Welcome Back

Students return to campus to find progress being made at the site of Wright Cafeteria. The construction site is beginning to look more like the drawings of the finished product. Still there are the detours and fence-to deal with for a yet undetermined amount of time. The new sidewalk cafe promises to be a more picturesque and modern point of gathering for students and well worth the wait.

Speaking of waiting... Students are finally able to exhale as the doors of the new Student Recreation Center on West Campus open to the public. The Center will be hosting a number of Grand Opening/Welcome Back programs including a "polar bear party" at the 30-foot by 40-foot outdoor pool. Students are now taking advantage of the six-court multipurpose sports area (below) and everything else the Center has to offer. Be sure to look for the Rec Center's full section explaining programming, hours of operation, membership specifications and itemized details in this issue.

A new semester offers a fresh start and a chance for students to make the grades they intended to make last semester. The Terra Cotta sculpture below is located on the second floor of the new addition to Joyner library. Joyner offers extended study hours, a host of new computers and many quiet corners in which students can escape campus noise and other distractions that tempt one not to study.

Many campus organizations and departments are doing more to give extra academic support to students this semester, including offering tutoring sessions and posting helpful hints. Resident Advisor Corey Algoodprepara's bulletin board of helpful hints outside his door on Garret Hall's fourth floor. RHA Council is only one of the places students can go for guidance and support as they work toward academic success.

news briefs

HIGH POINT (AP) - A Guilford County grand jury indicted a man diagnosed with AIDS and charged with assault with intent to kill after raping a 12-year-old girl.

Police originally charged Andrew Lee Monk, 36, of Jamestown, with first-degree statutory rape and taking indecent liberties with a minor after the girl was raped on Dec. 15 in High Point.

A day after he was released on bond, police arrested Monk and charged him with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury, after learning he had the AIDS virus.

RALEIGH (AP) - The parents of a 9-year-old girl whose intestines were pulled out when she was caught in the open drain of a wading pool say a record settlement will allow their daughter to have a financially secure future.

The family of Valerie Lakey will receive $30.9 million after announcing a settlement Tuesday with the Wisconsin company that made the pool drain covers.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Phones rang, volunteers shouted and marijuana plants grew at the Cannabis Cultivators Club on Tuesday in preparation for what supporters call the country's first legal sale of the drug in over 60 years. Protected from California's anti-drug attorney general by a state proposition and a judge's order, the club was set to provide pot to its first customer Wednesday.

The drug is known to counter the nausea and loss of appetite in chemotherapy.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - America Online cannot handle the increased load that has resulted from its new price plan for Internet service, a lawsuit contends.

The suit said AOL subscribers have encountered "busy and unavailable phone lines and/or inaccessible computer equipment" since the company began offering unlimited access for a $19.95 monthly fee at the beginning of the year.

MAO'ER MOUNTAIN, China (AP) - South China's tallest mountain, covered with bamboo and mist, concealed the crash of a U.S. bomber for 52 years.

A team from the U.S. POW/MIA Office, led by Chinese officials and accompanied by reporters, climbed wet rock and mud walls, edged along narrow ledges. There they found, scattered in the crags and trees of a steep ravine beneath Mao'er Mountain, the debris of the B-24 bomber, lost on Aug. 30, 1944.

ALASKA, Kasakatan (AP) - Police have arrested two suspects in the killing of an American director of a journalism training program in Kasakatan, news reports said.

The body of Chris Gehring, 28, was discovered in his apartment last week after he failed to show up for work at Internews Network. His throat had been slit.

crime scene

Larceny
A student reported the larceny of her wallet from her room in Clement Hall.

Residential Death
A resident of White Hall was found dead in his room. Investigation continuing.

Assist Rescue
A student was transported from the Rivers Building to Pitt County Memorial Hospital by Greenville Rescue after complaining of abdominal pains.

Armed Robbery Arrests
Three non-students were arrested in conjunction with the armed robbery that took place at Scott Hall on 12-5-96. A man was charged with robbery with a dangerous weapon and assault by pointing a gun. Another man was charged with accessory after the fact to a felony. A third man was charged with accessory after the fact to a felony. The investigation is continuing.

Larceny
A student reported the larceny of the lug nuts from the left front wheel of her vehicle. The vehicle was parked in the College Hill commuter lot.

Malicious Mischief
A student/staff member reported that someone has set off firecrackers on his dormitory room door in Aycock Hall. There was no damage. However, the firecrackers set off the fire alarm.

New semester - new academic strategy

JACQUELINE D. KELLUM
SENIOR WRITER

While most students probably regard each new semester as a fresh start, that attitude may be more meaningful to some students than others. Students starting the semester on an academic warning or probation have one semester in which to pull their GPA up sufficiently, get back in good academic standing and avoid suspension.

Dorothy Muller, Dean of Undergraduate Studies, says it is important for students to be informed about what the standards are that determine good academic standing, academic warning, probation and suspension.

"To be in good academic standing, a student with 31 or fewer hours must have a 1.75 or better. A student with 32 or more hours must have a 2.0 to be in good academic standing."

Students who are not in good academic standing are placed on warning, Muller said.

Muller explained that these standards are new ones, which have been adopted but are not yet being enforced.

"While we are studying the impact of the new standards, students are not suspended under the new standards, they are placed on warning. They are suspended under the old standards," Muller said.

The old standards require lower GPAs and are different for each classification from freshman through senior. Freshmen are required to have a 1.35, sophomores a 1.60, juniors a 1.80, and seniors need a 1.90 GPA.

A number of years ago, when the new standards were proposed, the committee believed that it was inappropriate to tell students that they were okay when they had a 1.35 or a 1.6, or even a 1.8. (The committee felt) that the students really needed to know that grades are important from the beginning," Muller said.

Students who are placed on academic warning, probation, or suspension are not left on their own to return to satisfactory academic standing.

"We have for several years now been working with students placed on warning and students placed on probation to try to provide assistance that they might need in making progress toward graduation," Muller said.

That assistance includes an Academic Enhancement Conference, held a week before classes start and required for all those on warning or probation, and optional workshops held throughout the semester.

At that conference, every student got a letter telling him or her what his or her situation is, and what grades the student must earn either to avoid probation or suspension," Muller said, and continued, "we have workshops on career selection, we have workshops on test taking, note taking, and also opportunities for students to sit down and talk to someone individually."

With the exception of the conference, all of the resources available to the students are voluntary, and Muller stressed that it is up to the student to take responsibility for their academic success or failure. If they do not pull their GPA up to an acceptable standard, they are suspended.

"If students fail to meet the criteria for staying in school while they are on probation, then they are suspended. A student who is suspended the first time is suspended for a semester."

If they come back in and don't get their grades back where they are supposed to be, then they are suspended for two semesters. The third suspension is indefinite—the student can only come in the summer," Muller said.

Muller said that the purpose of a suspension is to give the student a chance to resolve whatever problems led to their academic difficulties in the first place, whether they are financial, personal, or lack of time management or study skills.

"A student who has been suspended comes back on probation. During that semester on probation, they must improve his or her academic standing to where it should be, or the student is suspended again," Muller said.

In addition to the services available to students to help them get off probation, there are policies in place that help students keep their grades up, such as the grade replacement policy. This policy allows students to repeat any 1000 or 2000 level course in which they received a D or F and can be used up to three times. If the class is passed the second time, the failing grade is not used in computing the GPA, but only the second grade.

Muller stressed that the grade replacement form, which must be turned in to the registrar's office in order to make use of this opportunity, must be turned in by the last day of the add period. If the form is not turned in on time, the student cannot replace the grade.

While primary responsibility for any student's grades rests with the student, there are services available to help anyone who is having trouble. These services are those to be utilized by those who are trying to get out of probation or suspension, or those trying to avoid it.

Student store managers need suggestions

Student ideas for products and apparel welcome

ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

This spring, the Student Store plans to offer new items and programs as well as traditional merchandise.

Store manager Wanda Scarborough said that while the Student Store will continue to offer text books, school supplies, apparel, computers, computer software, caps and gowns, apparel, beauty aids, class rings and nursing pins, new wearing apparel items will be available.

"We are trying to look for a lot of new items as far as wearing apparel," Scarborough said. "Jake Jacobs is our new assistant manager who will be doing the apparel buying. He has a lot of new ideas."

A coffee club, another new idea, started when dining services and the Student Store joined forces. Scarborough said that after purchasing a specific amount of coffee from any campus dining facility, students may receive a discount on reading books. Similarly, students whose reading book purchases total a set amount may receive discounted coffee.

Scarborough said the Student Store also offers special event t-shirts for organizations and departments on campus.

"If any student has ideas for t-shirts, we are open to suggestions," Scarborough said.

Other responsibilities of the student store include offering course packs and maintaining vending machines on campus.

The store regularly offers a discount rack in the wearing apparel section which offers at least 30 percent off selected items and accepts cash, checks, Visa and Mastercard.

The Student Store employs 25

full-time and 25 part-time students.

"We like to have student employees because it gives them the opportunity to work on campus close to classes and to give the best of the staff their input on what students want," Scarborough said.

All profits realized by the Student Store are used for student scholarships. Scarborough said many students may not realize that they are helping other students by purchasing the Student Store.

Students can give us ideas for things they want to see in the store, Scarborough said. "Our main purpose is service."

ECU student store names assistant manager

ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

Jake Jacobs, a former retail buyer for Overton's and minor league pitcher for the Kannapolis Royals, has been named Assistant Manager of the ECU Student Store. Jacobs brings with him a strong background in retail and high enthusiasm for the university. A 1989 graduate of ECU and former basketball player, Jacobs is excited about his return to the university.

"East Carolina University means a lot to me," Jacobs said recently. "I'm excited to be able to apply my retailing experience in a way which will benefit the students."

Before joining the staff of the Student Store, Jacobs worked for four years as a retail buyer for Overton's sporting goods in Greenville. In his new position, Jacobs will be responsible for the day-to-day operations of the ECU Student Store, including overseeing buyers and inventory management for the main store in the Wright Building and the medical bookstore at the School of Medicine, as well as the campus vending machines and concessions for athletic events.

A lifelong basketball player, Jacobs is a member of the ECU basketball team. He is the son of Cole and Mary Jacobs of Mt. Olive, N.C. In his free time, Jacobs enjoys hunting and spending time with his wife, Karen, and his son, Thomas.

Crime prevention team patrols campus

Police escorts,
"blue lights,"
promote safety

AMENA HASSAN
STAFF WRITER

The Crime Prevention team within the ECU Police Department will be offering the same services this semester that have been utilized by students in the past. Through the use of escorts, surveys and regular patrolling the department is making an effort to ensure the safety of all students.

"We are in the process of prioritizing the placement of blue light phones," crime prevention officer Sergeant Davis said. The blue light phones which have emergency buttons are located throughout campus.

"When a button is pressed by a student in trouble, the police department is able to dispatch an officer to the exact location," said Officer McDaniel, patrol officer. "The blue light phones enable a student to get help even if he or she can't talk or is being chased by someone. When the student presses many blue light phones we can often check their path if they are being chased." The department is working on mapping future blue light placement through five years from now.

In addition to the blue light phones, the department is taking lighting surveys two nights a week. "We are sending police officers on patrol so that they can check if there are any light outs," Davis said. "Officers also look out for dark areas where lighting may be needed, since these areas are obviously more recognizable at night rather than during the day. We haven't seen any potential problems in badly lit areas, but we're still making sure, in light of the recent incidents on campus. Since the downtown areas are already well lit, we are just reporting random light outages."

Police officers are on regular patrol at night and especially at peak times. According to Davis, these peak times vary but are mainly around the time when there are more students moving around on campus. "Our main goal is to be visible, when patrolling on campus," Davis said. "We are always looking for new ideas and challenges to make the campus a more secure place."

Another form of patrol that the ECU police department uses is bike patrol. Officers are able to maneuver through campus on bikes rather than patrol cars in order to react faster in a situation. McDaniel feels bike patrol is more of a supplement to car patrol. "It is easier to ask students questions while being on a bike, and since a lot of students ride bikes anyway, we have something in common with them," McDaniel commented.

"I personally think that bike patrol is ten times more quick than trying to get through campus traffic in a car," Davis said. "However, because of the inclement weather we can't have them riding in twenty degree weather."

The Police Department is open twenty-four hours a day and is located on 10th street. Nonemergency inquiries can be directed to 328-4827 for the Main Campus or 816-3863 for the School of Medicine.

Student health expands services

"Health Bandits" out to promote well-being

AMENA HASSAN
STAFF WRITER

This semester the Student Health Service department will be offering a variety of familiar programs along with a few new ones which will provide students with needed services, educating them in the process.

"Everything is pretty much set up as a doctors clinic with basically the same services as last year" said Heather Zophy, Health Education Coordinator. "We offer information on alcohol, sexually transmitted diseases, dating, eating disorders, contraceptives, and other topics of concern."

The Student Health Service, a part of the Division of Student Life, is a department that consists of a director, a clinical director, physicians, mental health personnel, pharmacists, health educators, registered nurse, lab technologists, x-ray technologists, nursing assistants, and other staff. All enrolled students can take advantage of this service if the department has the required, recorded report of their medical history and immunizations. The department has an urgent care facility for students in need of emergency care, an allergy clinic, colposcopy/gynecology clinics, a mental health clinic, and x-ray services. Physical therapy services are also offered, as well as HIV and AIDS referrals.

