Last year's Buccaneer questionable in many aspects

By KRISTINA MURDEN
Staff Writer

The 1987 Buccaneer, which sparked a letter to the editor in Tuesday's East Carolinian, was the result of "poor management and conflict of interest," said the Buccaneer's 1989 editor Mike Daughtry.

The yearbook, which was a year late, is currently being reviewed by the ECU Media Board under the stipulation that if the books do not go out faster, their budget will be lowered or the book will be deleted for a year, said Daughtry.

The main problems last year were due to the yearbook staff's inability to meet deadlines and failure to work together. The ECU Photolab also contributed to the problems, in that there was a problem with the quality and quantity of photos submitted. Daughtry said there was a "conflict of interest between the photography manager and the Buccaneer's general managers ... They didn't see eye to eye ... it was too difficult for them to work together, which created problems."

"The media board is also at fault," said ex-staff member Pat O'Neil. He criticized them for their "get it out now" attitude.

Kim Kayes, the '88 editor, added that the Media Board threatened the '87 editor Beth Davis to get the book out on time or give back her salary.

Kayes said, "The '87 book was poorly managed and thrown together in two weeks. Davis lied to the staff about parts of the book being sent to the printer when it was really sitting in her apartment ... she cheated the students," said Kayes.

Daughtry added that Davis blatantly lied to her staff about meeting deadlines, which was a factor in the book's tardiness.

When Davis left ECU she submitted materials unclear to the Buc's publishers which delayed printing said Daughtry. "There should have been a clear understanding on production details like page numbers, etc., between the editor and the printer."

Daughtry said the '87 yearbook was "so bad" because of the photos, and that the ECU Photolab submitted a limited amount of photos, many of which were unacceptable.

When Kayes became the '88 editor "she did one hell of a job," said Daughtry. "She proved that the Buccaneer can stand on its feet ... the superiority of the '88 Buc is due to her efforts." Kayes commended graphic artist Mike Iversen.

Daughtry said Kayes wanted to produce a yearbook that she could look back on in 20 years and be proud of.

The new staff of the Buc said that the '89 Buc will be as good as '88's if not better. "Contributions are encouraged and we want to increase the group and individual picture sections."

Daughtry said, "The student body needs to get involved. Let us know what's out there ... we can't cover what we don't know."

The Buc's new slogan is, "It isn't your yearbook until you're in it."

The 1987 and 1988 yearbooks came out within a month of each other and 3,000 of the 5,000 '88's were gone in 2 days and only 2,000 of the 5,000 '87's were picked up in two weeks. The Buccaneer is free of charge.

Individual pictures will be taken in the back of the soda shop in the student store from Oct. 31-Nov. 4 from 9 a.m.-12 p.m. and 1 p.m.-4:30 p.m.

Wooten Award given to SRA for quality of student life

By BEN SHELBY
Staff Writer

ECU's Student Resident Association (SRA) is the first SRA in the state to receive the Dan Wooten Award. Approximately 50 Universities and colleges across the state (both privately and publicly funded) were eligible for the award.

The award is given to the school's SRA that contributes most to the quality of life for campus residential students and for providing the best leadership development opportunity.

The award, given in memory of Dan Wooten who served as Director of Housing Operations at ECU for 25 years, was received October 4th.

"Winning the award will give us national recognition," said SRA President Mark Carroll.

The SRA serves as a collective voice for student residents. Last year the SRA sponsored a campus blood drive, collecting 392 pints of blood. It assisted with the ECU Telefund and supported Pirate Walk. Also, it provided financial support to individual residence halls and monetary awards to residence halls with the highest percentage of residents voting during campus elections.

The SRA had freshman cooking, encouraging students to become involved in residential government. It provided leadership workshops during spring and fall semesters and sent delegates to state, regional, and national conferences. It hosted an awards dinner recognizing outstanding residence hall and their leaders.

As an administrative liaison, the SRA supported a $40 increase in room rent which will provide air conditioning and other renovations in the residence halls.

Carroll said the SRA stands a good chance of winning next year. He would like to see greater participation among resident students.

"A lot of students don't realize the opportunities that are available for them," he said. "A membership card cost only $8 and will more than pay for itself during the year," he added.

Dean Carolyn Fulgham, asst. vice chancellor and director of residence life and housing, is the official advisor to the SRA. "I'm extremely proud and pleased that the N.C. Housing Office Association recognized the SRA by presenting them with the Dan Wooten Award. The students worked very hard for it. They are to be commended for the work they did," she said.

WZMB to appeal for emergency funding

By TIM HAMPTON
Features Editor

WZMB has had nothing to be excited about lately.

A faulty component called an exciter has put the student radio station in a state of airway limbo. The silence may continue for a month unless emergency funding can be allocated to WZMB.

The exciter, which keeps the station on the correct frequency of 91.3 FM, failed Sept. 24, forcing WZMB to sign-off indefinitely. According to the station's management, the faulty component was sent to an Illinois company for repairs weeks ago.

"We are getting the run-around on the exciter," Keith Powe, General Manager of WZMB said.

Powe said the company contracted for the repair job, Versa Count, has promised to return the part on two different dates.

"A spokesman for the company assured me on Oct. 3 I'd receive the exciter. I called back and then he told me Oct. 10. We have yet to see anything," Powe said.

Frustrated, Powe has sought new avenues to solve the problem. The purchase of a new or used exciter may be the best possibility, Powe said.

Now Powe's mission is to find the necessary funding to purchase the part. Powe said he must petition the Media Board, an advisory committee consisting of both students and faculty, for an emergency appropriation.

"We are trying to set an emergency meeting of the Media Board," Powe said. As of Wednesday, Powe said attempts to set the emergency meeting have reached some snags.

"Many members of the board can't change their schedules," Powe said. "But as far as I can see, I will get a meeting even if I have to cry and plead," he said.

According to Powe, ECU policy concerning purchase bidding may cause the station to remain off the air for a month. During the month, all respective companies are given an opportunity to bid on the price of the component, Powe said.

In efforts to gauge the cost of a new or an used exciter, Powe has received price quotes from several electronics companies which specialize in broadcast equipment.

According to Powe, Broadcast Electronics, one of the largest such companies, quoted $3,500 for an used exciter. If purchased, the component would have a 90-day warranty.

Education is goal of awareness week

By LYNN JOYNER
Staff Writer

A host of events are scheduled for ECU's third annual Alcohol Awareness Week which is slated for Oct. 19-27. The purpose of the week is to educate the campus on the effects of alcohol and alcohol abuse.

Mary Elesha-Adams, Health Educator at ECU's Student Health Service, said: "The purpose of Alcohol Awareness Week is to provide information and activities that will help students, staff and faculty develop an awareness of alcohol issues and to develop responsible alcohol usage."

On Oct. 19, at 4 p.m., a banner judging will take place at Ficklen Stadium. The contest is a new event in which campus organizations, fraternities and sororities will make banners that promote alcohol awareness. The winning group will receive $50.

Thursday from 1-5 p.m., a demonstration featuring Vince and Larry — the "Crash Guys" — will be held on the central campus mall, concerning the use of seatbelts and drinking and driving. The event, sponsored by Scott Hall, will include volunteer students or faculty testing out the "condensor" — an automobile impact simulator.

Casino Night will be held on Friday from 8-10 p.m. at Mendenhall Student Center in room 244. The event, sponsored by the Student Union, Special Events, and Publicity and Public Relations Committees, will include games of chance such as blackjack and bingo. Players will bet with play money and at the end of the night may use the money to bid on prizes at an auction. Mocktails (alcohol-free "mixed drinks") will also be served.

On Saturday, winning banners will be on display at the ECU/Syracuse football game at Ficklen Stadium.

Exhibits and displays will be at Garrett Dormitory on Monday from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. The information will be part of the program

"Alcohol: The Fatal Attraction." Mocktails will also be served at this event, which is sponsored by the Central Area Council.

The program "Using Alcohol Wisely: Methyl and Ethyl Speak Out" will be held at Fletcher Hall from 4-6 p.m. on Tuesday. This event is sponsored by the West Area Council. Also on Tuesday at 7 p.m., the Inter-Fraternity Council, Panhellenic, BACCHUS, and 244 Mendenhall will sponsor a talk by Mark Usry, Assistant Professor of Business Law at James Madison University, on "Risk Management."

Stress needs to be prevented

Two senior nursing students asked the Health Coordinator about stress, and what some of its possible contributing factors are.

Health Column By Mary Elesha-Adams

Stress is your body's physical and emotional reaction to change or to a situation that may be dangerous, confusing, irritating, or boring. Stress is a part of everyday life and can be good or bad.

Graduating from high school, starting college, and deciding on a major are examples of "good stress" (or eustress). "Good stressors" provide a positive, motivating force.

"Bad stress" or distress, can lead to serious health problems if it continues. Examples of "bad stress" are wrecking your car, failing a midterm, or breaking up with a girlfriend or boyfriend.

We all would like to avoid bad stress, but sometimes it's just not possible. Since we can't avoid stress, we should think about stress positively; life would be dull and purposeless without it.

Signs of Stress Can Include:

Grouchiness
Irritability
Inability to concentrate Insomnia
Fatigue
Eating too much or too little
Diarrhea, cramps
Headaches
Neck and backaches
Butterflies in stomach
Chest pain

Ways to Reduce Stress

1. Organize your life! Redo your room, apartment, or house so that you know where everything is.

2. Organize your time by setting priorities. Decide each day what is most important to accomplish and do it.

3. Plan to spend 15 minutes alone each day. Clean your mind of all thoughts and relax.

4. Find a quiet place to study, and study on a regular basis. Cramming and procrastination will only increase your stress.

5. Take breaks from studying — 10 minutes every hour should re-energize you for more. Don't give in to peer pressure and take a "let's go out for one drink break."

6. Eat a balanced diet every day; junk food, and too much sugar, caffeine, and alcohol may contribute to irritability or fatigue.

7. Get enough sleep and rest. Everyone's needs are different. You've had enough sleep when you wake up feeling refreshed. Don't cut classes though!

8. Establish a balance between work, school and exercise.

9. Learn how to say no. Don't over-extend yourself by trying to do too much.

10. Talk about problems with friends or family.

11. Stretching and progressive muscle relaxation can help you achieve a relaxation response.

12. Keep your sense of humor.

13. Learn to accept what you cannot change.

Waste treatment plant halted

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The U.S. government has put an indefinite hold on proceedings against the state over a new law that effectively blocks a proposed hazardous-waste treatment plant in Scotland County, but plant foes say they aren't celebrating yet.

"An indefinite postponement is the next best thing to saying, 'Let's turn out the lights, the party's over,'" said Richard Regan, environmental coordinator for the Center for Community Action in Robeson County.

"It seems logical that the next step would be for EPA to drop the whole thing."

But environmental leaders fear that the federal government will use the threat of a cutoff of federal toxic-waste cleanup money to force the state to accept the facility.

The Environmental Protection Agency announced last year that it was initiating action that could strip the state of its ability to manage its own hazardous waste. The action came in the wake of the General Assembly's passage of a bill that greatly restricts the amount of treated waste water that hazardous-waste plants can discharge.

Alcohol awareness

"If You Wanna Get High... Go Fly a Kite," the final event of the week, is sponsored by Kitty Hawk Kites and will take place on College Hill. Kitty Hawk Kites will decorate, and skits involving alcohol-related situations will be performed.

A question and answer session will follow each skit. Ms. Elesha-Adams said: "We are doing these alcohol-awareness activities for this one week, but we want students to be aware all the time. Programs and classes are given throughout the year, and there are many sources of alcohol information available on campus."

Ms. Elesha-Adams said that pamphlets and a film concerning drinking and driving can be obtained at the Student Health Center. Other drug and alcohol information resources and clinical services are listed in "Alcohol/Drug Abuse," a publication sponsored by The Division of Student Life.

George Bush and Michael Dukakis appealed to working class Americans with pledges to crack down on criminals and help first-time buyers purchase homes as the two White House contenders crammed for their second and final presidential debate.

The Republican presidential nominee, hammering away at a preferred topic — crime — accused his rival of being more concerned about the fate of criminals than their victims and vowed a different approach if elected.

Marcos invests

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The State Department wants prosecutors to end their investigation of Ferdinand Marcos and offer him a plea bargain that would keep him out of jail, cost him millions of dollars, it reported today.

Citing a confidential State Department cable, the Los Angeles Times said federal officials "the deposed Philippine president might 'seek to involve and harass' U.S. and Philippine officials by alleging improper or gal conduct, if he is indicted."

Under the plea agreement outlined in the cable, Marcos would have to return hundreds of millions of dollars in assets allegedly taken from his country treasury before he fled to Hawaii in 1986, but he would avoid a prison sentence.

Sources familiar with the investigation told the Times U.S. officials are worried Marcos may threaten to politically damaging information about his dealings with the U.S. government to pressure the White House to block prosecution.

The cable also states, without elaborating, that the State Department is concerned that Marcos

As East Carolina University has grown, the image of the university has not been portrayed consistently, according to Chancellor Richard Eakin. The August of this year, Eakin pointed an Image Task Force to address a broad range of related issues concerning University and to work with the vice chancellor of institutional advancement to lead the image ECU wants to project.

The first issue to be addressed under this charge from the chancellor is consideration of the ECU is presented and reinforced through graphic design symbols.

The subcommittee chair, Ms. Kollar is currently soliciting input from all members of the campus community concerning the visual image of ECU. It traveled in internal and external publications, stationary, t-shirts, and public announcements. Ed Wheatley (Business) of the University Image Force who appointed the committee, has emphasized the importance of the group. "Because of the multiple images representing the university, there is no one common image of ECU portrayed internally and external audiences commented."

Crime tops "promises" lists

George Bush and Michael Dukakis appealed to working class Americans with pledges to crack down on criminals and help first-time buyers purchase homes as the two White House contenders crammed for their second and final presidential debate.

The Republican presidential nominee, hammering away at his preferred topic — crime — accused his rival of being more concerned about the fate of criminals than their victims and vowed a different approach if elected.

"I'm going to bring an attitude to the White House that has more sympathy for the victims of crime than for the criminals," Bush told an audience Monday at a Knights of Columbus hall in Trenton, N.J.

While the vice president courted votes in Trenton's Italian-American neighborhood, Dukakis traveled to a community built on the premise that affordable housing should be available to post-World War II families.

The Democratic nominee used a visit to a typical family in Levittown, N.Y., and a speech at the local high school to introduce his plan that would allow first-time buyers to use up to $10,000 of their IRAs or pension plans for a down payment.

Dukakis was meeting with Vietnam War veterans today in Cambridge, Mass., and delivering an economics speech at Tufts University in nearby Medford. Democratic vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen was campaigning in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, two key electoral states with 16 and 25 votes, respectively. Bush was heading to Seattle where he was giving another tough-on-crime speech — white-collar that is — to business students at Seattle University.

With Election Day exactly four weeks away, the latest nationwide poll showed the presidential race too close to call.

Bush leads Dukakis 50-47 percent in the ABC News-Washington Post poll conducted Wednesday through Sunday. The survey of 600 likely voters had a margin of error of plus or minus five percentage points, statistically negating the lead.

A Los Angeles Times poll released Monday found that Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle remains a drag on the GOP ticket.

Bush-Quayle leads Dukakis-Bentsen 44-41 percent, but Bush alone leads his Democratic opponent 48-39 percent.

The weekend survey of 893 registered voters had a margin of error of five percentage points.

But the poll also found that Dukakis' negative rating was higher than Quayle — 45 percent to 40 percent.

Quayle, who campaigned in Michigan and Ohio, gave what he described as the "final word" on his answer to last week's debate question of what he would do if he was suddenly propelled into the presidency.

Quayle said he would make a request to address the nation and would consult with allies, but other steps would depend on the situation.

"Obviously you do different things under an assassination. The first thing you do in an assassination — I would still say a prayer for myself and the nation — but the first thing you do is you get on the phone and call the head of the CIA and see what he thinks it was," Quayle said during a question-and-answer session after an economics speech in Detroit.

Quayle said he would have "contingency plans under different situations."

The Democratic nominee on Monday also marched in the Columbus Day parade in New York City where he was joined by New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, Mayor Ed Koch and John F. Kennedy Jr.

Although he received a warm reception from the thousands who lined the streets in the traditional Italian-American event, Dukakis received some disheartening news from Il Progresso, the Italian-language newspaper.

In its Columbus Day edition, the 85,000-circulation daily endorsed the candidacy of George Bush.

Marcos investigation to come to a halt

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The State Department wants U.S. prosecutors to end their fraud investigation of Ferdinand Marcos and offer him a plea bargain that would keep him out of jail but cost him millions of dollars, it was reported today.

Citing a confidential State Department cable, the Los Angeles Times said federal officials fear the deposed Philippine president might "seek to involve and embarrass" U.S. and Philippine officials by alleging improper or illegal conduct, if he is indicted.

Under the plea agreement outlined in the cable, Marcos would have to return hundreds of millions of dollars in assets he allegedly took from his country's treasury before he fled to Hawaii in 1986, but he would avoid a prison sentence.

Sources familiar with the investigation told the Times that U.S. officials are worried that Marcos may threaten to reveal politically damaging information about his dealings with the federal government to pressure the White House to block prosecution.

The cable also states, without elaborating, that the State Department is concerned that Marcos may be attempting to destabilize the current government of the Philippines.

The classified cable from Abraham D. Sofaer, the State Department's chief legal counsel, was relayed to other top department officials and U.S. Ambassador Nicholas Platt in Manila.

Prosecutors and diplomatic advisers disagree over when to initiate plea bargaining in the Marcos case, which is being handled by U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani in New York City.

The State Department wants to give Marcos "a last chance, prior to indictment," to reach a settlement, the cable said. Federal prosecutors prefer to indict him first to gain added leverage according to the report.

