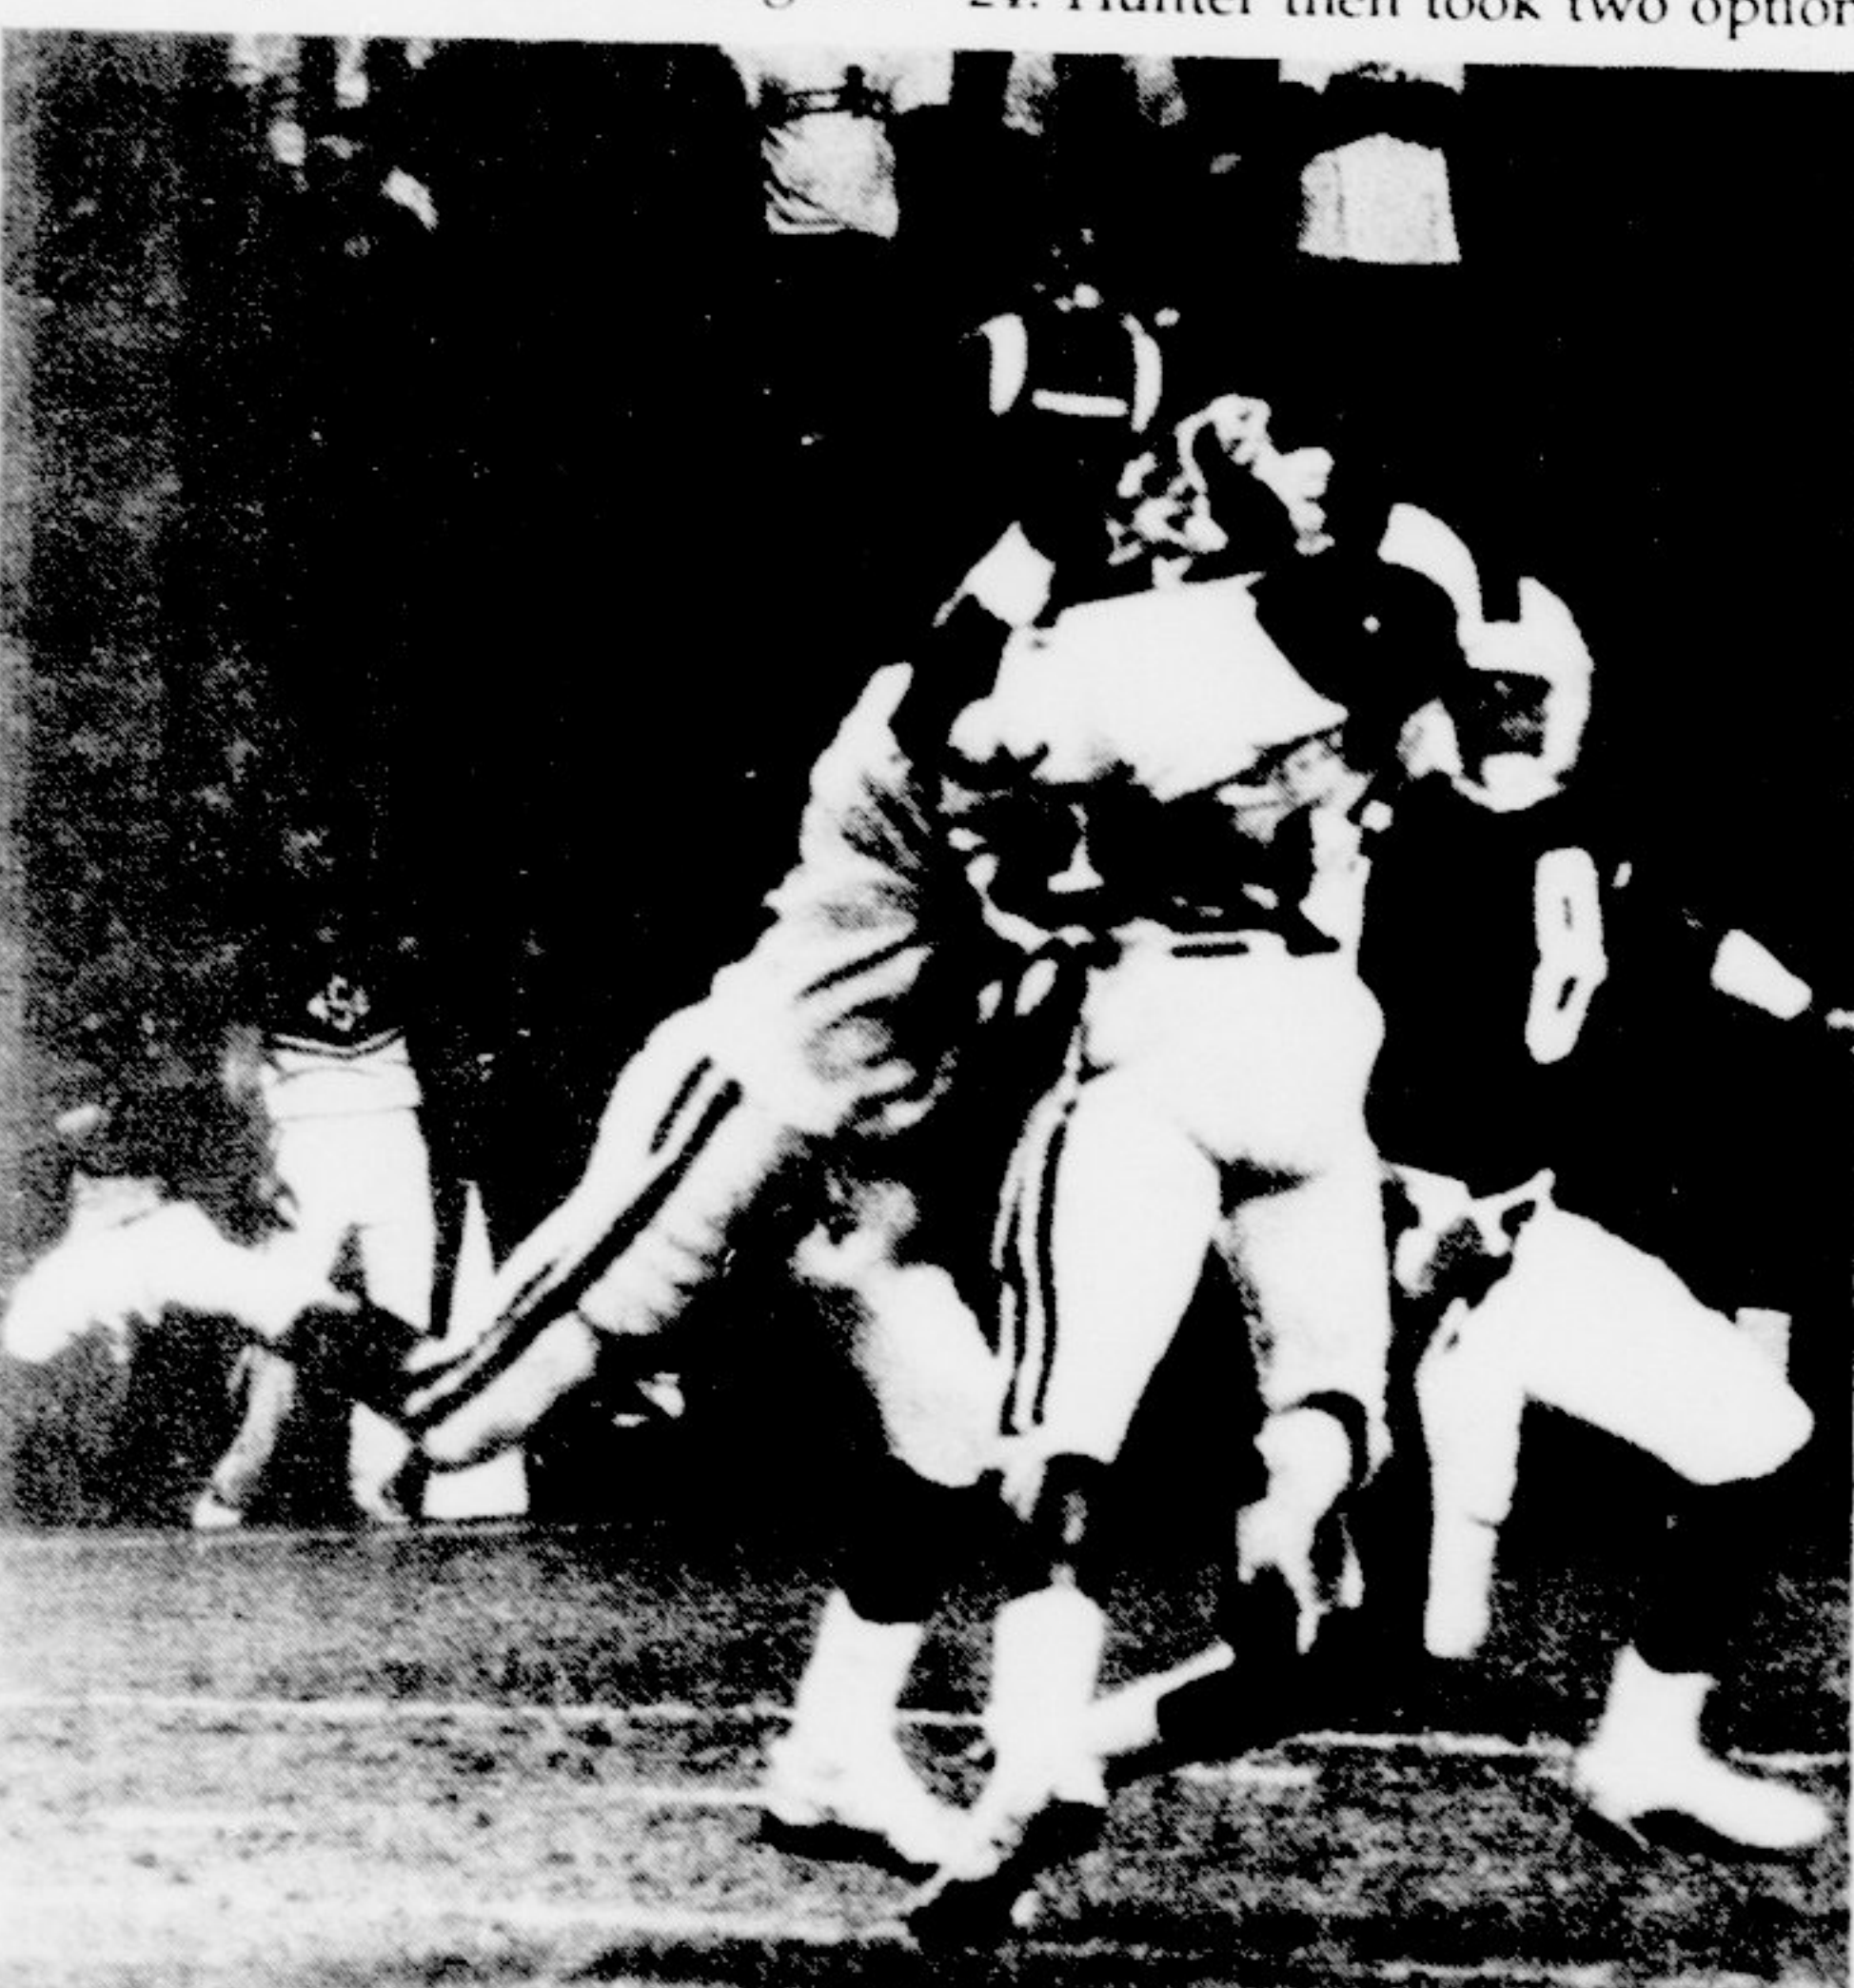

Oklahoma's offensive line, not counting Jackson, averages 280 pounds.

The last time North Carolina played a No. 1 team was the first game of the 1982 season, losing 7-6 to Pittsburgh.

The 2:30 p.m. EST kickoff is a sellout in 75,004-seat Memorial Stadium.

K mart boost

GREENSBORO (AP)—After initially avoiding corporate sponsorship, the Greater Greensboro Open has acquired a title sponsor and a $1 million purse, placing it among the top six purses on the PGA Tour.

The 1988 event will be known as the K mart Greater Greensboro Open and carry a first prize of $180,000. The four-year sponsorship agreement was announced in ceremonies by GGO chairman Mike Solomon.

Financial terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

"This year, it is strictly purse," said Solomon. "All they are doing is supplementing the purse and helping us secure television."