"An assertive marketing approach that we are using this semester are the Health Bandits," Zophy stated. The "Health Bandits", which consist of some Health Services staff dressed in scrubs, stethoscopes, and Band-Aids, will be in front of the Students Stores and on campus.

"Their goal is to make students more aware of health issues by asking them questions and giving the winners "goody bags" filled with items such as ibuprofen and antibiotic ointment. "The students seem to enjoy being approached," said one of a group of health bandits. "They are mostly curious and are receptive to us, especially when they receive their prizes." Students should be on the look out for the Health Bandits on campus all semester.

Tours of the Student Health Service can be given by request to classes or to students on an individual basis. Student Health Service is open from 8 am to 5 p.m. on Monday through Friday and 9 am to noon on Saturdays and Sundays. Pharmacists are available to take prescriptions from Monday through Fridays at 8 am to 5 p.m. only. Students can obtain medicine from the pharmacy at a reduced cost which can be purchased by check or cash. For more information or to make an appointment, call 328-6317.

Campus Briefs

Twos the Season

The Office of Business Services reported that Holiday Drive '96 was a tremendous success, thanks to the campus-wide generosity of students, staff and faculty. Prior to Christmas, Business Services placed 39 collection boxes in campus departments and residence halls for items to be donated to clients of the Pitt County Department of Social Services. Over 500 foods items, along with toys, clothing and books were provided to foster children and other families.

One down, Two to go

Now that the Student Recreation Center has been completed and is open to the public, construction workers can concentrate on the two remaining extensive renovation projects on campus—the Student Stores/Wright Place Sidewalk Cafe and the expansion of Joyner Library. Campus will have a new and modern look once the dust settles and the detours and fences become a thing of the past.

With Improvement comes Cost

Pending approval by the UNC Board of Governors and President of the UNC System C. D. Spivey, students may find that the cost of living has gone up about 6.15 percent. A proposition which has been in the works for months could have students paying higher fees as early as Fall 1997. The proposition will be submitted for final legislation on February 14.

Inspired veterinarian turns writer in North Carolina mountains

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) - He was a successful veterinarian, and one day he was standing on his back deck, gazing at the land before him and thinking about this and all the other things his career had afforded him.

"I suddenly realized it had been months since I had been out there," Dr. Brad Swift said, "and I thought, 'there's something wrong with this picture - I don't enjoy it because I spend so much of my time trying to pay for it.'"

Today, Swift is a writer living in Flat Rock. His articles have been published in Hope, The Utne Reader, Yoga Journal and other magazines. He also has a pair of books in different stages of production.

"It was a fairly radical switch," Swift confessed. "I imagined myself at the end of my life and I asked myself if I didn't go for being a writer, would I regret it? When I was really honest with myself, the answer was yes."

It wasn't that Swift was tired of cats and dogs. More precisely, it was a feeling that told him his life was about something other than what he was doing.

"There are many different ways of expressing one's life purpose," Swift explained. "Being a vet was one way, but for me the purpose led in a different direction."

Life's purpose - the thing deep within you that you want to pursue, whether you know what it is or not - is central to Swift's work. It has led him, with his wife Ann, to establish the Life on Purpose Foundation, based in Flat Rock.

"Our purpose is broken down into two parts," Swift explained. "One is to promote public awareness of service-oriented individuals and organizations who unselfishly contribute their time to others by being of service."

"The other purpose," he continued, "is to educate people in what's available by determining your life purpose and living consistent with it."

The foundation highlights service-oriented folks because Swift believes that service is an element of most people's life purpose. And beyond writing, mostly about people of service, Swift believes the purpose of his life is helping people as they search for theirs.

"I've seen people who have spent years of their life searching out in the world for their life purpose," he said, "having to look out there someplace, and I don't think that's where it is."

"I think where you get that is from within yourself, and it's not so much a matter of finding it as it is creating it. You make it up, and try it out for a while, and see if it makes a difference in your life and the life of others."

Having a positive effect on others, Swift believes, is a good indication that you're on the right track.

"One of the fundamental aspects of what it is to be a human being is to want to make a contribution to other human beings," he said. "For me, that equates to being of service. When you identify your way of being of service, you're very close to what your life purpose is."

But being of service, and being a coach for people experimenting with their own version of sitting on the back porch and wondering whether it's worth it, does not make Swift a guru. In fact, he cringes at the label.

"I don't let anyone call me that, even in jest," he said. "I'm just as fallible as anybody. I'm not a teacher. I don't have all the answers, but I do have a way of working with somebody that makes a difference when they are willing to look with me - what I commonly call 'being coachable.'"

Swift also wants to help children explore their dreams and find purpose. It has become another focus for the Life on Purpose Foundation.

"The Kids on Purpose project came out of a conversation I had with my daughter, Amber, about what she wants to be. There are a lot of other kids out there that have equally great dreams."

Amber is 4, and her current dreams include becoming a singer or a ballerina. Her photo, in a dance costume, graces the signs on several bubble-gun machines placed in local businesses for the benefit of the foundation.

The project's goal is to provide support - coaching, seed money, and guidance - for people between 6 and 18 years old, to help them determine what their dreams are and to be able to fulfill them.

"It doesn't take much money at a critical time to say 'Yes, you can do what you want to do, and here's some help,'" Swift observed.

He also offers workshops to organizations around the country. The next one is in February, at a meeting of the Minnesota Veterinary Association.

How does he feel about returning to face an audience of former colleagues?

"I'm scared to death," he said.

It looks like he will have to live with those kinds of fears. Swift's foundation is gaining increasing attention, primarily through his freelance writing for magazines.

The pieces have drawn inquiries from as far away as Israel. Additionally, his new book, "The Human Being Service Manual: Designing a Life of Purpose and Service," is expected to be released soon.

Speaker of the House position changes hands

RALEIGH (AP) - Charlotte Democrat Jim Black, the House minority leader for the last two years, will challenge Republican incumbent Harold Brubaker for speaker of the House when the Legislature convenes Jan. 29.

Black, nominated by House Democrats at a closed caucus Tuesday, said he believes he can win the House's top post, even though Democrats have only 59 votes, two short of a majority.

"I am a serious candidate for speaker of the House," Black said after the caucus. "This is more than do-able."

But Brubaker, an Asheboro Republican seeking his second term, said he was not worried about his chances.

"This is simply another case of wishful thinking on the part of the Democrats," Brubaker said. "House Republicans are united and will stick together. I enjoyed the support of conservative Democrats last time and I look forward to receiving it again."

Several Democrats had started maneuvering for the speaker's post even before the Nov. 5 elections. But instead of gaining a majority in the 120-member House, which they lost in 1994, Democrats only increased their number from 52 to 59.

RALEIGH (AP) - A legislative commission studying changes to the state's fishing laws has delayed any action until at least Feb. 10, nearly two weeks after the Legislature opens its session.

Among the proposals it will consider at that meeting is a compromise by Rep. David Redwine, D-Brunswick, that would let fishing piers and boats that cater to tourists buy group licenses.

That would allow tourists to fish the coastal waters without buying an individual license.

No license is needed to fish along the coast now, but a committee studying the state's dwindling fish supplies has recommended requiring recreational fishermen to buy licenses.

ca. The legislative commission heard from pier operators, boat owners, recreational fishermen and commercial fishermen Tuesday as it continued a public hearing on a 155-page list of reforms.

Lawmakers said they want to take action, but need to spend more time on the recommendations, which took the N.C. Moratorium Steering Committee two years to develop.

GREENSBORO (AP) - A verdict eluded jurors on their first day of trying to decide whether to make ABC Inc. pay Food Lion as much as $1.9 billion in damages for a hidden camera story.

The jury deliberated 5 hours Tuesday before telling U.S. District Court Judge Carlton Tilley they wanted to go home.

Earlier, the jury sent out a note asking for a list of agreements, called stipulations, between each side.

Tilley responded with a note that the jury needed to be specific about what they wanted and there was no further exchange between the jury and judge.

ABC's "PrimeTime Live" aired a report Nov. 5, 1992, that accused Food Lion of selling old meat, bleaching spoiled meat to kill odor and selling cheese gnawed by rats. Food Lion denied the allegations, but didn't file a libel suit.

The grocery chain's attorneys said nothing in the 43 hours of ABC videotape backed up the allegations made in the report. But Tilley told jurors they were to assume the report was true.

RALEIGH (AP) - The parents of a 9-year-old girl whose intestines were pulled out when she was caught in the open drain of a wedding pool say a record settlement will allow their daughter to have a financially secure future.

The family of Valerie Lakey will receive $30.9 million after announcing a settlement Tuesday with the Wisconsin company that made the pool drain covers.

"What we were trying to accomplish is to have things set up so that Valerie's health care would be taken care of so that she wouldn't have to be on public aid the rest of her life, and so she could get a job she wanted, without worrying about whether insurance would cover her or not," said David Lakey, Valerie's father.

Valerie and her family agreed not to pursue punitive damages against Sta-Rite Industries.

On Monday, the jury awarded the Lakeys $25 million in compensatory damages for the 1993 accident. The settlement means that Sta-Rite Industries will not appeal the jury's decision.

Social worker cross-examined by prosecutor in Wallace trial

CHARLOTTE (AP) - Answering questions from the prosecutor, a social worker who investigated convicted serial killer Henry Louis Wallace's upbringing admitted that much of her information came from the defendant himself.

Wallace, 31, was convicted last week of raping and strangling nine Charlotte women from 1992 to 1994. He faces the death penalty or life in prison.

Defense attorneys are asking the jury to spare his life in the sentencing phase now taking place.

On Monday, social worker Cassandra Albarran answered friendly questions posed by public defender Isabel Day. She portrayed Wallace as a man warped at an early age by an abusive mother and absentee father who is now controlled by violent sexual compulsions.

However, Mecklenburg County Assistant District Attorney Marsha Goodnow challenged some of the conclusions Albarran wrote in her 42-page report on Wallace. The social worker acknowledged that much of the information she had about Wallace's early childhood - including allegations of beatings and sexual molestation - came from Wallace.

False Accusations Could Lead To Jail Time

DALLAS (AP) - The former stripper who made up a gang-rape accusation against Dallas Cowboys stars Erik Williams and Michael Irvin had until yesterday to post bond on a charge of filing a false police report.

Nina Shahravan, 23, could face six months in jail and a $2,000 fine if convicted of the misdemeanor. Police filed paperwork for the charge with prosecutors Tuesday.

A warrant was issued for her arrest, but police said she wouldn't necessarily be arrested at her home. She had until yesterday to post bond before Dallas county deputies begin trying to find her.

Shahravan filed a police report Dec. 30 - after first going to a television reporter - accusing Irvin of holding a gun to her head while Williams and a third man, who was never identified, raped her in Williams' home. She also accused Irvin of videotaping the attack.

Friday, after she was confronted with evidence that Irvin couldn't have been at Williams' house the night of the alleged attack, Shahravan signed a statement admitting her story was a lie.

Negotiations Under Way For Former Giants Coach

ATLANTA (AP) - Twenty years after he first applied to be head coach of the Atlanta Falcons, Dan Reeves appears to be on the verge of being hired.

Reeves met Monday night and Tuesday with Falcons president Taylor Smith, and various reports said a deal was imminent.

The fired New York Giants coach, who interviewed for the Atlanta job in 1977 when the Falcons hired Leeman Bennett, returned to his home in Ho-Ho-Kus, N.J., after Tuesday's meeting.

The newspaper said today its sources confirmed that negotiations were under way and representatives had forwarded various contract proposals. Barring any unexpected stumbling blocks, Reeves will be introduced as new Falcons coach by the end of the week, the paper said.

Reeves had more wins than any other active NFL coach when he was fired by the Giants, but New York had two losing seasons in his four years there. Reeves has said he had little or nothing to do with the Giants' personnel decisions. More control with the Falcons is considered a key to any contact here.

Golf Legend Recovering From Surgery

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) - Arnold Palmer is expected to remain hospitalized for several days as he recovers from surgery for prostate cancer.

The 67-year-old golf star, who checked into the Mayo Clinic on Monday, was scheduled to have surgery today. After his release from the hospital, he will remain in Rochester for treatment as an outpatient, the clinic said.

Doc Griffin, Palmer's spokesman, said Palmer was prepared for the surgery.

"I think he's ready," Griffin said. "He sounds like he's doing well. He's anxious to get on with it."

Palmer learned Friday he has prostate cancer. Doctors said Monday they were encouraged by initial test results, and Palmer met again with them Tuesday to determine treatment.

Former Cy Young Winner Heads North

CHICAGO (AP) - The Chicago White Sox, looking to shore up their starting rotation, have signed 1990 Cy Young Award winner Doug Drabek to a one-year contract.

Drabek, who won the Cy Young after going 22-6 with Pittsburgh, has pitched the last four seasons with the Houston Astros, compiling a 38-42 record.

