Job center offers opportunity

News Editor

One hundred twenty-eight businesses and schools will be on campus in October interviewing seniors and graduates through the Job Planning and Placement Center.

This number does not include daily calls the placement center receives from banks, accounting firms, sales firms, etc. who choose not to recruit on campus, but ask to have resumes mailed to them.

The placement center, located in Bloxton House, between Green Dormitory and Mendenhall Student Center, is designed to help students with the job hunting process. Even though helping students find jobs is the main goal of the Placement Center, it offers many job related services.

"We offer a number of job related workshops. Everything from resume and interview workshops to career counseling," said Jim Westmoreland, assistant director. All workshops are offered several times throughout each month.

Illegal ailians enter U.S. via UTEP tunnels

(CPS)—Like most large colleges and universities, the University of Texas at El Paso (UTEP) has an extensive system of underground storm sewers and tunnels.

But unlike most schools, UTEP is not far from the Mexican border. The school's underground tunnels have become a link in the flow of Mexican workers illegally entering the United States looking for jobs.

"Traffic is increasing as the economy in Mexico gets worse, and these people are looking for a

"The center is a service. We're here for those who want to take advantage of the service," said Westmoreland.

He said, "Our emphasis is on jobs as careers, but we also help with part-time and summer employment. In this case, the person we place gets work and interview experience, which is invaluable; but we want to put people into long standing positions."

Westmoreland added the fact more people who register get jobs with companies that do not even recruit on campus. He said they get jobs through companies which call and ask the center to mail qualified resumes, (qualified meaning in a specific field of study).

The placement center also has three "resource rooms". These rooms are there to provide the student with information about the companies coming to campus.

Westmoreland urged everyone graduating in December, May or during the summer to pick-up the registration packet.

better life," Lt. Al Carpio of UTEP's campus police said.

The tunnels are patrolled regularly, Carpio said, and campus police often find undocumented Mexican workers who hide there. The workers are then turned over to El Paso Police or the U.S. Border Patrol.

UTEP police also less frequently find local teenagers using drugs and criminals who sneak through the tunnels and break into campus buildings. Sometimes stolen property is later found in the tunnels, Carpio said.

fill it out and return it. The packet consists of instructions, basic data cards listing job preference and location and three reference forms. Applicants should also include a resume in the returned materials.

Once a student is registered with the Placement Center they begin receiving a job guide, which lists companies and addresses that will be on campus conducting interviews.

He also added the deadline for signups to begin interviewing in October is tomorrow (Friday) at 2 p.m. "People need to register now, or as soon as possible because some companies only come to campus once a semester. Early registration gives an applicant more opportunity," said Westmoreland.

The Placement Center keeps records on file or "active" for 10 years. This means 10 years from the time of graduation, a resume is still being given to perspective employers.

From 70 to 75 percent of students registering through the Placement Center have a job by the September that follows graduation. February and March are primary recruitment months.

Westmoreland said, "The people we see at the beginning of the year are often the ones that end up with jobs at the end of the year."

"I want students to have a knowledgeable and realistic approach to getting a job. We are here to help the student with everything — resumes, proper interview techniques, helping them get to know more about with who they are going interview and most important getting the interview," said Westmoreland.

"Dipping", tough habit to kick

A student recently came by my office to see if I had any information about ways to stop using smokeless tobacco. As we talked, we realized that most of the educational information about chewing and dipping smokeless tobacco focuses on "not starting."

Health Column
By Mary Elesha-Adams

We came up with a beginning list that may be helpful if you're thinking about quitting or are in the process. Smokeless tobacco users absorb more nicotine than cigarette smokers, since it is absorbed into the bloodstream through the gums.

Therefore, you can expect to see some signs of nicotine withdrawal, such as restless nights, headaches, irritability, and upset stomach. Techniques to try include:

Decide in advance when you plan to stop and stick to that date. Let your friends and families know you're planning to quit so they can support you.

Throw away all your smokeless tobacco on the day you quit. Keep very busy - take a walk, exercise or do an activity you don't ordinarily do when you dip or chew.

Chew gum and keep plenty of munchy vegetables around, like celery and carrots. Chewing on a toothpick can also be helpful.

Go to the dentist and have your teeth cleaned. They'll look and feel great.

Drink lots of water and fruit juices.

Get plenty of rest.

Avoid alcohol or other beverages you associate with smokeless tobacco.

Avoid situations you associate with dipping and chewing.

Save the money you would have spent on smokeless tobacco and buy something for yourself.

Why should you think about quitting?

Smokeless tobacco causes dental problems, receding gums, tooth decay, and bad breath. It also decreases your ability to taste or smell. Even more seriously, smokeless tobacco use can cause mouth and throat cancers.

You should watch for the following symptoms:

Sore and red gums

Sore throat

Sores in the mouth that bleed easily or don't heal

Pain when chewing and swallowing food

If you have any of these signs, you should see a health care provider.

The American Cancer Society is working on a brochure about how to stop using smokeless tobacco. I'll let you know when it's available.

Hurricane Helene churns, picks-up power in Atlantic

MIAMI (AP) - Hurricane Helene formed early today in the central Atlantic and forecasters say the ocean's fourth hurricane this year has already begun to strengthen as it churns across open water.

Helene, packing sustained winds of 85 mph, is the first hurricane to form since Gilbert went on a rampage last week through the Caribbean, Mexico and the Texas Gulf Coast.

At 6 a.m. EDT, the center of Helene was located near latitude 12.1 north, longitude 39.3 west, or about 1,450 miles east of the Lesser Antilles, according to an advisory from the National Hurricane Center.

The storm, which registered 75 mph when it became a hurricane early today, was moving west at 15 mph and maintain that course for the next day or two with a good chance for further strengthening, the advisory said.

"Conditions are quite favorable for it to pick up strength, there's nothing to stop it way out there in the middle of the ocean," said Stanley Wright, a meteorologist at the hurricane center. "But it's still way too early to tell if it will get as big as Gilbert."

Meteorologist Randy Las-cody said the path of Helene, the eighth named storm of the Atlantic hurricane season, cannot be projected until it moves closer to the Caribbean.

"It's going across the warmest water of the year now, which is perfect to fuel its growth," Las-cody said. "But it really would be very premature to give a guess on what may happen. It still has along way to go."

Storms that form this month near the Cape Verde Islands off Africa's Hurricane-spawning conditions, forecasters say.

Freshmen

article entitled "Parking - Must Lose Out" (Sept 8, 1988) was indeed one that may cause much controversy among the current freshmen and students here at ECU. As freshmen, we understand that the lack of parking spaces does create many inconveniences for those who are right to drive their cars on campus. And yes, prohibiting freshmen from having cars while attending college does seem like a good solution to the problem. However, the freshmen parking areas are exactly what could be called "inconveniences" for us. The one parking area closest to our dorm does not have sufficient spaces for those of us who have access to it. That only leaves the sides of Ficklen Drive and the parking lot at the Allied Building for the College Hill area to park their cars. We know freshmen our driving privileges would be very limited. Nonetheless, we are willing to use these areas, whereas many older students would not find these parking areas satisfactory and therefore to park their automobiles on campus anyhow.

Even though we are the youngest students on campus, we do have jobs and responsibilities that must be met. Many of us have jobs here in Greenville. Often times, the bus schedules and our personal schedules come into conflict, and there is not always a possible way to avoid a bus ride at the appropriate places. Secondly, many of us need to go home on the weekends whether it be to visit our families and friends, or just to take a break from the pressure. Why should we be deprived of our rights? Going back to the article, "Current Enrollment is Now at-Time High", this should not be a factor in determining any freshmen privileges, for the reason that we are responsible for the overload of students. Hopefully, as sophomore next year, we will be able to cope with the incoming freshmen and understand that the freshmen experience can be quite discouraging. Why should anyone try to make it harder?

Concerned Freshmen,
Tony Deans & Shannon Sullivan

Debate

GREENSBORO (AP) - While the Bush and Dukakis campaign each hope its candidate emerges the victor in the presidential debate Sunday, law enforcement officials hope both come away from North Carolina without a scratch.

Hundreds of officers - from the Wake Forest University security force to the U.S. Secret Service are gearing up this week to make sure they do. "If everything goes smoothly, everyone wins," said Capt. E.L. Yokley, who heads the special operations division of the Winston-Salem Police Department.

Security planning actually began four months ago, long before debate plans were firm, long before law enforcement knew when the candidates would arrive and leave.

More details had jelled Tuesday, as officials from 10 law enforcement and medical agencies met with Secret Service agents in Winston-Salem to discuss security plans. They'll meet again Friday.

Many security details are well-kept secrets. The Secret Service does not say how many agents will be involved, for example. Other law enforcement agencies say they don't know yet how many officers will be involved, what the extra work will cost.

"From the time the candidate arrives to the time he leaves, the route has been planned," said Bruce Garamella, national leader for Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis, the Democratic nominee. "The Secret Service knows when and where he is going to go, and whom he is going to be with."

Dukakis probably will arrive at Smith Reynolds Airport in Winston-Salem early Sunday afternoon. Vice President George

CIA accused of slowing peace in Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration has used the CIA to foment civil unrest in Nicaragua and in the process has damaged efforts at a long-term peace accord between the leftist government and the Contra rebels, House Speaker Jim Wright says.

In a highly unusual disclosure, Wright told reporters Tuesday that the CIA has employed agents covertly in Nicaragua to organize and promote anti-government rallies and protests. Wright, speaking at his regular daily news conference, said Congress has received "clear testimony" that the CIA has sought "to provoke an overreaction" by the Managua government.

Elaborating later in an interview, the speaker added: "Agents of our government have assisted in organizing the kinds of anti-government demonstrations that have been calculated to stimulate and provoke arrests."

Wright said the CIA had made the admission under questioning from members of Congress. Presumably, the disclosure would have come in closed-door oversight sessions of the congressional intelligence committees, most of whose work is classified.

A CIA spokeswoman, Sharon Basso, said, "There isn't anything the agency would say publicly about that to confirm or deny it. We do brief Congress, but wouldn't discuss that publicly."

Wright said he opposed the CIA activity as detrimental to regional peace efforts because it has led to government crackdowns on the opposition and complicated already hostile relations.

"I do not believe it is the proper role of our government to try to provoke riots ... or deliberately to try to antagonize governing officials into foolish overreactions," he said. "We should be using the influence of the United States to encourage the peace process, not discourage it."

But he also said the Sandinista regime was "foolish" to respond to the protests with crackdowns such as the closing of opposition media outlets like the newspaper La Prensa and Radio Catolica, a church-run station.

"I've made that unmistakably clear to the people in Nicaragua. They have to demonstrate their commitment to democratization they have announced" in earlier peace agreements, he said.

Wright said he did not know which specific anti-government actions were due to CIA-sponsored agitation.

But a spokesman for the Senate Intelligence Committee, David Holliday, said the panel was confident that 40 people arrested at a July 10 anti-government demonstration at Nandaima, south of Managua, were not linked to the CIA.

The committee held two days of hearings July 13-14 that included testimony from U.S. Ambassador Richard Melton, who was expelled along with seven other embassy personnel following the Nandaima protest.

"We were satisfied ... there was no U.S. government involvement" in that particular demonstration, Holliday said.

Wright's disclosure raised fears in the Reagan administration that the Sandinistas might take the comment as evidence that the jailed protesters were CIA-sponsored subversives, according to an administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

SOUTH ROXANA, Ill. (AP) — An 8-year-old boy with AIDS-related symptoms, whose family fled one city after protests over his admittance to school, dreads another struggle because "the up people are going to be back," his mother says.

"Our big problem right now is that we just want to be a normal family," Jason Robertson's mother, Tammie, said Tuesday. "We don't want to be in the spotlight. I don't want to be a rights activist."

"All I want to be is a housewife," Mrs. Robertson said. "My kids want to be a mother. Jason's family left the St. Louis suburb of Granite City, about 10 miles south of here, last month saying they'd been harassed by their efforts to enroll him in regular classes there."

Last week, as many as a dozen parents began picketing South Roxana Elementary School in this town of 2,000 to protest his admission.

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has obtained a letter from a Republican presidential candidate George Bush pledging he would not support a tax increase on cigarettes.

David Sandor, a spokesman for Bush, said the pledge was nothing new given Bush's well-publicized opposition to tax increases of any kind.