"(The Department of) Justice has presented no good reason why we should not continue to insist on offering Mr. Marcos a chance to reach a voluntary plea agreement prior to indictment," the cable said.

Drugs

Nothing but political fodder

Drugs. The very word is enough to strike terror into the vestigial hearts of politicians, all of whom seem aghast at the prospect that they might appear any less zealous about the situation than their comrades.

Although it's been said, many times, many ways, it apparently hasn't yet been said loudly enough that the whole purpose of the drug "controversy" is to provide politicians with a complete non-issue about which they can beat their breasts. The drug "controversy" is a beautiful example of empty politics: no matter what his views on other issues, any politician (or virtually any other public figure, for that matter) will look at drugs only one way. No thought required.

The idea has gained widespread support at home and abroad — many other countries, including the Soviet Union, have jumped on the anti-drug bandwagon. There seems to be almost universal agreement that drugs are responsible for America's problems — from the federal deficit to the spread of secular humanism to the heartbreak of psoriasis.

But what, exactly, is wrong with drugs?

One: they're bad for you. But then, so are smoking, drinking alcohol and voting for Republicans. One of the choices we face as adults is how we want to kill ourselves — whether by slashing wrists, or, as Thoreau would put it, by "frittering our lives away by degrees."

Two: air traffic controllers and railroad workers use them, thereby endangering the lives of innocent people. This line of thinking generally ignores the fact that people who are deprived of one form of self-destructive behavior will seek another. If forced to give up drugs, users usually turn to alcohol or some other form of self-destruction, and the end result is substantially the same.

Three: drugs are responsible for inner-city violence and gang wars. True, drugs are a contributing factor, but poverty and frustration are the major causes. Gang violence existed long before drugs were such a problem; the important difference is that today the gangs can afford bigger and better weapons. However, they wouldn't have access to these weapons were it not for laughable gun-control laws, and they wouldn't be making such a hefty profit in the first place if drugs were not illegal. Therefore, the problem exists more because of government than in spite of it.

One good way to deal with the problem would be to find out why people take drugs — to escape, of course, but to escape from exactly what? Simple humdrum existence? Reruns? The heartbreak of psoriasis?

If the government were to focus but one-tenth the energy it is exerting to "fight the war on drugs" on this aspect of the drug problem, they could conceivably win the battle without bloodshed. But that would be sensible and it would take time, so it's obviously an unfit solution. Besides, it's worth keeping in mind that the drug "controversy" has a symbiotic relationship with politicians. If they actually solve the problem, that takes away the ultimate political "issue": a subject about which the candidates can posture and talk tough while remaining completely safe from the ravages of intelligent criticism.

Politicians are currently being selected for office largely on the basis of their ability to impersonate Rambo, to "get tough" on "issues" like drugs. No politician who wants to be elected (which included, at last count, all politicians) would exchange "I'm for putting drug pushers behind bars and saving our helpless little kids" for "I'm for finding out why people use drugs, and I'm for offering them more constructive ways to deal with the world."

The 1980s, so much like the 1950s in other ways, has at last generated its own brand of McCarthyism. In the '50s, the commies were lurking around every corner, just waiting to pollute your child's precious bodily fluids; it was taken as self-evident that the commies were the root of all evil. In the era of glasnost, the word "commie" has been exchanged for "druggie" (or, in many versions, "drug pusher"), but the tone, style and content are virtually identical. And the argument is still as valid.

Dukakis a blatant liberal

To the editor:
Many, including many liberals, are trying to portray Mike Dukakis as a "conservative" or "moderate." Dukakis is neither, however. He's a liberal who shares many of the views of the ultra-liberal Jesse Jackson.

Why are some people trying to present Dukakis as not liberal? Because the word "liberal" is a dirty word in politics today. Liberal policies have proven to be tremendous failures in every arena, from foreign policy to social spending, from moral issues to education.

A solid majority of the American people identify themselves as conservative. Mike Dukakis's views do not reflect the views, values, beliefs, or needs of the vast majority of the American people.

I challenge anyone who claims that Dukakis is not a liberal to examine the simple facts. How could Dukakis want to kill our missile defenses ... be against the Pledge of Allegiance ... favor outlawing firearms ... veto a bill that mandates sentences for drug pushers ... favor abortion-on-demand ... favor forced busing, the ERA, quotas, and comparable worth ... spend, spend, spend and tax, tax, tax ... say Lt. Col. Oliver North is not a hero.

Commute the sentences of over 50 murderers ... give vacations to non-parolable rapists and killers ... fund pro-communist enemies of the U.S. ... toast the communist revolution in Red China ... try to repeal the laws against blasphemy, fornication, unnatural acts, crimes against nature with "man or beast" and promote lethal behavior with gay rights laws — and be construed by any stretch of the imagination as anything but an ultra-liberal?

Buccaneer racist?

To the editor:
To editor of 1988 Buccaneer, Kimberly E. Kayes:
After viewing the 1988 Buccaneer I became very disgusted that there were no reviews of the activities the black students on this campus experienced and enjoyed the past academic year. In the section entitled "Performances" I couldn't believe that one of East Carolina's biggest concerts was not included.

I am referring to the Anita Baker concert that was held last fall semester. Ms. Kayes, you nor your staff overlooked highlights from the Fizz or the Jimmy Buffet concert. I am aware that East Carolina is a predominantly white school but there are black students enrolled here.

The Buccaneer also includes events such as Greek Week, Pi Kappa Phi Toga Party, Phi Tau Chill Thill and even the incident which occurred on Biltmore Street. If fails to include such events as Greek Step shows and minority day. I am outraged that every group of students cannot be fairly represented.

In essence, I feel that the Buccaneer is a bad representation of the student as a whole at ECU.

Dukakis spends

To the editor:
The statement "the Reagan Administration is responsible for the federal deficit" is a politically motivated lie. Let's look at the facts, not Democratic rhetoric.

FACT: The percentage of the GNP going toward defense spending has declined since 1960 — while welfare outlays increased from 4.8% to 10.8% of the GNP.

FACT: The President doesn't spend the money. Congress does, and it's the liberal Democrat majority in congress which is responsible for the deficit.

FACT: Since 1980, federal revenues, despite Reagan's tax cuts, have risen 77%, while spending has risen 79%. Thus, 97% of the current deficit is now the effect of pre-Reagan liberal Democrat spending-and-taxing spree.

FACT: During the last year of Republican control of the Senate, congress endorsed Reagan's economic policies — policies responsible for reducing the federal deficit for 1987 by $73 billion to 1.7% of the GNP, the lowest proportion of GNP since 1982.

FACT: Since then, the Democrats have ignored the Republicans' earnest actions on deficit reduction and have ignored Reagan's budget plans. Instead, they've spent $89 billion more than Reagan requested, mostly with pork barrel spending sprees, and then blamed the Reagan administration for the huge deficit they created!

FACT: Michael Dukakis has ruined Massachusetts economy with his huge tax-and-spend policies. In 1986, Massachusetts had a deficit surplus of $912 million. Today, the state faces a $600 million deficit. Massachusetts has lost 90,000 industrial jobs since 1984. The 1978-1983 "Massachusetts Miracle" occurred because of Proposition 2 (a major tax cut) and huge defense contracts, both of which Dukakis opposed.

The deficit will remain until Republicans control the presidency and Congress.

To Wyatt M. Jones IV:
Wyatt, thank you for your latest letter. I certainly confirmed my assumptions about your information coming from some bad dream. All of your information came from the Spectrum, one of the most liberal media productions ever.

Wyatt you said that I was not intelligent enough to debate the issues, that I could only cloud our discussion with mudslinging. That really hurt, ... but I got over it partying downtown Thursday night. You may be right about my intelligence, but everybody can't be a freshman political science major. I'm sorry about the mudslinging, but as my old Irish Grandmother Maggie used to say, "If you can't handle the heat get out of the fire."

On the serious side Wyatt, in the last few weeks we have had a spree of people shooting our children at schools in South Carolina and Florida. How can anyone vote for a man like Dukakis who doesn't support the death penalty for these people. The unemployment rate has fallen again to a new low. Major investment firms are predicting lower interest rates and low inflation coupled with strong growth in the GNP next year. We are the strongest country in the world, no other country's people are as free as ours.

Why should we risk all this on a man whose idea of freedom is letting murderers out on weekend passes. A man who let a billion dollar surplus turn into a four-hundred-million dollar deficit in his state. A man whose own police department endorses his opponent. A man whose smile looks like Jimmy Carter, when we can have George Bush. A man with good ole common sense and Southern Christian ethics.

RALEIGH (AP) — Hatcher did not make any demand on the federal government during negotiations to release hostages at The Robeson newspaper Feb. 1, Gov. Martin's chief of staff to today.

Phil Kirk, who earlier testified for the prosecution called this morning by Hatcher. "Did I ever make a demand that the government of the States do anything?" he asked.

"Indirectly, you did," you said you would not sue any local or state official, said. But Kirk said he did not suggest that Hatcher surrender highway patrol troopers or law officers other than the Hatcher is charged with a criminal hostage-taking, which requires that someone make a demand on the federal government. Timothy Jacobs, Hatcher's defendant, was acquitted in charge earlier this week.

The two still face charges of manufacture of illegal firearms conspiracy and making a threat.

Under cross-examination Kirk said he stressed the federal in negotiating Hatcher's release. "It was my intention they surrender one else. I was trying to keep negotiations open so that side would say the heck with it and break off negotiations cause who knows what have happened then."

Hatcher also called attorney Martha Geer and Wolensky of the U.S. Service in Louisiana, whom testified that he called them saying he had that indicated law enforcement involvement in drug traffic. "Did Mr. Hatcher tell you 11 of the people named in a map had already been arrested and charged with narcotics violations?"

Assistant U.S. Attorney Bruce asked Wolensky.

"No," Wolensky responded. Hatcher's final witness, J.T. Freeman, said he saw maps Hatcher had and was to have them in his house. "I said, 'Man, I don't see this,'" Freeman said, that he let Hatcher spend night in his home after seeing maps.

"I was scared to call anywhere and scared to let there," Freeman said. "Early that morning and relief I had when Eddie Jacobs called."

Attorneys for Jacobs testified they have a few left before they close their case. On Tuesday Jacobs testified that he and Hatcher agreed one would get hurt during siegework would get hurt during siegework.

"We didn't want a confrontation with anybody," testified. "We just figured get in and get out," Jacobs and Hatcher decided to take The Robesonian office building.

AIDS protest shut down

ROCKVILLE, Md. — Hundreds of demonstrators with the government's response to the AIDS crisis effectively shut the Food and Administration's headquarters today.

Authorities had arrested at least 50 protesters by morning. Demonstrators said they were aiming to rest by early afternoon. Scores of federal employees were stranded outside sprawling 17-story building when Montgomery County police stopped letting workers in at 7:30 a.m.

POWs existence still denied by Laotians

By BRYAN HASKINS
Campus Spectrum

With the recent arrest of two activists in Laos, the POW/MIA issue has once again been thrust into the spotlight. It has been well over a decade since the United States withdrew from the Indochina conflict, yet people are still striving to learn the fate of their brothers, fathers, husbands, and sons. Why? What is it that leads them to believe that American, dead or alive, are being withheld from returning?

In the years since the U.S. pullout, there have been literally thousands of sightings by refugees who have fled Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia. A good number of these have been proven to be falsified, perhaps in the hopes of gaining preferential treatment by U.S. immigration authorities. Many, however, have neither been proved nor disproved, thus casting a shadow of doubt on Vietnamese claims that there are no Americans left alive. Still, there has been a great deal of bureaucratic foot-dragging on this sensitive issue; and the American public has grown weary of looking backwards.

This does not, however, change the fact that there are approximately 2,500 Americans listed as missing in action. For years the government listed almost all of the MIAs "presumed dead," until a breakthrough occurred in 1980. In April of that year, a rebel patrol operating in Laos contacted the CIA, claiming that 30 Americans were being held in an open-air prison camp in Laos. In late 1980, a U.S. reconnaissance satellite was "bumped" into an orbit over the camp. The resulting photograph revealed "30 non-Asian by measurable length of shadow" means that the prisoners are caucasians, which could make them anything from French to Australian to American.

The "figure 52" is significant, because it was the symbol that American POWs used during the war to signal their presence to reconnaissance pilots. The newly elected Reagan administration became convinced of a U.S. POW presence, and the Joint Special Operation Center was given the go-ahead to formulate a rescue operation. Helicopter pilots capable of the mission were identified, and a model of the camp was constructed at Ft. Bragg for training use by the Delta Force. The operation, however, was begun too late to avoid the monsoon season. Furthermore, a private rescue mission failed to reach the camp, and the prisoners were removed to a hidden location. The official mission was then dropped.

In July of 1981, the Socialist Republic of Vietnam returned the remains of Commander Ronald Dodge. Up until the time he was returned, the Vietnamese claimed that they had never held him, even though a Japanese news agency had filmed Commander Dodge while he was being held alive as a POW during the war. The U.S. know that the Vietnamese were lying when they said that all the POWs and all remains that they were holding have been returned in "Operation Homecoming." We knew that Commander Dodge was still being held; yet the powers that be obliterated him with the stroke of a pen just as surely as if the mountains of the central highlands had fallen upon him and swallowed him up.

In 1954, the Geneva Accords were signed, the French pulled out of Indochina, and North Vietnam returned what it said were all of the POWs it was holding. They were lying then, too. In 1980, a French naval pilot escaped from Vietnam, having been held for 26 years.

In 1969, Laos claimed to be holding over 158 American POWs. To this date, only one has been returned (Emmit Kay — 1974), yet now Laos claims that they are not holding any American POWs. Where are the rest of them, then? Have the mountains fallen upon them as well?

Martin's chief of staff testifies

RALEIGH (AP) - Eddie Hatcher did not make any direct demand on the federal government during negotiations to release hostages at The Robesonian newspaper Feb. 1, Gov. Jim Martin's chief of staff testified today.

Phil Kirk, who earlier had testified for the prosecution, was called this morning by Hatcher.

"Did I ever make a demand that the government of the United States do anything?" Hatcher asked.

"Indirectly, you did in that you said you would not surrender to any local or state officials," Kirk said. But Kirk said he did not suggest that Hatcher surrender to highway patrol troopers or state law officers other than the SBI.

Hatcher is charged with federal hostage-taking, which requires that someone make a demand on the federal government. Timothy Jacobs, Hatcher's co-defendant, was acquitted on the charge earlier this week.

The two still face charges of manufacture of illegal firearms, conspiracy and making a bomb threat.

Under cross-examination, Kirk said he stressed the word federal in negotiating with Hatcher because "it was my opinion they would surrender to no one else. I was trying to keep the negotiations open so that neither side would say 'the heck with it' and break off negotiations because who knows what could have happened then."

Hatcher also called Raleigh attorney Martha Geer and John Wolensky of the U.S. Customs Service in Louisiana, both of whom testified that Hatcher called them saying he had maps that indicated law enforcement involvement in drug trafficking.

"Did Mr. Hatcher tell you that 11 of the people named on that map had already been arrested and charged with narcotics violations?"

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Bruce asked Wolensky.

"No," Wolensky responded.

Hatcher's final witness, the Rev. J.T. Freeman, said he saw the maps Hatcher had and was scared to have them in his house.

"I said, 'Man, I don't want to see this,'" Freeman said, adding that he let Hatcher spend the night in his home after seeing the maps.

"I was scared to carry him anywhere and scared to leave him there," Freeman said. "He left early that morning and what a relief I had when Eddie left."

Attorneys for Jacobs indicated they have a few witnesses left before they close their case.

On Tuesday Jacobs testified that he and Hatcher agreed that no one would get hurt during the siege would get hurt during the siege.

"We didn't want any confrontation with anybody," Jacobs testified. "We just figured we'd get in and get out." Jacobs said he and Hatcher decided to take over The Robesonian office because it would be a good way to draw attention to their concern about problems in Robeson County.

"We agreed that nobody would be hurt at The Robesonian," Jacobs said. "And we agreed that we would be in and out of there in two hours because we thought Governor Martin would call when Eddie wanted to talk to him."

Also Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Terrence Boyle said he had made a "written notation" during a bench conference to cite one of Jacobs' attorneys, Lewis Pitts, for contempt of court. Boyle did not disclose what prompted the contempt citation, saying he would decide punishment at the conclusion of the trial.

Pitts, asked what brought the citation, said, "I have no comment on that. I am just very troubled that the judge has ruled as irrelevant every major defense we have brought up to bring out the injustice in Robeson County."

Boyle has ruled that Hatcher and Jacobs cannot use the "necessity defense," which is an attempt to justify their actions on the premise that their lives were in danger. Based on that ruling, the judge has not allowed evidence attempting to show that drug trafficking was widespread in the county prior to the Feb. 1 takeover of the newspaper and that there was discrimination against Indians and blacks.

Jacobs testified that Hatcher told him two days before the Feb. 1 takeover that Robeson County Sheriff Hubert Stone wanted to kill him because of evidence he had linking law enforcement officers to drug trafficking.

"I asked him why the sheriff would want to do that," Jacobs testified. "He showed me some maps with names on them and I said 'Oh my God, with what you've got, they will kill you.'"

"There was no doubt in my mind, just from my own knowledge of drug kingpins in Robeson County, that what he had was hot," Jacobs said.

Jacobs said he and Hatcher considered taking over the county courthouse, but decided it was too large. He said the two agreed on The Robesonian as their target on Jan. 30, and took over the newspaper two days later.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON: Congratulations on winning "The 1988 East Carolina Homecoming Spirit Award." Let's continue our quest for a Cup Bumann this summer in St. Louis!

SIG EPS & DATES: It started Friday when the float was constructed. At 1:11 "Boo-Ga-Ga" was conducted. "Column" was crowned for the upcoming year - take care of that queen - oh she's so dear. Saturday a.m. by one "new" house we were sent until, until the game we screamed "The Plane The Plane." We then rocked the cabin all through the night - with hundreds of balloons and twinkly lights. We awoke the next morning to the popping of Cores and that champagne smell - no one was left standing - not even "The Date from Hell!" —Thanks, James!