The 34-year-old right-hander was 7-9 with a 4.57 earned run average in 30 starts with the Astros last season. He is 137-112 lifetime, with a 3.41 ERA.

The deal signed Tuesday will pay him $1.5 million, and he can earn another $1.3 million in performance bonuses.

Drabek can earn $100,000 bonuses for pitching 170, 180 and 190 innings, and $200,000 bonuses for pitching 200 and 210 innings. After that, he would earn bonuses of $20,000 per inning.

Drabek, who made $5.05 million with the Astros last season, talked with several other teams, including the cross-town Cubs. He chose the Sox, he said, because they were persistent and because they have a chance to go to the postseason. He was drafted by the White Sox in 1983.

Skating Darling Charged With Drinking And Driving

BLOOMFIELD, Conn. (AP) - Oksana Baiul, unshakable as she skated to an Olympic gold in 1994, plans to handle her recent fall from grace like a champion.

Baiul surrendered to police Tuesday on charges she drove drunk and recklessly when her Mercedes went off the road in a crash over the weekend. "She is not trying to hide anything. She wants to deal with the consequences," said Bob Young, a longtime friend who runs the Simsbury skating center, where Baiul trains.

He said the skater realizes the "magnitude of her mistake."

"She's a little scared, and this is pretty overwhelming for her," Young said.

"I don't think she's ever had to deal with anything like this in her life. She's got to pay a very big price for this mistake. And she's already paying for it."

The 19-year-old Ukrainian was released without bond after turning herself in at the Bloomfield police station. She is scheduled to appear Jan. 27 in West Hartford Superior Court.

If convicted, she faces six months in jail, $1,000 in fines, and suspension of her driver's license for one year.

Spring into athletics for new semester

Boss' seasons

Amanda Ross
A Junior Communication major from Kinston she someday hopes to be a broadcast news anchor.

Welcome back to another semester of ECU sports. There are a lot of exciting home events coming up this month including men's/women's basketball, and men's/women's swimming.

The men's basketball team is getting off on the right foot this season with a 10-3 record and a 3-1 conference CAA record. (This doesn't include last night's contest with VCU. At press time results were not available.) The Pirates are undefeated at home this season and will look to keep that streak alive on Saturday when they host Richmond in another CAA battle. That game will begin at noon and will be televised on Home Team Sports (HTS).

The women's basketball team will be taking their game on the road as they head up north to take on conference foes George Mason and American, before returning home on Friday Jan. 25 to host James Madison. The Lady Pirates are looking to improve on their 5-8 overall record and are looking for another conference win. Currently they are 1-3 in the CAA.

The ECU swimmers, men and women, will take to the pool this Saturday as they host Richmond for a 1 p.m. meet. Then, with little time to rest, they will hit the pool again on Sunday when they host the Seahawks from UNC-Wilmington at 2 p.m.

The Lady Pirates are looking to defend their CAA title, which they have won two consecutive seasons '94-'95 and '95-'96. The women are undefeated as they take a 6-0 overall record and a 3-0 CAA record into Saturday's meet.

The men are also undefeated with a perfect 6-0 record and 3-0 in conference meets. They are off to their best start since the '93-'94 season and will be in the CAA men's title hunt as well.

All these events are free to students. For basketball games ID's must be shown to receive your free ticket and can be picked up at the basketball ticket office at Minges Coliseum. (The side that faces Dowdy-Ficklen).

Swimming events are also at no charge and students don't need a ticket to enter Minges Aquatic Center.

Freshmen and transfers adjust to new style

TRACY LAUBACH
STAFF WRITER

According to Lady Pirate Misty Horne, playing basketball for ECU is like nothing she has ever experienced before.

A freshman from Statesville, NC, Horne says that being part of the team means practicing harder, being tougher mentally, and valuing a win a lot more.

As a member of the Amateur Athletic Union and a participant in seven national tournaments throughout her career, Horne feels that the strength of the team lies mostly within the hands of Coach Anne Donovan.

"Coach Donovan is by far the best coach around," Horne said. "We all have, not only a good coach/athlete relationship, but also a coach/athlete friendship. She understands each of us because everything we are experiencing as athletes, she has experienced, too."

Teammate Nicole Mamula, who is playing Pirate ball for the first time this year, agrees that the team has the best to look up to.

"Coach Donovan is a tough coach but a good coach. She pushes us hard to be the best we can be," Mamula is a junior college player who began her career at Winthrop University, which is part of the Big South Conference. The day after she signed her letter of intent, the coach was fired. She then went on to play for Frederick Junior College, in Frederick, MD, where she led the team to an overall record of 29-3. She was named Kodak Junior College All-American (the top ten junior college players in the country are awarded the honor) as she led the country in three-point field goals.

A communications major from Laurel, MD, Mamula feels that her father has influenced her winning spirit and attitude.

"My father is who I looked up to for everything in my life. He is truly a great person to follow behind," Mamula said.

Freshman Melanie Gillem, who is focusing mostly on defense this season, says that if she could thank one person for their support and encouragement throughout her experiences as a player, it would definitely be her mom.

"My mom has always pushed me to be strong and do my best because she had always dreamed of playing college basketball herself," Gillem said.

"She is so supportive of me. When I was in high school, she missed only one of my games."

Gillem chose to come to ECU because she liked the location and the people of the Pirate community. She says that playing ball here is completely different from her past experiences as an athlete because for the first time ever, she has to compete against her teammates for a starting position.

"At first, all of the new faces were really intimidating," Gillem said. "But now we are all very close and we work together well."

Coming from Roseboro, NC, freshman Danielle Melvin chose ECU because she felt that this is where she will be able to make a statement about her love for the sport and her talent out on the court. With an older sister who plays basketball for NC State, Melvin says her parents have instilled a legend of basketball for their whole family.

"Words cannot explain how much support, good advice, and confidence they have given me," Melvin said.

me," Melvin said.

As a member of a high school team that claimed victory at the State Championship her sophomore year, Melvin says that playing college basketball is different from playing in high school because her role on the team is so specific now.

"In high school, I could basically do what I wanted out on the court. Here, everyone on the team has a specific job. I contribute mostly to the offense and getting in for rebounds," Melvin said.

Melvin hopes to establish a place on the team for herself this year, and improving more and more each day comes first on her list of priorities.

After struggling with several injuries including a broken leg, junior college player Jen Cox transferred to ECU after spending two years at Vanderbilt. According to her, playing basketball is like having a job.

"It takes a lot of concentration and discipline to get all of my studying done, but playing basketball is the main reason why I am here," Cox said.

Cox agrees with her teammates that Coach Donovan is one of the best of coaches around. "You couldn't ask for a better coach," Cox said. "She is very intense and she expects a lot out of us. That is the kind of guidance we need to be the best."

Other first year Pirate players include Ashanta Sellers from Largo, MD, and Chissey White from New Bern, NC.

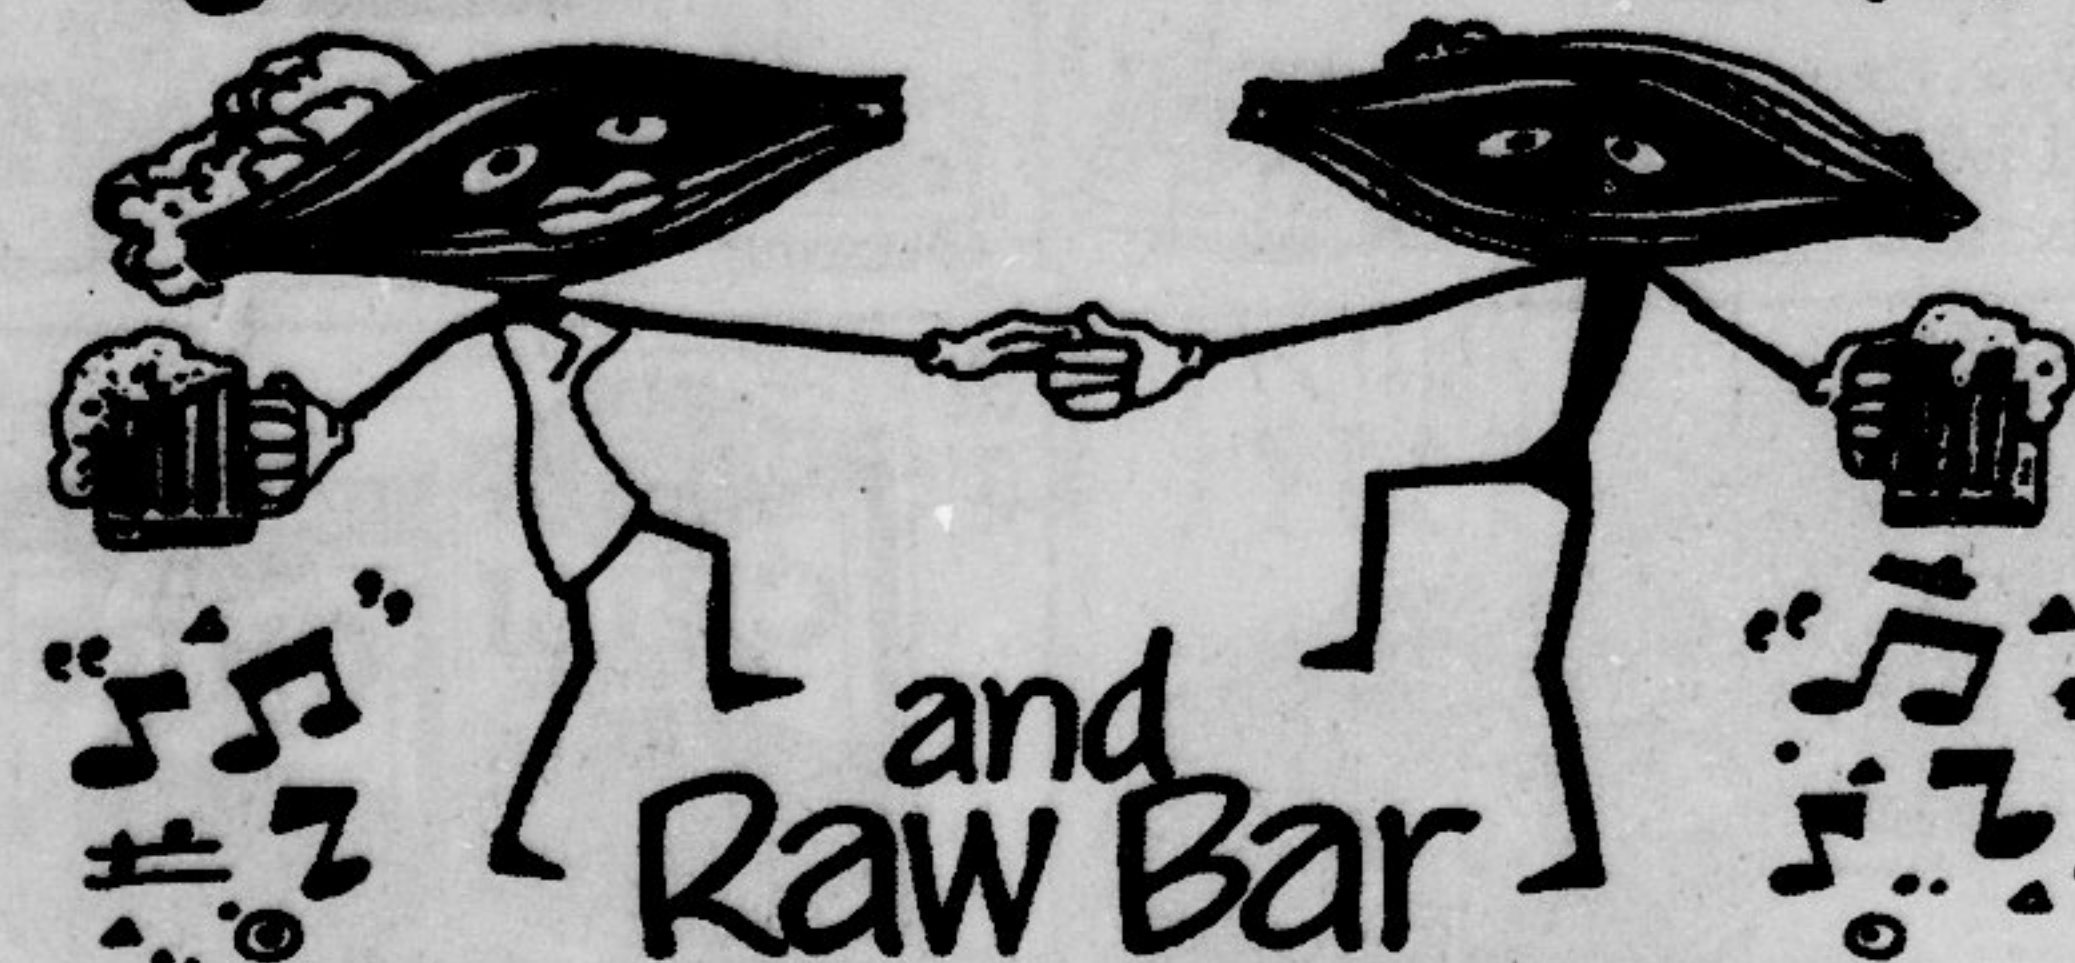

Before each game, the team meets for a pregame meal. It is at this time that the girls have the opportunity to relax together and get focused to take their places on the court.