The purse increase puts the GGO in position to negotiate more seriously for a network television contract and a date change. The dates for the 1988 tournament, which celebrates the event's 50th anniversary, already have been set for March 31-April 3. The tournament will be televised on cable by ESPN.

"First and foremost, we consider the longevity of Greater Greensboro," said Sid Wilson, director of operations for the PGA Tour.

"If they were to renege, they would re-consideration. And we change to get them (ment) on their side would go into 1989 with chance."

"A $1 million event hurt. But I want to err on the side of longevity of the tournament, we want to listen to Solomon's side of the story. The PGA Tour dates will come with the negotiations. The earliest a

Maryland's Krivak

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—Having lost to his alma mater in his head coaching debut, Joe Krivak faces another special challenge in Maryland's second game of the season.

When the Terps entertain Virginia in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Saturday, Krivak will be matching wits with George Welsh, his former boss at Navy.

And, as Krivak sees it, Welsh and the Cavaliers have a built-in psychological advantage following Maryland's 25-11 loss to Syracuse in its opener and Virginia's narrow 30-22 loss to 20th-ranked Georgia.

"He'll probably look at our film," Krivak told his weekly news conference Tuesday, "and say, 'Hey, we've got a chance to beat Maryland for the first time in a long time.'"

The Terps have won 15 straight over the Cavaliers since last losing in 1971, and have averaged 38 points a game in the last seven meetings.

But Krivak noted the closeness of a 45-34 victory in 1984 and a 33-21 decision the following year, adding: "I don't think they've been as easy as some people think. There have been some hairy situations."