DELTA ZETA: Congrats to our flag football team on an awesome season. Way to go girls!

DELTA ZETA: What a weekend! The food was scrumptious, the house looked great, and Ticia Plath had a wiggle date. Marie looked beautiful sitting in her chair.

so glad we could all make it there. Slipping and sliding on the kitchen floor, Julie Smith must be sore. Shelley and Fred were on the go, dancing to the DJ's bad disco. We all showed up with cool dates to make a success of Homecoming '88!

LOST: One party gag nose at TKE Champagne Brunch. If found, please return to shoeless, shadeless, shaky date.

HEY KRISTI: The weekend started off with a bang, too bad date #1 couldn't hang. Well, you found a new date but I kept my late. Hope next year is just as much fun, maybe by then you'll learn how to fold your tongue. —TICIA.

WIGGLY AND DATE #2: We love you — you know who.

JAMES FORD GRIFFIN—A SIG-EP LEGEND! Thank you so much for one incredible Homecoming weekend! Every aspect was 100% first class! The best Homecoming ever! Fraternally—your Sig-Ep Brothers.

CO-OP EDUCATION

Cooperative Education, a free service offered by the University, is designed to help you find career-related work experience before you graduate. We would like to extend an invitation to all students to attend a Co-op Information Seminar in the GCB (see schedule below for Oct. Seminars). The only bonuses we can offer you for taking time from your busy schedule are:

*extra cash to help cover the cost of college expenses or perhaps to increase your "fun" budget.

*opportunities to test a career choice if you have made one or to explore career options if undecided about a future career, and

*a highly "marketable" degree, which includes a valuable career-related experience, when you graduate. Come by to see us today!

CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP

Christian Fellowship will be held every Thurs. at 6:00 in the Culture Center. You are invited to join us.

C. EDWARDS: Hey. Guess who? Remember Oct. 13, 1987? Kinda blows your mind, eh? I just wanted to let you know that you are more special to me than ever.

and I wanted to thank you for everything. A year of love, friendship, and incredibly fun times. You're the best. See you at lunch. Love, Chrissy.

THE WAY CAMPUS FELLOWSHIP TWIG FELLOWSHIPS: Are available every Tuesday and Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at 2007 Tiffany Dr. in Heritage Village. Call 355-5164 for details. Hot Bible! Great fellowship!

PIKA: Get psyched for our social next Thursday night. Love, the AZD's.

CONGRATULATIONS TO SONIA LOVE: On becoming the new Homecoming Queen, also to Emily Proctor and Chris Kelly on being 1st and 2nd runners up.

TO ALL FRATERNITIES AND SOCIETIES: Have a great Fall Break. Love the AZD's.

PAULA JONES: Congratulations on becoming a new sister of Alpha Xi Delta. Love the AZD's.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON: Congratulations on winning "The 1988 East Carolina Homecoming Spirit Award." Let's continue our quest for a Cup Buncann this summer in St. Louis!

SIG EPS & DATES: It started Friday when the float was constructed. At 1:11 "Boo-Ga-Ga" was conducted. "Columbus" was crowned for the upcoming year. The care of that queen - oh she's so dear. Saturday a.m. by one "new" house we were same until, until the game we screamed "The Plane. The Plane." We then rocked the cabin all through the night - with hundreds of balloons and twinkly lights. We awoke the next morning to the popping of Cores and that champagne smell - no one was left standing - not even "The Date from Hell!" - Thanks, James!

DELTA ZETA: Congrats to our flag football team on an awesome season. Way to go girls!

SPAGHETTI DINNER: The infamous Delta Zeta event is just around the corner. Tickets are $3 and available from any Delta Zeta sister or pledge. Be there October 23 from 5-8 p.m.

THETA CHI: Congratulations on your chapter from Delta Zeta.

DELTA ZETA: What a weekend! The food was scrumptious, the house looked great, and Ticia Pilati had a wiggle date. Marie looked beautiful sitting in her chair, so glad we could all make it there. Slipping and sliding on the kitchen floor, Julie Smith must be sore. Shelley and Fred were on the go, dancing to the DJ's bad disco. We all showed up with cool dates to make a success of Homecoming '88!

LOST ON WAY TO HOME: I left my car keys in the trunk. If found, please return to shoeless, shadeless, shabby date.

HEY KRISTI: The weekend started off with a bang, too bad date #1 couldn't hang. Well, you found a new date but I kept my late. Hope next year is just as much fun, maybe by then you'll learn how to fold your tongue. -TICIA.

WIGGLY AND DATE #2: We love you - you know who.

JAMES FORD GRIFFIN-A SIG-EP LEGEND! Thank you so much for one incredible Homecoming weekend! Every aspect was 100% first class! The best Homecoming ever! Fraternally - your Sig-Ep Brothers.

ALPHA PHI PLEDGES: Y'all are doing an excellent job! Keep up the good work. Miss Prez-Ann you should be proud! We love you - The Alpha Phi Sisters. P.S. - When is the surprise social? Hint Hint.

SOUND MIXTURES FALL NEWSLETTER: Oct. 1, Theta Chi and guests set new maximum capacity record at Rotary Club. Once again the Rotary neighbors call cops and cops pump down the volume. Oct. 7, another Alpha Omicron Pi bash. MVP award (most vicious parties) goes to Sam, Melinda, Teresa and Macon. Slip and slide, snowballs, beer fights, what a mess. Oct. 8, Sigma Phi Epsilon homecoming in the woods. Awesome party y'all, Boogaloo! Just please don't bump the table! Special thanks to Bassetti, Peterson, Heim, Boone, Shell, Upchurch, and James. Keep the parties coming, Bob-Sound Mixtures DJ Service, 752-4916.

THE BROTHERS OF SAE would like to thank all of our guests and dates, we all had a great time this weekend. Waldo - better keep an eye on your brother next time. P.S. is Bolo in the house!

ALPHA XI DELTA PLEDGES: We would like to thank you for helping us on the Homecoming float. -Pledges of Pi Kappa Alpha.

PI KAPPA ALPHA PLEDGE AUCTION: To be held at the Attic Sunday, October 23. All interested parties call 752-9168.

CHI ALPHA OMEGA: Congratulations to our new little sisters: Stephanie Folsom, Missy Hargett, Betsy Hicks, Shannon Kenley, Mitzi Mauldin, Cindi Moye, Kathy Orr, Rachael Seavey, Dana Shrum, Susan Wallace, and Sherri Williams. Many thanks to Pam Martin for all your hard work. We love you all! -Your brothers and sisters in Chi Alpha Omicron and in Christ.

PIRATE WALK: Would like to thank the Pika's and Alpha Phi for their help with Pirate Walk this week.

CO-OP EDUCATION

Cooperative Education, a free service offered by the University, is designed to help you find career-related work experience before you graduate. We would like to extend an invitation to all students to attend a Co-op Information Seminar in the GCB (see schedule below for Oct. Seminars). The only bonuses we can offer you for taking time from your busy schedule are:

*extra cash to help cover the cost of college expenses or perhaps to increase your "fun" budget.
*opportunities to test a career choice if you have made one or to explore career options if undecided about a future career, and
*a highly "marketable" degree, which includes a valuable career-related experience, when you graduate.

Come by to see us today!

Security measures quell strikes, not opposition

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Thousands of workers ended strikes today in the face of heightened security measures, but other protesters pressed demands for economic and political changes and forced out a regional leader.

The government struggled to defuse the mushrooming protests fueled by economic turmoil and ethnic Serbian nationalism, in two of six national republics, Montenegro and Serbia.

Communist Party leaders in two other republics skeptical of the Serbian cause came to the defense of the government.

Authorities imposed unspecified emergency measures Monday in Montenegro, according to the official news agency Tanjug. Several Yugoslavs speaking on condition of anonymity reported Monday that civil defense units in Belgrade were put on a higher level of alert, although no sign of trouble surfaced in the capital.

About 15,000 people at Niksic, a town about 30 miles from the Montenegrin capital of Titograd, joined about 3,000 steel workers in a protest Monday, Tanjug said. However, the workers ended their three-day strike today.

Workers are angry about national economic problems, including 217 percent inflation, 15 percent unemployment and a $21 billion foreign debt.

Protesters in Niksic demanded Monday that Montenegro's police chief be fired for allowing authorities to use tear gas and clubs to put down weekend protests. They dramatized their point by hoisting a man wearing a gas mask on the shoulders of the crowd, Tanjug reported.

"We are not demanding the gallows for those who ordered the beating up of our comrades, we are only demanding their sacking," the agency quoted worker Miloslav Michunovich as saying.

A member of Montenegro's ruling Presidium, Radivoje Brajovic, told a rally in Titograd in an emotional address that he was resigning, and the regional party leadership held an emergency meeting.

Later Monday, 1,000 construction workers in Titograd ended their strike there.

Meanwhile, two of Yugoslavia's six republics — Slovenia and Bosnia Herzegovina — issued statements supporting the national government's denunciation of nationalist protests.

"We reject ... models of a strong state ... and imposition of socialism and democracy as tailored by the Serbian leadership," Communists from liberal Slovenia said Monday.

But the leadership of Serbia defended its drive for more control of its two provinces, which are nominally autonomous. The Presidium of the Party and the Presidency of Serbia denounced Monday unidentified politicians and journalists in Slovenia who it said "are spreading fear of Serbia."

Ethnic tensions, never far from the surface in this country with numerous rival nationalities, have increasingly come forward in the growing number of protests this year.

Many have centered on one of Serbia's autonomous provinces, Kosovo, which borders Albania. Ethnic Albanians, who are mostly Moslems, outnumber mainly Christian Serbs there, and the Serbs claim they are being harassed and forced to leave.

However, many Yugoslavs elsewhere worry about the growing nationalism of Serbs, the largest minority in this nation of about 23 million.

The policy-making Communist Central Committee of Serbia were to meet today to discuss a drive of the republic's leader, Slobodan Milosevic, for more control of Serbia's two provinces.

Get A's and B's for your parents, and a CD for yourself.

Try a Macintosh today—you may win a Sony Discman.