"I don't think it's a big mystery to the people of North Carolina what the vice president's position on taxes is," Sandor said. The Winston-Salem Journal.

The letter states that Bush's position is in sharp contrast to that of his opponent, Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, who raised taxes, including cigarette taxes, by over $100 million a year alone. But a spokesman for Dukakis said that he would support raising cigarette taxes if he were elected.

Child harassed for having AIDS

SOUTH ROXANA, Ill. (AP) - An 8-year-old boy with AIDS-related symptoms, whose family fled one city after protests over his admittance to school, dreads another struggle because "the ugly people are going to be back," his mother says.

"Our big problem right now is that we just want to be a normal family," Jason Robertson's mother, Tammie, said Tuesday. "We don't want to be in the spotlight. I don't want to be a civil rights activist."

"All I want to be is a housewife," Mrs. Robertson said. "All my kids want is a mother." Jason's family left the St. Louis suburb of Granite City, about 15 miles south of here, last month, saying they'd been harassed for their efforts to enroll him in regular classes there.

Last week, as many as two dozen parents began picketing South Roxana Elementary School in this town of 2,000 to protest Jason's application for admission, which officials are considering.

At Tuesday's protest, parents carried hand-lettered signs reading "AIDS Kills" and "Help Keep AIDS Out of Our Schools."

"If that kid comes here, my daughter will go to a private school," Roseann Hayes said in an interview. Charles Conner, superintendent of Roxana's schools said the objections to Jason's attendance come mainly from "a minority group of parents ... in need of further education" about AIDS.

The boy became infected with the AIDS virus after a transfusion of tainted blood products to treat his hemophilia.

Jason has AIDS-related complex, a disease that often precedes full-blown acquired immune deficiency syndrome. AIDS cripples the body's defenses against disease, leaving the victim prey to infections and cancer.

The disease is spread through sexual contact, needles or syringes shared by drug abusers, infected blood or blood products, and from pregnant women to their offspring. It cannot be spread casually.

Because of his illness, Jason was the lone first-grade student in a trailer on the Granite City school grounds through most of last school year.

His isolation ended in May, when U.S. District Judge James L. Foreman ordered Jason back in the classroom with his peers. But the ruling did not end the protests, and the family fled Granite City.

Mrs. Robertson said the family has been left alone in their new home except for a recent harassing phone call to her mother-in-law telling her to keep Jason out of school.

The boy hasn't attended school since it began Aug. 29. His mother said he's eager to be back in class, but dreads further protests over his attendance.

"He said, 'Oh brother, not that again. We're going to have to go back to court again - the ugly people are going to be back,'" Mrs. Robertson said.

Despite the protests, Mrs. Robertson said she's glad the family relocated, and that they have received support from neighbors, churches and a county AIDS-support group.

"My daughter plays with him (Jason)," said Fredia Shimchick. School children "are not going to be using his toothbrush. They're not going to be having sex with him. They're going to be sitting in a classroom with him. So what's the harm?"

Conner said a review group, including himself, a school nurse and a doctor, will decide Thursday night on Jason's placement.

Bush will not support tax

RALEIGH (AP) - Gov. Jim Martin has obtained a letter from Republican presidential candidate George Bush pledging that he would not support a tax hike on cigarettes.

David Sandor, a spokesman for Bush, said the pledge was nothing new given Bush's well-publicized opposition to tax increases of any kind.

"I don't think it's a big mystery to the people of North Carolina what the vice president's position on taxes is," Sandor told The Winston-Salem Journal.

The letter states that Bush's position is in sharp contrast to that of his opponent, Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, "who raised taxes, including cigarette taxes, by over $100 million this year alone." But a spokesman for Dukakis said that he wouldn't support raising cigarette taxes if he were elected.

Tim Pittman, the press secretary for Martin's campaign, said that Martin wants to "get the word out to tobacco growers that George Bush is opposed to raising federal excise taxes, or any taxes on tobacco."

On Aug. 5, Pittman said, Martin sent Bush a letter telling him that many tobacco growers were concerned about the fate of the state's tobacco economy if the next administration decided to raise the excise tax on cigarettes.

"I would like to reassure North Carolina's tobacco farmers that you oppose any increase in federal excise taxes on cigarettes," Martin wrote.

"I have always known you to be a fearless man who is willing to say where he stands on tough issues. A commitment from you to oppose an increase in federal excise taxes on cigarettes would send a message to North Carolina tobacco farmers."

In his reply, which is dated Sept. 6, Bush restates his belief that tax increases would "damage our economic recovery" and put millions of new jobs at risk.

"I am strongly opposed to any increase in excise taxes, including those on tobacco or cigarettes," he wrote.

The federal excise tax, which increased from 8 cents to 16 cents per pack in 1983, does not apply to unprocessed tobacco. It is levied only on the finished products, such as cigarettes, cigars and chewing tobacco.

Victoria Rideout, deputy issues director for the Dukakis campaign, said Dukakis would support a tax increase only as a last resort, after doing everything possible to cut spending and collect unpaid taxes.

Lottery winner is Raleigh resident

DANVILLE, Va. (AP) - You can bet that Early Graham of Raleigh is glad that he drove to Virginia to pick up a few lottery tickets on the first day of sales there. He has $5,000 coming to him for his efforts.

"The second one he scratched was it," said Steve A. Powell, owner of the S&J Grocery in Cluster Springs, Va., where Graham bought 10 tickets Tuesday morning. "It didn't seem to bother him. I was jumping up and down."

"I just kind of looked at it," Graham said later Tuesday as he sat in the kitchen of his South Raleigh apartment. "I wasn't sure it was right."

Graham's winning ticket was one of 35 verified winners of $5,000 Tuesday. Graham told The News and Observer of Raleigh he would buy a special dinner and maybe pay some bills with the money.

Like Graham, Fred Elliott wasn't afraid to cross the state line to take a chance on Virginia's new lottery. But he planned to take nothing but his winnings - if any - home to North Carolina.

"I believe I'll be coming here quite often. If I have good luck I'll play even more," the Reidsville, N.C., resident said as he began scratching numbers on the first of his 15 tickets.

"Still, I'll destroy my results before I go home," Elliott added, a reference to warnings from North Carolina officials that Tar Heels might be taking a legal chance as well as a financial one by participating in the Virginia lottery.

In North Carolina, possessing a lottery ticket is a misdemeanor and carries a maximum $2,000 fine and six months in prison. State officials say the law will be enforced.

PTL employee says Bakker made advances

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - A former PTL official said Tuesday he told a federal grand jury he had sex with Jim Bakker, the television ministry's founder.

Jay Babcock, PTL's former director of creative television, said he gave the information to the grand jury meeting in Charlotte after being asked questions apparently designed to determine whether ministry money, much of which comes from tax-deductible donations, was paid for sexual favors.

Babcock is the first man to publicly acknowledge telling the grand jury of a sexual encounter with Bakker.

Calls by The Associated Press to Bakker's phone number in Fort Mill, S.C., went unanswered Tuesday night.

In August, Bakker denied under oath that he had ever had a homosexual relationship.

Told by a reporter Tuesday outside the federal courthouse that Bakker had denied ever having a homosexual relationship with anyone, Babcock replied: "I'm saying he's a liar."

Babcock had told reporters Monday that he expected to be questioned by prosecutors about "whether I had sex with the boss."

On Tuesday, after testifying much of the afternoon, Babcock was asked by a reporter, "What did you say regarding sex with Jim Bakker?"

His response: "I commented that 'Yes, it happened - a long time ago.'"

Babcock said prosecutors also wanted to know about the circumstances surrounding that sex. "I'm not willing to talk about those," he told reporters.

Babcock also told reporters that prosecutors asked him whether Bakker and his personal aide, David Taggart, had had a sexual relationship.

"I have no first-hand knowledge of that," Babcock said.

PTL records show that Taggart drew more than $620,000 from PTL in a 15-month period that ended in March 1987, the month Bakker resigned as PTL's president after acknowledging that he had a 1980 sexual encounter with Jessica Hahn and that money had been paid to silence her.

The grand jury probe, now in its second year, is focusing on whether Bakker and other ministry leaders violated federal laws

But that didn't stop Sonny Locklear from driving his 1955 Chevy 40 miles from Greensboro to Danville for a fill-up and $150 in lottery tickets.

"People are going to come here to buy them (lottery tickets)," he said. "I know hundreds of people who will come up from North Carolina to buy them."

Still, a number of buyers from south of the state line expressed concerns about possibly breaking the law.

"I'm from North Carolina. I heard if we're caught playing it we could get in trouble," said Roger Meeks, of nearby Pelham, N.C. "I don't want to find out the hard way."

The legal posturing by N.C. officials irked some ticket buyers. "What concerns me is why can't I do what I want with my own money?" said a schoolteacher from Greensboro who also declined to give her name. "I could be somewhere shooting up (drugs) or buying crack. That would be much more detrimental."

The woman said she bought five tickets. "I may buy 100 before I leave today," she said.

Initially, only scratch cards will be sold. Each $1 card has six boxes covered with latex paint. To win $2 to $5,000, a player has to match three numbers. After six weeks, the maximum payoff doubles.

Ed Gregory, owner of Ed's Stop & Go convenience store in Danville, said he sold more than 1,000 tickets in three hours Tuesday morning.

To collect winnings over $50, tickets must be mailed to the lottery department in Richmond. Even North Carolina officials admit it can be done from a Virginia mail box.

by raising money through the mails or on television for one purpose and then spending it for another.

Bakker was dismissed from the ministry by his Pentecostal denomination, the Assemblies of God, in May 1987 for unbecoming conduct related to his sexual encounter with Ms. Hahn and because of "alleged misconduct involving bisexual activity."

In May 1987, the Rev. Jerry Falwell, whom Bakker had invited to take over PTL, said Gary Smith, PTL's former general manager, was the target of one of Bakker's alleged homosexual advances.

Smith testified before the grand jury for about six hours Monday but refused to discuss what he said. He acknowledged, however, that the subject of homosexuality was discussed.

John Wesley Fletcher, the evangelist who introduced Ms. Hahn to Bakker, testified for about three hours Tuesday. He also refused to tell reporters what happened inside the grand jury room.

Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) - Soldiers sacked their commanders and workers struck state-run companies, ripping apart a boss's home in one instance, as Haitians released pent-up rage at three decades of authoritarian rule.

Violence and sporadic gunfire continued throughout the capital today, four days after soldiers toppled the regime of Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

Radio reports said troops were removing more and more commanders and reprisal killings and spontaneous street demonstrations were on the rise.

"I'm afraid we're on the edge of another insurrection," a government official said privately.

Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril, who declared himself president Sunday after lower ranking soldiers staged the coup, tried to end the unrest Tuesday by appointing new armed forces chief and announcing the retirement of eight generals.

Radio stations said the revolt in the 7,000-member army spread because Avril had fired commanders the army identified with the corruption and repression of the governments of Namphy, Leslie Manigat and Jean-Claude Duvalier.

"We will chase out of the army all supporters of Namphy Manigat and Duvalier," said a policeman at a station in downtown Port-au-Prince where soldiers removed their commander. The army runs the police in Haiti.

Soldiers broadcasting from radio stations Tuesday - something unheard of before the coup - said they identified themselves with the downtrodden, this impoverished Caribbean nation.

Soldiers kill on strike in Lebanon

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israeli troops killed one Palestinian, wounded 24 in the occupied West Bank today, Arab sources said, as residents observed a general strike mark a massacre of Palestinian Lebanon six years ago.

Today also was the 10th anniversary of the signing of the Camp David accords which called for Palestinian self-rule in the occupied lands and paved the way for the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty of March 1979.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir issued a statement on the occasion saying: "These agreements marked a turning point in the history of the Middle East. They prove that it's possible to achieve peace between Israel and its neighbors, that the hatred which prevails is not eternal."

Underground leaders of the Palestinian uprising called for a general strike to mark the massacre of hundreds of Palestinians in Beirut's Sabra and Chatila refugee camps by Israeli-backed Christian militiamen in September 1982. The strike turned violent in several towns and villages.

In Jenin, dozens of Palestinians blocked the road with stones, burning tires and threw rocks at passing military vehicles, an reporter said.