As their season continues, there are many challenges that still lie before the girls. The Lady Pirates will be on the road tomorrow as they play George Mason in another conference battle.

Exciting alternatives to spring break

AMANDA ROSS
SPORTS EDITOR

With less than two months until spring break, students should begin to make plans for the week off. If you are looking for an alternative to the usual spring break vacation, Kitty Hawk Kites is the place for you. As it sounds by its name, they do offer kite flying but the fun doesn't stop there. They offer a range of activities from hang gliding to kayaking to sailing.

Kitty Hawk Kites is known for hang gliding as they offer the world's largest hang gliding school. More than 200,000 people have taken lessons and they have an annual sign up rate of 10,000 to 15,000 people who want to take lessons.

But if you're more inclined to staying down to the ground, then they offer a number of watersports from windsurfing, sailing and kayaking.

Through kayaking, the sights of the Atlantic Ocean and Albemarle State Park which hosts the East Coast's largest dune that rises 85 feet above sea level. And of course the Wright Brothers Memorial, which is a tourists delight, is another favorite attraction.

The President of Kitty Hawk Kites, John Harris, founded Kitty Hawk Kites in 1974, and the business has been thriving ever since. Harris fell in love with the sport of hang gliding and wanted to share it with others.

"I fell in love with the concept of hang gliding...with their portability, their being your own personal wings," Harris said.