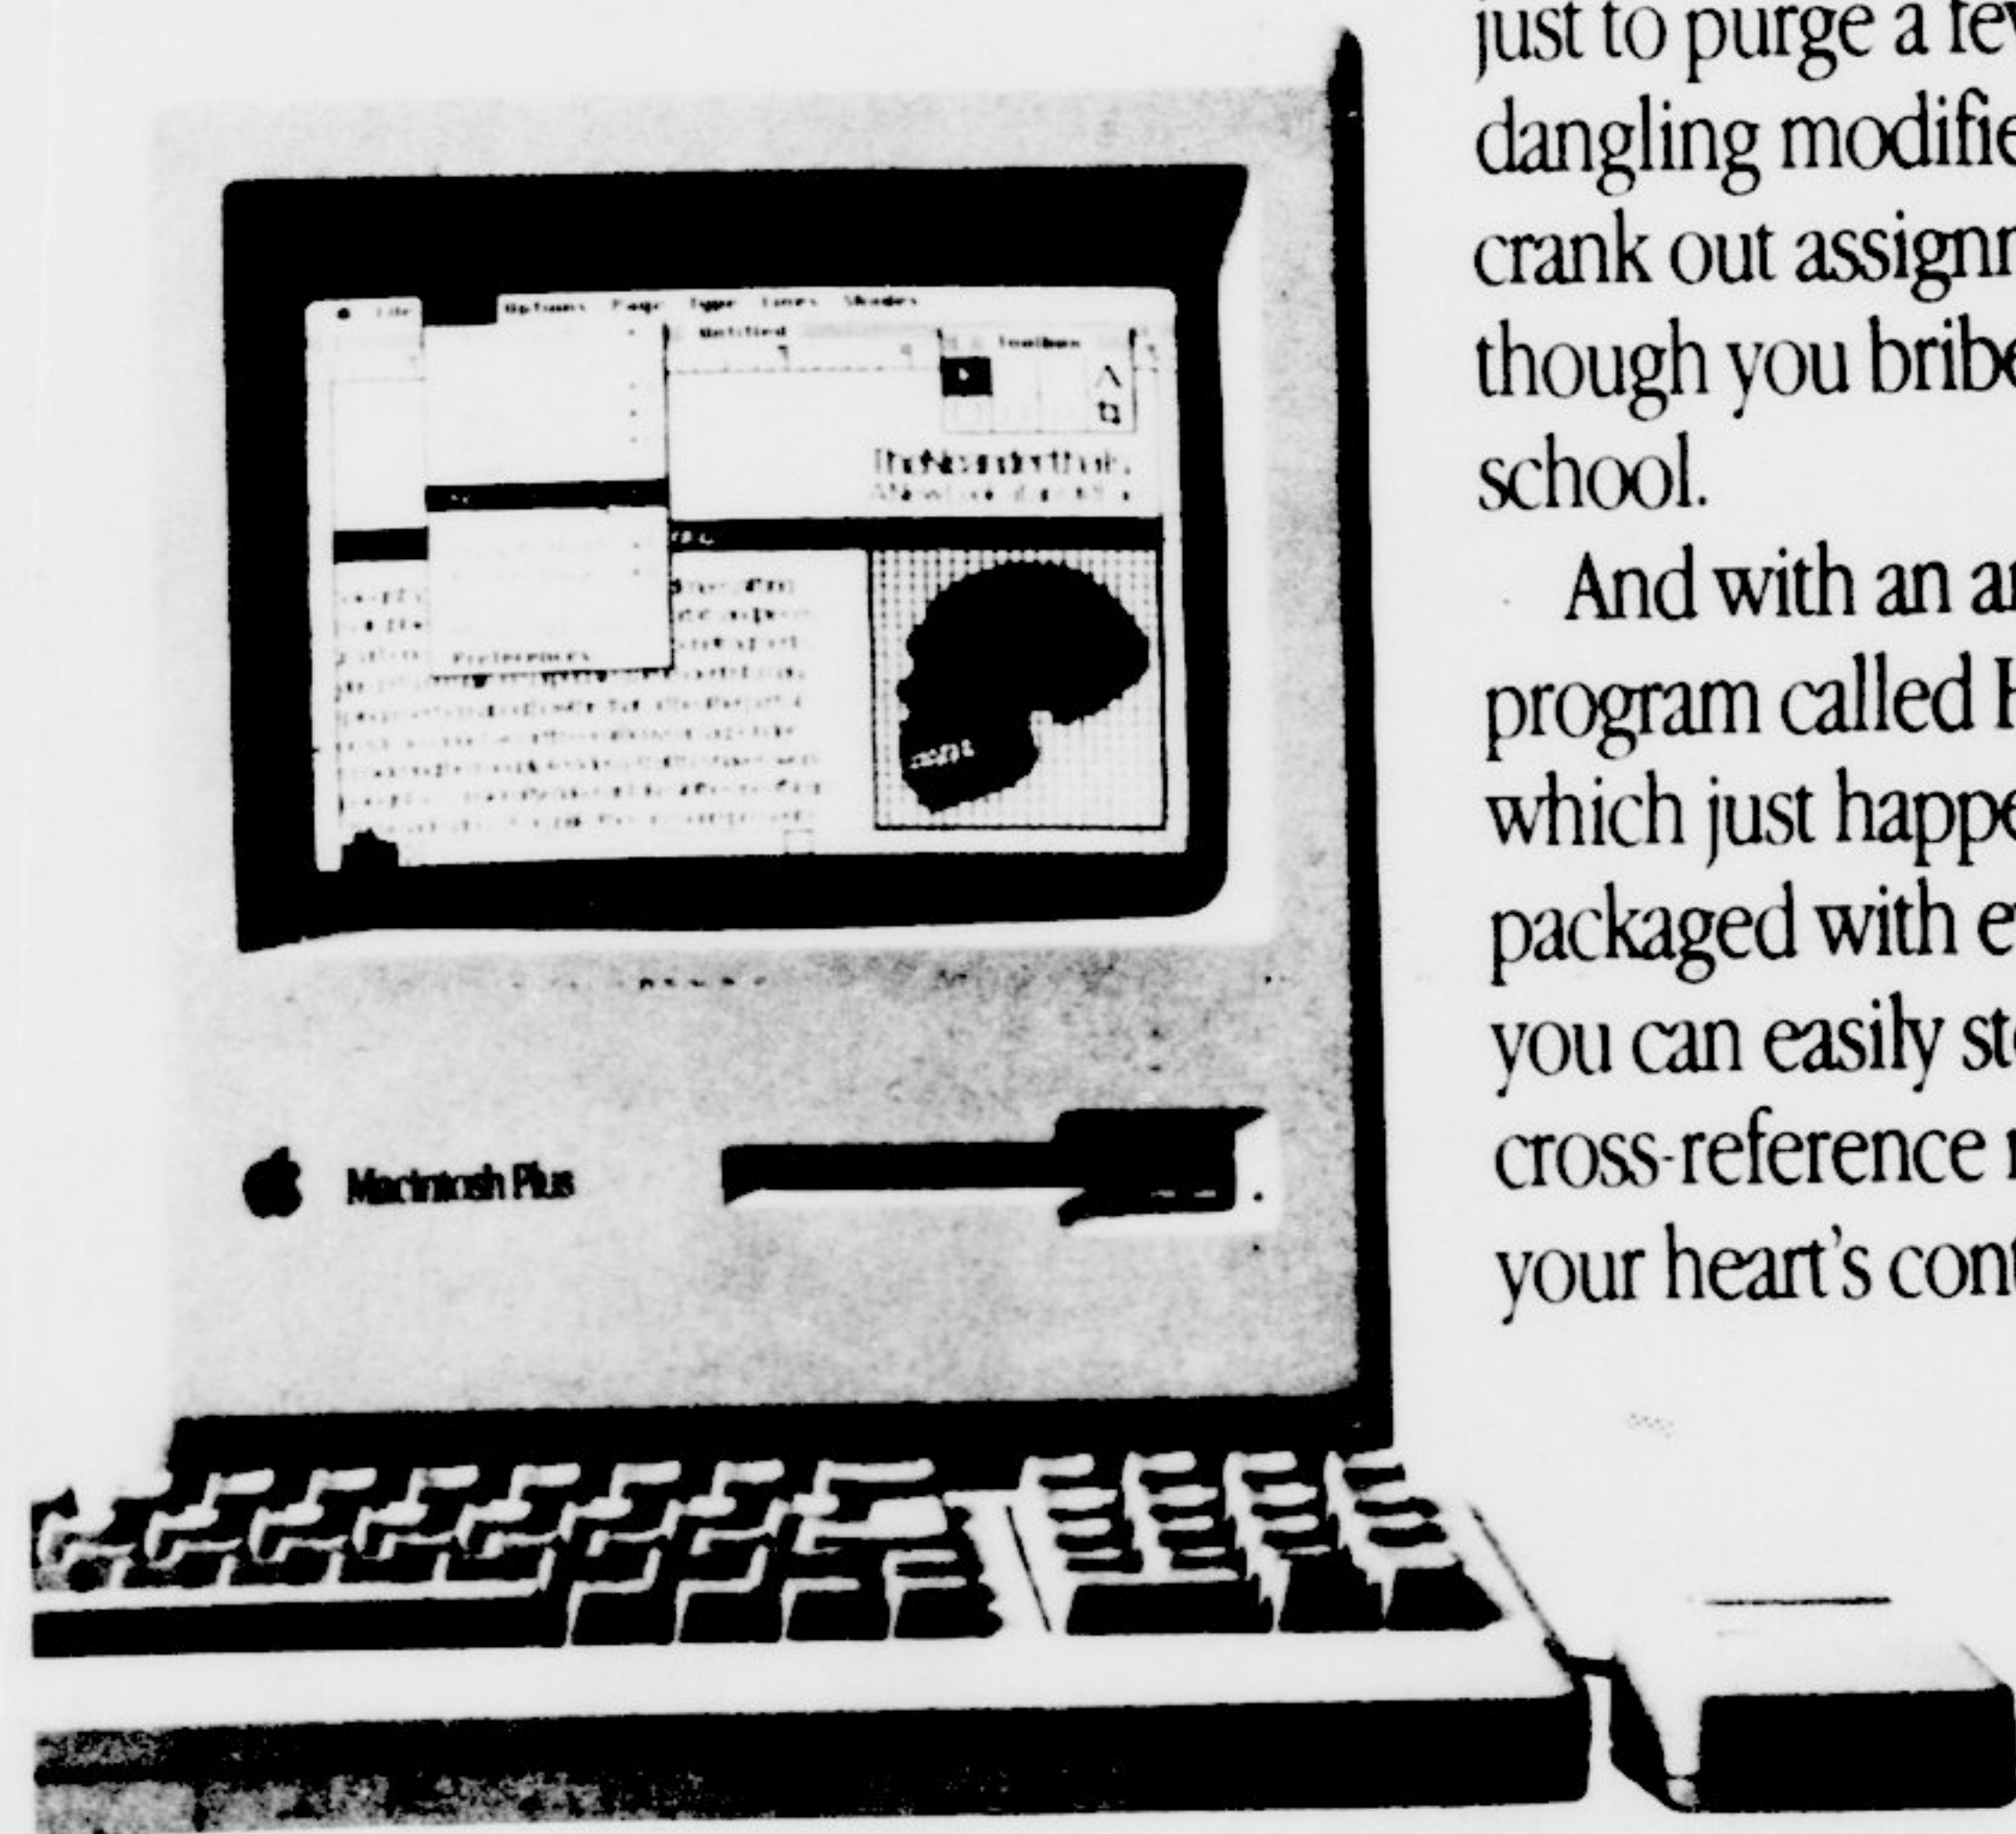

Now that a new school year is under way, we have an idea that'll make both you and your parents feel a bit more confident come finals time:

Get a Macintosh* computer to help with your homework.

Then you'll never have to spend another all-nighter retyping a paper just to purge a few typos and dangling modifiers. You'll be able to crank out assignments that look as though you bribed a friend in art school.

And with an amazing new program called HyperCard*—which just happens to come packaged with every Macintosh—you can easily store, organize, and cross-reference research notes to your heart's content.

And if that isn't enough reason to look at a Macintosh today, here's another:

Right now, you have three chances to win one of Sony's Discman™ CD players—including the exciting Sony Pocket Discman, which also plays the new 3-inch CDs. And even if you miss out on the CD player, you may still win one of 15 Apple T-shirts. No strings attached—just fill out a registration form at the location listed below.

So come in and get your hands on a Macintosh.

Pee Wee calls Big E on Z-103

The first caller was a cat named Ray from Greenville. Ray said that he was a compulsive gambler and that he needed a lock (gamblers terminology for a sure win) or Guido (a fictitious name for a book-maker) would endanger his life.

In trying to aid the poor individual named Ray, Earl said he knew nothing of sports. "But take the Mountaineers of West Virginia giving up 20 and a half points against ECU," came the game wisdom of E.

That proved to be the worst advice The Big E has ever given as West Virginia won the game 30-10 and Ray lost his life over a half of a point.

After a few more songs, the phone lines lit up again. This time it was an ECU student named Gil who knew that E is a world traveler. Gil asked where he should

"When I hear the name Gil, I think of gills and when I think of gills, I think of fish, when I think of fish I think of fishy smelling things at the beach. Hey Gil, go to the Bahamas and have a good time," E said.

Calling next was another ECU student. Bradford's predicament was one of stepping in dog loaves left by the neighbor's pooch. Bradford said the dog looked like a horse.

Hearing that the dog resembled a horse lead Big E to ask "Where do you live in Greenville, Bradford?" With the answer "hallucinogenic highway," Earl knew instantly the disturbed lad was speaking of the dog of Biltmore St.

"Hey man, you are talking about that horse-dog on Biltmore St. I kind of like that dog, why don't you leave him alone?" E said as his temper started to flare. Dee-jay Doug added "Yeah Bradford, maybe you are the one we need to get rid of."

The next caller came at 2:30. Hager, also from Greenville, asked The Big E how he could stop his friends from calling him Pee Wee.

"Are you small, are you small?" E asked. Hager said no. "Have you been taking steroids like Ben Johnson?" Hager said no. "Have you thought about buying a pit bull and sic-ing the dog on your friend's legs every time they call you Pee Wee?" "You could also improve your image by wearing a lot of gold jewelry like the Fat Boys," was E's advice.

Before the guy with the stick-figure complex hung up, Doug came on with, "Hey Haywood, Haywood, what is your name Hager? Well, see you later Pee Wee."

A fisherman from Beaufort proved to be the next caller. He said his wife had been cruel to him. He said he had wandered into the neighbor's sheep flock to satisfy his lust.

"You are sick, I am truly disgusted," was the only thing E could say. Even Big E has some standards of bad taste. Doug and E, with no help from a drunk Parker, decided not to air the demented call from the fisherman.

As E and Park walked out of the station at 4:30 a.m., Doug threw them a tee-shirt and invited them back. And back to the "dead medium" E must go.

This is Mick Jagger and Keith Richards right? Wrong. These guys are members of the Blushing Brides. Not only do they look like the Rolling Stones, they play and sound like them. The Brides rocks the Attic tonight.

Of course, for the film's secondary, fictional "world" to work, that is exactly how you should not feel. "Roger Rabbit," a film requiring much more suspension of disbelief, presented a credulous world of the human and "the other." It seems this film's proximity to real life (it's set in the 1990's) would be in its favor. But perhaps that worked against it.

Another problem is that there is hardly a sense of scope here. I'm not suggesting the movie should lose its focus so that the aliens are no more than stock figures but that we get a better peripheral picture of how the aliens' arrival has effected the national scene.

In their "Watchman" graphic novel, Alan Moore and Dave Gibbons effected a subplot that turned a New York street corner into a microcosm of the world. It was an economic move of storytelling that allowed a sense of resonance to the main plot line. "Alien Nation," weighing in at just over 90 minutes running time, could've stood an extra thirty minutes to grant a similar sense of scale.

Although entertaining, the movie's flaws don't allow it to come across as any more than a glorified TV show. My advice is to wait until it comes on TV and make the popcorn yourself. Two cat heads.

The first caller was a cat named Ray from Greenville. Ray said that he was a compulsive gambler and that he needed a lock (gamblers terminology for a sure win) or Guido (a fictitious name for a book-maker) would endanger his life.

In trying to aid the poor individual named Ray, Earl said he knew nothing of sports. "But take the Mountaineers of West Virginia giving up 20 and a half points against ECU," came the game wisdom of E.

That proved to be the worst advice The Big E has ever given as West Virginia won the game 30-10 and Ray lost his life over a half of a point.

After a few more songs, the phone lines lit up again. This time it was an ECU student named Gil who knew that E is a world traveler. Gil asked where he should

"When I hear the name Gil, I think of gills and when I think of gills, I think of fish, when I think of fish I think of fishy smelling things at the beach. Hey Gil, go to the Bahamas and have a good time," E said.

Calling next was another ECU student. Bradford's predicament was one of stepping in dog loaves left by the neighbor's pooch. Bradford said the dog looked like a horse.

Hearing that the dog resembled a horse lead Big E to ask "Where do you live in Greenville, Bradford?" With the answer "hallucinogenic highway," Earl knew instantly the disturbed lad was speaking of the dog of Biltmore St.

"Hey man, you are talking about that horse-dog on Biltmore St. I kind of like that dog, why don't you leave him alone?" E said as his temper started to flare. Dee-jay Doug added "Yeah Bradford, maybe you are the one we need to get rid of."

The next caller came at 2:30. Hager, also from Greenville, asked The Big E how he could stop his friends from calling him Pee Wee.