Troops opened fire with machine guns and tear gas.

Haiti under siege

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Soldiers sacked their commanders and workers struck state-run companies, ripping apart a boss's home in one instance, as Haitians released pent-up rage at three decades of authoritarian rule.

Radio stations said the revolt in the 7,000-member army spread because Avril had not fired commanders the soldiers identified with the corruption and repression of the governments of Namphy, Leslie Manigat and Jean-Claude Duvalier.

"We will chase out of the army all supporters of Namphy, Manigat and Duvalier," said a policeman at a station in downtown Port-au-Prince where soldiers removed their commander. The army runs the police in Haiti.

Soldiers broadcasting from radio stations Tuesday — something unheard of before the coup — said they identified themselves with the downtrodden of this impoverished Caribbean nation.

Several repeated on the air: "The army is the people, and people are the army!"

The coup leaders have demanded that Avril reorganize the military and institute democratic reforms including free elections, which Haiti has not had for 31 years. On Nov. 29, armed thugs killed more than 30 people at polling stations in thwarting independently run elections.

Just after midnight, the government appealed on nationwide television for the cancellation of a demonstration called for later today in support of the mutinying officers.

On Tuesday, workers at the state-owned electricity company, port authority and flour mill went on strike to force the removal of their managers, radio stations said.

Workers looted and tore apart by hand the house of Jean-Claude Souriac, head of the electricity company, while two armed soldiers stood by, witnesses said. The flour mill manager also was removed, radio stations said.

The managers' fates were not known. Radio stations said gunmen killed four people in apparent reprisal for atrocities linked to Namphy's government including the Sept. 11 massacre of 13 people during a Mass celebrated by a politically active Roman Catholic priest.

Ten other people have been reported killed since the coup, which sent Namphy into exile to the neighboring Dominican Republic.

Port-au-Prince Mayor Franck Romain, accused of ordering opposition leaders killed, took refuge in the Dominican Embassy.

On state television Tuesday night, the government announced in a communique that it had retired eight generals, including Maj. Gen. Williams Regala, who was ousted as interior and defense minister after the coup and has not been seen since, and Brig. Gen. Carl Michel Nichols, former army chief of staff.

The communique said four officers were promoted. Earlier, radio stations said mutinying soldiers had ousted the commanders of the navy, port and airport security, the crack 300-man Leopards Battalion, and the Artibonite Department, a region north of Port-au-Prince.

Avril said Tuesday he was aware of "numerous problems" within the armed forces, but urged his troops "to stay calm." At a ceremony outside the National Palace, he appointed a new armed forces commander-in-chief, Maj. Gen. Herard Abraham, who was foreign minister under Namphy.

Namphy led a junta that ran Haiti for most of the two-and-a-half years since street demonstrations forced Duvalier into exile in February 1986.

Duvalier and his father, Francois, had ruled Haiti since 1957.

Prosecutors reaping benefits of articles seized in drug cases

WOODBURY, N.J. (AP) - Some New Jersey law enforcement authorities drive flashy, pricey vehicles seized in drug cases, but the state attorney general doesn't think prosecutors should be behind the wheels of Porsches or Mercedes.

Attorney General Cary Edwards is reviewing regulations on the use of confiscated vehicles and may revise them, spokesman John Hagerty said Tuesday.

"The attorney general's position is that these vehicles should be sold as quickly as possible," said Hagerty. "In the interim, if they need to utilize them for investigative purposes -- fine."

For the past two months, Gloucester County Prosecutor Richard E. Hickey III has been driving a gray 1984 Porsche 928 seized in a drug case.

"With seized vehicles, the actual cost to the taxpayer is greatly reduced from going out and buying one," said Hickey.

Burlington County Prosecutor Stephen G.G. Raymond said seizing vehicles sends a strong message to drug dealers.

"It's a real deterrent to the criminals themselves when they get their cars taken away from them," Raymond said. "It's nice when you have the criminals financing a portion of what we do."

Raymond this year traded in a confiscated Datsun 280Z he'd been driving for a county vehicle, but about 10 seized vehicles remain in use, mainly in undercover work by the county's narcotics unit, he said.

"You can't buy drugs out of a cop car," Raymond said.

Hickey and Raymond said most of the flashy confiscated cars are sold at county auctions.

"In most cases, when we deal with the more expensive vehicles ... we'll sell those because with the dollars brought from the sales, we can end up buying two cars," Hickey said. "The maintenance on some of these vehicles is so darn expensive that we don't want to keep them."

Hickey's county has not yet been granted title to the Porsche, and the car may not be sold until next year, he said. "We couldn't sell it right now if we wanted to."

It can take up to a year for a court to grant a prosecutor's motion to forfeit a seized car.

"To let a car like that sit for a year or better is going to lessen the value of that car," said Hickey. "This vehicle costs the county $75 -- the filing fee for the forfeiture."

In Atlantic County - which includes Atlantic City - a handful of vans, Jeeps and several Oldsmobiles seized in drug cases are being used by undercover detectives, said Prosecutor Jeffrey S. Blitz.

Blitz, who drives a 1988 county-purchased Chevy Caprice, said he does not oppose the use of seized vehicles by other prosecutors.

Budget solution offered

WASHINGTON (AP) - Out of the glare of the presidential campaign, a bipartisan commission is quietly crafting a proposed solution to the federal budget deficit that would include cuts in Social Security and defense spending as well as possible increases in consumption taxes.

That is the word from Democrat Robert Strauss, who is co-chairman of the 12-member commission along with Republican Drew Lewis.

Strauss provided a tantalizing glimpse Tuesday of what options the panel is considering recommending to the new president. The panel, concerned about becoming embroiled in the presidential campaign, has purposely kept out of the public eye since July.

Strauss indicated that work has been going on behind the scenes and he said the commission will resume holding public hearings immediately after the Nov. 8 election. The commission would like to finish its work by Dec. 21.

The commission, which is split evenly between Democrats and Republicans, was created by Congress last year in an attempt to break the the impasse created by President Reagan's refusal to increase taxes and the refusal of the democra-controlled Congress to cut government spending enough to bring the deficit under control.

Strauss said the group probably will recommend a four- or five-year plan to eliminate the deficit, which this year is expected to total about $152 billion. Social Security benefits, Medicare and other entitlement programs and defense spending will have to be cut, Strauss said, since they account for 68 percent of total spending.

Strauss said the commission was aware of the political firestorm likely to be triggered by such suggestions. "That means you are withholding money from the sick, the elderly and the defense of the nation," he said.

Strauss said top priority will be given to spending cuts and only after they are exhausted would the commission look at possible tax increases as a way of balancing the budget.

His comments marked the most detailed discussion yet of where the commission is headed. The panel has been criticized for not holding public meetings in the past several months, opting instead to hold informal discussions with less than a quorum present in order to avoid requirements of the Government in the Sunshine Law.

But Strauss defended this approach, saying the commission's chances of success would be doomed if the presidential candidates were forced to take a stand now on every proposal the panel was considering.

Democrat Michael Dukakis has indicated a willingness to listen to the group's recommendations, but Republican George Bush has vowed to ignore any calls for a tax increase.

On the revenue side, Strauss said the commission was examining boosting so-called sin taxes such as federal levies on cigarettes and alcohol. Strauss said that other types of consumption taxes also would be considered. Strauss' comments came during a two-day conference on the economic problems which will face the next president.

Dane captures America with photographs

By JIM SHAMLIN
Staff Writer

Jacobi Holdt, a Dane, came to the United States in the mid-1970's with fourty dollars and a small camera. Beginning in Canada, he went through North America on his way to Latin America, but never quite made it. "I got to this country and immediately fell in love with it," he said.

He saw many things, about which he wrote home, and about which his parents did not believe. So they sent him a camera, and asked him to send pictures home. In the five years that followed, he roamed the continental United States taking over 15,000 photographs.

"I had the luck," he said "of living with a black family in southside Chicago. The first people I was afraid of," he later stated, "were whites."

So he roamed the country, living as he could. He worked in cotton fields and tomato farms, he hitchhiked over 118,000 miles, lived in over 400 homes, and sold his blood plasma to buy film for his camera. He lived in places in which the level of poverty is astounding, places which most Americans have never seen.

When asked if he was afraid to go some of the places he's gone, he simply stated, "You can walk around safely in a ghetto." After five years of wandering he combined his best work into a presentation called American Pictures.

He personally presented the first part of this presentation, which focuses on the south, at Hendrix Theater Tuesday. The event, sponsored by the Student Union Minority Arts Committee, was free to students.

Though Holdt himself is not a member of a minority (as a Dane, he's about as Anglo-Saxon as one could possibly be), the presentation focused on the people with whom he lived: the impoverished American blacks. It began with the slave trade and followed the progress of blacks until the present.

The presentation also dealt with poor whites, and the upper class, scenes of which were mainly used in contrast to the desperate situation of the impoverished blacks. It included scenes from the Vietnam protests, from a Klu Klux Klan rally, and modern-day slave camps in the southern United States. It touched briefly upon every segment of American Culture and its relation to his subject.

"I hope the show," he said in his introduction, "will bring us all together in a creative debate about the problems (of racism)." The program was objective, showing the problems of racism and the way it is destroying the nation. "If you, as a society, cannot use the full potential of the people," he said, "you will fall behind other societies."

The program did not give an answer. In fact, when asked for the answer to the problem of racism after the program, he said, "I would not tell you to do anything." The answer, he said, was not a simple one. He proposed only we, as a society, begin by ceasing our archaic oppressive habits; "Once a system of oppression has been set up," he stated, "It will be continued among the members of the oppressed."

Why, then, does he choose to present his "show" to upper-middle class college students, a predominately white audience, rather than poor and oppressed, who are the only ones with the power to change their ritualistic patterns of counterproductive behavior, or to the active racists? "The Klan has no power," Holdt said, "But we, who get an education can keep them out of jobs."

The problem was not attributed solely to racism. He gave examples of "white trash", people also caught in the rut of their caste, and of Costa Rica, where the upper class is predominated by blacks who oppress the impoverished whites. And though he defined the cause of poverty upon our adherence to a "Master-slave—relationship," his main focus was on the senseless oppression of the lower class and the ways through which they are manipulated, and forced to remain poor, by the upper castes of society.

Nor was the program simply a knout with which he could beat guilt into the minds of whites. The program clearly states, "for blacks, the show has been a positive experience in terms of better understanding the impact if internalized racism."

Lastly, the show was assembled with a conscious effort to offend some viewers. The program refers to it as a "biased show," and states in bold letters "THE 'SHOW' IS OPPRESSION, NOT ENTERTAINMENT!" Holdt further said that, "The idea of the show is to put you through a reverse oppression."

About the Greenville area, Holdt said, "I know this place very well." He spent some time here on last trek. Some of his pictures were taken in Greenville, Washington, Bethel, and other sites in eastern North Carolina.

Since time limited him to showing only the first half of his presentation (The second part deals specifically with the north, and he likes to follow it up with a three-hour seminar), he repeatedly stated a desire to return to ECU, so that he may show the entire presentation and conduct the seminar.

If, in the future, the Minority Arts Committee can find the resources to finance Holdt's return, students would benefit from seeing his show and attending the seminar. It has been shown at many major universities, some of which, Holdt said, require all freshmen to attend. It is an important presentation for anyone who considers himself educated, especially if he does not consider himself a racist.

While roaming around the U.S., Danish photographer Jacobi Holdt caught a piece of Americana, the rich, the poor, the desolate, the KKK, in 15,000 pictures. Holdt held his side show exhibit, which included this photo, Tuesday at Mendenhall.

New Superman comic needs super writer

By CHIPPY BONEHEAD

Legion of Super Critics

Faster than a movie can bomb out in a box office! More powerful than 35 years of mishandling! Able to come back more times than Cher!

It's a bird! It's a plane! It's ... the new Superman cartoon!

It wasn't as bad as I expected, but it wasn't as good as I'd hoped. The new "Superman" on Saturday mornings at 8:30 a.m. had its problems, and it won't get anywhere near as popular as that disgusting Muscle Mouse or whatever his name is, but the Man of Steel is back ... one more time.

And if he's going to make it this time, the first thing that needs to be done is get him out of that Kryptonite time slot. Only the most devoted super fans will wake up, down some Advil® and sit through 30 minutes of bad dialogue.