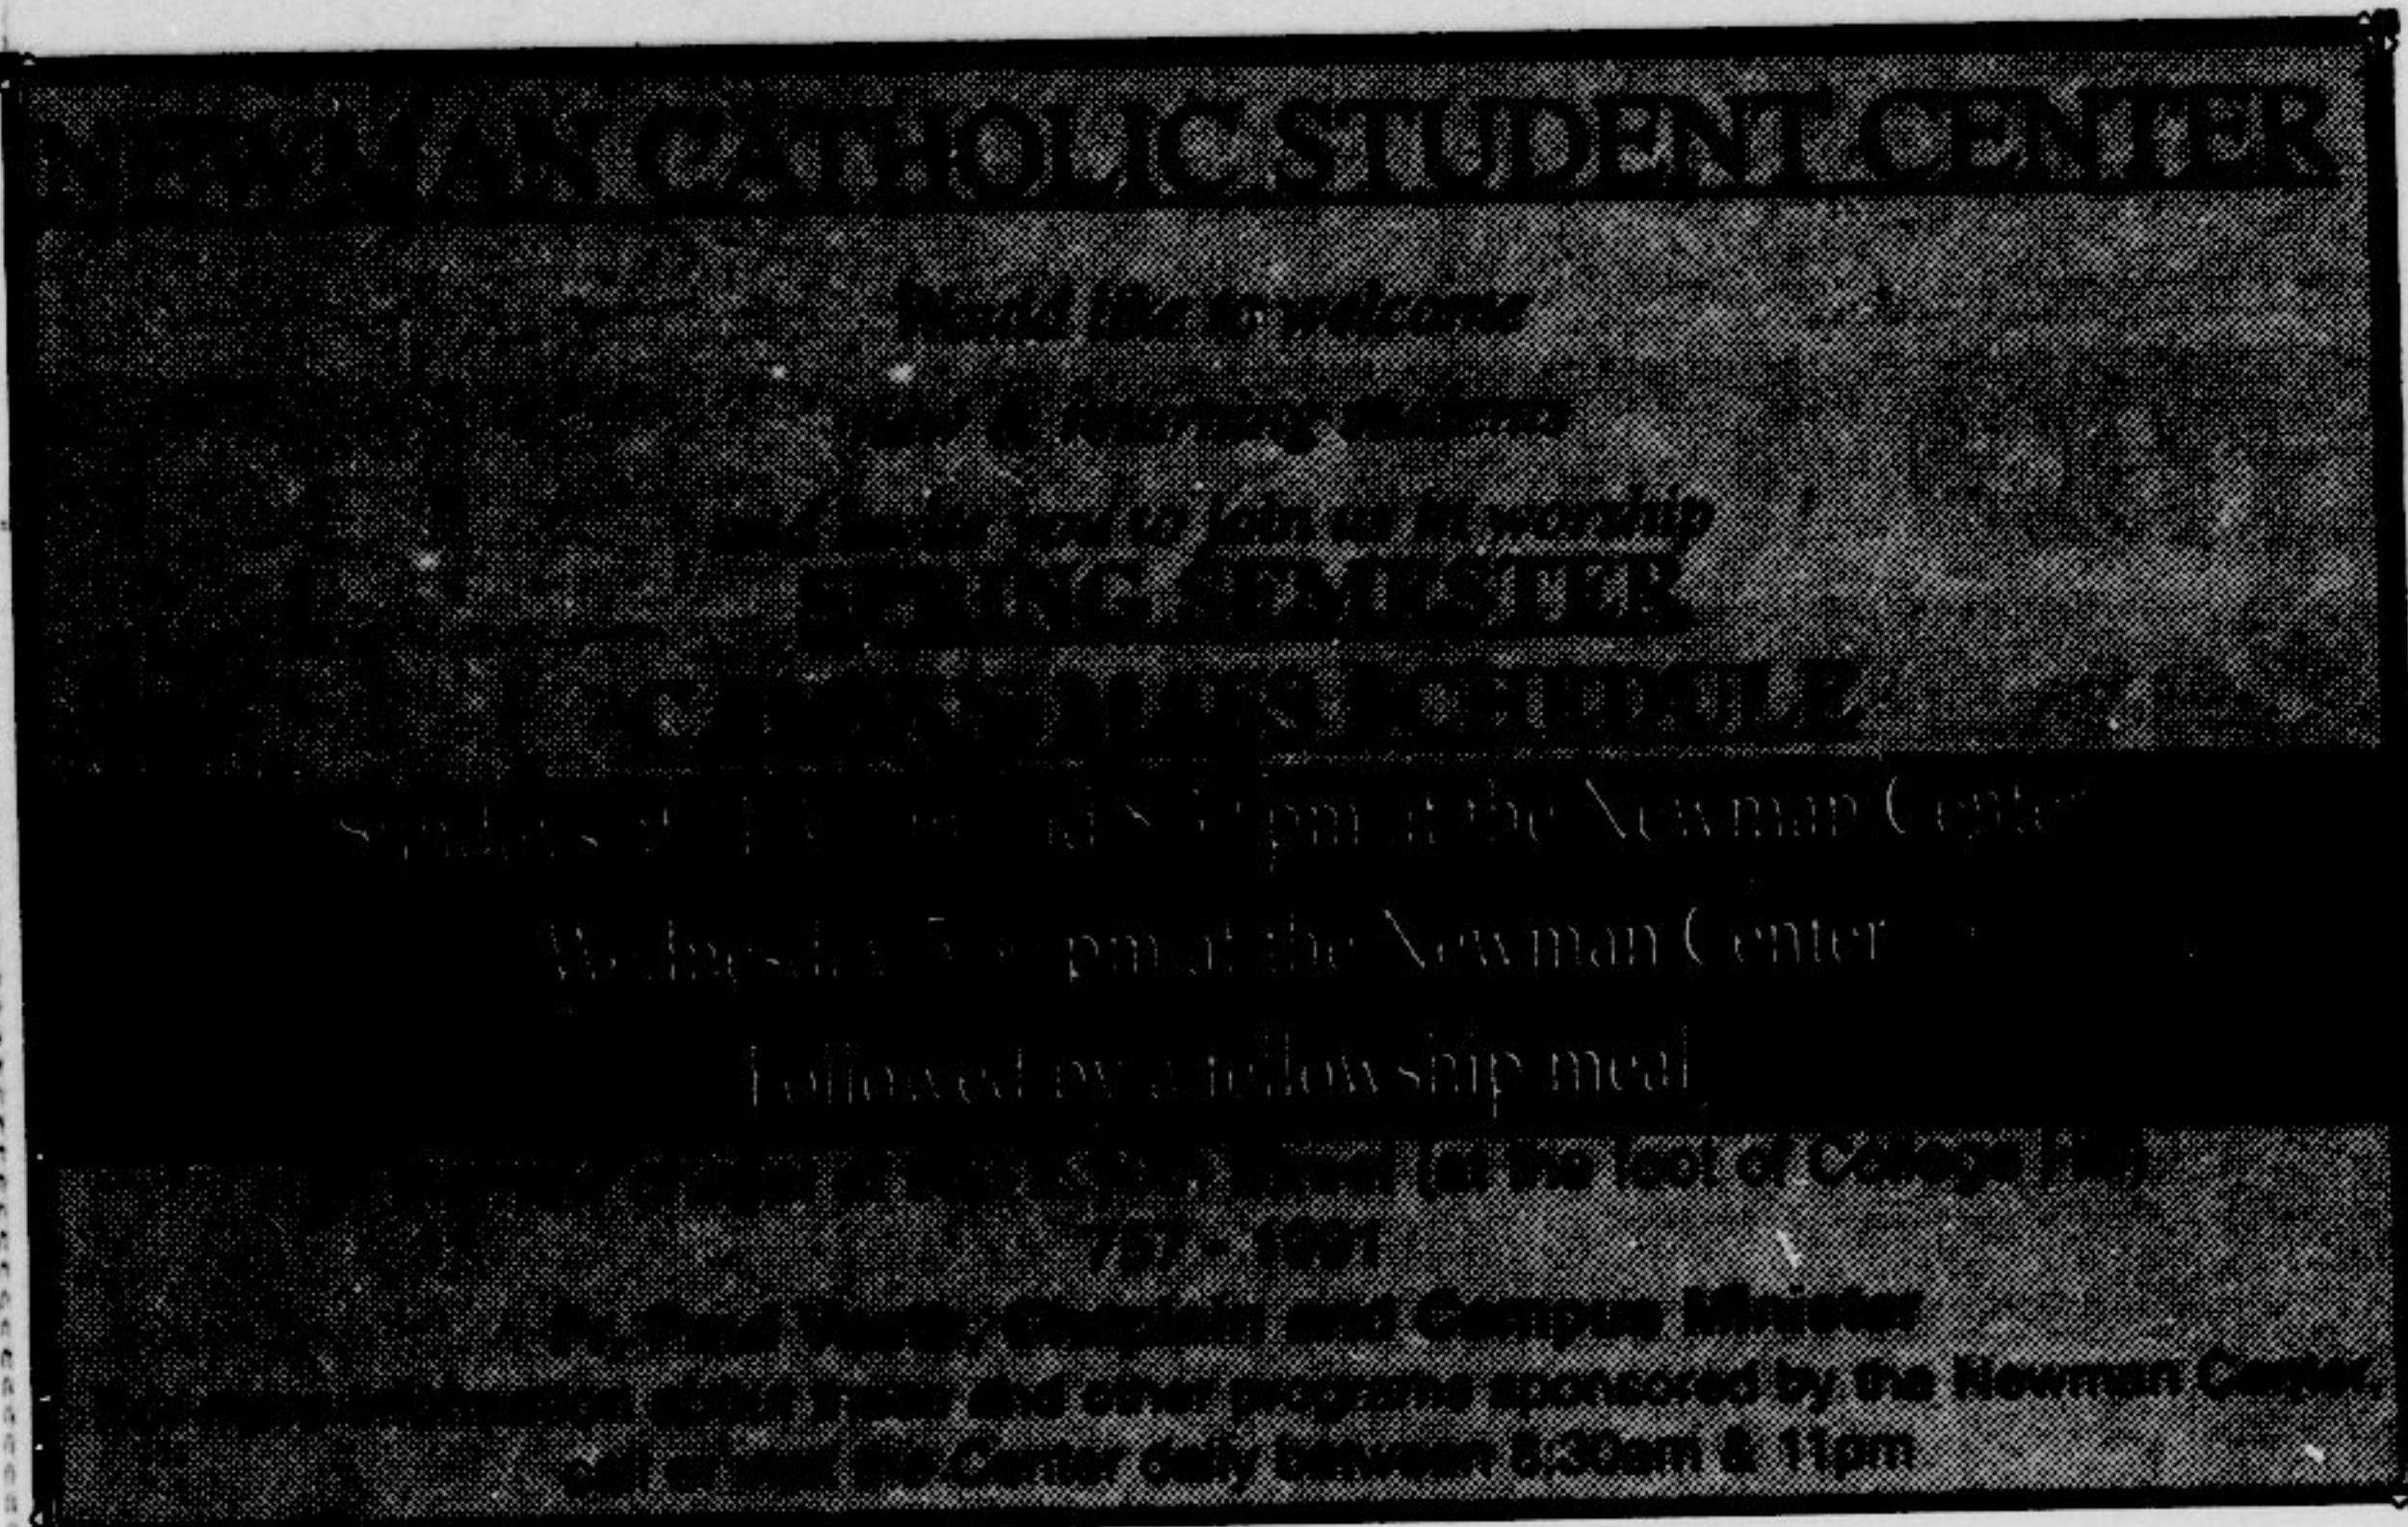

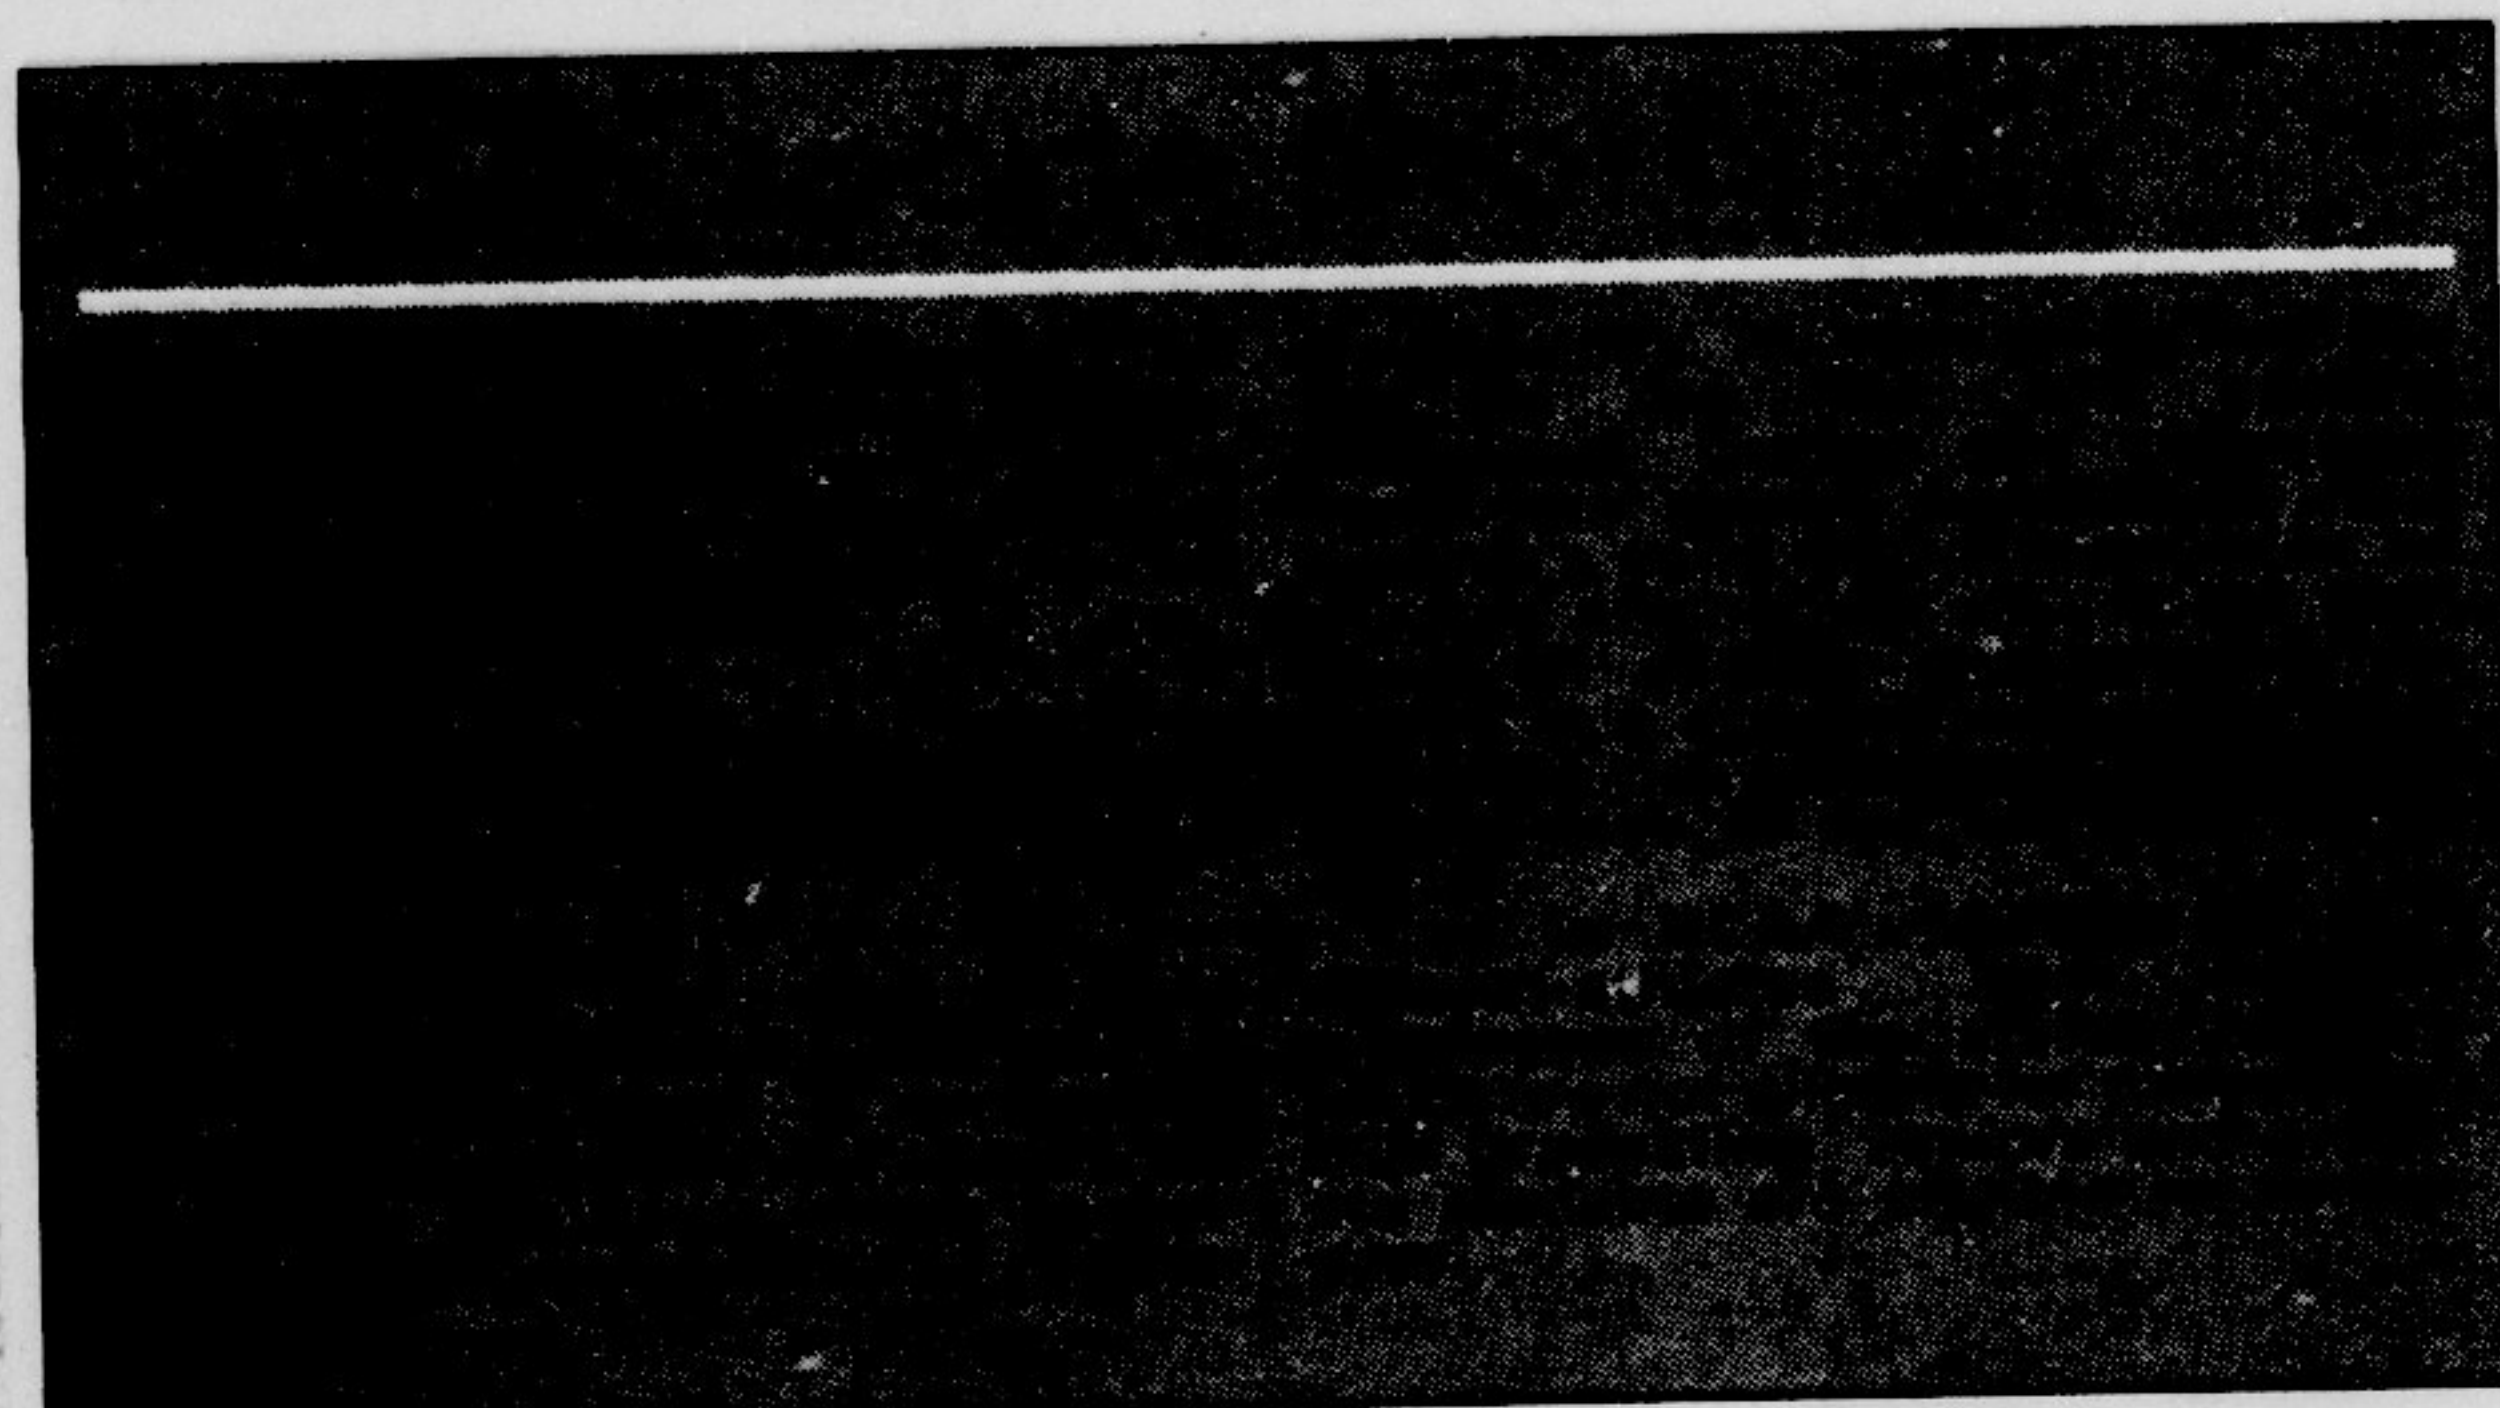

So if you have ever wanted to be one with the birds in flight, without sitting in an enclosed space then hang gliding is your sport.

"You don't need an airport or a pilot or fuel; all you need is to get to the top of a hill or mountain," Harris said. "Hang gliding brought a whole new dimension to flight."

If you're interested there are a number of ways they can be reached. By the Internet their site is - www.kittyhawk.com/kittyhawk or by e-mail: information@khhinfo.dial.interpath.net

Their phone number is 919-441-4127 and the address is P.O. Box 1839, 3933N S. Croatan Highway at Jockey's Ridge, Nags Head, NC 27959.

When Harris began this business he had one thought in mind when it came to hang gliding.

Baseball nearing the cracking of bats

DILL DILLARD
SENIOR WRITER

It's that time of year again folks. That's right, it's time for the young '97 college baseball season to crank up, and young is the adjective to describe ECU head baseball coach Gary Overton's club.

Last season the Pirates started off strong by handling nationally ranked programs like Tennessee and Kentucky at the beginning of the season but seemed to sputter towards the end of the season with heart-breaking conference losses. The Bucs fill a gap at the shortstop and give the Bucs some added power to the line up. Finally Raleigh native and Louisville JC stand out Matt Williams will play third base for the Pirates. The outfield will show the most experience for Overton's club with all three positions filled by experienced players. Rigby will make the move from first base to center field to fill the void left by former Pirate captain Jason Head. Left field will be manned once again by Steve Salargo. The Wilson native had an outstanding freshman season and looks to improve in '97. Last, but certainly not least at right field will be the speedster Antaine Jones. Jones, the sophomore from Stella, NC, showed that he was a threat at the plate batting .297 and was every pitcher's nightmare as a threat to steal on any given pitch. The Pirate pitching staff is extremely young and has no definite rotation as of yet, but look for Brian Fields and Kevin Fulcher to start off strong for ECU. Fulcher comes off of a solid finish to the '96 season and Fields a proven performer as a transfer out of NC State.