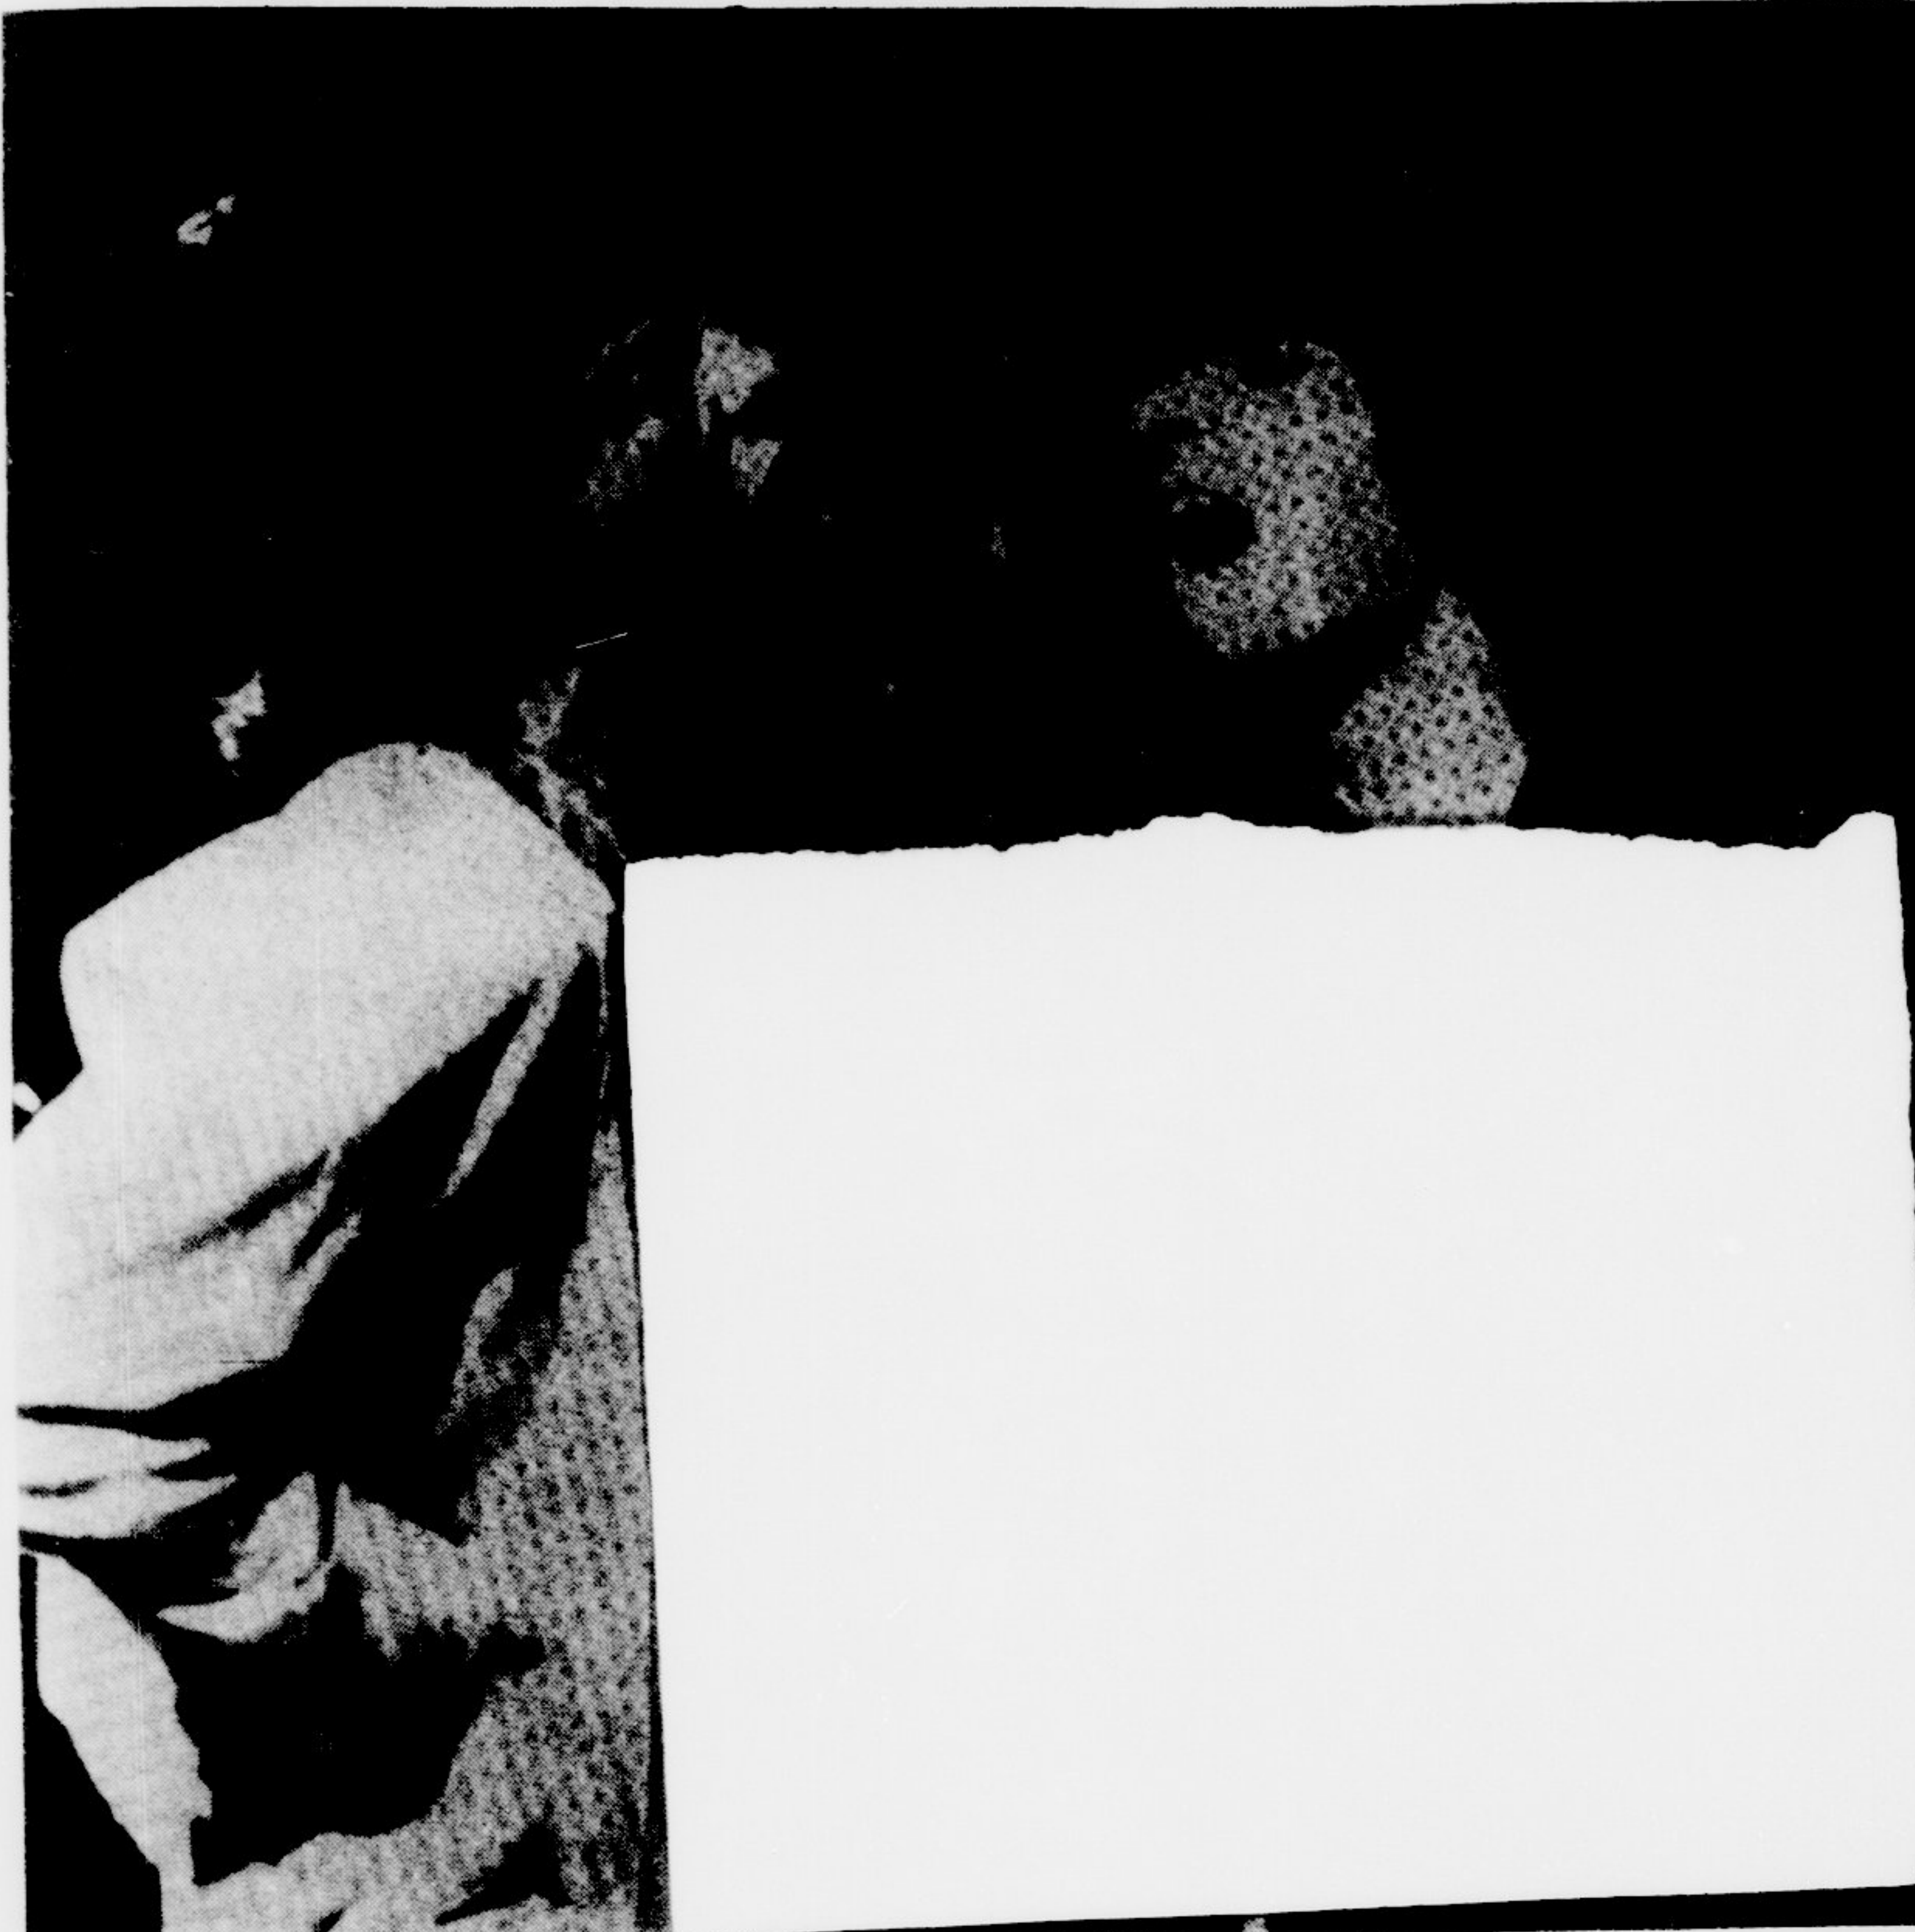

"Are you small, are you small?" E asked. Hager said no. "Have you been taking steroids like Ben Johnson?" Hager said no. "Have you thought about buying a pit bull and sic-ing the dog on your friend's legs every time they call you Pee Wee?" "You could also improve your image by wearing a lot of gold jewelry like the Fat Boys," was E's advice.

Before the guy with the stick-figure complex hung up, Doug came on with, "Hey Haywood, Haywood, what is your name Haggag? Well, see you later Pee Wee."

A fisherman from Beaufort proved to be the next caller. He said his wife had been cruel to him. He said he had wandered into the neighbor's sheep flock to satisfy his lust.

"You are sick, I am truly disgusted," was the only thing E could say. Even Big E has some standards of bad taste. Doug and E, with no help from a drunk Parker, decided not to air the demented call from the fisherman.

Trip to the 'Big Apple'

By ALICIA FORD
Staff Writer

Do you have a strong desire for the fast-paced, bright lights and active nightlife of a big city? How would you like to spend Thanksgiving in The Big Apple? The Student Union is sponsoring a trip to New York City from November 23 until November 27.

Accommodations for the trip are at the Hotel Edison and transportation will be provided by the La Grange bus. Prices per person are $115 quad, $135 triple, $165 double, and $249 for a single. The deadline for sign-up is November 1 at the Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center.

The former head of the North and South Carolina communist Party, Junius Scales, will be lecturing on the pros of communism October 24 at 8:00 pm. If you're interested in eating with a communist, you can brown bag lunch with Mr. Scales from 11:30-1:30, room 244 Mendenhall.

A photography show presented by Ernest Habrich will begin on October 24 and run through November 8 at the Mendenhall Art Gallery. The central theme of the photography presented by Habrich is the faces and structures of North and Central American Earth.

Female faculty fight hiring practices

(CPS)—Female faculty members on two separate campuses have opened the new year with critical salvos at the men who run their schools.

A group of University of Iowa faculty members announced in August it would try to pressure UI to hire more women, a move which prompted UI to release a report defending its efforts to recruit female teachers and deans.

On Sept. 7, moreover, a similarly new group at the University of New Mexico held a press conference "to publicize the condition of women working on this campus."

UNM History Prof. Jan Foe-buck said she helped form the group after President Gerald May's April, 1988, explanation that he has not appointed any women to high-level administrative posts on the campus because there were no women qualified for them.

"We need to get together on this issue and get our voices heard," Roebuck told the Daily Lobo, UNM's campus paper. "It's been going on long enough."

She said the new group would pressure May to hire more women and form a task force to recruit them.

A similar press conference inspired the University of Iowa, which formed an "affirmative 'Norwegian Saga' tonight on campus

*In addition, the Student Union is presenting a number of free movies for the rest of October. One of Tennessee Williams' most famous work "The Glass Menagerie," is being shown on Wednesday October 19. Directed by Paul Newman, the film stars Joanne Woodward as a mother who tries to impose her own dreams into her daughter's life. The daughter is portrayed by Karen Allen.

A remake of the 1930's suspense thriller "D.O.A." starring Dennis Quaid and Meg Ryan is being presented on October 20-23. Dexter Cornell (Quaid), is an English professor who discovers he has been poisoned and only has 24 hours to find his killer. One of his students and prime suspects, Ryan, is forced into helping him, and she soon falls in love with her sexy professor. "D.O.A." is a good mystery but you can pretty much guess the ending.

On October 26 "Cry Freedom," a movie about the life of African journalist Donald Woods, will be presented. The film is based on two of Wood's biographies about South Africa: "Biko" and "Asking for Trouble." Kevin Kline portrays the author in a "true story of a friendship that shook South Africa and awakened the world."

*Just in time for Halloween, "Serpent and the Rainbow" will be shown from October 28-30. A Wes Craven film, "Serpent" is based on the true story of Harvard anthropologist Wade Davis. Davis travels to Haiti where he discovers an ancient voodoo powder that puts the people who inhale it into a deep coma. They have no pulse or blood pressure, and these "corpses" can only be awakened late at night. "Serpent and the Rainbow" is a good horror flick filled with walking zombies, cursed, evil and black magic.

If that's not enough blood and guts for you, check out the pre-Halloween horror movie lock-in on Sunday October 30 at 1:30 pm. Three horror-buff favorites are being presented: "Carrie," "The Omen," and "Texas Chainsaw Massacre." Be sure to wear your Halloween garb for the costume contest.

*Coming in November: Tom Hanks box office smash "Big" is being shown on November 3-6. On November 2, "The Unbearable Lightness of Being" and the award-winning "The Last Emperor" will be presented from November 10-13.

The movies are free for students with ID and valid activity stickers. All shows start at 8:00 pm are screened in Hendrix Theatre.

'Gorillas' document

By JEFF PARKER
Staff Writer

Move over "Born Free" new biography/jungle nature has come to take your place. It's the story of anthropologist Dian Fossey, "Gorillas in the Mist."

"Gorillas" did not knock the viewer out with magnificent panoramas of the jungle, though the big landscape shots were beautiful. It did give the audience hundreds of shots of cute, lovable apes dear to them, it showed creatures as they really are, little was glorified. And it painted an idealist's picture of Fossey, the film showed her parts and all.

What it did do was give realistic and very insightful into the career of this woman, her dedication to a cause, and lived in to the point some obsession.

The film begins with Fossey (portrayed by Sigourney Weaver) going to Africa to her study of the gorillas under the authority of the famous Dr. Leakey, working with National Geographic. She soon finds that she is left solely in charge of this study, as Dr. Leakey dies. Her next discovery is her tracker, Semakur, Omirah Miluwi knows about finding gorillas. Under to the jungle and it's in the Fossey begins a journey to eventually make her the first woman to live with the gorillas and the gorillas lived.

After finding a group of gorillas, Fossey observes and becomes accepted by them, mimicking their gesturing behaviors. It is evident in Sigourney Weaver did a

'Gorillas in the Mist' entertains, documents Dian Fossey's life

By JEFF PARKER
Staff Illustrator

Move over "Born Free," a new biography/jungle adventure has come to take your place. It's the story of anthropologist Dian Fossey, "Gorillas in the Mist."

"Gorillas" did not try to knock the viewer out with magnificent panoramas of the jungle-cape, though the big location shots were beautiful. It did not give the audience hundreds of shots of cute, lovable apes to endear us to them, it showed us the creatures as they really are, very little was glorified. And it did not paint an idealist's picture of Dian Fossey, the film showed her, bad parts and all.

What it did do was give us a realistic and very insightful look into the career of this woman, and her dedication to a cause she believed in to the point some called obsession.

The film begins with Dian Fossey (portrayed by Sigourney Weaver) going to Africa to begin her study of the gorillas under the authority of the famous Dr. Louis Leakey, working with National Geographic. She soon finds out that she is left solely in charge of this study, as Dr. Leakey departs.

Her next discovery is that her tracker, Sembagare, (John Omirah Miluwi) knows nothing about finding gorillas. Unfamiliar to the jungle and its inhabitants, Fossey begins a journey that will eventually make her the ruler of the Rwanda mountain where she and the gorillas lived.

After finding a group of gorillas, Fossey observes them and becomes accepted by them by mimicking their gestures and behaviors. It is evident here that Sigourney Weaver did a careful job in studying the film footage of Fossey in action. Most of the early footage Weaver saw was shot by National Geographic photographer Bob Campbell, played in the movie by Australian actor Bryan Brown.

As in real life, Campbell became Dian Fossey's lover after being sent to work with her. Campbell's films showed the rest of the world of Fossey's work during the late Sixties, prompting much of the public to label her "the Gorilla Woman."

What real-life conceptions tagged as being a stranger relationship, the movie gives a more objective view of. Fossey spent much of her daily life with "Group 4," the gorillas, and did come to respect them as family. In the almost twenty years she spent in the Congo, the determined anthropologist fought poachers and trappers to insure the safety of the animals.

'Fight' is meant literally here. Fossey carried out a small level of warfare against the Batwa, natives who regarded her as a witch because of her reddish 'fire' hair. She takes to "fighting fire with fire" by creating a taboo symbol of herself to use against the superstitious hunters.

Her struggle to protect the gorillas makes her other enemies along the way, making her murder in 1985 a mystery. (And that shouldn't ruin the film for you because it's common knowledge). The film gives us unbiased depictions of characters that would be suspect; trapper Van Vecten, the Batwa, and the research assistants, and leaves the actual murder vague, to be taken as you want to.

You'll notice this review does not say much about the technical side of the movie. Well, the sets were all on location in the Kenyan mountains, so they were realistic. The very brief animated gorillas were done by special effects wizard Rick Baker, and most people will probably not be able to catch them. Nothing technical will stand out to draw your attention, which is as it should be.

Director Michael Apted wisely let most of the weight of the film be carried on the shoulders of the lead actress, Sigourney Weaver. The focus on her character and growth of interaction with the apes are what relates the audience to her.

Watching her transition from the young lady who needs her blowdryer to the no-nonsense keeper of the mountain, it seems her role as the tough "Ripley" in "Aliens" might have helped the producers in their decision to cast her.

The success of this movie seems to be attributed to the entire cast's and crew's belief in what they were doing. There are no cheap attempts to get sympathy. Dian Fossey's passion and dedication are shown realistically by Weaver.

Most everyone involved with Fossey during her years in Africa were consultants to the film, and approved of everything shown, a rarity in biographical films. The gorillas Sigourney worked with were even the actual ones Fossey studied.

What is so spectacular about the film is the realism captured without sacrificing any entertainment value. Instead of lapsing into documentary straightness, the movie recreates the terror Fossey herself had, and no moments drag. At least once a year you should go see a film that matters, so go see this one - because it does.

Big E goes radio, gives advice to derelicts

By EARL VIS HAMPTON
Features Editor

The radio disc jockey on the other end of the phone line asked for Big E. "Line one for you Earl," a scream came from the dense air of the news room.

"Yeah, really, so you like the column," E said into the phone.

The excited voice of the Dee-Jay blustered the phone wires with praise. And then came the question.

"So E, the infamous advice columnist that you are, how would you like to come on a radio talk show?" Doug Warner from Z-103 asked.

E paused and tried to control his slobber as he contemplated fame. "Well let me think about it. Yeah, what the hay," E said. It was set for Thursday, "dead medium" of print journalism, Earl's voice would soon be blasted into the homes of millions.

Onto beautiful Beaufort N.C. we went. Earl and Parker tanked up the Caddy, bought two quarts of oil and a twelve pack of ... drinks and we were off down a misty highway 43. After nine false accusations, Parker finally positively identified The Misty Blue Lounge. At that point, Parker agreed to write a feature on The Misty Blue Lounge.

By 12:45 a.m., comedian and super Dee-Jay Doug Warner introduced The Big E. "Welcome to the Z. E. I have read some of your advice columns in the East Carolinian" Warner started out. Warner, a transplant yankee from Washington D.C., came to Z-103 two years ago. His first assignment was to spin vinyl on the dreaded graveyard shift, during the hours of midnight to 6 a.m. Rather than be peeved about the shift, Warner brought the graveyard shift alive.

"I told my boss I wanted to get at least one lawsuit slapped on the station because of the show," Warner said. In other words, Warner's style can be compared to the now defunct Clearly Labeled East Carolinian Satire Page.

As the Thursday's show progressed, the rambling disc jockey had Earl and Park in hysterics. Warner slammed the ECU faculty. Ann Landers and Greenville's own, Jim Whittington.

During a Robert Plant song, Warner, a coffee baron and a nicotine craver, confided that he still hasn't become accustomed to Eastern North Carolina. "I have to drive a whole hour to go to an indoor mall," he said.

Back on the air, Warner asked Big E if he would mind advising some of the troubled listeners. After agreeing to the request, the phone lines instantly lit up.

Ballet dazzles crowd

By JIM SHAMLIN
Staff Writer

Slowly, a warm, blue light filled the stage. In the center of the stage, two young women in Victorian dresses nonchalantly arranged their hats. Their hats arranged, they stood. Much to the audience's amazement, they were over eight feet tall.

No, this was neither Theatre of the Absurd or Dadaist drama, it was the opening dance of the Ohio Ballet at Wright Auditorium last night. Their program consisted of four separate pieces, two of which were modern and the other two classical.

The opening scene was from "Untitled," a dance originally composed for the bizarre and artful Pilobolus company. Although the first appearance of eight-foot tall women and men in little more than g-strings startled the audience of people who came prepared to see "ballet," the story began to unfold itself.

Next came a dance entitled "Summer Night," which was introduced in the program with a quote from Shelley. The theme of the dance was romance, evident by the soft, slow motions of the dancers (choreographed by Heinz Poll, their own artistic director) as well as that of the music (Chopin's "Romanze.")

Unlike its predecessor, the second piece followed classical ballet style. Two couples danced on stage, alternately and simultaneously, using the entire area for their graceful flourishes. The stage itself was lit by a patchwork of white and a subdued blue glow, which enhanced the grace and beauty of the dance itself.

"Gravity," another fine example of modern dance, followed. It filled the stage with ten dancers whose movements captivated the audience. Although their movements were, at times, identical and monotonous, there were times of what seemed to be wild abandon.

The interplay and the juxtaposition of the two completely filled the stage with motion. "Gravity" was danced to the heavy rhythm of primitive drums, which only served to further entrance the audience.

The last dance was entitled "Triptych," an artistic term for a three-paneled cabinet which unfolded to create a mural. True to this definition, the dance was done in three parts, each separate, but each a smaller portion of their integrated whole. Like the triptych, this piece was classical in style. The music itself was written in the 19th century by Felix Mendelssohn (Piano Concerto Number 2 in D minor.)

The dancers wore traditional costumes of neutral white and brown and the lights were, for the first time, not used to create mood or setting. This called attention away from the accoutrements and into the dancing itself, which fully merited the audience's undivided attention.

The company itself has grown over the 20 years of its existence from a small group of dancers to a professional touring group which has played in 162 cities in 36 states, not to mention tours of Europe and South America. Newspapers from Seattle to New York have called the Ohio Ballet "a credit to the entire dance community," which "bedazzles nations across the country."