One of the reasons Pee-Wee and his Playhouse got so hip is because it comes on at a time when most college students begin recuperating from Friday night, and that's the time of day you most need a laugh.

Also, "Superman" is directly opposite the first 30 minutes of Disney's new "Winnie the Pooh" series. The short I saw on the "Pooh" show where Tigger lost his stripes and no one knew who he was, was lots funnier than Lois Lane telling a robot to "Scat! Go bother somebody else."

You'd think after four movies, three cartoon series (if you count "Super Friends"), a live action TV show, a Time magazine cover and the longest running comic book in history that someone would understand how to bring the Kryptonian Crime-fighter to life on the small screen.

A major problem with the new show is who's writing it. Marv Wolfman, who writes one of Superman's comics and also "The New Teen Titans," is not the best choice to scribe these cartoons. Wolfman belongs to the Chris Claremont school of writing comic books — make the characters as one-dimensional and pathetic as possible.

Nobody needs pathos on Saturday morning. Even Wolfman understands that. So instead, he writes cheesy dialogue, worthless plots and Jimmy Olsen on a skateboard.

In the first episode, "Destroy the Defendroids," Lex Luthor builds robots to defend Metropolis, making Superman feel useless. Supes leaves town, robots attempt to steal a gold shipment, Superman pops back up and saves the day. Bleagh.

While visually the show is pretty good (great facial expressions, Japanese-style explosions and lasers and a lot of attention paid to shadows and shading) this kind of writing drags it down to the level of almost unwatchable.

Also, why did every crook, policeman and innocent bystander have a laser instead of a plain old handgun? I felt like I was watching "G.I. Joe."

Surprisingly, Wolfman kept some of the renovations the comic made in the last two years. Clark Kent isn't a total wimp, Luthor wears a kryptonite ring to prevent being arrested, Jimmy Olsen doesn't wear a bowtie. (Where did the skateboard come from?)

Cartoonist Barks shines in Uncle Scrooge

By MICAH HARRIS
Staff Writer

Walt Disney's Uncle Scrooge: His Life and Times, by Carl Barks (Celestial Arts, $34.95).

Carl Barks has long been unrecognized by the public at large for his comic book stories featuring Walt Disney's Donald Duck, his nephew's Huey, Dewey, and Louie and Barks' own creation, Uncle Scrooge McDuck.

This is partly because of the inane, particular American bias of comics as ghetto reading for sub-literates and also because of the Disney Studio's policy of anonymity which insists the Walt Disney's name be signed to comics featuring characters and not the name of the actual artist.

Unmindful of his obscurity, Barks poured integrity into not only his artwork but story content. What could have been forgettable hackwork became instead pieces of Americana.

Barks' integrity shone through so that his unsigned work bore a signature clearly distinct from the other Disney duck artists.

Barks has been recognized by a circle of fans for some time now, but the finest monument to be erected to him is the massive "Scrooge McDuck: His Life and Times." Originally released in the early '80's as a limited edition by publisher Gary Kurtz (producer of "Star Wars"), the book is now available in a trade soft back.

Fittingly, Barks' own creation, Uncle Scrooge, is the focal point of this book. In a twist, Disney's animated version of the character was based on the comic book version. Before the current "Duck Tales" series (now airing on Channel 9 in Greenville), Scrooge's animated appearances were sparse: "Scrooge McDuck and Money" (1967) and "Mickey's Christmas Carol" (1983).

The selection of the Uncle Scrooge stories, contained herein was gleaned from several decades worth of stories. The chosen material was reshot and the original flat comic book colors replaced by extensive hand and air brush work by fantasy illustrator, Peter Ledger. The result is that each page is a fully rendered painting.

Ledger's brush has enhanced Barks' detailed art to the nth degree which his work has always deserved: underground lakes shimmer, candles radiate auras, ponds reflect, and Scrooge's giant moneybin glints in the sunshine.

An incredible variety of color effects are allowed by the scope of the stories. Barks took Scrooge, Donald, and their nephews around the world and into outer spaces. Barks was a meticulous researcher, modeling exotic settings on those actually existing.

The power of his rendering comes through as never before not only by the better coloring but also the size of the larger pages which allow for a better sense of scale: scenes of a plane gyring toward a Shangri-La nestled at the bottom of towering mountains, a horde of Lemming's car-

To move or not to move Halloween

By CHIPPY BONEHEAD

Staff Activist

"Those who pry in God's business eventually go mad."—my English teacher.

I'll take my chances.

This year, Halloween falls on a Monday. Not the best of times to go out, dress up, beg for candy and wade downtown to get drunk and see how long your costume lasts. Especially with classes on Tuesday.

That's why we at The East Carolinian are spearheading the effort to get our traditional downtown Halloween celebration pushed back to Saturday the 29. Sure, it's not a very scary day, but there are a lot of arguments for this.

1) More of our collegiate brethren would be able to attend. Sure, the folks from Pitt Community and Atlantic Christian can make it on Monday, but only the hardcore partiers from Duke, Carolina, Campbell, Appalachian etc. will make a Monday road trip.

This IS the party ECU is most famous for, and while we don't want that to be our only claim to fame, it has become a North Carolina tradition. Plus, think of all the alcohol that will sit unopened on the shelves since there won't be the massive crowds of yore.

2) 8 a.m. Tuesday classes will be empty. Professors might as well cancel classes now, but you know they won't, and everyone will get an unexcused absence.

3) Think of all the older Greenville residents. They're used to noisy Saturday nights. A massive Monday party could throw their metabolism off permanently.

And think of all the adults who'll be late for work Tuesday, simply because Fifth Street was a veritable riverbed of beer cans. They might all lose their jobs.

4) God wants it to be on Saturday.

5) I want it to be on Saturday. What's the use of being a famous columnist if you can't use your clout for a worthy cause? Saturday is much more convenient for me personally, and this aggravating little village owes me this little favor.

This ... plot of land that dares call itself a town ... has almost given me an ulcer with its cultural deficiencies. No decent nightlife, rednecks everywhere, rain almost hourly, nothing you can honestly call a shopping mall—I'm sick of it. Changing the date of the Halloween party is the very least it could do to begin appeasing me.

A statue in the middle of campus would be nice, but that's another column.

6) Monday is a tacky day to party anyway. For reasons of sheer aesthetics, the celebration should be moved to Saturday. Close downtown on a Monday ... the very concept is appalling.

7) Only inexperienced frat boys party on Mondays.

8) No one ever wrote a song about "Rainy Days and Saturdays" did they? No, of course not and I'll tell you why. Saturdays are non-stress days. You have a whole other day before you have to go back to school and you're well rested from the week.

Saturday is the best day of the week. Mondays suck, that's all there is to it and it's hard enough to psych yourself up for school on Mondays, let alone the party of the year.

9) If we protest this thing, we get to make a bunch of cardboard signs saying, "HELL, NO WE WON'T PARTY ON MONDAY!" and other revolutionary jargon. We can march around and picket Campus Security. Imagine Mayor Carter's face when we have a sit-in on his front yard.

10) No one will have to go to church Sunday. Nobody expects you to show up in a house of worship if you're hung over. You'll have a great excuse not to say all those "Hail Mary's."

11) Statistically, the squirrel man kills more people on Monday nights than any other time. Surely the good authorities of the Emerald City don't want their

Uncle Scrooge embodies capitalism ethic

peting a beautifully lit Norwegian valley stretching toward the sea, and the vast caverns honey-combing the earth are breath-taking examples.

The stories themselves, no matter how colorful they are, have a sober undertone. Uncle Scrooge embodies capitalism and the protestant work ethic. But he is not a mere caricature. He is greedy and selfish, but as Mike Barrier points out in his introductory essay, "Scrooge" worked like a Trojan for every dime he owned. Thus he could be forgiven his ferocious determination to keep every dime he owned."

Scrooge's lack of charity, while understandable, is not presented by Barks as right. Although Scrooge believes the American ethic that hard work should be rewarded, what he really believes is that his hard work should be rewarded. He is constantly refusing to pay Donald and his nephews the actual worth of their services to him.

(Although, in Scrooge's defense, I must point out that he never treats them dishonestly. He promises Huey, Dewey and Louie a "chunk of gold three feet around and six inches thick" in return for a lost locket. They deliver, and so does he: a hunk of cheese, gold-in-color-all the way through).

Perspective on Scrooge's fetish on money (he observes a virtual pagan orgy of "diving in it like a porpoise, burrowing through it like a gopher, and tossing it up and letting it hit him on the head") is provided by Huey, Dewey, and Louie. Their selfishness combines with a sense of frugality and adventure already the rival of their uncle's marks them as much more mature than the older Scrooge who by contrast is often childlike in his impatience and stinginess. He is also a very lonely, pitiful being.

Like Frank Capra's films, Barks comics' work celebrates community and responsibility. He exonerates the American sense of "good neighbors" and the ethics of fair play: concepts considered naive by the "enlightened" cynics of our day.

These attitudes are sparse in today's cinema and especially so in the comics of today which are marked by increasingly being downbeat or else mean hack-work. In the context of today's market, "Uncle Scrooge: his life and times" is as much a light-house to current comics creators as it is an obelisk to Barks' past.

Why not have Halloween on Saturday?

town to become synonymous with The Great Squirrel Man Halloween Massacre.

What if we can't change the date, and, come Tuesday morning, half the school is lying on the sidewalks of Fifth Street with big fang marks all over them, and the few survivors turn rabid? I guarantee that won't help the school's image much.

Join us in The Committee to Push Halloween Back to a Day we Can Really Throw Down On. But we have to do it soon, so the word gets out and no one ends up downtown Monday night in a Spuds McKenzie outfit, looking like an inexperienced frat boy.

If you agree with any of these reasons, or have some valid ones of your own, bitch. Bitch to the police, the administration, to Campus Security, to the town council, to the SGA ... bitch to somebody. Write letters to the editor — to me and to The Daily Receptor. Anybody.

Admittedly, this isn't the noblest cause to get behind. It's actually a very selfish and arrogant cause. But who cares? It'd be wild to see if we actually could change things. Today Halloween — tomorrow Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday.

Superman cartoon lacks

The cartoon also boasts the John Williams music from the movies, a total ignorance of physics and Lois Lane as the most unlikely bitch in years. This series has none of the grace of the Max Fleisher "Superman" series of the 40s, despite the technological advances that made "Who Framed Roger Rabbit?" possible.

The second feature of the show is a trip through Superman's family album, a series of vignettes showing him as Superbaby. "The Adoption" showed baby Clark in the orphanage, using his super powers to avoid being picked by any other couple but Jonathan and Martha Kent.

Cute, but following episodes could be a lot funnier. Superbaby was always my favorite aspect of the Superman legend. How do you try to punish a three-year-old who can stare at you and burn holes through your head?

A future episode of the show is scheduled to guest star Wonder Woman, so it's possible a lot of other heroes could be showing up too. There's hope, if Wolfman gets fired and they move the show to a later time.

So I'll just hang on til the syndicated, live-action "Superboy" show debuts on October 1. The guy who plays Clark/Superboy is a Wilmington native and both he and the girl playing Lana Lang told the press they were comic book fans, so maybe we'll get something good.

Apartment

Dear Mr. Elvis,

When I moved into townhouse apartment in Greenville this summer, I thought, no more dorms, no more occupancy houses, no more ing for toilet paper, finally, peace and quiet. To the right was an old lady and on the side were two nurses.

And then the hellions moved in. They moved in the apartment which the nurses vacated. They are five of them, yes Mr. Elvis. I can't really do them as students because I never seen them go to class.

I don't think they would cause they are always home the door open and the storeing. They can't even be class as human in my definition word. I think they are frat that got kicked out of the frat at ECU which is (deleted cause of hate mail corrections).

Take the first night moved in for example. I heard of house warming, but this is ridiculous.

So the five of them, yes them in a two bedroom, half bathroom apartment, the whole of the Emerald their hell hole. If they did their security deposit on night, then my name is Blowe (name changed to the innocent).

But talk about a houseing, these dweebs sprayed cad 151 on a heap of grass and proceeded to burn the on the patio at 4:30 in the morning. Billowing from this burning came black smoke blowing my window. I woke up to my apartment was on fire, looked out of the window, these redneck frat boys around the flames like ap had just invented fire.