The Pirates will start the season on a road trip to Charleston, SC for a battle with the Citadel on February 7.

"We, at Pepsi, want to do something to show our enthusiasm for the Pirate Basketball program," said Thomas E. Minges, President of Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company of Greenville. "We are excited about Pirate Basketball and this gesture is our way of demonstrating our support for Coach Joe Dooley and the program."

There will be a sign-up table located in the lower level, east concourse of Williams Arena at Minges Coliseum. Students must present their valid I.D. in order for their name to be placed on the list and become eligible for the tuition prize. Then, at each subsequent men's home game, each student must go by the table and present his or her I.D. in order to have their attendance confirmed.

At the final 1996-97 home game (Feb. 22 vs. UNC Wilmington), the names of all eligible students will be placed in a drawing with the winner receiving the grand prize.

ECU graduating seniors and graduate students are eligible to participate. Due to NCAA regulations, ECU student-athletes and student employees of the athletic department, are not eligible for the contest.

Are you ready for the Anonymous 4 to get medieval on your ass? Not a twisted tribute to Tarantino or Pulp Fiction, the Anonymous 4 are actually four women who have won international critical and commercial success with their recordings and performances of medieval chants. The group will perform Saturday night at Wright Auditorium on the ECU campus. The event, part of the S. Rudolph Alexander Performing Art Series, is slated to begin at 8 p.m.

Ruth Cunningham, Marsha Genensky, Susan Hellauer and Johanna Maria Rose formed in 1986 to experiment with the sound of medieval chant and polyphony as sung by higher voices.

Anonymous 4 takes its name from an anonymous 13th century Englishman who, as a student in Paris, wrote about the vocal polyphony then being performed at the Cathedral of Notre Dame.

The group combines musical, literary and historical scholarship with 20th century performing intuition to create programs that interweave music with poetry and narrative.

The '90s has brought incredible success to the four women. Their first album, An English Lady's Mass, was named Classical Disc of the Year for 1993 by CD Review. So far, it has sold more than 150,000 copies worldwide. Their sophomore effort, On Yodels Night, topped the Billboard classical chart within two months of its release. On Yodels Night was awarded the prestigious French Diapason d'Or award. Love's Illusion, the group's third album, has sold more than 100,000 copies worldwide.

The success of the Anonymous 4 has taken the group across the United States and Europe. They have played at festivals in Germany, France, England and Spain. Their concerts in the United States often sell out and require re-engagements. Cunningham, Genensky, Hellauer and Rose have also been featured on numerous national radio programs, including National Public Radio's Weekend Edition and Performance Today and Garrison Keillor's A Prairie Home Companion.

Advance tickets for the event are available for $15 to the public, $12 for ECU faculty and staff and $7 for ECU students and youths. All tickets will be $15 at the door. For more information, call the Central Ticket Office at 328-4788 or 1-800-ECU-ARTS. For deaf or speech impaired access call 328-4736. The ticket office is open 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Attic swings tonight with Nut Zippers

JAY MYERS
LIFESTYLE EDITOR

If you're not already familiar with Squirrel Nut Zippers, chances are you will be soon. Why? Because this Chapel Hill band is coming to our very own Attic nightclub tonight. Usually the music scene in the Emerald City caters to roots rock and beach music fans, but tonight is different. Tonight Greenville goes back in time to an era where everything was cool, classy, smoky, and jazzy.

Squirrel Nut Zippers play a wicked combination of swing, jazz, big band, dixieland and bop music. And this sound seems to be garnering some national attention. Not only have they enticed us youngsters to discover the joys of our grandparents' old 78 rpm records, but they have also tugged on the ears of the old timers as well.

After the release of their first album, The Inevitable Squirrel Nut Zippers, the band appeared on Late Night with Conan O'Brien and National Public Radio even did a piece about them in which one bandmember said, "Right now we're just at the point of not quite making it." Without a doubt, they certainly "made it" after the release of their sophomore effort, Hot, last year. Selling out dates all over the United States, Squirrel Nut Zippers still seem to have plenty of time for their fellow Carolinians and tend to play several times a year here, as well. I've seen them three times and I can guarantee you that you'll have a good time if you go to the Attic tonight.

These kids play everything from banjo to saxophone to an upright bass in order to make sure that their sound is authentic to that once heard in the hippest clubs and music halls of the '20s, '30s and '40s. It all works perfectly. Yet none of the instrumentation compares with the angelic voice of Miss Katharine Whalen, banjo player and sometime lead singer.

All the comparisons that are drawn between Whalen and jazz great Billie Holiday are deserved, and Whalen also includes an equal dose of Betty Boop as an influence in her broad range of vocal stylings. Whalen's smoky, dreamy, drop-everything-and-listen vocal presence seems to speak from a different era.

This is not to say that the rest of the band is lacking. Far from it, actually. Having lost a member since Inevitable (bet that guy's kicking himself now), the now six member group includes three other proficient vocalists, Tom Maxwell, Ken Mosher and James Mathus, all of whom are competent, high-energy musicians as well.

Joining Squirrel Nut Zippers as an opening act will be The Blue Rags from Boone, NC who were recently signed to the alternative label Sub Pop records. (Rumor has it that Afghan Whigs' lead singer Greg Dulli caught their act and recommended that they be signed.) The Blue Rags play ragtime jazz, so their sound will work in perfect coordination with Squirrel Nut Zippers.

All in all, this should be a great evening. So prepare yourself for the show tonight. Go to Dapper Dan's downtown and buy an old tax or evening dress, get some cigars from Onix, and get ready to dance your ass off, old school style. Bands like these don't come to Greenville often, so you should jump on the chance to see them. Who knows, if enough people show up, we might get a chance to have more of a diverse musical choice here. But only if people go tonight. The tickets are $7.50 and are available at CD Alley and East Coast Music & Video. See ya there.

The Attic goes back in time tonight when the Squirrel Nut Zippers hit the stage.

New season springs to life at playhouse

eye
arts

Jennifer Coleman
A Junior Theatre Education major from Wilmington, NC, she is currently hoping to be a thoroughly wicked member of society.

Christmas break is over and the students of ECU are faced with another semester of attending classes, writing papers, taking tests and stressing out. Everyone knows this is the longest stretch of the year. What can we do to avoid a total nervous breakdown in the face of all this stress?

I suggest attending a few of the productions scheduled to complete the 1996-97 ECU Playhouse season. Three big shows are planned for the second semester: Dance '97, SubUrbia, and Lysistrata. This combination of dance, drama, and comedy is sure to give you that necessary break from the rigors of college life.

The first production this semester, Dance '97, follows in the tradition of past dance theatre productions from the department of theatre and dance. Faculty and guest artists choreograph original pieces which are then brought to life by the dancers on stage. Add to the dancers' movements a complex lighting arrangement, beautiful costumes, and music that will keep you humming days after the show is over and you have a theatrical experience that is not to be missed. Dance '97 will be performed Thursday, Feb. 6, through Tuesday, Feb. 11.

Eric Bogosian's SubUrbia is the next show this semester. SubUrbia is a complex show dealing with the lives of several young people trying to survive in the '90s. There is hardly a controversial topic not dealt with in the course of this production, but Bogosian does so in a completely new way. He looks at these topics - sex, drugs, depression, alcohol and more - from a "Generation X" point of view. Too many people forget or refuse to accept that today's youth are living in dangerous times, with seriously disturbing problems to face. Bogosian tackles these issues and forces us to see what happens to our children when they start spending more time out of the home than in it. This show does contain harsh language and mature content. SubUrbia will be performed Thursday, Feb. 27, through Tuesday, March 4.

The final play in the ECU Playhouse 1996-97 season is Aristophanes' classic battle of the sexes, Lysistrata. Set during the Peloponnesian War, Lysistrata is the story of the Athenian women's struggle to put an end

JAY MYERS
LIFESTYLE EDITOR

People hate Larry Flynt. You may not know who he is, but you have definitely heard of his magazine, Hustler. Larry Flynt began publishing Hustler as a promotional gimmick for his string of strip clubs in Ohio. The raw and raunchy magazine caught national attention after it published nude photos of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, the former First Lady. Hustler's sales continued to boom throughout the early '70s, making Flynt into a multi-millionaire almost overnight.

And that is why people hate Larry Flynt. He is an obnoxious, opinionated, larger-than-life, no apologies porn publisher with tons of money. He has been in and out of court in defense of his right to publish because many people believe him to be the lowest form of human life possible - a scum king. That's where the new film, The People vs. Larry Flynt, comes in.

In this new movie, directed by Milos Forman (One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Amadeus) and produced by Oliver Stone (Platoon, Born on the Fourth of July, JFK, Natural Born Killers, Nixon), Woody Harrelson portrays Larry Flynt and his struggle to be the emperor of sleaze in America. Although many people are disgusted by the trash that Flynt produces and feel him to be below redemption, it still must be remembered that Flynt is an American citizen, and as such he is guaranteed certain rights within the law. The right to freedom of speech is one of those.

Although the film portrays (with painful clarity) Flynt's drug addiction, sexual promiscuity, physical handicap, and mental illness, the main focus of the narrative is on an individual's right to speak his mind without fear of censorship from the government. As iconoclast as Flynt is, he truly believes in the rights of American citizens, so much so that he took his battle to the Supreme Court. Flynt is an unusual American hero (and I'm not sure if that is even the right word to be used in conjunction with him), but his life makes for an extremely entertaining and thought-provoking piece of film.

Woody Harrelson and Courtney Love get sleazy and political in new film.

Joining Woody Harrelson in the film are Hole lead singer and widow of Kurt Cobain, Courtney Love, as Flynt's wife Althea Leasure; Woody's real-life brother Brett as Flynt's brother Jimmy; and Love's current boyfriend Edward Norton as Flynt's attorney Alan Isaacman. The always bizarre writer/actor Crispin Glover shows up as Flynt flunkie Arlo, as well. Several interesting canons show up, too. Look for Flynt himself as Judge Morrissey, the man behind the bench on Flynt's first court confrontation, and James Carville, the senior political advisor to President Clinton, as anti-porn crusader Simon Leis.

Love is amazingly good in the film as the stripper turned wife turned publisher turned drug addict, Althea. The love shared between Leasure and Flynt is vibrant, dedicated, honest and, of course, weird, and Harrelson and Love give it all the spark it needs to ignite the screen. Love shows a true connection with the character of Althea and if any more parts come up that require a drug-addled slur with more than half a brain, I suggest she scratch them up - she's perfect. No really, she does do a good job.

The best performance in the film, however, comes from Harrelson. Looking and sounding nothing like Flynt in real life, Harrelson becomes Flynt on the big screen. He is as manic, garrulous, and wacky as Flynt has ever been, which gives the film its creepy yet tantalizing feel.

As for the film itself, I would highly recommend it. If you're going for titillation, you'll get it. If you're going for intelligent discourse, it's there, too. If you're looking for slice-of-life stuff, here it is. This movie has it all. And it's a damn fine story, as well. As stupid and disgusting as this film had the potential to be, it is a compliment to Forman and his crew that turned out to be such a masterpiece. And I don't use that word lightly.

Also playing in rotation right now on the A&E cable channel is a biography of Larry Flynt, which tells you some details that the film leaves out. Do yourself a favor and see both.

Anthology lets poets speak

JOHN DAVIS
STAFF WRITER

"The sound must seem an echo to the sense," Alexander Pope once wrote of poetry. He was, of course, writing in a time when poets did this very odd thing with their poetry, a thing which, sadly, is overlooked these days: they read their poems aloud. To audiences.

These days poets don't read their poetry very often, or when they do, the readings go relatively unnoticed, except by other poets of course. Most people consider poetry a thing to be read quietly in literature class and also a thing for intellectuals, a highbrow aspect of literature that involves a good deal of misunderstanding and is not very much fun either.

But, if Pope is right (and I might get into a bit of trouble with a few professors if I say he wasn't...), then perhaps poetry might be better understood when it is heard. Recently, there has been a bit of a renewed interest in poetry reading. Bill Moyers produced the documentary The Language of Life, which featured modern poets reading their own work. The Nuyorican Poets Cafe has been one of the many small groups of poets involved in bringing attention to performance poetry with their anthology entitled Aloud!

Even in North Carolina poets are starting to make their voices known. Asheville, Chapel Hill and other cities have poetry teams that compete in cutthroat readings called "slams." And just this past New Year's Eve, Raleigh held a poetry reading as a part of its First Night celebration, which featured some very brilliant poetry by Jonathan Williams, Jay Sullivan, and a fellow who was introduced as "Byron."

Since this revival is gaining strength and speed, it is no wonder that Rhino records released this anthology, entitled In Their Own Words: A Century of Recorded Poetry. The anthology consists of four CDs and a book which begins with Walt Whitman and moves right on up to modern poets such as Li-Young Lee. As the title suggests, the poets themselves read their works. The set includes nearly eighty poets reading well over a hundred works.