Face the 'Alien Nation'

By MICAH HARRIS
Staff Writer

"Alien Nation" offers an interesting variation on the "creatures from beyond" theme. The extraterrestrials here (dubbed "Newcomers") are neither hell-bent invaders or angelic visitors, but pitiful refugees. Thus, they inspire neither fear or wonder but contempt on the part of the human race.

But the aliens (humanoid beings with complexions not unlike the pallor of a marshmallow peanut) are quick learners. They have been genetically engineered and are in fact our superiors mentally and physically. They begin to carve out a place for themselves in human society. And some of the "Newcomers" don't mind carving that niche out of their fellow aliens' bodies. . . .

"Alien Nation" was scripted by Rockne S. O'Bannon, of the revived "Twilight Zone." In such "Twilight Zone" stories as "Shadow Man" and a moonlighted episode of the then-current "Amazing Stories" (in which Patrick "happy feet" Swayze played a death's row inmate suddenly granted the power to heal), O'Bannon displayed a knack for setting up an intriguing premise. He does the same for "Alien Nation," yet he fails to follow it through satisfactorily.

James Caan plays Sykes, a cop whose personal life is on the downhill side. He suffers another emotional blow when his partner and best friend, Tuggle, is killed during an exchange of fire between the cops and some aliens trying to knock over a convenient store.

The general hostility of Americans to the E.T. refugees is mirrored by Sykes' reaction to his new partner, Francisco, the first alien to become a detective. Sykes and Francisco's warming to each other is the film's heart, and the characters are likable, but somehow the relationship comes across as superficial.

The relationship's development seems too forced. Granted, Sykes has been established as a man capable of rising over prejudice. Sykes is white and his best friend is black.

But when that best friend is killed by an alien, Sykes projects his anger to all of the Newcomers, so his acceptance of an alien partner should be extremely difficult. That it occurs apparently within a week is unlikely. That a single, all-night drunk/male-bonding experience establishes it is unbelievable given the circumstance.

What is most irksome, however, is that the human/alien society is not convincing. You feel that

'Gorillas in the Mist' entertains, documents Dian Fossey's life

By JEFF PARKER
Staff Illustrator

Move over "Born Free," a new biography/jungle adventure has come to take your place. It's the story of anthropologist Dian Fossey, "Gorillas in the Mist."

"Gorillas" did not try to knock the viewer out with magnificent panoramas of the jungle-cape, though the big location shots were beautiful. It did not give the audience hundreds of shots of cute, lovable apes to endear us to them, it showed us the creatures as they really are, very little was glorified. And it did not paint an idealist's picture of Dian Fossey, the film showed her, bad parts and all.

What it did do was give us a realistic and very insightful look into the career of this woman, and her dedication to a cause she believed in to the point some called obsession.

The film begins with Dian Fossey (portrayed by Sigourney Weaver) going to Africa to begin her study of the gorillas under the authority of the famous Dr. Louis Leakey, working with National Geographic. She soon finds out that she is left solely in charge of this study, as Dr. Leakey departs.

Her next discovery is that her tracker, Sembagare, (John Omirah Miluwi) knows nothing about finding gorillas. Unfamiliar to the jungle and it's inhabitants, Fossey begins a journey that will eventually make her the ruler of the Rwanda mountain where she and the gorillas lived.

After finding a group of gorillas, Fossey observes them and becomes accepted by them by mimicking their gestures and behaviors. It is evident here that Sigourney Weaver did a careful job in studying the film footage of Fossey in action. Most of the early footage Weaver saw was shot by National Geographic photographer Bob Campbell, played in the movie by Australian actor Bryan Brown.

As in real life, Campbell became Dian Fossey's lover after being sent to work with her. Campbell's films showed the rest of the world of Fossey's work during the late Sixties, prompting much of the public to label her "the Gorilla Woman."

What real-life conceptions tagged as being a strange relationship, the movie gives a more objective view of. Fossey spent much of her daily life with "Group 4," the gorillas, and did come to respect them as family. In the almost twenty years she spent in the Congo, the determined anthropologist fought poachers and trappers to insure the safety of the animals.

'Fight' is meant literally here. Fossey carried out a small level of warfare against the Batwa, natives who regarded her as a witch because of her reddish 'fire' hair. She takes to "fighting fire with fire" by creating a taboo symbol of herself to use against the superstitious hunters.

Her struggle to protect the gorillas makes her other enemies along the way, making her murder in 1985 a mystery. (And that shouldn't ruin the film for you because it's common knowledge). The film gives us unbiased depictions of characters that would be suspect; trapper Van Vecten, the Batwa, and the research assistants, and leaves the actual murder vague, to be taken as you want to.

You'll notice this review does not say much about the technical side of the movie. Well, the sets were all on location in the Kenyan mountains, so they were realistic. The very brief animated gorillas were done by special effects wizard Rick Baker, and most people will probably not be able to catch them. Nothing technical will stand out to draw your attention, which is as it should be.

Director Michael Apted wisely let most of the weight of the film be carried on the shoulders of the lead actress, Sigourney Weaver. The focus on her character and growth of interaction with the apes are what relates the audience to her.

Watching her transition from the young lady who needs her blowdryer to the no-nonsense keeper of the mountain, it seems her role as the tough "Ripley" in "Aliens" might have helped the producers in their decision to cast her.

The success of this movie seems to be attributed to the entire cast's and crew's belief in what they were doing. There are no cheap attempts to get sympathy. Dian Fossey's passion and dedication are shown realistically by Weaver.

Most everyone involved with Fossey during her years in Africa were consultants to the film, and approved of everything shown, a rarity in biographical films. The gorillas Sigourney worked with were even the actual ones Fossey studied.

What is so spectacular about the film is the realism captured without sacrificing any entertainment value. Instead of lapsing into documentary straightness, the movie recreates the fervor Fossey herself had, and no moments drag. At least once a year you should go see a film that matters, so go see this one - because it does.

"I told my boss I wanted to get at least one lawsuit slapped on the station because of the show," Warner said. In other words, Warner's style can be compared to the now defunct Clearly Labeled East Carolinian Satire Page. As the Thursday's show progressed, the rambling disc jockey had Earl and Park in hysterics. Warner slammed the ECU faculty, Ann Landers and Greenville's own, Jim Whittington.

During a Robert Plant song, Warner, a coffee baron and a nicotine craver, confided that he still hasn't become accustomed to Eastern North Carolina. "I have to drive a whole hour to go to an indoor mall," he said. Back on the air, Warner asked Big E if he would mind advising some of the troubled listeners. After agreeing to the request, the phone lines instantly lit up.

By 12:45 a.m., comedian and super Dee-Jay Doug Warner introduced The Big E. "Welcome to the Z, E. I have read some of your advice columns in the East Carolinian ...," Warner started

Ballet dazzles crowd

By JIM SHAMLIN

Slowly, a warm, blue light filled the stage. In the center of the stage, two young women in Victorian dresses nonchalantly arranged their hats. Their hats arranged, they stood. Much to the audience's amazement, they were over eight feet tall.

No, this was neither Theatre of the Absurd or Dadaist drama, it was the opening dance of the Ohio Ballet at Wright Auditorium last night. Their program consisted of four separate pieces, two of which were modern and the other two classical.

The opening scene was from "Untitled," a dance originally composed for the bizarre and artful Pilobolus company. Although the first appearance of eight-foot tall women and man in little more than g-strings startled the audience of people who came prepared to see "ballet," the story began to unfold itself.

Next came a dance entitled "Summer Night," which was introduced in the program with a quote from Shelley. The theme of the dance was romance, evident by the soft, slow motions of the dancers (choreographed by Heinz Poll, their own artistic director) as well as that of the music (Chopin's "Romanze.")

Unlike its predecessor, the second piece followed classical ballet style: Two couples danced on stage, alternately and simultaneously, using the entire area for their graceful flourishes. The stage itself was lit by a patchwork of white and a subdued blue glow, which enhanced the grace and beauty of the dance itself.

"Gravity," another fine example of modern dance, followed. It filled the stage with ten dancers whose movements captivated the audience. Although their movements were, at times, identical and monotonous, there were times of what seemed to be wild abandon.

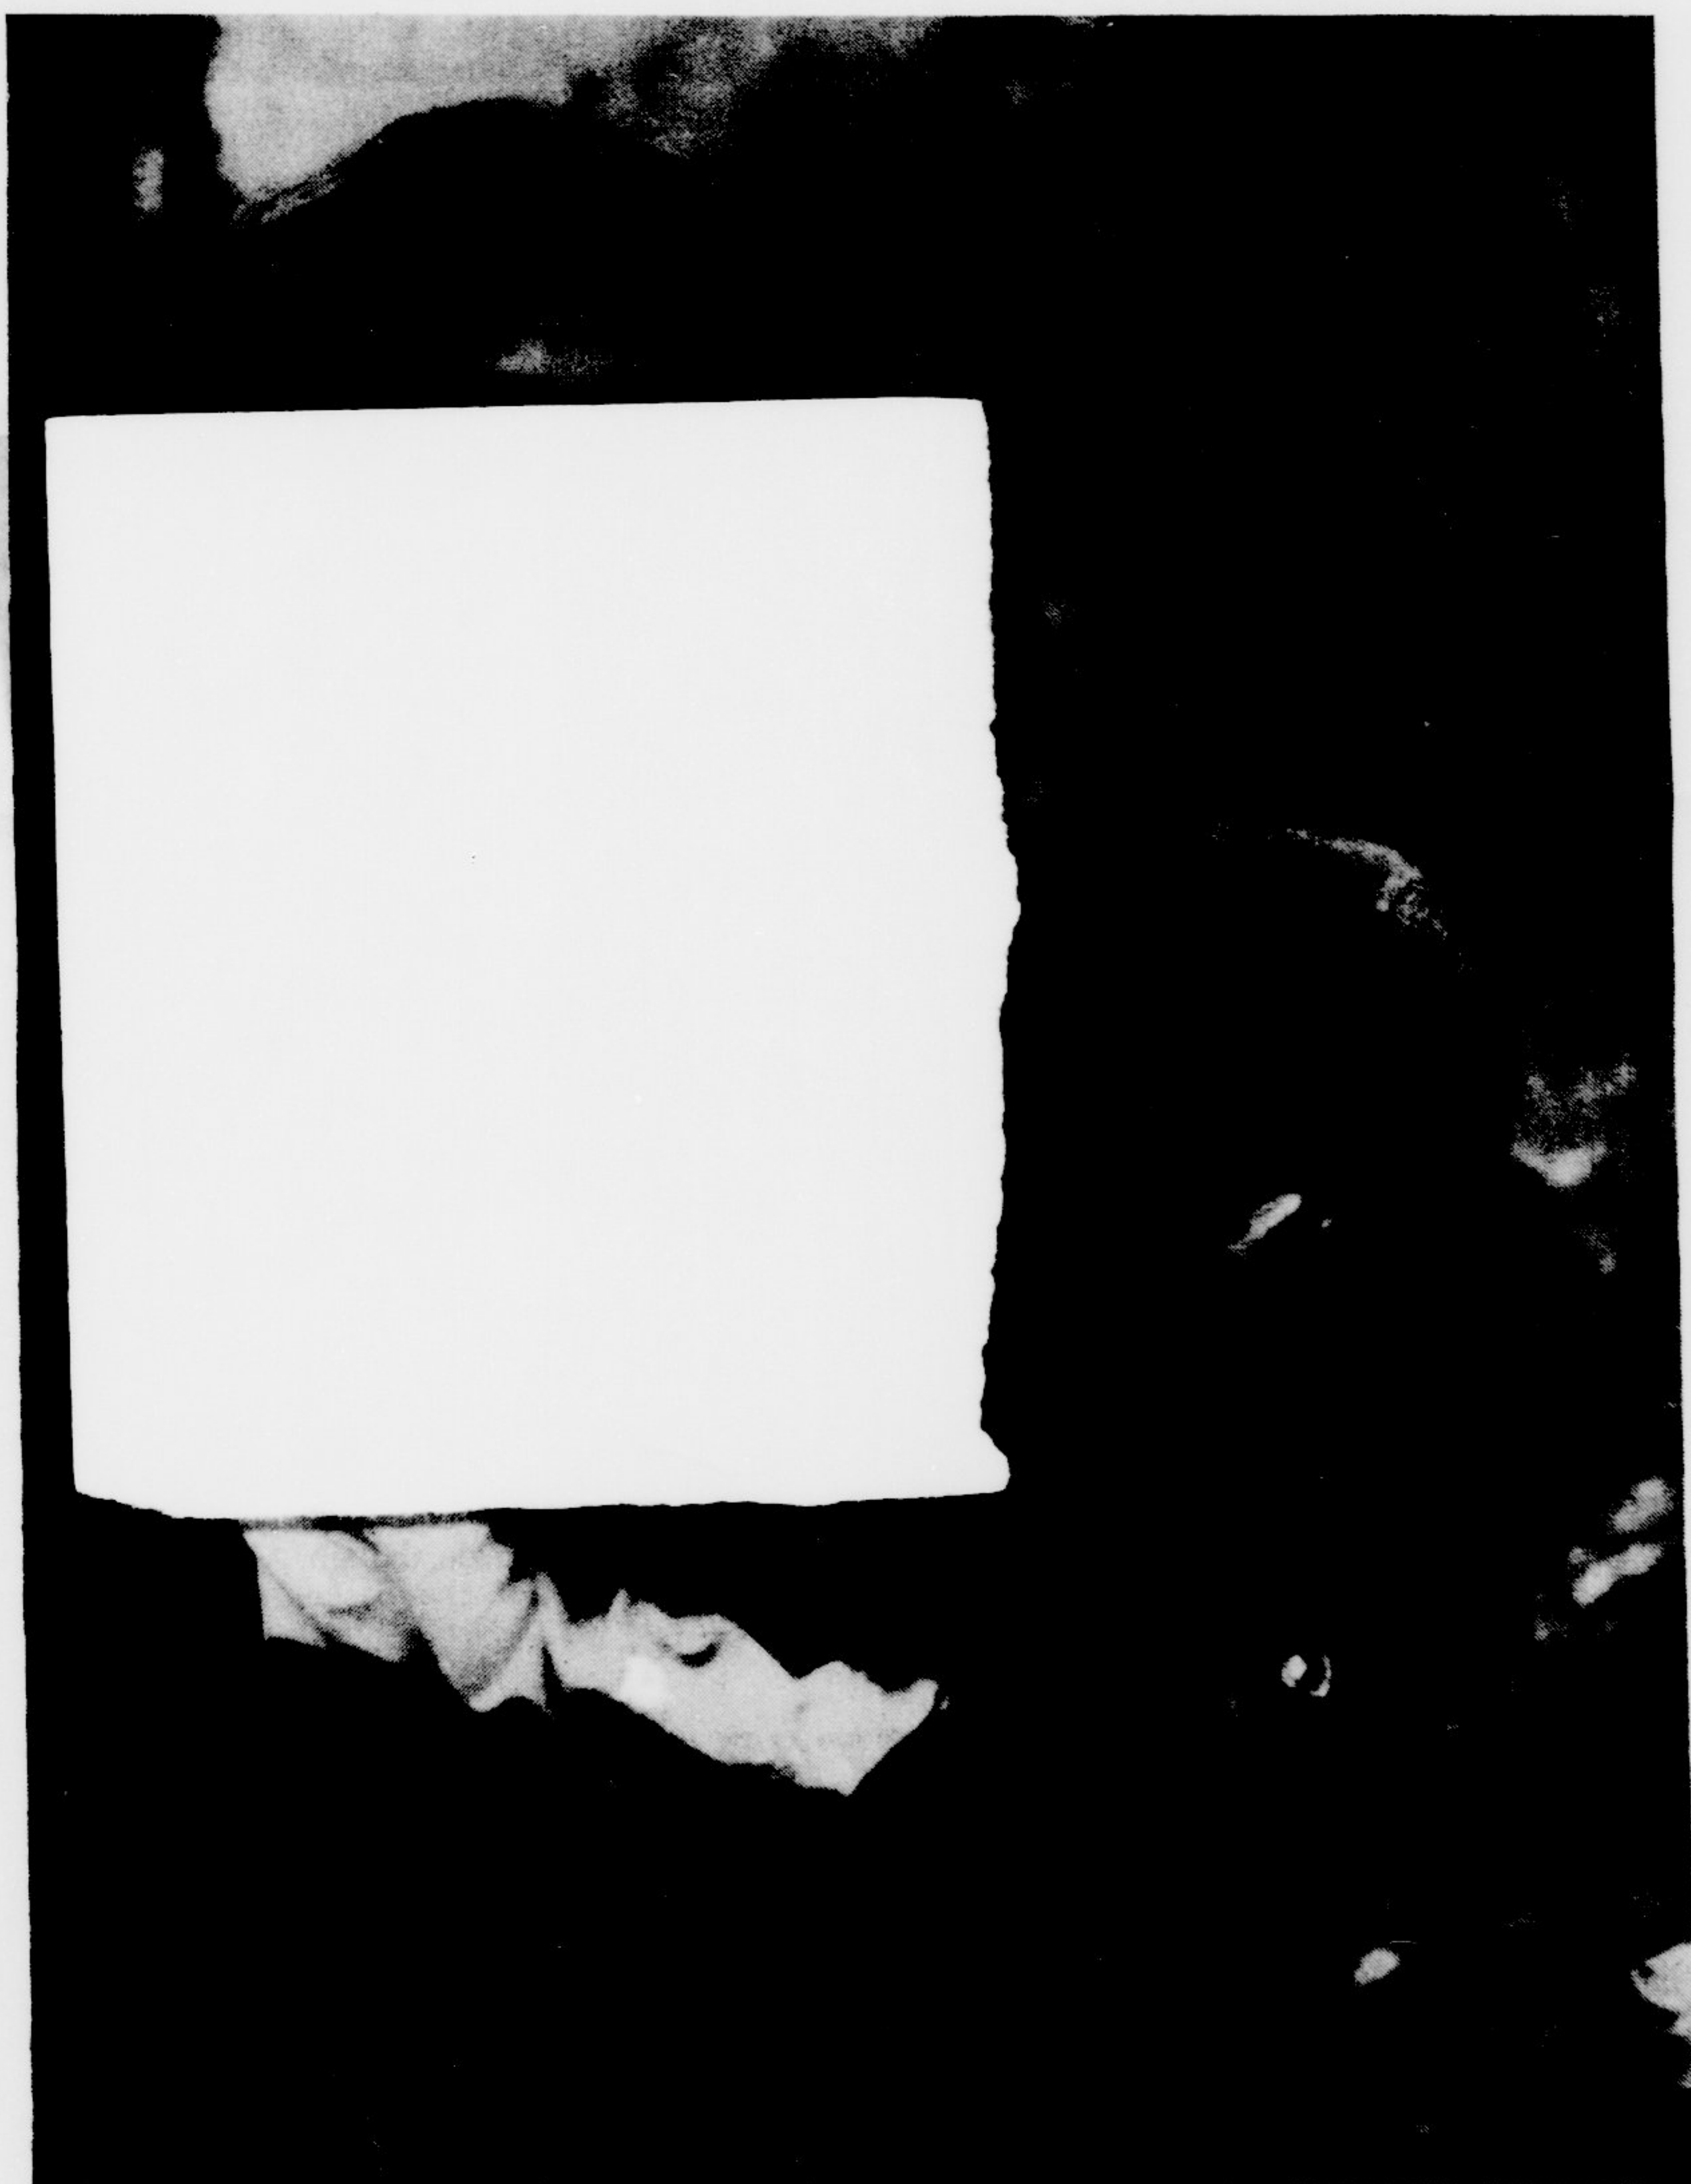

The interplay and the juxtaposition of the two completely filled the stage with motion. "Gravity" was danced to the heavy rhythm of primitive drums, which only served to further entrance the audience.