The very next day, erected a basketball goal on patio area. They played all hours of the night until body mysteriously stole the board. Having no basketball, these mindless idiots were ing better to do pulled out gun.

Apartment dweller threatens to assassinate five obnoxious neighbors

Dear Mr. Elvis,

When I moved into my townhouse apartment here in Greenville this summer, I thought cool, no more dorms, no more six occupancy houses, no more fighting for toilet paper, finally a little peace and quiet. To the right of me was an old lady and on the left side were two nurses.

And then the hellions moved in. They moved in the apartment which the nurses vacated. There are five of them, yes Mr. Elvis five of them. I can't really describe them as students because I have never seen them go to class.

I don't think they work because they are always home with the door open and the stereo blaring. They can't even be classified as human in my definition of the word. I think they are frat boys that got kicked out of the worst frat at ECU which is (deleted because of hate mail considerations).

Take the first night they moved in for example. I have heard of house warming parties but this is ridiculous.

So the five of them, yes five of them in a two bedroom one and a half bathroom apartment, invited the whole of the Emerald City to their hell hole. If they didn't lose their security deposit on the first night, then my name isn't Joe Blowe (name changed to protect the innocent).

But talk about a house warming, these dweebs sprayed Baracade 151 on a heap of garbage and proceeded to burn the refuge on the patio at 4:30 in the morning. Billowing from this burning trash came black smoke blowing into my window. I woke up thinking my apartment was on fire, but I looked out of the window to see these redneck frat boys parading around the flames like apes who had just invented fire.

The very next day, they erected a basketball goal on the patio area. They played ball until all hours of the night until somebody mysteriously stole the backboard. Having no basketball goal, these mindless idiots with nothing better to do pulled out the b-b gun.

So, now they stay up to all hours of the night shooting b-bs at beer cans. This just demonstrates the level of these guys pathetic mentality, they shoot beer cans when they could be doing constructive things at that time of night.

Mr. Elvis, these guys are hideous. I mean, I like my music loud but these heavy metal freaks always have the Guns and Roses cranked. The old lady two doors down has already called the cops twice and she wears a hearing aid. I won't call the pigs on them, but I really thought about it the other day when the music vibrated my favorite picture of Jimi Hendrix off the wall.

Just Ask Big E

Since there are five of them, they always have the best parking spaces. If they don't hold a space, one of their loser friends does. I work late at night and drive up only to find the lot full of jacked-up Novas and Chevilles.

Mr. Elvis, you have helped so many others, please help me kill my neighbors.

Signed, The Hating Neighbor

Dear Mister Roger's Neighbor,

First of all, can you read? My name is Earlvis not Elvis and while I do admire the late King (God bless his amphetaminated heart), I don't appreciate you referring to me as such.

If you kill your neighbors, you will serve five consecutive life sentences and become Preparation H's poster boy. So don't do that.

This is what I propose, you said they were hellions, so why not MAKE THEIR LIFE A LIVING HELL.

1. Since you can't sleep at night because of their rude behavior, copy all those late night TV specials and send them to their address, C.O.D.

2. Flood their apartment with rat urine.

3. Crank call them 24 hours a day until they disconnect the phone and have no social life.

4. Print up flyers saying they are the Squirrel Men.

5. Sit on your front porch picking your nose and flinging the mucous remnants onto their steps. This will discourage visitors.

Greenville hero, Arm-Fall-Off Boy, killed by the Squirrel Man

GREENVILLE, N.C. (BP) — During the most sensational and nauseating battle of the decade, Greenville's only resident super hero, Arm-Fall-Off Boy, died from injuries inflicted by the city's dreaded "squirrel man" creature.

Arm, posthumously identified as Lemuel Lesslad, a student in the ECU graduate industrial hygiene program, died Wednesday night, mere hours after a five-minute brawl with the squirrel creature. The squirrel man had just killed an ECU student behind the Col. E.G. Flanagan Sylvan Theater, the third death in as many weeks.

Lesslad saw the attack and changed into his Arm-Fall-Off Boy costume, according to his trusty manservant, James St. Gangrene. "Lem simply ... leapt into action after he saw the (student) drop to the ground. But it was too late."

The student, Thurston Eames, a dance major, was decapitated by the squirrel man's 24-inch long incisors.

St. Gangrene said, "It was over quickly. Lem's only power was the ability to make his arms fall off. He thought it would confuse the squirrel creature long enough to stun him with some Arm-Anti-Squirrel-Man-Repellent."

"But the beast wasn't fooled," St. Gangrene added in a choked voice.

According to police reports and video footage from WNCT which arrived on the scene just before the death blow, Arm-Fall-Off Boy taunted the creature with his left hand, trying to draw an attack. The squirrel man locked onto Lesslad's wrist and pulled the arm off.

6. Wait until the day after rent is due, when you know they are broke and hungry and send every pizza/food delivery man to their apartment.

7. And now the most deviously conceived master plan to eradicate all unwanted neighbors:

Call the Jehova's Witnesses, call the Mormon Missionaries,

"There was always a kind of sickening 'pop' when Lem used his power," St. Gangrene explained. "But for some reason ... I knew I had heard that 'pop' for the second to last time."

The squirrel man then flung the useless limb aside and tried to latch onto the remaining hand. Arm-Fall-Off Boy ran behind the dumpster next to the Sylvan Theater in a desperate attempt to regroup. "Suddenly, the squirrel man emitted this incredibly loud whistle," St. Gangrene said, "And hundreds of squirrels began dropping out of the trees ... as if he had summoned them."

The entire camera crew from WNCT, St. Gangrene and five other eyewitnesses were all bitten during the "squirrel rain," and were taken to Pitt Memorial for observation and painful rabies shots.

"The last I saw of Arm, the squirrel man had dragged his body to the center of the Sylvan Theater and pulled his right arm off," Lester Dribble, van driver for the WNCT news team said. "You could tell he had hundreds of little squirrel bites all over him."

"The squirrel guy popped his arm off and then ran away. It was creepy," Dribble added.

A memorial service is being planned for the fallen hero, who requested that his body be donated to science. Unfortunately, this brave hero's request cannot be fully honored.

"His right arm ... that thing still has it, or he's stored it away somewhere. Wretched creature," St. Gangrene said. "The medical school says they can only accept whole cadavers. Bloody doctors."

call PTL, call Jimmy Swaggart and tell them to send troops, send droves of religious - pamphlet carrying fanatics to their place. When you call on the phone say, convincingly, that you are one of these idiots and that you're desperate to know God. Say that you are living in immortal sin, which from your descriptions wouldn't be a complete lie.

If they turn away the Missionaries, stand at the door and say "Just knock harder, I'm sure they'll hear you sooner or later."

Gotta problem, Write the Big E

Still Killin' Danny

That's right! We're still taking your written scenarios for the horrible death of Danny Partridge, the most hated kid ever to grace the television screen. Some of you have already turned in your emissions-er, submissions; but for those of you who haven't, you still have until next Tuesday! In case you need to get steered in the right direction, here is a sample Death of Danny:

En route to a gig in Louisiana, the multi-colored Partridge Family bus has engine trouble, forcing Shirley to pull over and spend the night in a small southern town not on any map. Since Rueben lost most of the band's money the week before gambling in Nevada, the Partridges can't afford to stay in a hotel and spend the night in the bus. Later that night, the wayward family is woken by the blasting out of the bus windows by shotguns. Danny catches some glass in the face and runs screaming out of the back of the bus into the bayou.

After an hour of scrambling through mud, roots and weeds, the freckled youth collapses of exhaustion. Three obese, sweaty rednecks bearing guns and rope arrive on the scene, and laugh heartily as they bind Danny's wrists and ankles to roots growing out of the marsh. One of the men loudly suggests that they reenact a particular scene from "Deliverance." By this time Rueben shows up to rescue his young friend, but upon seeing the helpless youth, shows his true colors. Led by the all-too familiar sounds of Danny's screaming and wailing, Shirley and the rest of the family discover the perverse scene and can't help but notice Rueben joining in the festivities!

Horried, Shirley leads her troupe away and abandons her son. The ensuing commotion draws a pack of ravenous alligators, who attack Rueben and the Rednecks. While the others finish their meals, a latecoming gator is attracted by Danny's bright red hair and heads for the worn and violated young bass player. Following the beaten path, the huge lizard begins to consume Danny, reaching it's fill by the time it reaches his neck. Months later, Shirley returns to the small town to find out what became of her son and is led to the home of a local voodoo doctor, where hangs the mummified freckle-ridden Partridge head.

Disgusting, yes. Too long, yes. But this is just to get your minds cranking so that you can create your own horrible death. Extra consideration is shown to scenarios that are appropriate for Danny, and involve any of the others in the cast, who all went on to better things while Danny didn't. Just make it a paragraph, and get inspired!

Sports Medicine an important part of ECU

Sports Medicine personnel are present at all of ECU's football games, and most other sporting events, to take care of injuries. They are also able to rehabilitate previous injuries.

By SANDY ROGERS
Staff Writer

In 1970, Sports Medicine, directed by Rod Compton, was designed to create a more scientific approach to athletic training. It was the first program of its kind in the country.

Sports Medicine is divided into two programs. Under the Sports Medicine curriculum, a student is eligible to become an athletic trainer if he passes an examination given by the National Athletic Trainers Association. Student trainers receive an average of 2300-2500 hours of field experience in a four year program at ECU. This experience includes assisting certified trainers and working with athletes.

The second program under Sports Medicine is the athletic division. It is designed to provide optimal care for each individual athlete in East Carolina's collegiate sports program. Equal care is provided to each athlete regardless of which sport they play. "A person's health is a person's health whether they participate in football, basketball, soccer, etc," Compton said. Individual care includes developing a program for the specific need of an athlete pertaining to his or her injury.

Three services that Sports Medicine provides are prevention of injuries, immediate treatment of injuries, and rehabilitation of injuries. In order to determine if an athlete is physically capable of participating in a certain sport, the physicians perform EKG's (electro-cardiogram) tests, as well as a complete physical examination. The thorough examination is hoped to help prevent sudden death among athletes. Trainers and physicians are also involved in creating individual diets to provide weight control for athletes.

To provide adequate training and treatment, the staff consists of three certified athletic trainers and eighteen professional consultants. Trainers Rod Compton, Greg Beres, and Karen Baker travel with various athletic teams, such as football, volleyball, women's softball, and men's and women's basketball in order to provide immediate treatment of sustained injuries.

In describing the sports Medicine program at East Carolina, Rod Compton says it is "One of the little pockets of excellence on campus."

Holley multi-faceted

By CAROLYN JUSTICE
Staff Writer

Developing relationships is an important part of everyone's life, but for ECU's Jemma Holley, her relationships have become significant to all aspects of her life, especially athletics.

First Holley, a junior on the ECU volleyball team, has developed a relationship with herself as a student and as an athlete.

"I've become a more serious person," says Holley. "When I came to college, I realized that I was here to do something with my life and I realize that as an athlete, I was looked upon highly and that my actions would reflect on the program."

Holley's roles have changed in ECU volleyball during the past three years. Now, as a junior, she has developed into one of the team's leaders both on and off the court.

"I think I'm looked upon as one of the leaders and because of this, I want to set good examples. I want people to know that I am a hard worker, I'm dedicated and that I will always give 125 percent of myself in everything that I do."

Holley's family plays an important part in her life, also. Father Jack and mother Judith are both teachers and Holley says they raised her in a Christian family and helped her to find what would make her a good person.

Holley's older sister, also an athlete, helped her in becoming who she is today.

"It was hard following Julieanne (sister) at first. I felt intimidated in high school that I would not do as well as she had. But she helped me to realize that I can only be me and if I'm not as good in something then that's okay."

In the midst of athletics and academics, Holley has developed another important relationship: one with boyfriend Grant Lowe, an ECU offensive lineman.

"It's hard having a personal relationship when you're an athlete. School and the team must come first and it's hard to find someone who can understand having responsibilities and not having a lot of time to spend together," said Holley.

But Lowe does understand and Holley says their common bond — athletics — makes them understand each other and appreciate the other one that much more.

Jemma Holley

As with any team, a good coach/player relationship is essential to the team's performance. Holley and ECU first year coach Judy Kirkpatrick have developed that important relationship. Each respects the other and strives to work for the benefit of the team.