The variety in the set is wonderful and refreshing. Any student of literature will have noticed the annoying tendency of anthologies to exclude certain types of poetry, or certain poets, due to the bias of the editors. Whether because the producers of this set were very open-minded or because they just wanted to have a good-sized boxed set, this anthology ranges from the very popular poets (Ogden Nash, Robert Frost), to the talented but unconventional (Charles Bukowski, Leonard Cohen), to the brilliant but not-yet-famous (Li-Young Lee, Joseph Brodsky).

The pleasant surprise of the inclusion of some of the 19th-century poets like Walt Whitman and William Butler Yeats is downright cool, especially since it's pretty awe-inspiring to think about Whitman recording "America" on Edison's wax-record phonograph way back in the day. To hear Whitman reading one of his signature pieces only two years before his death brings chill bumps to the skin, an experience similar to hearing John Lennon sing "Free as a Bird."

The performances themselves are fascinating. To hear the spooky way e.e. cummings reads "anyone lives in a pretty how town," or to discover that Lawrence Ferlinghetti had a slight lisp, or to sense the frustration in Allen Ginsberg's voice when he reads his "America" all add new dimensions to the poems and the poets. There is always the worry that hearing the poets read might take away from the poem and from the poet, but this is not the case. The emotion contained in Langston Hughes' "The Negro Speaks of Rivers" is even more pronounced when Hughes reads.

The book included with the CDs is an added bonus. Anthology commentaries are oftentimes academic to a point of silliness, and the inane way boxed sets are presented is sometimes unbelievable. But this book is well done. It includes only a few of the obligatory essays, and they are all entertaining as well as informative.

The book also includes a hysterical synopsis of poetry terms and tools from the book It Could Be Verse: Anybody's Guide to Poetry by John Timpane. The Guide is actually quite helpful (read the four definitions of "irony" and see why Alanis Morissette's song isn't ironic at all). I even picked up a few new vocabulary words myself (I'll never tell you which ones).

The only problem I find with this anthology is the notable absence of anything by T.S. Eliot, who has recorded his poems, and the obnoxious inclusion of bad poet Maya Angelou. She reads about as insipidly as she writes, but the good thing is that this is on CD and I can program the track out of my player.

Aside from these two (minor) flaws, the collection is really well done, very informative and enjoyable. The people who put this thing together had their heads screwed on straight, which is a genuine relief because it could have been a disaster. But it isn't a disaster. In Their Own Words is probably one of the best things to happen to poetry since Jim Morrison died. (He is dead, isn't he?)

The Smashing Pumpkins The Aeroplane Flies High

DALE WILLIAMSON
ASSISTANT LIFESTYLE EDITOR

The Smashing Pumpkins have had mixed blessings lately. They started out in high gear with the release of their 1993 double CD album Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness, which climbed the charts and became a best-selling hit.

Trouble arose when the band became entangled in a situation that resulted in their keyboard player becoming a victim of a drug overdose. Jimmy Chamberlain, the band's drummer, had a struggling history with drug addiction and was believed cured. Unfortunately, Chamberlain eventually gave in to his addiction and was asked to leave Smashing Pumpkins for good, forcing a delay on the band's highly publicized tour.

Time heals all wounds, and Smashing Pumpkins let time work its magic. They found a new drummer and began their tour. They were back in high gear.

As if to prove that they are stronger than ever, Smashing Pumpkins recently released a CD box set that highlights their singles from Mellon Collie, but it also offers much, much more. Instead of filling their collection with one top 40 hit after another, this box of joy, entitled The Aeroplane Flies High, is spiced with many b-sides as well as several tracks that are to be found nowhere else, making this a must for any die-hard Pumpkins fanatic.

To be precise, the boxed set contains all the singles thus far released from Mellon Collie, 28 b-sides not found on Mellon Collie, 12 of which were previously unreleased. Also included are five cover songs that are available only in this collection and a 44-page book filled with song lyrics and rare photos. All in all, this collection contains over 100 minutes of hard-to-find music. And if that isn't enough, the box itself is a sturdy, portable, compact case emblazoned with a hypnotizing black-and-white spiral design.

The project is the brain child of Smashing Pumpkins lead singer and mastermind Billy Corgan, along with assistance from Frank Olinak, who also served as the collection's art director and designer. Judging from the quality of tracks chosen for the collection and the appealing graphics included within the book, Corgan and company obviously saw this as a worthwhile effort. To use a Gen X expression, it rocks off.

Anyone familiar with the Pumpkins sound knows that they flip-flop from mellow and mystical to hard-edged and distorted. Most of the tracks included tend to lean more toward the mellow sound, so those preferring a more rough than smooth sound may be disappointed. Still, several tracks exemplify the anger for which Smashing Pumpkins is famed.

The Pumpkins' hit singles "Bullet with Butterfly Wings" and "Zero" are both here in their original glory. But Corgan and company don't always express anger through loud, distorted guitar riffs or pounding drums, and, to be honest, it's not their anger that makes Smashing Pumpkins worth listening to. It's their willingness to experiment.

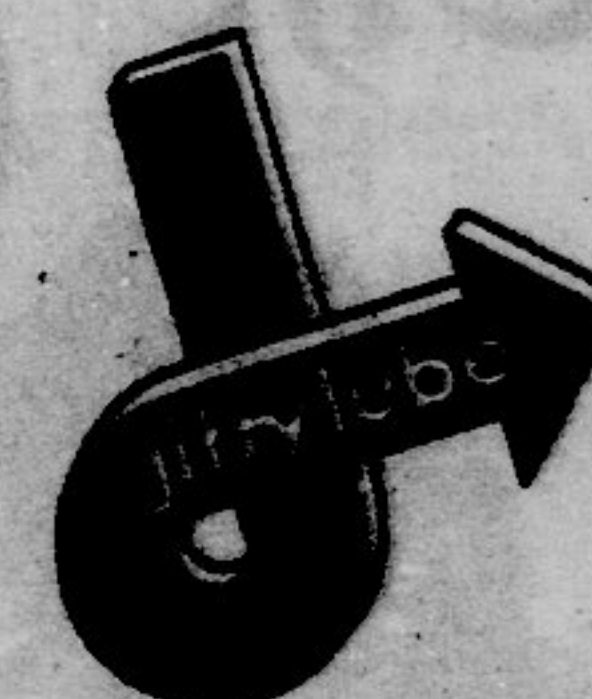

Songs like "The Boy" incorporate simple lyrical refrains ("I can't stop / I can't breathe / I can't think / I'm in love again") with such an energetic and fun musical beat that one doesn't care if this innocent pop tune is from the same band renowned for such songs as "God" where Corgan bitterly sings, "God knows I'm helpless to speak on my own behalf / God is as helpless as me caught in the negatives."

In many ways, the Smashing Pumpkins are an enigma; you can't simply label them as one kind of band or another. It's hard to simplify any band that will do a cover of a Cars song ("You're all I've got tonight"), a tender, acoustic version of a song originally powered by heavy studio technology ("Tonight, Tonight") and a sound mix totaling over 25 distorted minutes of nothing but guitar riffs and feedback ("Pastichio Medley").

Despite a difficult year, the Smashing Pumpkins have managed to pull through and prove that they are still one of the music industry's greatest talents. If this new boxed sampling is any indication as to the Pumpkins' willingness to continue on their experimental track, then this is one band that is going to continue to fly high into the future of music.

with Knight singing high and clear and Estill taking the deeper parts.

As far as the music goes, Law Of Nature doesn't experiment much. Instead they go for what they know. More is a collection of ten acoustic-based, upbeat and light-hearted songs that get better as the album progresses.

The first song, "Easiest Thing," left me wondering if this wasn't another run-of-the-mill indie band that could rock but couldn't sing. Something about Knight's voice took a little getting used to. "Carolina," the second song, prompted me to quickly change my mind. With music that better fit Knight's range, "Carolina" achieved the laid-back whimsical sound that the band seemed to be trying for.

However, don't be fooled into thinking that Law Of Nature is just another acoustic hippie group that has one sound for ten songs. The band shows some different colors on the songs "What Is This?" and "Better On Our Own." Bringing in elements of funk, these songs call on Estill to sing her way through jammy, jazz-influenced songs that provide welcome contrast to Knight's peppy acoustical sound.

Then on songs like "Train Song" and "More," Knight contrasts herself while following the soaring and diving sound of the music. Together they weave a musical quilt that exudes harmony.

All in all, Law Of Nature seems to have their act together. The female vocals give them a sound that provides welcome change to the grunge-infested world of music today. The band holds their own with extended jams on songs like "Sun" and "As Dark As You," while remaining a tight unit throughout the album. The only problem with Law Of Nature is that they are still on an independent label. Which means that if you plan to pick this one up you may find yourself having to special order it for now. Hopefully, some smart label will pick them up soon.

Snoop

ently laid down the samples, is a surprising shock in his own right. Remember the film Friday?

Remember Red, the guy who always got beat down by Debo? That's right, that's D.J. Pooh.

On the record you'll hear Snoop make references to children and how they shouldn't walk down his path. He almost paints himself like the devil. This is rather cheesy. Everybody knows who he is, the message he sends, and the aura he presents. By adding something like this to his record, it diminishes his image in a few ways. It's almost as if his enemy is truly his conscience.

There are over 20 songs on this album. It's impressive, but how long are the tracks? Quite long enough. A few guest appearances, such as Too Short on track ten, make the album more alive, and a equal amount of bizarre effects takes you out of the constant drag that is the Dogg Pound. The Doggystyle does happen to include a track that is a bit out of the ordinary called "Freestyle Conversation." And it is nothing but that. Not only does Snoop allow time for rhythmic patterns in a conversational style, the man actually talks over the rhythm. He doesn't stop. It's almost like he laid his vocal track down in the studio first, after which the music was mixed in.

This album seems to be a progression from Snoop's last. First he was drinking "Gin and Juice," now he's "Sippin' on some Cognac." It's no doubt that the rap star has placed himself at the top of the charts. He presents himself in a way like no other.

What Snoop gives to rap is a sense of stardom and a promise of a tomorrow. With music rapidly changing, it's hard to stay in the lead. Lucky for Snoop, he's a dog; he knows how to stay alert and keep his eyes open at all times.

In the twentieth century, naturalistic explanations of human behavior came under fire. Psychologist John B. Watson (1878-1958) devised a theory called behaviorism, which held that specific patterns of behavior are not instinctive but learned. All the world's cultures are the creation of a single biological species, Watson continued, so that no humans are more or less "evolved" than others. Such a position means that Watson saw one human species, but many variants of human behavior. Any individual, he maintained, can be shaped in countless ways by a cultural environment:
Give me a dozen healthy infants... and my own specified world to bring them up in, and I will guarantee to take any one at random and train him to become any type of specialist that I might select—doctor, lawyer, artist, merchant-chief, and yes, even beggar-man and thief—regardless of his talents, penchants, tendencies, abilities, vocations, and race of his ancestors. (1930:104)
In short, Watson was convinced that learning—or re—was far more influential than biology—or thropologists added support to Watson's showing how variable culture can be, even g societies with similar technology. An outponent of the "nurture" view, anthropoloet Mead summed up the evidence: "The

ANGELA KOENIG AND ERIK SWARTZ
STAFF WRITERS

After months of waiting, ECU's Student Recreation Center (SRC) opened its doors Monday. The final cost of the 150,000 square foot SRC was $17.9 million.

"It has been long awaited. I believe it is the culmination of the hard work and dedication of people from the dean of students down... working for a tremendous project," Director of Recreational Services Nancy Mire said.

To celebrate the grand opening, the SRC has a week of activities planned which began with the ribbon-cutting ceremony on Jan. 13. Student Government Association President Angela Nix declared the center officially open, and more than 1000 students visited within the first few hours of the opening.

At the opening ceremony Vice Chancellor of Student Life Dr. Alfred Matthews said, "This is the finest student recreation center for purely student use in the U.S. The ECU students deserve it."

Tuesday was Demonstration Day and included a martial arts and aerobics class demonstration as well as a trade show featuring club sports and fitness activities.

On Wednesday Dean of Students Ronald Speier started the Polar Bear Pool Party by jumping into the outdoor pool. Jaws was shown inside where students could float in the indoor pools on rafts and inner tubes while viewing the movie. AVCR was also given away.

Tonight from 6 to 8 p.m. there will be basketball, volleyball, badminton and racquetball intramural games. A ski machine will also be given away.

There will also be a wheel chair basketball game at 7 p.m. The ECU team will be a mixture of students, faculty, and staff. They will be playing against the Spinal Cord Association of Greenville. The game is part of an adaptive program for disabled students.

"We tried to think of an adaptive recreational program. So the ECU community could see what are programs like doing," said Coordinator of Intramural's Paulette Evans.

Throughout the week free aerobics classes have been given away and will continue through Friday. T-shirts, key chains, froshes, and water bottles will also continue to be given out.

On Sunday there will be a Community Open House from 2-4 p.m.

The center has a six-court arena designed for basketball, volleyball and badminton, seven racquetball courts and one squash court.

It also has a 10,000 square foot weight training and cardiovascular fitness center. This area features computerized stationary bicycles, stair climbers, treadmills, rowing machines, weight machines, and free weights. Free 30 minute classes are offered Monday-Wednesday on how to use strength machines.