The last dance was entitled "Triptych," an artistic term for a three-paneled cabinet which unfolded to create a mural. True to this definition, the dance was done in three parts, each separate, but each a smaller portion of their integrated whole. Like the triptych, this piece was classical in style: The music itself was written in the 19th century by Felix Mendelssohn (Piano Concerto Number 2 in D minor.)

The dancers wore traditional costumes of neutral white and brown and the lights were, for the first time, not used to create mood or setting. This called attention away from the accoutrements and into the dancing itself, which fully merited the audience's undivided attention.

Odds against the Pirates

(AP) -- The momentum seems to be going against East Carolina as the Pirates have amassed a 1-5 record, while Florida State has mirrored that performance, winning five and losing just one.

And Pirates Coach Art Baker says there's little reason to think the Pirates can turn the tide on Saturday when they take on the Seminoles in Tallahassee.

"Florida State has one of the best combinations of physically strong players and talented skill position players in the country," he said. "I don't think there is a team with a better group of skill players than Florida State."

"The last three weeks they haven't played all that well, yet still managed to win," Baker said at his weekly news conference Monday. "That tells you something about how strong they are."

East Carolina dropped a 30-10 decision to seventh-ranked West Virginia last weekend. FSU, meanwhile, came from behind to take a 28-10 win over Division I-AA Georgia Southern last Saturday.

The Pirates have had their problems on defense in recent weeks, prompting a number of changes prior to the game against the Mountaineers.

Ernie Logan moved to linebacker from defensive end and joined Robert Jones and Anthony Thompson, who was coming off arthroscopic knee surgery the week before. Chris Hall started at cornerback. Junior Robinson moved from cornerback to safety. Shannon Boling moved from defensive tackle to defensive end. James Singletary moved from linebacker to defensive end and Greg Gardill started at defensive tackle for the first time this season.

"The way our defense had been playing, to hold them to 30 points was an accomplishment," Baker said.

East Carolina used both Charlie Libretto and Travis Hunter at quarterback with varied success against West Virginia. Baker said he had not yet decided who would get the start Saturday.

"I'm not sure," he said. "I don't know whether Travis played that much better than he'll start or whether Charlie will continue to start. We're going to have to continue to use both quarterbacks as we did the other day. I think they understand that. It's not a problem with either of them."

"If one was head and shoulders better than the other, we'd go ahead and start him."

While an assistant at Florida State, Baker helped recruit current Seminole quarterback Chip Ferguson, who is from Charlotte and played his high school ball in Spartanburg, S.C.

Ferguson has thrown for 1,204 yards, compared to the 1,073 yards Libretto and Hunter have combined for in six games.

Last year, Florida State took a 44-3 win over the Pirates in Greenville as tailback Sammie Smith ran for 244 yards and one touchdown.

Look At Us Now wins

(IRS) -- Intramural flag football season is winding down as playoffs conclude this week. In semifinal action, Look At Us Now took on Our Perogative in a tough battle in the men's independent division. Look At Us Now used the short passing game and a stone wall defense to take a 13 to 2 lead at the half.

Danny Allen took over the quarterbacking duties in the second half for Our Perogative and marched to a quick touchdown, tightening the contest up to 13-8. However, Look At Us Now was not finished. They pulled the defense together and used the quickness of Derek (Cap) Smith on offense to get another score which brought the final to 19-8 for Look At Us Now.

In women's sorority action, the Turtles of Delta Zeta took on the Sailboats of Sigma Sigma Sigma. Melissa Lord and Beth Hopkins of Delta Zeta shared quarterbacking roles and helped take the wind out of the Sigma Sails. They rolled to a 12-0 halftime score.

In the second half of play Sigma Sigma Sigma was still unable to stop the passing attack of Delta Zeta. Sigma Sigma Sigma did manage a score late in the game bringing the final tally to 26-6.

In other action, one-on-one basketball moves into the quarter finals. In the 5'11" and under division, Jim Bolognisi and Blair Wiggins advanced along with Mark Gaines and Mike Graves. Tina Ferrara and Garry Williams will battle head-to-head in the hopes of meeting the Bill Rice -- Rob Sheldon game winner. Other quarter finalists include: Charles Dawson, Mike Kotarba, Frankie Calhoun and Larry Murphy all in the 5'11" and over bracket.

Volleyball and soccer registration will be held on Wednesday, October 19 at 5 and 6 p.m., respectively, in GCB 1026. Interested officials should contact Dave Hall in 204 Memorial Gym. Aerobic fitness class registration for second fall session continues through October 14 in 204 Memorial Gymnasium. A complete class schedule is available at this location.

Outdoor Recreation Ski Trip adventure to Salt Lake City, Utah from Dec. 31-Jan. 4 will be holding registration through October 22 in 204 Memorial Gymnasium. Get involved in Outdoor Recreation -- Intramural style. For additional information, call 757-6387.

Frisbee golf appeals to variety of players

Special to the East Carolinian

As you step up to the tee, a tailwind makes the long par 3 look a little shorter. Your drive takes off at a good pace, levels off, and sails. The shot breaks slightly to the left as it loses power and falls to earth. The hole is tantalizingly near, but just outside your comfort zone. You're in deep range, but if you overshoot, your birdie hopes can easily turn to bogie. Do you play it safe and lay up or go for it?

Frisbee golf is a relative newcomer to ECU. The Intramural Frisbee golf course is located off Charles Boulevard between the ECU track and the women's softball field. Built by the ECU Frisbee club, the nine hole course was opened in the summer of 1986. A second nine was added last summer, and improvements continue this year with a nineteenth hole for "Around Nine", a putting practice game.

Frisbee golf, or "folf", as it is occasionally called, appeals to a wide range of players. Young and old, novice and pro alike can enjoy the game, which combines the flight characteristics of Frisbee with the style of play of ball golf.

The object of the game is to land the disc in the hole with the least amount of strokes. Players "tee off" at the designated tee marker. Each player then shoots from the place where his previous throw landed, starting with the player farthest from the hole. When everyone has completed the hole, the player with the lowest total on the hole has "the honors", and throws first on the next hole. Each hole has a par, but birdies, bogies, and the occasional "ace" also come into play.

Any flying disc will work for Frisbee golf, but some are better suited to the rigors of the game than others. Most "golf discs" are aerodynamically shaped, about 8 inches in diameter, and made of heavy plastic. Bright colors make it easier to find stray shots and ricochets in the woods. There is a wide variety of golf discs available through mailorder houses and fanatic disc golfers. Intramural Recreational Services has golf discs which can be borrowed from the equipment checkout room in Memorial Gym.

In Frisbee golf, the disc serves as both your ball and your club. Many players carry more than one disc in order to take advantage of the different flight characteristics inherent in different discs. There are some less esoteric reasons to carry more than one disc with you on the course, however. Frisbees get stuck in trees; they get lost; they break.

The target in Frisbee golf is the "pole hole". Invented by an imaginative Californian named Ed Headrick, the pole hole looks somewhat like a cross between a crab trap and a bird bath. A series of spokes radiate from the top of the pole, about chest-high, attached to the spokes are chains which are tethered in the center of a basket about six inches deep and three feet across. The chains deflect the disc down into the basket where it comes to rest, completing the hole. The pole hole can be fickle, though. A putt can rim out of the basket or spin off the "Brooklyn" side of the chains, so a certain amount of finesse (or luck) is required. A successful putt will hit the chains and fall with a characteristic "ching", which is music to the golfer's ear.

The IRS flag football season came to an end this week, and the champions were crowned.

Tyson refractures right hand

NEW YORK (AP) -- Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson has reportedly refractured his right hand, possibly putting a crimp in his scheduled title defense on Dec. 17 against Frank Bruno.

Bill Cayton, Tyson's manager, confirmed Tuesday that he had been called by promoter Don King from Cleveland with the news that may affect the champion's fight schedule.

The latest revelations were contained in a story in Wednesday's edition of the New York Daily News.

According to reports, Tyson was hitting the heavy bag in a gym on King's farm in Orwell, Ohio, when the injury occurred.

Tyson originally had been scheduled to start training Monday in Catskill, N.Y.

Cayton said he could not be positive whether the apparent hairline fracture on the third metacarpal of the right hand, which Tyson injured in a street fight with Mitch Green in August in New York, was new or old.

That original injury forced postponement of the fight with Bruno until October. Further problems moved the fight back two more times, to December.

According to the News, Cayton said he spoke to the doctor who treated Tyson in Cleveland and was told the injury was "minor."

Cayton said it is still possible for Tyson to keep his four-times postponed date with Bruno.

"There are nine weeks to the fight and a hairline fracture usually takes only three weeks to heal," Cayton said.

Cayton said Tyson was expected to arrive in New York today or tomorrow to be examined by Dr. David Chiu. Chiu treated Tyson after the fight with Green.

"I think they want to keep him (Tyson) in Cleveland because they're afraid of papers being served on him," Cayton was quoted as saying.

Oakland prepares for series

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) -- Storm Davis waved a bat menacingly and yelled "Everybody out of the way out there!" to his teammates deep in the outfield as he stepped into the Oakland Coliseum batting cage.

Then he hit a ground ball. If the Athletics' pitchers are taking batting practice, it must be World Series time.

At Oakland's first pre-Series workout Tuesday, A's manager Tony La Russa announced that Dave Stewart, Storm Davis and Bob Welch will start the first three games. Coincidentally, all three are ex-National Leagueers with hitting experience that could come in handy in Games 1, 2, 6 and 7 when designated hitters will not be used in the National League park.

"They won't be able to do enough (batting practice) in the next couple of weeks to overcome the disadvantage we have," La Russa said. "But our starters are all good athletes, so I think they'll be all right."

La Russa is more focused on a couple of decisions he will have to make this week.

Regular second baseman

Glenn Hubbard, who was left off the playoff roster due to a hamstring pull, will be back for the series if his leg is healthy by Friday's world series roster deadline, according to La Russa. Otherwise, Mike Gallego and Tony Phillips will again share the second-base duties.

The manager also hasn't made up his mind whether to play Dave Parker or Luis Polonia in left field against right-handed starters in the first two games. Because there is no DH in those games, whoever doesn't start will have to sit on the bench.

"If it's Luis we don't have our leadoff guy, and if it's Dave we don't have our number four hitter," La Russa said. "So it will affect our plans either way."

La Russa said he won't commit to a fourth-game starter until he sees how the first three games go. He said left-hander Curt Young, who spent the playoffs in the bullpen, could get a start.

Stewart, who started twice in the playoffs and won Sunday's finale 4-1, hit some line drives and long fly balls during his turn in the batting cage, but said he's not looking forward to hitting in the World Series.

"I'm looking forward to pitching, because that's what I do best," he said.

In 1983, his last season in the National League, Stewart had one hit in seven at-bats for the Los Angeles Dodgers before being traded to Texas. But like most pitchers, he clearly remembers the few hits he has had.

"In 1981, I hit a three-run triple against Cincinnati," he said.

As for his lifetime average, he only knows that it's "two-something." Sorry, Dave, it's actually .196. Stewart said he's also a "real good bunter."

Davis is a worse hitter, going only 1-for-16, .063, last year for San Diego in his only NL season. But he enjoyed taking his whacks on Tuesday, lining one shot to Jose Canseco that brought whoops from his teammates.

"Hit it a little harder, man," teased Canseco, standing in at third base.

Welch, a career .151 hitter with the Dodgers, doesn't figure to get an at-bat early in the series because he's scheduled to start Game 3 at Oakland.

Fulcher

(AP) -- Just before the draft, a couple of the NFL's personnel evaluators were about David Fulcher, a 6-foot-230-pound safety from Arizona State who was projected as a first-round pick.

"What is he, a linebacker defensive back?" asked the pro personnel director.

"I don't know what position we'd play him at... if any," the second, a coach. "He's a slow for the secondary, maybe strong enough for linebacker."

For the record, Fulcher, playing strong safety for the Cincinnati Bengals, who took him the third round. He's become one of the best at his position the NFL -- strong enough to run, fleet enough to start receivers like the New York Jets' Al Toon, whom he thwarted fly pattern in Cincinnati's victory on Sunday.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) -- Rex Chapman, the Charlotte Nets' top draft pick, is expected to practice with the Charlotte Nets today, after signing a year contract worth more than $1 million, officials say.

Open a museum for Watson

SAN ANTONIO (AP) -- The purse is down by $1.4 million, but the Texas Open this week made a claim rarely seen in PGA Tour -- dual defending champions.

Tom Watson and John Mahaffey occupy that (or position). Mahaffey, 33, was the last man to win the tournament under its current Texas Open.

The last two years, the tournament, on the Oak Hills Club course, was hosted by multi-million-dollar National Championships of Golf.

Watson won it last year, ending all the way as he broke a year victory drought.

Nabisco, however, not taken its $2-million ex-Pebble Beach, Calif. (to be next month) and the San Antonio tournament reclaimed the first used in 1922 -- the Open.

While Mahaffey is a winner of that title, Watson back in a role he sees as a defender.

"I won there. It's on that I go back and defend the six-time Player of the Year five-time British Open said earlier this season."

He'll face a course, undergone some slight unplanned alterations. Holes, trees have been loadoes spawned by Hurricane Gilbert on Sept. 17.

Fulcher a find for 6 - 0 Bengals

(AP) — Just before the 1986 draft, a couple of the NFL's best personnel evaluators were asked about David Fulcher, a 6-foot-3, 230-pound safety from Arizona State who was projected as anything from a first-rounder to a fifth.

"What is he, a linebacker or defensive back?" asked the first, a pro personnel director.

"I don't know what position we'd play him at ... if any," said the second, a coach. "He's a step slow for the secondary, maybe not strong enough for linebacker."

For the record, Fulcher is playing strong safety for the Cincinnati Bengals, who took him on the third round. He's becoming one of the best at his position in the NFL — strong enough to jam the run, fleet enough to stay with receivers like the New York Jets' Al Toon, whom he thwarted on a fly pattern in Cincinnati's 36-19 victory on Sunday.

If blond, articulate Boomer Esiason, the NFL's leading passer, is getting the ink and the television spots, there is far more to Cincinnati's resurgence from 4-11 last season to 6-0 this season as the league's only unbeaten team.

In fact, winning is turning the Bengals from one of the league's most maligned organizations to one of the most respected. Like teams such as the Bears, Redskins, 49ers and Giants, the Bengals have parlayed choices in the lower rounds of the draft into functional players.

And this with an organization, headed by Paul Brown, that often is ridiculed for its penury.

It has just one full-time scout compared to up to a dozen for some teams; it's frequently the last team to sign its first-draft pick, and it's paying just eight players on injured reserve compared to 26 for Washington, one of many teams that "stashes" developmental players such as quarterback Mark Rypien with suspect injuries.

Fulcher is one ingredient, the glue to a maturing defense that's supplementing the already explosive offense.

Another is right tackle Joe Walter, a 6-6, 290-pounder taken on the seventh round in 1985.

He keeps Brian Blados, a 1984 first-rounder on the bench. Walter has shut down two of the league's premier pass rushers, Reggie White of the Eagles and Mark Gastineau of the Jets, and is being compared favorably to Anthony Munoz, his All-Pro counterpart on the left side.

"He's as good as Anthony, just ask Anthony," Esiason says.

Munoz, when asked, replies: "He's improved every year. He's a good player."

There are a lot of Walters on the Bengals, particularly on defense, the kind of guys you look at and ask: "Where did he come from?"

The most notable is nose tackle Tim Krumrie, a 10th-round pick in 1983 whose developed into one of the best at his position in the league — in fact, he's so often called "unheralded" that he's become heralded just for that. Krumrie's backup — and eventual replacement — is David Grant, taken this year on the fourth round.

Chapman signs with the Hornets

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Rex Chapman, the Charlotte Hornets' top draft pick, is expected to practice with the Charlotte Hornets today, after signing a four-year contract worth more than $2 million, officials say.

Chapman's signing Tuesday culminated a marathon negotiation session which began on Monday between Hornets general manager Carl Scheer, team owner George Shinn, and Chapman's attorney David Falk.