"Before Coach Kirkpatrick came, this team didn't have a focus, but she has completely changed our attitudes and expectations," said Holley, whose '87 squad finished with a 9-19 mark and in last place in the conference.

"We now have a nucleus. Everyone works hard because we have someone to please — Coach K. She does a lot for us and we want to do a lot for her."

Kirkpatrick shares the same respect for Holley in seeing her strengths and doing as much for her and her teammates as possible.

"Jemma is one of the hardest working and best athletes I've ever worked with," says Kirkpatrick, who has coached for eight years.

"She is the kind of athlete that any coach would want and she is good enough to play anywhere. Jemma is disciplined and dedicated and my only regret is that I was not here sooner to work with her."

Holley, like most athletes, has set goals for herself and for her team.

For her team, Holley's goal is to move up in the conference after finishing last in 1987.

For herself, Holley would like to receive an honor that shows she performed the best that she could: All-Conference.

Holley says that she hasn't reached her goals yet, but with her team and her coach, she feels that they are within reach.

Using athletics as one of her teachers, Holley will continue to teach dedication and determination after she finishes school. As a Speech Language — Auditory Pathology major, Holley hopes to one day receive her masters and go on to work with children.

U.S. Men's basketball team advances to medal round

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — It was no shock when the big confrontation turned out to be no contest.

The U.S. men's Olympic basketball team beat Brazil 102-87 Wednesday, earning a berth in the medal round. They did the job with tenacious defense and a strong transition game.

That, too, came as no shock from a team coached by John Thompson.

Brazilian shooting guard Marcel Souza described the U.S. play this way: "After 20 minutes it was very dangerous for our team. They played so intensely you just give up."

The shock came last year when Brazil dominated the United States from long range in the Pan Am Games in Indianapolis, winning the gold medal with a 120-115 victory.

This time it was different. "If you're not going to shoot the 3-point shots as well as your opponent, you've got to make certain that he doesn't use the 3-point shot to dominate you," Thompson observed.

Brazil made just five of 21 3-point attempts and the United States outscored the South Americans 40-28 in a game no member of the U.S. delegation would say was sweet revenge for an embarrassing defeat.

"You get embarrassed when you rob a bank or become a drug addict. I don't believe a person can ever be embarrassed representing his country," Thompson said. "That team in Indianapolis helped us."

That team allowed sublime shooter Oscar Schmidt and Souza to combine for 77 points. This team held them to 42.

That team blew a 20 point second half lead. This team allowed the Brazilians no closer than the 15-point final margin over the last 15 minutes.

"We were trying to deny Oscar and Marcel the ball. We didn't want them to get a lot of free shots. We tried to contain them," said Dan Majerle, the first player assigned to cover Oscar. "I'm glad coach had confidence in me to be a good defensive player."

Thompson was more than pleased with Majerle.

"I think Majerle set the tone for the defensive game," Thompson said. "He got out and played really well. He's a hell of a player."

The man known simply as Oscar said of the five players who covered him during the game, Majerle impressed him the most.

"The defense was very intense, very hard but very legal," said Oscar.

Oscar finished with 31 points, 16 from the free throw line, as Brazil, which Thompson praised as the best shooting team in amateur basketball, never got going.

The United States led 63-55 at halftime and opened up a 22-point lead with a 21-7 run over the opening 5:36 of the second half as Majerle had seven points and Danny Manning six.

"The defense was very difficult and it was that way for 40 minutes. They are taller and faster. They just play hard all the time," point guard Maury Souza said.

Oscar made two free throws with 6:09 left in the first half to bring Brazil within 42-40. The United States then went on a 19-0 run that featured the defensive pressure at full throttle.

Bimbo Coles had a three-point play after he stole the ball from Marcel Souza. Eleven seconds later he knocked the ball away again. Stacey Augmon saved it from going out of bounds, and Jeff Grayer was fouled on a layup.

After an exchange of 3-pointers, Augmon followed an impressive dunk with a steal that was converted by J.R. Reid, who led the U.S. team with 16 points, and the United States had its first 10-point lead, 55-45, with 3:37 left in the half.

The score was 59-49 with 2:08 left on a jumper by Reid, but Brazil ran off six straight before an Augmon midcourt steal and dunk gave the U.S. team the eight-point halftime lead.

"We knew we could pressure (Maury) Souza and by denying him the ball we caused turnovers," Coles said. "Stacey's known for his defense and I guess that run got us going."

Augmon left the arena on crutches after suffering a slight ankle sprain.

Willie Anderson, Manning and David Robinson also played on the Pan Am team, but Anderson said this game wasn't played for revenge.

"You can't erase what happened last year and this game wasn't for the gold medal," Anderson said. "It was just another early game on the way to the medal round."

Oscar knows there's a chance Brazil will face the United States again, this time after both teams advance to the medal round.

"I hope to try again against the United States," he said.

UNC player is out for the season

CHAPEL HILL (AP)— Captain Courageous used to wear No. 49 and make bone-crushing tackles for the University of North Carolina football team.

Now, Mitch Wike sports an 8-inch scar on his stomach, struggles to move around his dorm room and sometimes feels like a shut-in. Doctors say that barring a miracle recovery, Wike's college football career is over.

"I've played this game since I was 6 years old," Wike told the Durham Morning Herald. "Then something like this happens."

Wike, a fifth-year senior inside linebacker from Brevard, had a good start to his final season at UNC. He was named a captain and starter at linebacker for the third straight season. By late in the first quarter of the opener at South Carolina two weeks ago, the 6-foot-2, 225-pounder had made six tackles.

Then the Gamecocks ran a sweep toward Wike's side of the field. He pursued and was approached by a South Carolina offensive guard. The guard went low, trying to cut Wike off his feet. Wike countered by jumping over the oncoming lineman. When Wike was in mid-air, the lineman kicked back his leg — a move called a leg whip — and struck Wike in the stomach.

"I went over and made the tackle on the sidelines," Wike recalled. "But I couldn't get back up. I've never been in so much pain in my whole life. At first, I just thought I was hit in the groin area. But I knew it was a lot more serious than that."

Wike was treated on the sidelines for a few minutes. Then he became nauseous. Finally, he was carted off on a stretcher, bound for Richland Memorial Hospital and numerous tests.

"I was out of it the rest of the night," Wike said. "They did an X-ray two or three times and could find nothing wrong. Somebody mentioned that it might be bruised muscles. But I've had that before and I knew it was a lot different. Dr. DeWalt said I wouldn't have come out of the game with just a bruise."

Wike had a big bruise on his abdomen and a couple of football cleat marks from there to his belly button. He was still in constant pain. Wike even said the doctors were considering releasing him early Sunday morning after a battery of tests.

But Dr. Joseph DeWalt, UNC's director of sports medicine, felt Wike's injury was something notable. But he wasn't positive until a few more tests were complete. On Sunday morning, the prognosis of a tear in the small intestines was finalized and Wike underwent emergency surgery.

"None of the team doctors around the country that I've talked to have seen this type of injury happen to a football player," DeWalt said.

DeWalt said the injury is more common in auto accidents when the seat belt compresses the stomach area and injures the small intestines.

"I'd never had surgery before in my life," Wike said. "To think that most football players get messed-up knees and legs and here I am with an intestine injury."

"The doctors down there told me that somebody could take a sledgehammer and hit me in the stomach and it would probably break my spinal column before it hurt my intestines."

Wike was hospitalized in Columbia, S.C., until Friday, Sept. 9, when he was transferred — via Richland's hospital plane — to Chapel Hill's Memorial Hospital. He stayed overnight at Memorial and got up late Saturday, in time to make the coin toss for the home opener against Oklahoma.

"I really wanted to go to the game," said Wike, who walked slowly on and off the field. "I thought it would mean a lot to the players. I wanted to try and support the team anyway I could."

Wike returned to classes for the first time Friday.

Wike's life has changed drastically. He has lost 25 pounds, down to 200 pounds. "It took me five years to put 25 pounds on (lifting weights) and one week to take it off," Wike said. He eats normally, except that he tries to avoid red meat. Pain killers are also still in his diet.

"Right now I'm not thinking about coming back to the team," Wike said. "My main concerns are getting to the bathroom and getting movies to put on the VCR. My needs are pretty simple. It's weird how you can go from doing so many things in a day to the bare essentials."

UNC coach Mack Brown said Wike first talked with him early last week about returning to the team, but by the end of the week Wike was tending solely to his injury.

"He'll come out to practice as soon as he's able," Brown said. "He's in tune with what we need to do. And we've got a lot of young guys at his position."

U.S. confidence back

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — It was the moment U.S. boxing Coach Kenny Adams had feared all along.

Little Michael Carbajal was fighting a favored South Korean and it was close. Neither fighter seemed to have a clear edge, but the partisan crowd was cheering wildly with every punch landed by the Korean.

All along, Adams had warned his fighters of judges who didn't like Americans, urging them to win decisively if they expected to capture the decision.

Carbajal wasn't doing that, and Adams was expecting the worst.

It didn't happen. Wednesday's decision went to Carbajal after he surged against Oh Kwang-So in the third round of their 106-pound bout, giving a suddenly rejuvenated American team new hope.

"It's kind of given me a little faith in a sense," said Adams. "We prevailed in this one."

Carbajal's victory was the second in a row for the U.S. fighters, who had become a demoralized bunch after seeing world champion Kelle Banks knocked cold in his first fight and Anthony Hembrick disqualified for showing up late.

"This is a definite strong morale booster for us," said Adams. "If we can beat the Korean and shut the crowd up, that's just what we needed to do."

Carbajal, who had lost to Oh last year in Seoul in their only other meeting, picked up the pace in the third round to overcome Oh's mauling tactics and capture a narrow 3-2 decision.

"He's the hometown hero and I know I had to fight hard because of the crowd," said Carbajal. "I knew it would be close because he's from here."

The fight was close, so close that Carbajal needed to pull out the third round on four of the five scorecards to win.

At the end of the fight three judges had the Phoenix fighter ahead 59-58, while one judge favored Oh by a 60-58 margin and another had the Korean ahead by 60-59.

A half-dozen of Carbajal's teammates cheered loudly from their seats near the ring as Carbajal used some good inside work to the body to score points in the final round.

"I heard the whole team throughout the fight," said Carbajal, who turned 22 the day the Olympics opened. "It's something that really motivates you."

Adams was also a motivator, trying between rounds to get Carbajal to go all out in the final round.

"I said, 'Mike, this is close. You've got to do it for America, you've got to drive for the gold,'" said Adams.

Carbajal advanced to a Sunday fight against Hiem Dang Hieu of Vietnam despite

SEC riding high with most in top 20

(AP)— While the Big Ten continues to have problems, the Southeastern Conference is riding high.

The SEC has three teams among the first seven and five in the Top Twenty in this week's Associated Press college football poll. They are Auburn, No. 4; Georgia, No. 6; LSU, No. 7; Alabama, No. 13, and Florida, No. 20.

By contrast, the Big Ten's lone representative in the Top Twenty is No. 19 Michigan. And the Wolverines are 0-2, one of the few teams ever to make the rankings with that record. Ohio State and Iowa dropped out of the rankings after losses, while Pitt and Florida moved in for the first time this season.

The Big Ten is 7-15, all against outside competition, and four teams, including Michigan and defending champion Michigan State, have yet to win a game. Meanwhile, the SEC is 11-3 against teams from outside the conference—17-19 overall—and six teams have yet to lose a game.

"Without question, this is by far the best the league has been since I've been here," said Auburn Coach Pat Dye, in his eighth season as a head coach in the SEC.

Miami is No. 1 for the third week in a row, thanks to Saturday's amazing 31-30 victory over Michigan. The Hurricanes, who trailed 30-14, scored two touchdowns and a field goal in the final 5 1/2 minutes.

They received 52 of 59 first-place votes and 1,171 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Michigan, which lost its opener 19-17 to Notre Dame, slipped from 15th to 19th. The last team with an 0-2 record to make the Top Twenty was Auburn in 1984.

UCLA, a 56-3 winner over Long Beach State, received three first-place votes and remained No. 2 with 1,104 points.

Last week, with 55 voters participating, Miami led UCLA 46-3 in first-place votes and 1,082-1,019 in points.