Krivak even dug into his memory bank to recall that way back in 1974, during his first stint as an assistant with the Terps, a Maryland team anchored by All-American Randy White eased by Virginia only 10-0.

Still, the Terps have been installed as 12-point favorites to bounce back from their inept performance against Syracuse.

While wary of overconfidence, Krivak said: "We can't practice with attitude that we're afraid of losing."

"We're only as good as the preparation we get," he added.

While generally disapproving of Maryland's overall season, Krivak said he was pleased by the lack of offense.

Senior quarterback Krivak said he was passing accuracy from but tempered his remarks by recalling the relentless defense.

"When you're rushed, he said, "it's out of your rhythm."

Krivak said while his offensive linemen and confidence in all 10, he ising three from the start.

K mart boosts GGO purse to $1 million

GREENSBORO (AP)—After initially avoiding corporate sponsorship, the Greater Greensboro Open has acquired a title sponsor and a $1 million purse, placing it among the top six purses on the PGA Tour.

The 1988 event will be known as the K mart Greater Greensboro Open and carry a first prize of $180,000. The four-year sponsorship agreement was announced in ceremonies by GGO chairman Mike Solomon.

Financial terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

The purse increase puts the GGO in position to negotiate more seriously for a network television contract and a date change. The dates for the 1988 tournament, which celebrates the event's 50th anniversary, already have been set for March 31-April 3. The tournament will be televised nationally on cable by ESPN.

"First and foremost, we consider the longevity of the K mart Greater Greensboro Open," said Sid Wilson, director of public relations for the PGA Tour. "I don't say this lightly: We think that the GGO is a premier event."

"If they were to request a date change, they would receive strong consideration. And when you put that with a network asking for a change to get them (the tournament) on their schedule, you would go into 1989 with a definite chance."

"A $1 million event doesn't hurt. But I want to emphasize the longevity of the tournament. With that, we want to listen and try to accommodate."

Solomon said the opportunity to talk with the PGA Tour about new dates will come with the fall negotiations. The earliest a date change could be announced would be December.

The 1987 GGO carried a total purse of $600,000 and a first prize of $108,000, which is second place money for 1988. The GGO purse did not break into six figures until 1966, when it jumped from $70,000 to $100,000.

The Doral Ryder Open, the Tournament Players Championship, the Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational, the International and the Nabisco Championships of Golf also have purses of $1 million or more.

One other tournament, the Greater Milwaukee Open, announced a similar purse increase within the last month, but that jump to $1 million will occur on an incremental basis. The full $1 million purse will not be distributed until the 1990 event.

K mart representatives participated in the 1987 GGO pro-am, and apparently liked what they saw, Solomon said. The initial discussions began in May and the negotiations have been under way since June.

The GGO, which is one of a handful of tournaments that had avoided corporate sponsorship until recently, began the search for a title sponsor last year because of uncertainty of the status of its three primary sponsors. While not threatening to completely withdraw support, each of the three—Piedmont Airlines, Burlington Industries and RJR Nabisco—have been involved in mergers, hostile takeover attempts and other corporate changes.

"And the key point is that the tour had given us some direction on how to improve our own situation," said Solomon. "That occurred in March and television was an important consideration."

The title sponsorship of the GGO is the first venture on the professional golf circuit for K mart, the second largest retailer in the world.

K mart began its involvement in sports marketing during the 1984 Olympic Games. The company has committed about $20 million in television advertising for the 1988 games and is the official sponsor of the U.S. hockey team.

"Over the past few years, K mart's involvement with sports activities has grown steadily, including our recent commitment to the Winter Olympics in Calgary and the summer games in Seoul, Korea," said Gerald Habeck, director of K mart's advertising.

"However, this is the first involvement in an annual event the size and scope of this tournament, which has proven itself as one of the top events on the PGA Tour for the last 50 years," he said.

Maryland's Krivak wants to top old boss

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—Having lost to his alma mater in his head coaching debut, Joe Krivak faces another special challenge in Maryland's second game of the season.

"We're only as good as the preparation we get," he added.

While generally displeased with Maryland's overall effort at Syracuse, Krivak said he was surprised by the lack of intensity on offense.

Senior quarterback Dan Henning, he said, "did not have a good game. He made mistakes he doesn't usually make, but there were some catches that should have been made."

Krivak said he wanted better passing accuracy from Henning, but tempered his remarks when he recalled the relentless Syracuse defense.

"When you're rushed and sacked," he said, "it can take you out of your rhythm."

Krivak said while he used 10 offensive linemen extensively against Syracuse and still had confidence in all 10, he was moving three from the starting lineup: Left tackle Mark Agent, left guard John Rugg, and right tackle John Sorna.