"I'm ready to play basketball," said Chapman, who gave up two years of college eligibility at Kentucky to turn pro. "All this is behind us."

No financial details were disclosed by team officials at a hastily called news conference to announce the deal. But one source told The Charlotte Observer that the contract was for four years, and another placed Chapman's annual salary in the vicinity of $650,000 a year.

"I'm just happy to have all this behind us so I can concentrate on basketball," said Chapman, a 6-foot-4 guard.

Chapman joins the first-year expansion team just two days before it takes on the New Jersey Nets in its first pre-season game at Madison Square Garden in New York. The Hornets open the regular season Nov. 4 against Cleveland.

What's ahead for Chapman is some very quick studying on the differences between college and pro basketball.

Open a must for Watson

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The purse is down by $1.4 million, but the Texas Open this week can make a claim rarely seen on the PGA Tour — dual defending champions.

Tom Watson and John Mahaffey occupy that (or those) position(s). Mahaffey, in 1985, was the last man to win this tournament under its current title, the Texas Open.

The last two years, the tournament, on the Oak Hills Country Club course, was host to the multi-million-dollar Nabisco Championships of Golf.

Watson won it last year, leading all the way as he broke a three-year victory drought.

Nabisco, however, now has taken its $2-million event to Pebble Beach, Calif. (to be played next month) and the San Antonio tournament reclaimed the name it first used in 1922 — the Texas Open.

While Mahaffey is the last winner of that title, Watson will be back in a role he sees as that of a defender.

"I won there. It's only right that I go back and defend there," the six-time Player of the Year and five-time British Open winner said earlier this season.

He'll face a course that has undergone some slight — and unplanned — alterations. On three holes, trees have been lost to tornadoes spawned by Hurricane Gilbert on Sept. 17.

"It doesn't change the course's playability that much," Mahaffey said. "Other than that, the course is in great shape, maybe the best I've seen it."

America's Cup yacht seized

MIAMI (AP) — A Cuban gunship seized a U.S. merchant ship with eight people and New Zealand's America's Cup race yacht aboard, saying the vessel was in its waters, a claim the captain flatly denied, the Coast Guard said.

The eight, at least seven Americans, were detained Tuesday in Punto Cayo Malo, Cuba, said Coast Guard spokesman Dan Vogeley.

The disassembled sloop New Zealand was aboard the 160-foot U.S.-registered merchant ship Tampa Sea Horse, officials said.

The 133-foot yacht was en route from Long Beach, Calif., to New York City for a tour of East Coast cities.

The Cubans seized the vessel off the southeastern tip of Cuba without firing shots or using force, saying it had violated the communist country's 12-mile territorial limit, the Coast Guard said.

Capt. Jeff Jappe radioed an urgent appeal Tuesday at 3 p.m. EDT to the Coast Guard, insisting he was in international waters, but Coast Guard officers advised him to comply with the Cubans, Vogeley said.

Lowell Oswald, a spokesman for the Tampa Sea Horse's agent, Zapata Marine of New Orleans, said he didn't know why the ship was seized.

"Hopefully, they'll let us go... and they'll keep going to New York," he said. "There's no way to really tell."

The merchant ship was escorted to the Cuban port for inspection, said Maggie Kerrigan, a spokeswoman at the New Zealand consulate in Los Angeles.

She said one New Zealander was aboard, but a list supplied to the Coast Guard by Zapata listed all eight on board as Americans.

Cuba detains foreign ships as often as once a month for trespassing in its waters, but the vessels and crewmen usually are quickly released, said Coast Guard Lt. Wayne Ball in Miami.

"We feel that after a brief inspection they will probably be released," said State Department press officer Ben Justesen in Washington.

If the crew is detained for an extended period, the State Department would seek to contact the crew through the U.S. diplomatic mission in Havana, he said.

San Diego-based Sail America managed the successful U.S. defense of the America's Cup race by sailing the catamaran Stars & Stripes against the single-hulled

New Zealand last month off San Diego.

Michael Fay, chairman of the New Zealand Challenge, forced the San Diego Yacht Club into an early defense of the cup this year after winning a court order that validated his challenge of race rules.

The New Zealand was twice as long as the traditional 12-meter yachts used in cup competitions. The San Diego club responded by building a dual-hulled catamaran to defend the Cup, and Dennis Conner skipped the Stars & Stripes to two easy victories to sweep a best-of-three series.

Oswald estimated the Tampa Sea Horse's value at $3 million, but said he didn't know what the sailing vessel was worth.

Bluebonnet Bowl cancelled

HOUSTON (AP) — The financially struggling Bluebonnet Bowl has elected to punt this season, canceling the 1988 New Year's Eve game and trying to resume play in 1989 with a corporate sponsor.

"Suppose we take some time, really do our homework, put together a series of events surrounding the ball game, and come up with a first class bowl game," Bowl President Al Warrington said Tuesday night.

The bowl's board of directors voted to skip the 1988 game unless they quickly find a sponsor who insists on playing in December.

"The feeling of the board is that it would not be practical to play the game this year," Warrington said. "If a title sponsor appeared and insisted we go on this year, we'd try to do it."

Warrington said, however, it

AP top four

Miami, UCLA, Southern Cal and Notre Dame are the top four teams in this week's Associated Press college football poll and several of them have to play each other.

The first test comes this week when Miami visits Notre Dame.

Southern Cal visits UCLA on Nov. 19 and the following week Notre Dame visits Southern Cal.

Miami was idle over the weekend and held onto first place for the sixth week in a row. The Hurricanes received 52 of 56 first-place votes and 1,115 of a possible 1,020 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

UCLA remained No. 2 for the fifth consecutive week by defeating Oregon State 38-21. The Bruins received one first-place vote and 1,051 points.

Southern Cal is third for the third straight week following a 42-14 victory over No. 18 Oregon which knocked the Ducks out of the Top Twenty. The Trojans received the remaining three first-place votes and 1,012 points.

West Virginia rose from seventh to sixth with 811 points thanks to a 30-10 triumph over East Carolina.

Nebraska's 63-10 rout of Kansas pushed the Cornhuskers from ninth place to seventh with 747 points. They passed South Carolina, which remained No. 8 with 704 points after edging Virginia Tech 26-24.

Oklahoma went from 10th to ninth with 663 points by downing Texas 28-13 and Oklahoma State cracked the Top Ten for the first time since 1985 by defeating Colorado 41-21. The Cowboys, 13th a week ago, rounded out the Top Ten with 599 points.

The Second Ten consists of Clemson, Auburn, Georgia, Wyoming, Michigan, Washington, Arkansas, Indiana, LSU and Florida.

Last week, it was Clemson, Alabama, Oklahoma State, Florida, Georgia, Wyoming, Michigan, Oregon, Washington and Arkansas.

Alabama, a 22-12 loser to Mississippi, joined Oregon in falling out of the Top Twenty.

Indiana moved in for the first time this season after trouncing Ohio State 41-7 and LSU reappeared after a one-week absence thanks to its victory over Auburn.

would be difficult to get a bowl game organized by December.

He said the bowl still had not heard from the NCAA, which is considering decertifying the game because it still owes $400,000 to participating teams from the last two years.

Warrington said there was no negative feedback from the board of directors.

"There was not one negative vote to hang it up," he said. "I think the people went away with the determination to make this thing work. The NCAA is working with us to try to help."

Warrington said the bowl is seeking $500,000 from prospective sponsors to pay off its debts and to revive the game, which was played in the Astrodome last year.

The bowl actually had landed a sponsor last year, but the deal fell through at the last minute, Warrington said.

"I think it came as a shock to everybody because it had been approved by all the committees," Warrington said.

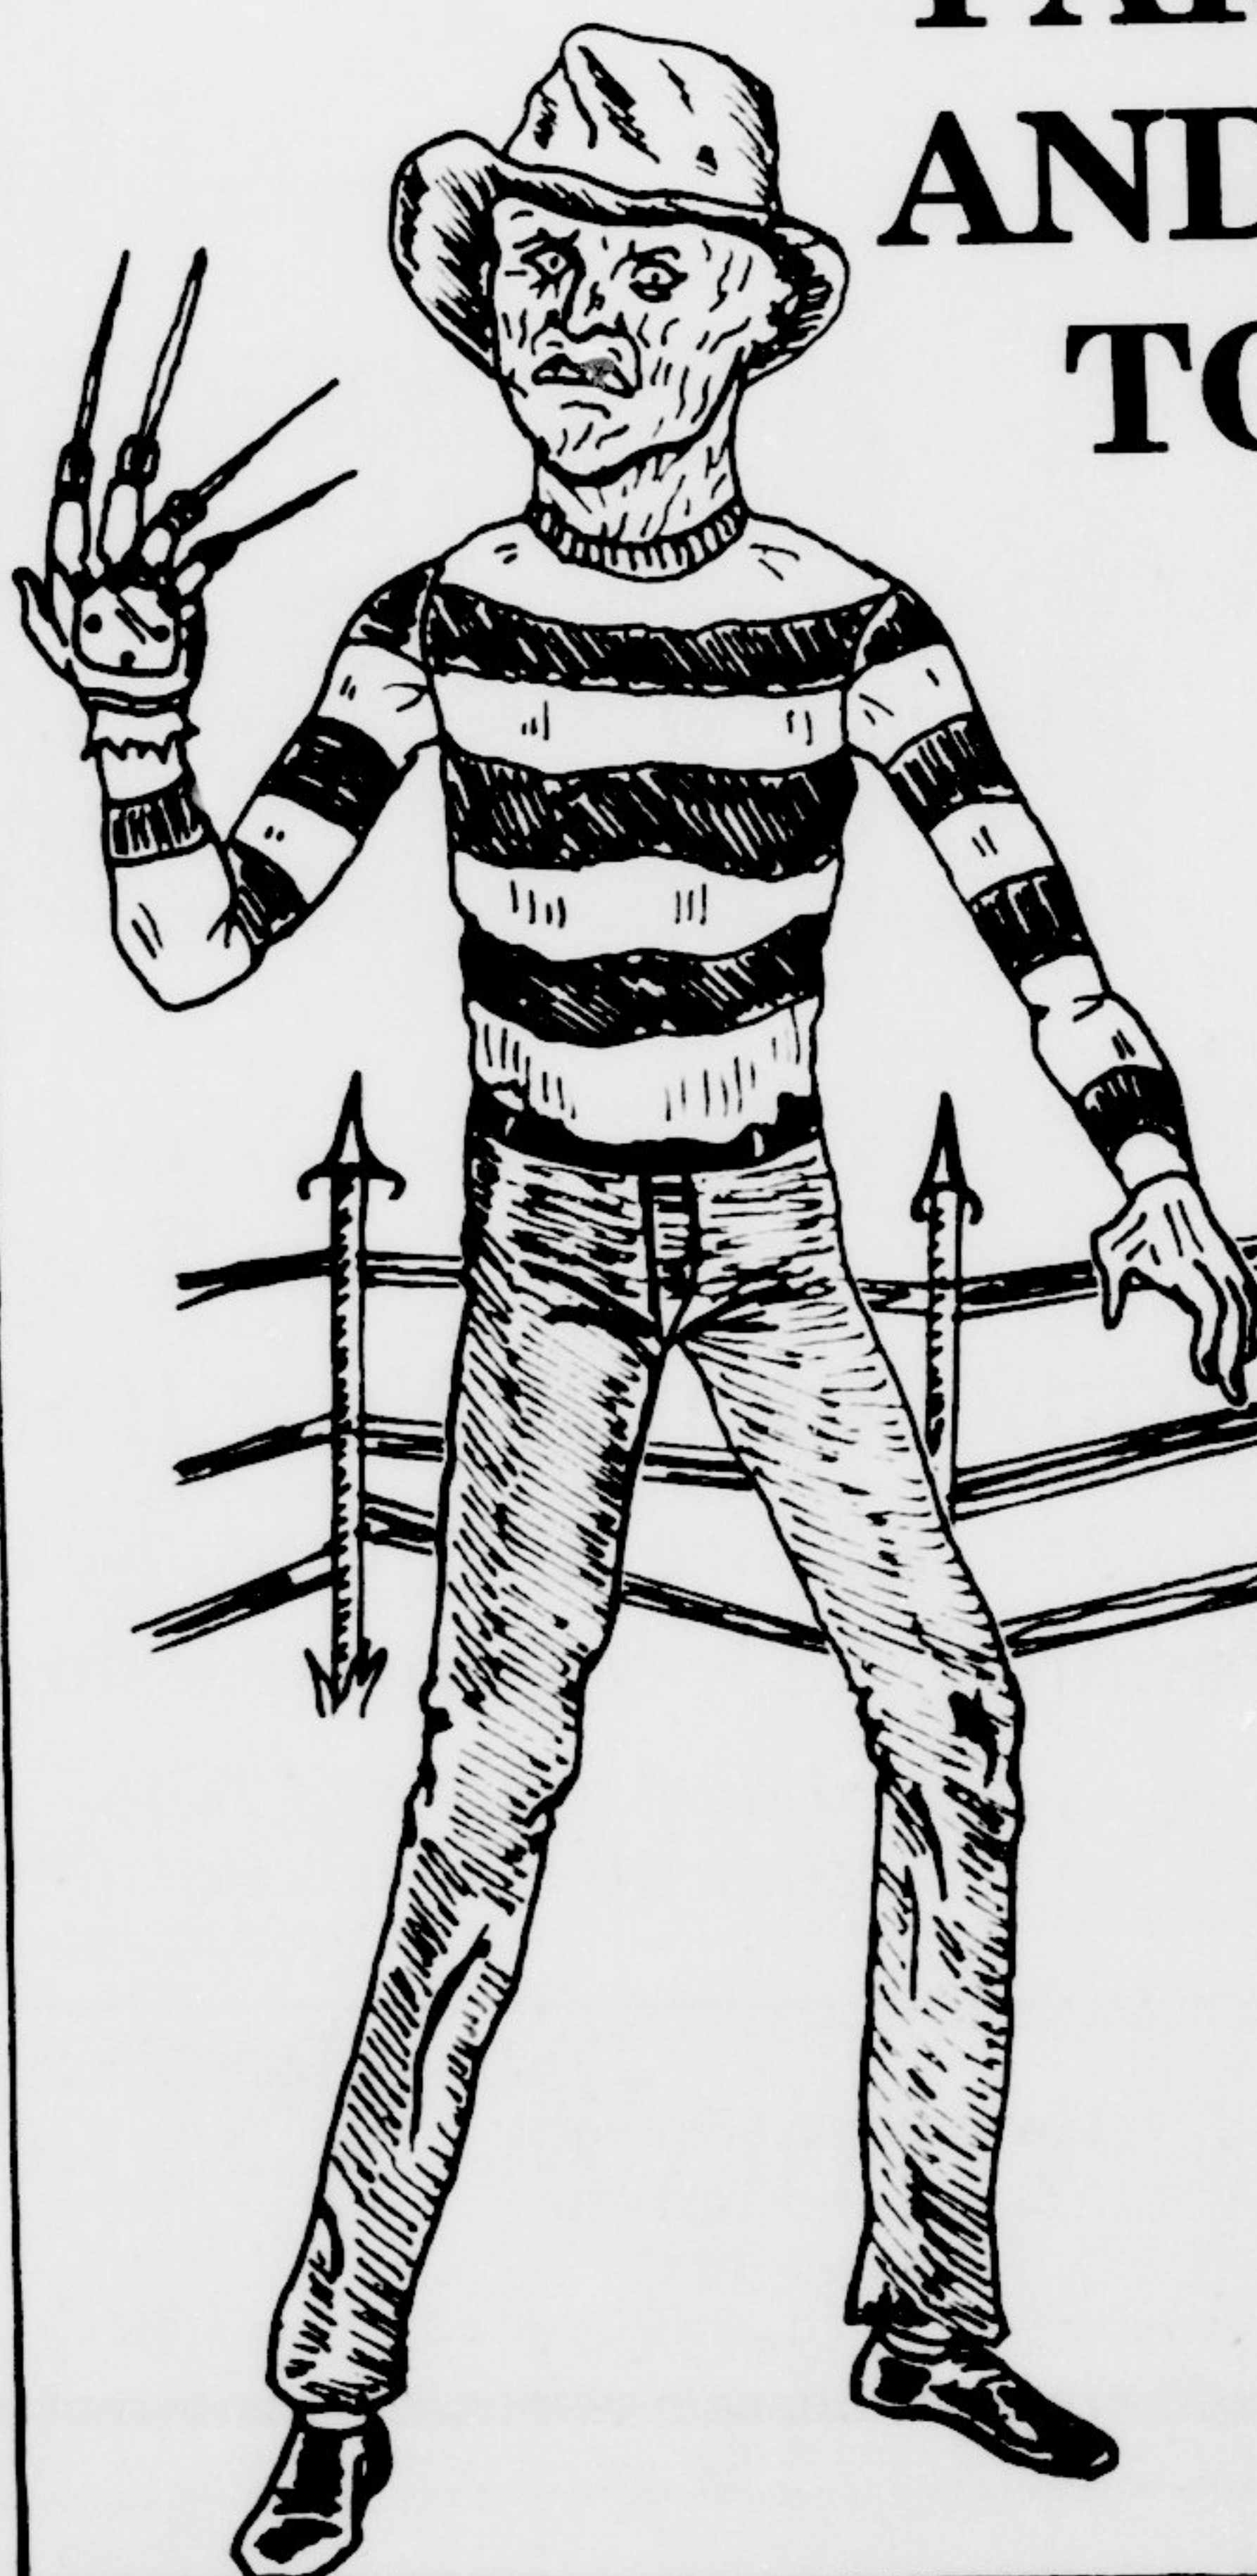

The bowl also has considered combining several corporate sponsors and currently has a firm commitment for a $100,000 sponsorship, Warrington said.

The NCAA's Post Season Bowl Committee was meeting through today in Kansas City.