Oklahoma moved up from fourth to third with two first-place votes and 1,016 points. The Sooners, who defeated Arizona 28-10, replaced Clemson, which dropped from third to 12th after losing to Florida State 24-21.

Auburn leaped from sixth to fourth with 900 points by walloping Kansas 56-7. The remaining two first-place votes went to Southern Cal, which was idle but SEOUL, South Korea (AP)— A Soviet spry's icy composure and three perfect 10s Wednesday dethroned reigning Olympic and world champion Romania in women's team gymnastics as the U.S. team missed a bronze on a rare and controversial penalty.

The American women, long-shots when the Games began but superb under pressure, finished fourth behind East Germany after a day of mixed fortunes for the U.S. team.

Gold, silver and bronze hang from Matt Biondi's neck and four more Olympic medals are within his giant reach, but the gold that got away by a hundredth of a second belongs, strangely enough, to a swimmer from Suriname.

Parity has arrived at the Games, scattering medals to athletes barely known and nations most unexpected.

Suriname? Yes, that South American jewel with one Olympic-sized pool on the coast north of Brazil has its first medal, matching the feat of tiny Costa Rico.

The longtime superpowers of sport—the Soviets, East Germans and Americans—still top the medal list, but they're finding they can't win as easily as they used to.

The Soviets lead with 18 medals, including seven golds, East Germany is second with 11 medals, and the United States and Bulgaria are tied with nine medals each.

China is making a big splash in diving and swimming, and Bulgaria's bulging weightlifters are leading a brigade of medalists in several sports.

held onto fifth place with 859 points.

Georgia rose from seventh to sixth with 802 points by defeating Mississippi State 42-35, and LSU, a 34-9 winner over Tennessee, jumped from ninth to seventh with 794 points.

Notre Dame remained in eighth place with 753 points by defeating Michigan State 20-3. Florida State's victory over Clemson enabled the Seminoles to climb from 10th place to ninth with 739 points, and Nebraska, No. 11 last week, rounded out the Top Ten with 639 points. The Cornhuskers also were idle over the weekend.

The Second Ten consists of West Virginia, Clemson, Alabama, South Carolina, Penn State, Pitt, Washington, Oklahoma State, Michigan and Florida.

Last week, it was Nebraska, West Virginia, Alabama, South Carolina, Michigan, Penn State, Washington, Ohio State, Iowa and Oklahoma State.

Pitt made the Top Twenty and knocked Ohio State out by trouncing the Buckeyes 42-10, while Florida cracked the Top Twenty by routing Indiana State 58-0. Iowa fell out by losing for the second time this season, 24-21 to Colorado.

Moore named AL Player-of-the Week

NEW YORK (AP) — Seattle right-hander Mike Moore, who yielded only seven hits in two complete games, was named American League Player of the Week.

Moore allowed only one walk and struck out 14 in defeating Minnesota and Milwaukee last week, pitching a five-hitter against the Twins on Monday and a two-hit shutout Saturday.

Browning NL

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Browning of the Cincinnati Reds, who pitched the major league's first perfect game in nearly four years last week, was named National League Player of the Week.

Browning struck out seven of the 27 batters he faced in posting a 1-0 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers on Friday. It was the last perfect game in a nine-inning game since Mike Witt of the California Angels hurled one against the Texas Rangers on Sept. 30, 1984. The last perfect game pitched in the National League was by Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers on Sept. 9, 1965, against the Chicago Cubs.

U.S. Seniors

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dick Riley and Richard Goerlich Jr. shot 1-over-par 73s to share the lead after the first round of the 34th U.S. Senior Amateur Championship at Milwaukee Country Club.

Riley, of Phoenix, Ariz., and Goerlich, of Tampa, Fla., were one shot ahead of eight players at 74. In that group was 1986 champion Bo Williams and three-time Canadian Senior Amateur winner Robert Wylie.

Seven players were at 75, including last year's runner-up, James Kite Jr. of Wolfstown, Va.

Geneva Open

GENEVA (AP) — Fourth-seeded Magnus Gustafsson lost to fellow Swede Christian

Bergstroem 4-6, 4-6 in a first-round upset at the $190,000 Geneva Open tennis tournament.

Fernando Luna of Spain, seeded seventh, had little trouble in eliminating Arne Thoms of West Germany, 6-3, 6-1.

Clarins Open

PARIS (AP) — Veronica Martinek of West Germany defeated Hana Fukarkova of Czechoslovakia in a tough three-set match 6-2, 5-7, 6-2 on the opening day of the $50,000 Clarins Open, part of the Virginia Slims tour.

In other first-round matches, Laura Lapi downed fellow Italian Linda Ferrando 6-3, 2-6, 6-1; Nathalie Gueree of France defeated Susan Mascarin of Boca Raton, Fla., 6-4, 6-0; Regina Marsilkova of Czechoslovakia beat Alexia Dechaume of France, 6-4, 7-5; and Cathy Caverzacio of Italy trounced Emmanuelle Derly of France 6-0, 6-1.

Weightlifting

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Angel Guenchev of Bulgaria broke three world records Wednesday night to win the gold medal in the Olympic weightlifting 67.5-kilogram division with a total of 362.5 kilos in two lifts.

Joachim Kunz of East Germany took the silver medal with 340 kilos while Israel Militossian of the Soviet Union captured the bronze medal with 337.5 kilos.

Guenchev set a world record in the snatch portion of the competition when he did 160 kilos, bettering Militossian's mark of 158.5 set earlier this year. Guenchev's clean and jerk of 202.5 kilos topped the 200.5-kilo mark of Mihail Petrov of Bulgaria, last year. The total surpassed Petrov's 355.0, also last year.

Fencing

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Stefano Cerioni of Italy defeated Udo Wagner of East Germany 10-

7 to win the Olympic gold medal Wednesday night in the men's foil competition of fencing.

Alexandre Romankov of the Soviet Union won the bronze by beating Ulrich Schreck of West Germany 10-8.

Gymnastics

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The Soviet Union won the gold medal in women's team gymnastics Wednesday, with the United States losing the bronze medal because of a protest earlier in the competition.

The Soviets finished with 395.475 points. Romania took the silver with 394.125, while East Germany won the bronze with 390.875.

The United States finished fourth, with 390.575 points, and would have won the bronze if not for a half-point deducted because an alternate was illegally on the floor during one of the preliminary routines Monday night.

Suspension

Sports Information Press Release

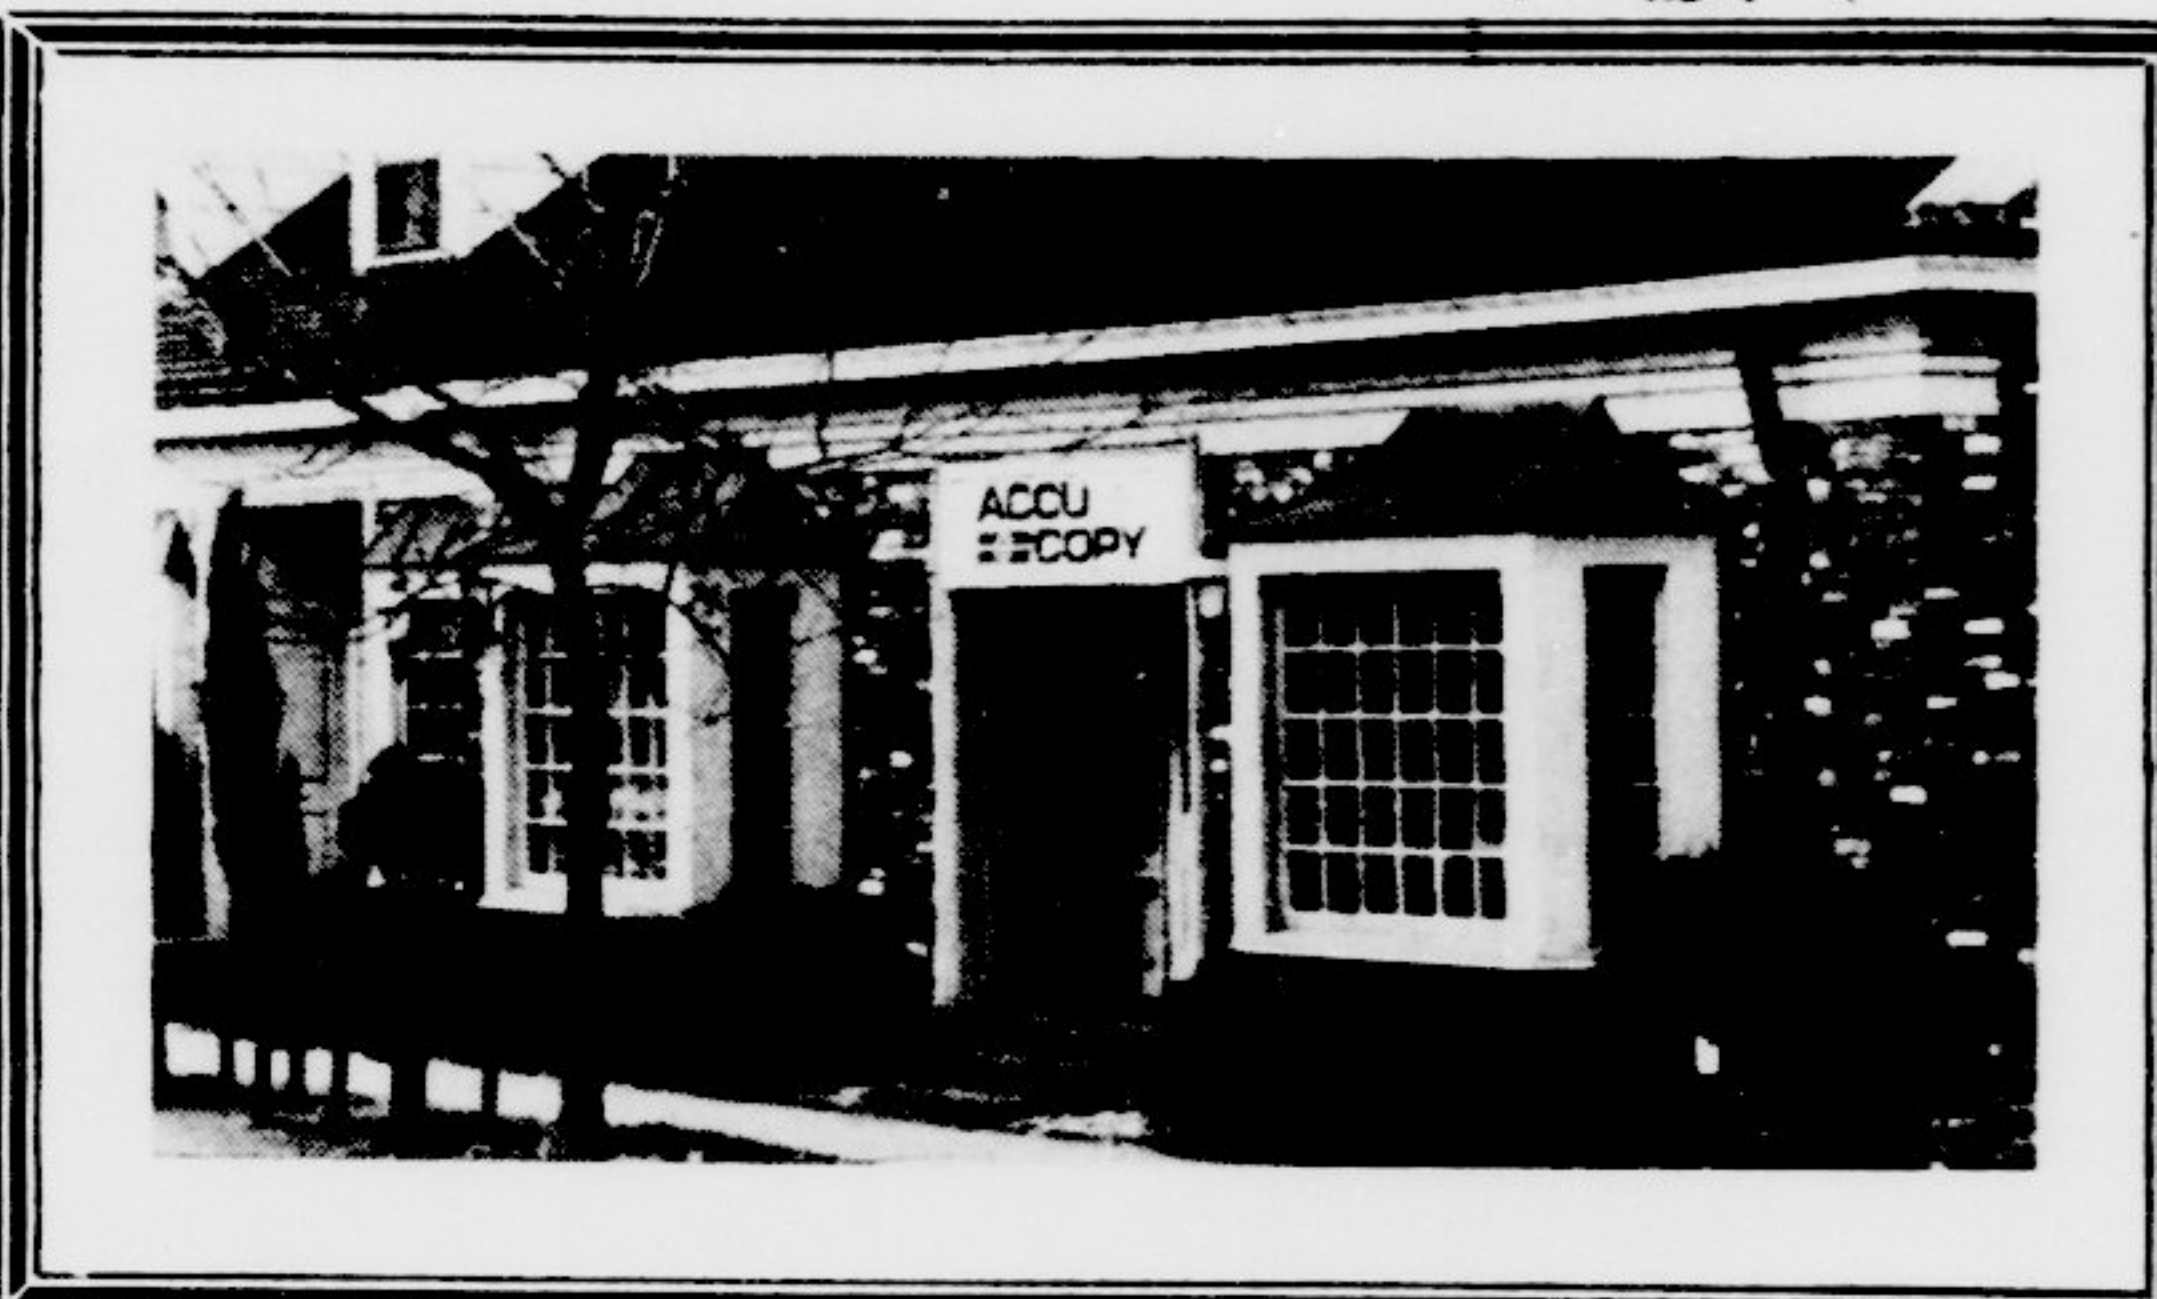

Charlie Tyson, a 5-11, 175 pound sophomore slotback from Miami, Fla., has been suspended indefinitely from the ECU football team, announced head coach Art Baker Tuesday.

Tyson was handed the suspension after an alleged assault incident on the ECU campus.

"Charlie's suspension remains consistent with the policy established at East Carolina, concerning incidents of this nature.

He will be suspended indefinitely as a representative of this team. Once the issue has been clarified, we will take action as deemed appropriate," Baker said.

Oscar known by first name

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - Call him Oh-scar, with emphasis on the Oh! He is Oscar Schmidt of Brazil, so widely acclaimed in international basketball circles that he needs just one name, like Kareem or Magic or Isiah.

The first thing you notice about him are his eyes, always darting from here to there, always probing, looking for the soft spot in the defense. He is always moving without the ball, always looking for an opening and a pass. Both develop frequently and it is said that he never met a shot he didn't like.

"He is so smart," sighed Willie Anderson of the USA basketball team. "He's never out of position."

It was Anderson, remember, who was victimized by Oh-scar's unconscious bombing at the Pan Am Games in Indianapolis, when Brazil snatched the gold medal out from under the Americans' noses, 120-115.

Since that day 13 months ago, Anderson had been waiting for the inevitable Olympic rematch.

"I'd wake up nights and see Oscar pounding the floor," he said.

So did his teammates. Coach John Thompson made sure of that. Every now and then, he'd remind Team USA of the Pan Am experience and that Olympians Anderson, David Robinson and Danny Manning took home silver medals, not gold ones, from that competition because of their last encounter with Oh-scar.

America's basketball psyche was scarred by Brazil's version of the Big O, perhaps more deeply than the controversial Olympic medal game loss to the Soviet Union in 1972. The Americans believe they won that game but were cheated out of the gold. They know they lost the Pan Am final against Oh-scar.

On Wednesday, Uncle Sam got even, defeating Brazil 102-87 in the Olympic tournament. The defensive assignment on Oh-scar was shared largely by Dan Majerle, Anderson, occasionally Jeff Grayer, and whoever else happened to come along. They limited him - if that's what you want to call it - to 31 points.

Defending Oh-scar is no simple matter. He is a threat all over the court and the American strategy was to keep a hand in his face whenever possible. "All the time," Anderson corrected, remembering Thompson's directions. "We wanted a hand in his face all the time."

Majerle picked up two fouls in the first five minutes that way and had to pass the defensive torch to the others. In the first half, Anderson et al permitted the Brazilian star to touch the ball just 10 times. He still had 16 points, though.

In the second half, Brazil managed to find Oh-scar more frequently but to their credit, the Americans made him work for his shots. He finished with 7-for-16 from the field, two of them long-range three-pointers, and a perfect 15-for-15 from the foul line.

It was not exactly a defensive shroud, but it got the job done for the Americans. "He is such a great outside shooter," Majerle said.

"Everybody had to help out. I think we got him a little frustrated."

And he still scored 31. Sometimes the frustration spilled over, though. One time down the floor on defense, he challenged Grayer, gesturing at the three-point line and shouting at the American, "C'mon! Shoot! Shoot!"

Grayer grinned, remembered his roots in the disciplined game taught by Thompson, ignored Oh-scar's dare and casually passed off to a teammate. Oh-scar, perhaps impressed, later did the same thing - once. It resulted in a rare assist for the man who plays run-and-gun basketball.

Marcel Souza, the resident philosopher on the Brazil team and the man who takes what few shots Oh-scar leaves over, was asked for his analysis of the USA's victory.

Souza, wearing sunglasses to protect his eyes from the glare of Chamsil Gymnasium, thought for a moment and then offered this: "The most wonderful and important thing about the human race," he began, "is we learn from our mistakes. The USA learned very much."

Indeed.

Devils are converting doubters

DURHAM (AP) - With his team at 3-0, Duke football coach Steve Spurrier says some doubters are starting to become believers, but he says the Blue Devils have accomplished nothing special. And he says their backs will be against the wall Saturday against Virginia.

"We're trying to get the message across to our players that we haven't done anything yet," Spurrier said. "Shoot, three wins over non-conference opponents has happened a lot of times here at Duke."

"We were 3-0 in 1982 and last year, too, but we went downhill after that both times. If we don't beat Virginia, we'll be 3-1 again, just like before."

Quarterback Anthony Dilweg agreed that the Blue Devils have yet to really prove themselves.

"We realize we're 3-0, but the combined record of those three teams we beat (Northwestern, Tennessee, The Citadel) is 1-8," Dilweg said.

Terps think State is taking them lightly

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) - Maryland coach Joe Krivak says the Terrapins have a fight ahead of them Saturday against North Carolina State in their Atlantic Coast Conference opener.

Maryland is coming off a 55-24 shellacking by No. 11 West Virginia last week, and the Wolfpack, which has beaten Maryland two years in a row, possesses the kind of attack the Terps traditionally have had difficulty stopping.

Nevertheless, Krivak has high hopes for his team.

"I still feel good about this football team," he said Tuesday during his weekly press luncheon. "I didn't see anyone sulking or anyone down. We gave up 55 points, but I didn't see anyone quit. To me, that's a positive sign."

"Obviously, we've got to get better. But I've just got the feeling somewhere down the line, we're going to beat some good football teams."

Krivak's optimism is tempered by an injury that may keep his top running back out of action for this week's game against N.C. State, 2-1.

Mike Beasley, who rushed for 95 yards in seven carries against West Virginia, is listed as questionable because of a bruised right shoulder.

Last year, the Wolfpack routed Maryland 42-14 at Raleigh, N.C.

"We've had a lot of trouble with this team," Krivak said. "I

Tournament "no-names"

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) - Without benefit of golf's biggest names, the B.C. Open used to bill itself as a tournament of "tomorrow's champions."

Tournament chairman Alex Alexander now has a new slogan. "Tomorrow's now here," he says.

The legendary names — Jack Nicklaus, Greg Norman, Lee Trevino and Arnold Palmer — still don't enter. But Alexander quickly points out that the tour's hottest young golfers will compete in the 72-hole tournament.

"You look and see that we're now getting the top money winners," Alexander said. "A lot of these fellows are people we watched develop."

"We may not have the prestige of a U.S. Open or the PGA Championship, but we have the golfers that are the top competitors at those tournaments."

They're the same ones who have been playing at En-Joie for years.

When the tournament begins Thursday, the tour's top two money winners will be there: Chip Beck and defending champion Joey Sindelar, who lives in nearby Horseheads, N.Y. In all, nearly half of the tour's top 20 earners will be competing in the four-day tournament.

It's only been in recent years that the B.C. Open — which derives its name from the "B.C." comic strip written by Endicott native Johnny Hart — has made a move upward from its secondary tournament status.

The B.C. Open began as a one-day tournament in 1971, when winner Claude Harmon Jr. emerged from a four-way sudden-death overtime to claim the $2,000 top prize.

Sindelar received $72,000 last year for his win here, and the tournament this year boosted the total purse from $400,000 to $500,000 so the 1988 champion will make $90,000.

From the beginning, the B.C. Open drew the younger golfers trying to etch a permanent spot for themselves on the tour, said Alexander.

Offering a challenging 6,088-yard, par-72 course and solid spectator support, the tournament became a favorite stop for the new wave of professionals, he said.

"People get excited because we get five of the top 10 golfers," Alexander said. "But they're not new to the field. They've been supporting us for a long time, and now they're the stars."

Among the regulars returning to En-Joie are Ken Green, the tour's sixth-leading money winner, World Series champion Mike Reid and Mark Calcavecchia, who last week won the $600,000 Bank of Boston Classic.

don't know if they're the caliber of West Virginia, but they're a good solid football club and we're going to have to play very well to beat them."

The Wolfpack accomplished last year's easy victory by running roughshod through the middle of the Terps' defensive line. West Virginia used a similar strategy to gain 347 yards on the ground last week.

"Coach (Dick) Sheridan is probably licking his chops after seeing the West Virginia film," Krivak said. "I'm sure they're going to think they can run inside against us. That's what happened last year. It's something we've got to stop."

Although the running game is a big part of N.C. State's offense, Krivak warned that the Wolfpack is dangerous through the air. He called senior wide receivers Danny Peebles and Naz Worthen

"two of the best wideouts, not only in the conference, but maybe in the country."

Krivak said he wasn't concerned over the Terps' passing game, even though quarterbacks Neil O'Donnell and Scott Zolak combined to hit on just eight of 19 passes for 99 yards with three interceptions last week.

"O'Donnell didn't have a scintillating performance," Krivak said.

Maryland's running game, which has seen major improvements over last season, could also be a question mark if Beasley is unable to play.

Beasley scored touchdowns on runs of 19 and 74 yards against West Virginia and set up a third score with a 42-yard pass reception.

Junior college transfer Ricky Johnson would start if Beasley can't go.

"We're keeping our fingers crossed with Beasley," Krivak said.

"He's doing some things for us we haven't seen a running back do in some time."

"We're also satisfied with (Bren) Lowery, for an undersized fullback, and with Ricky Johnson."

The Terps will probably also be without starting guard Richard Nelson, who strained his left knee