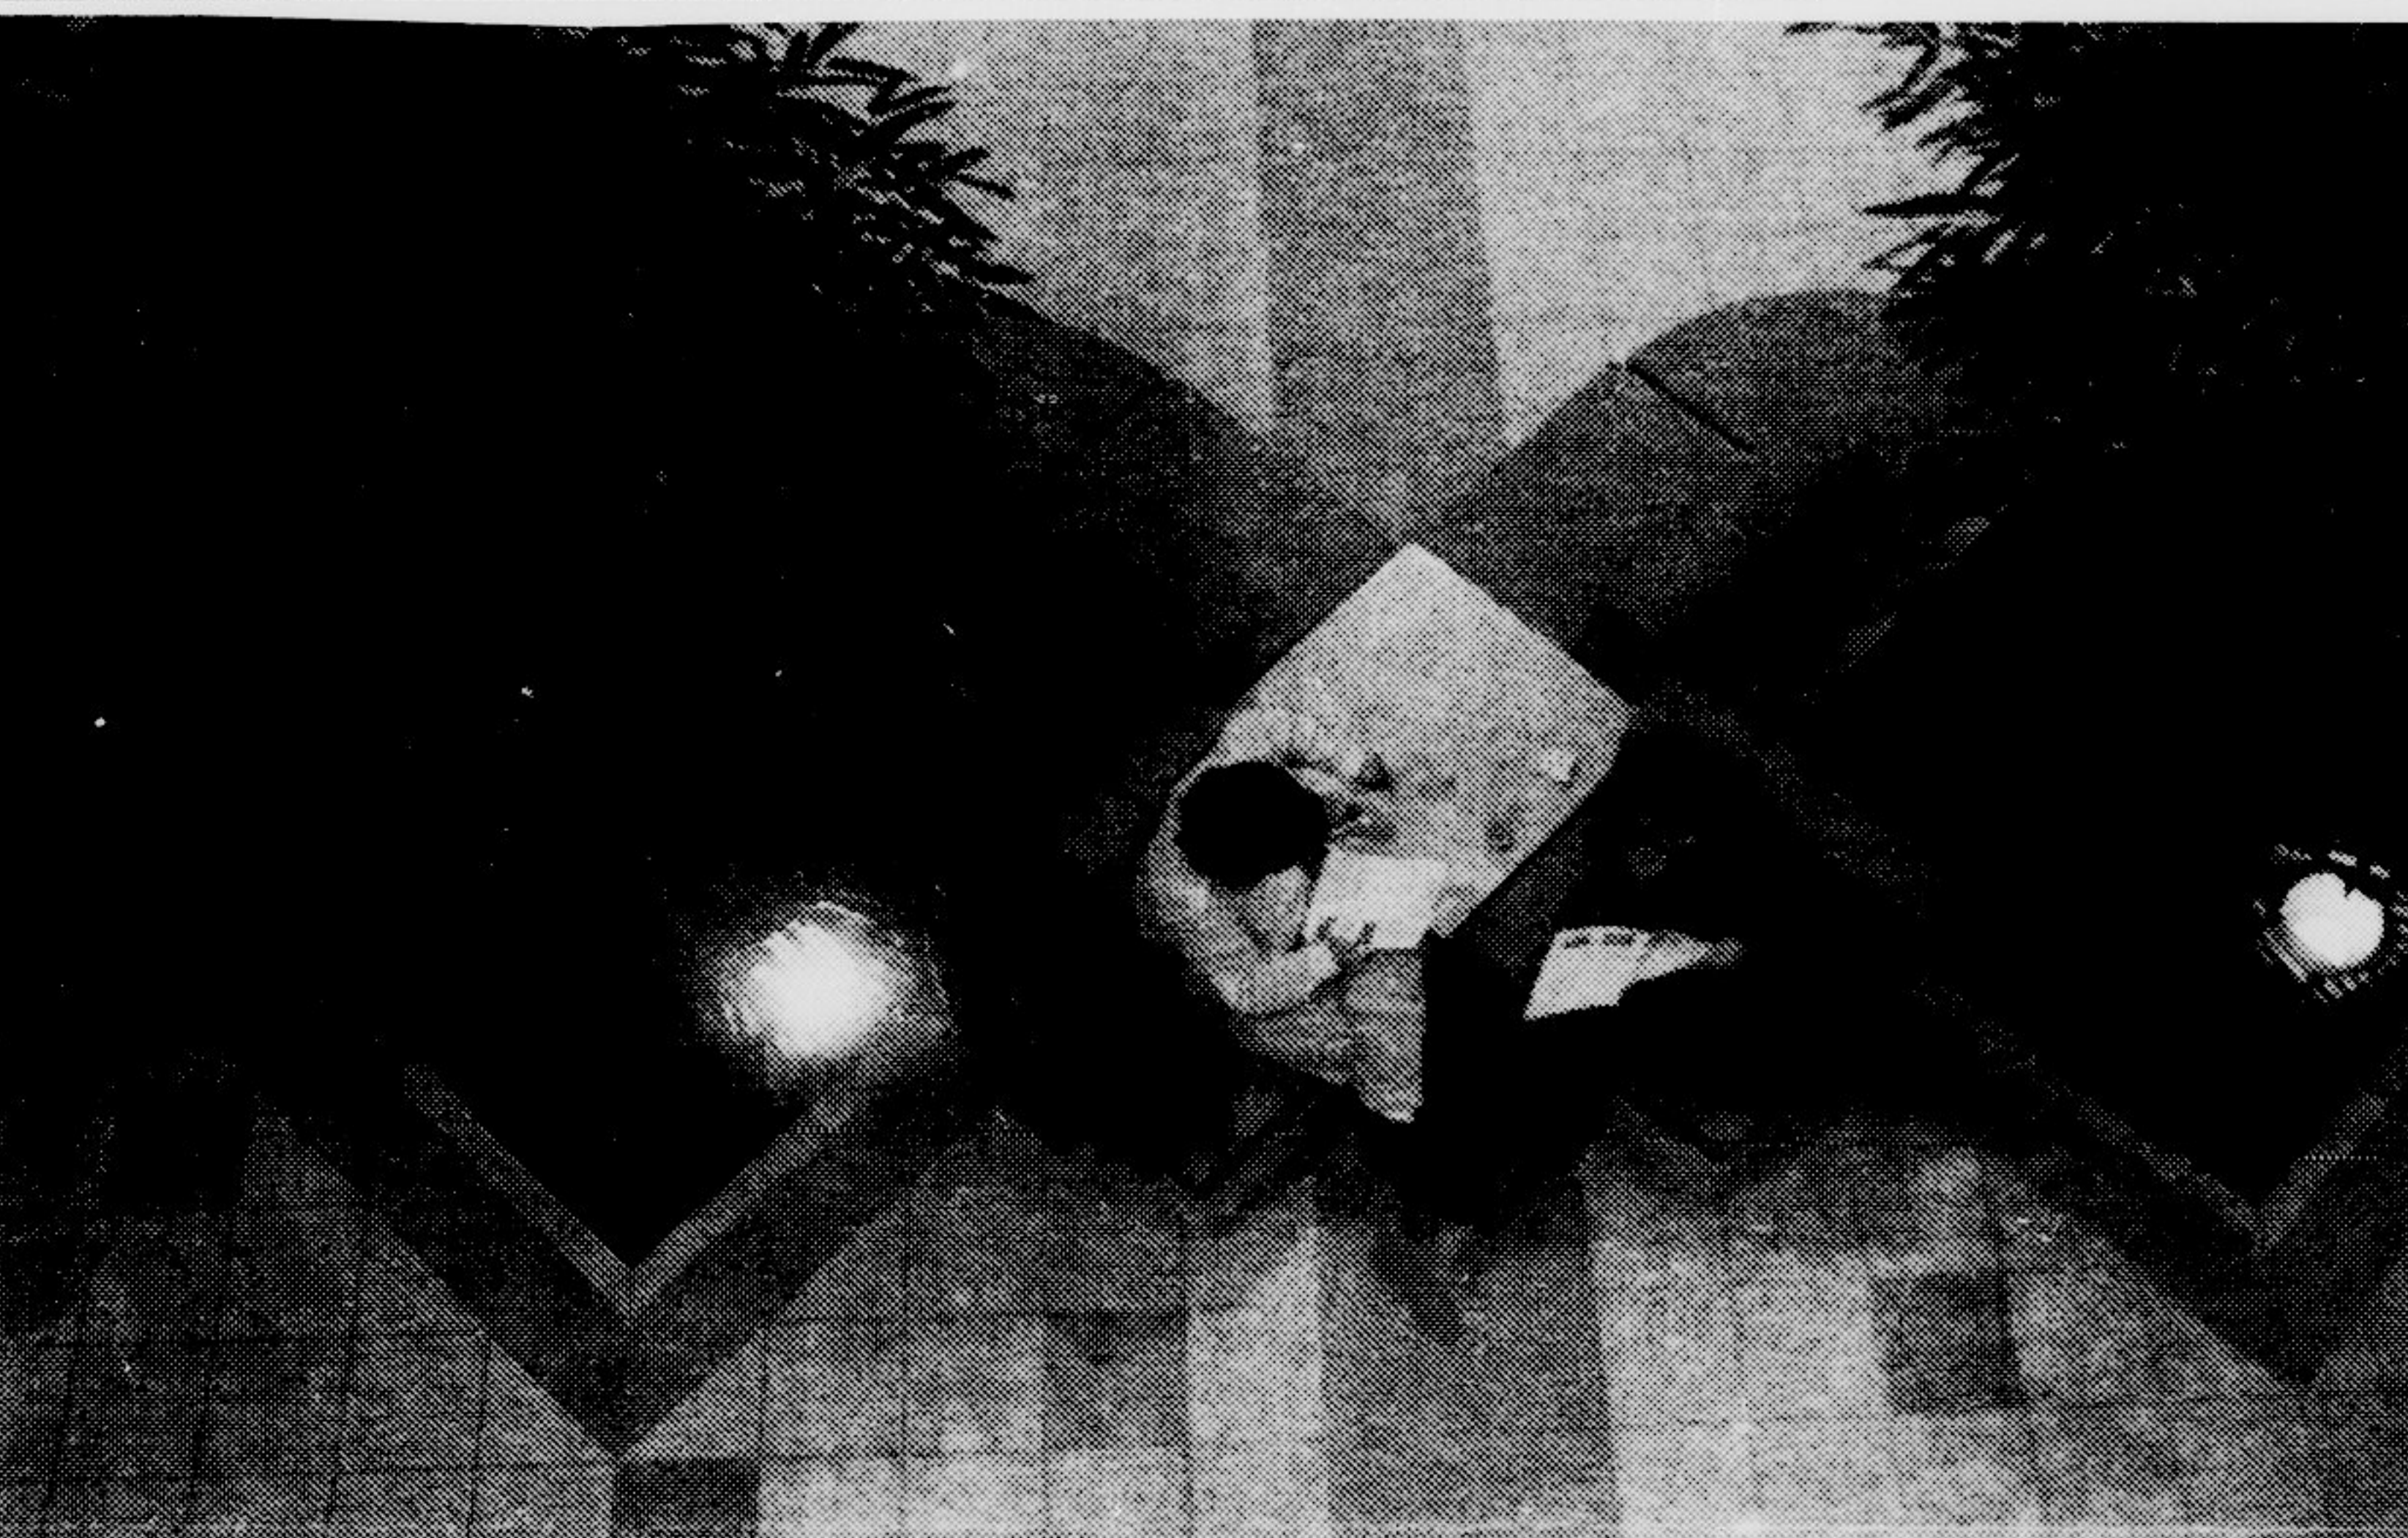

The natatorium has an outdoor pool with a sunbathing deck and three indoor pool areas. There is an eight-lane pool for lane and lap swimming as well as water sports such as water polo, a four-lane pool area for Aqua Fitness classes, swim classes and free play. There is also a leisure pool with bench seating.

There are three aerobics rooms, a three-lane walk, jog and push track, indoor climbing wall, fitness assessment center and outdoor adventure center.

The latest addition to dining services is the SRC's juice bar, Center Court. The bar was modeled after one at Elon College. It functions just like other campus cafeterias as far as payment. Meal plans, declining balances and cash are accepted.

However there are several differences in what is offered. The bar serves freshly squeezed orange, apple, grapefruit, and carrot juice. The bar also serves Fresh Squeezed Fizzes made from fruit juice, a sweetener of your choice, and fizzy seltzer water. The fizzes come in orange, lemon, lime and lemon-lime flavors.

As far as grab-and-go snacks the bar offers half-court subs, fresh salads, chips, fresh fruit and bagels. According to the Center Court manager they will be offering protein drinks in the future.

In Exercise and Sport Science major Nathan Bax's opinion the bar has a wide selection of foods and beverages. He said his meal was delicious. It included a Turkey and Cheese sandwich banana nut bread and freshly squeezed apple juice.

Because the student recreation fee for the center has been taken from students' fees since the spring of 1994, students who graduated between then and the spring of 1996 may purchase a membership. Memberships will be available to recent alumni through the spring of 1998.

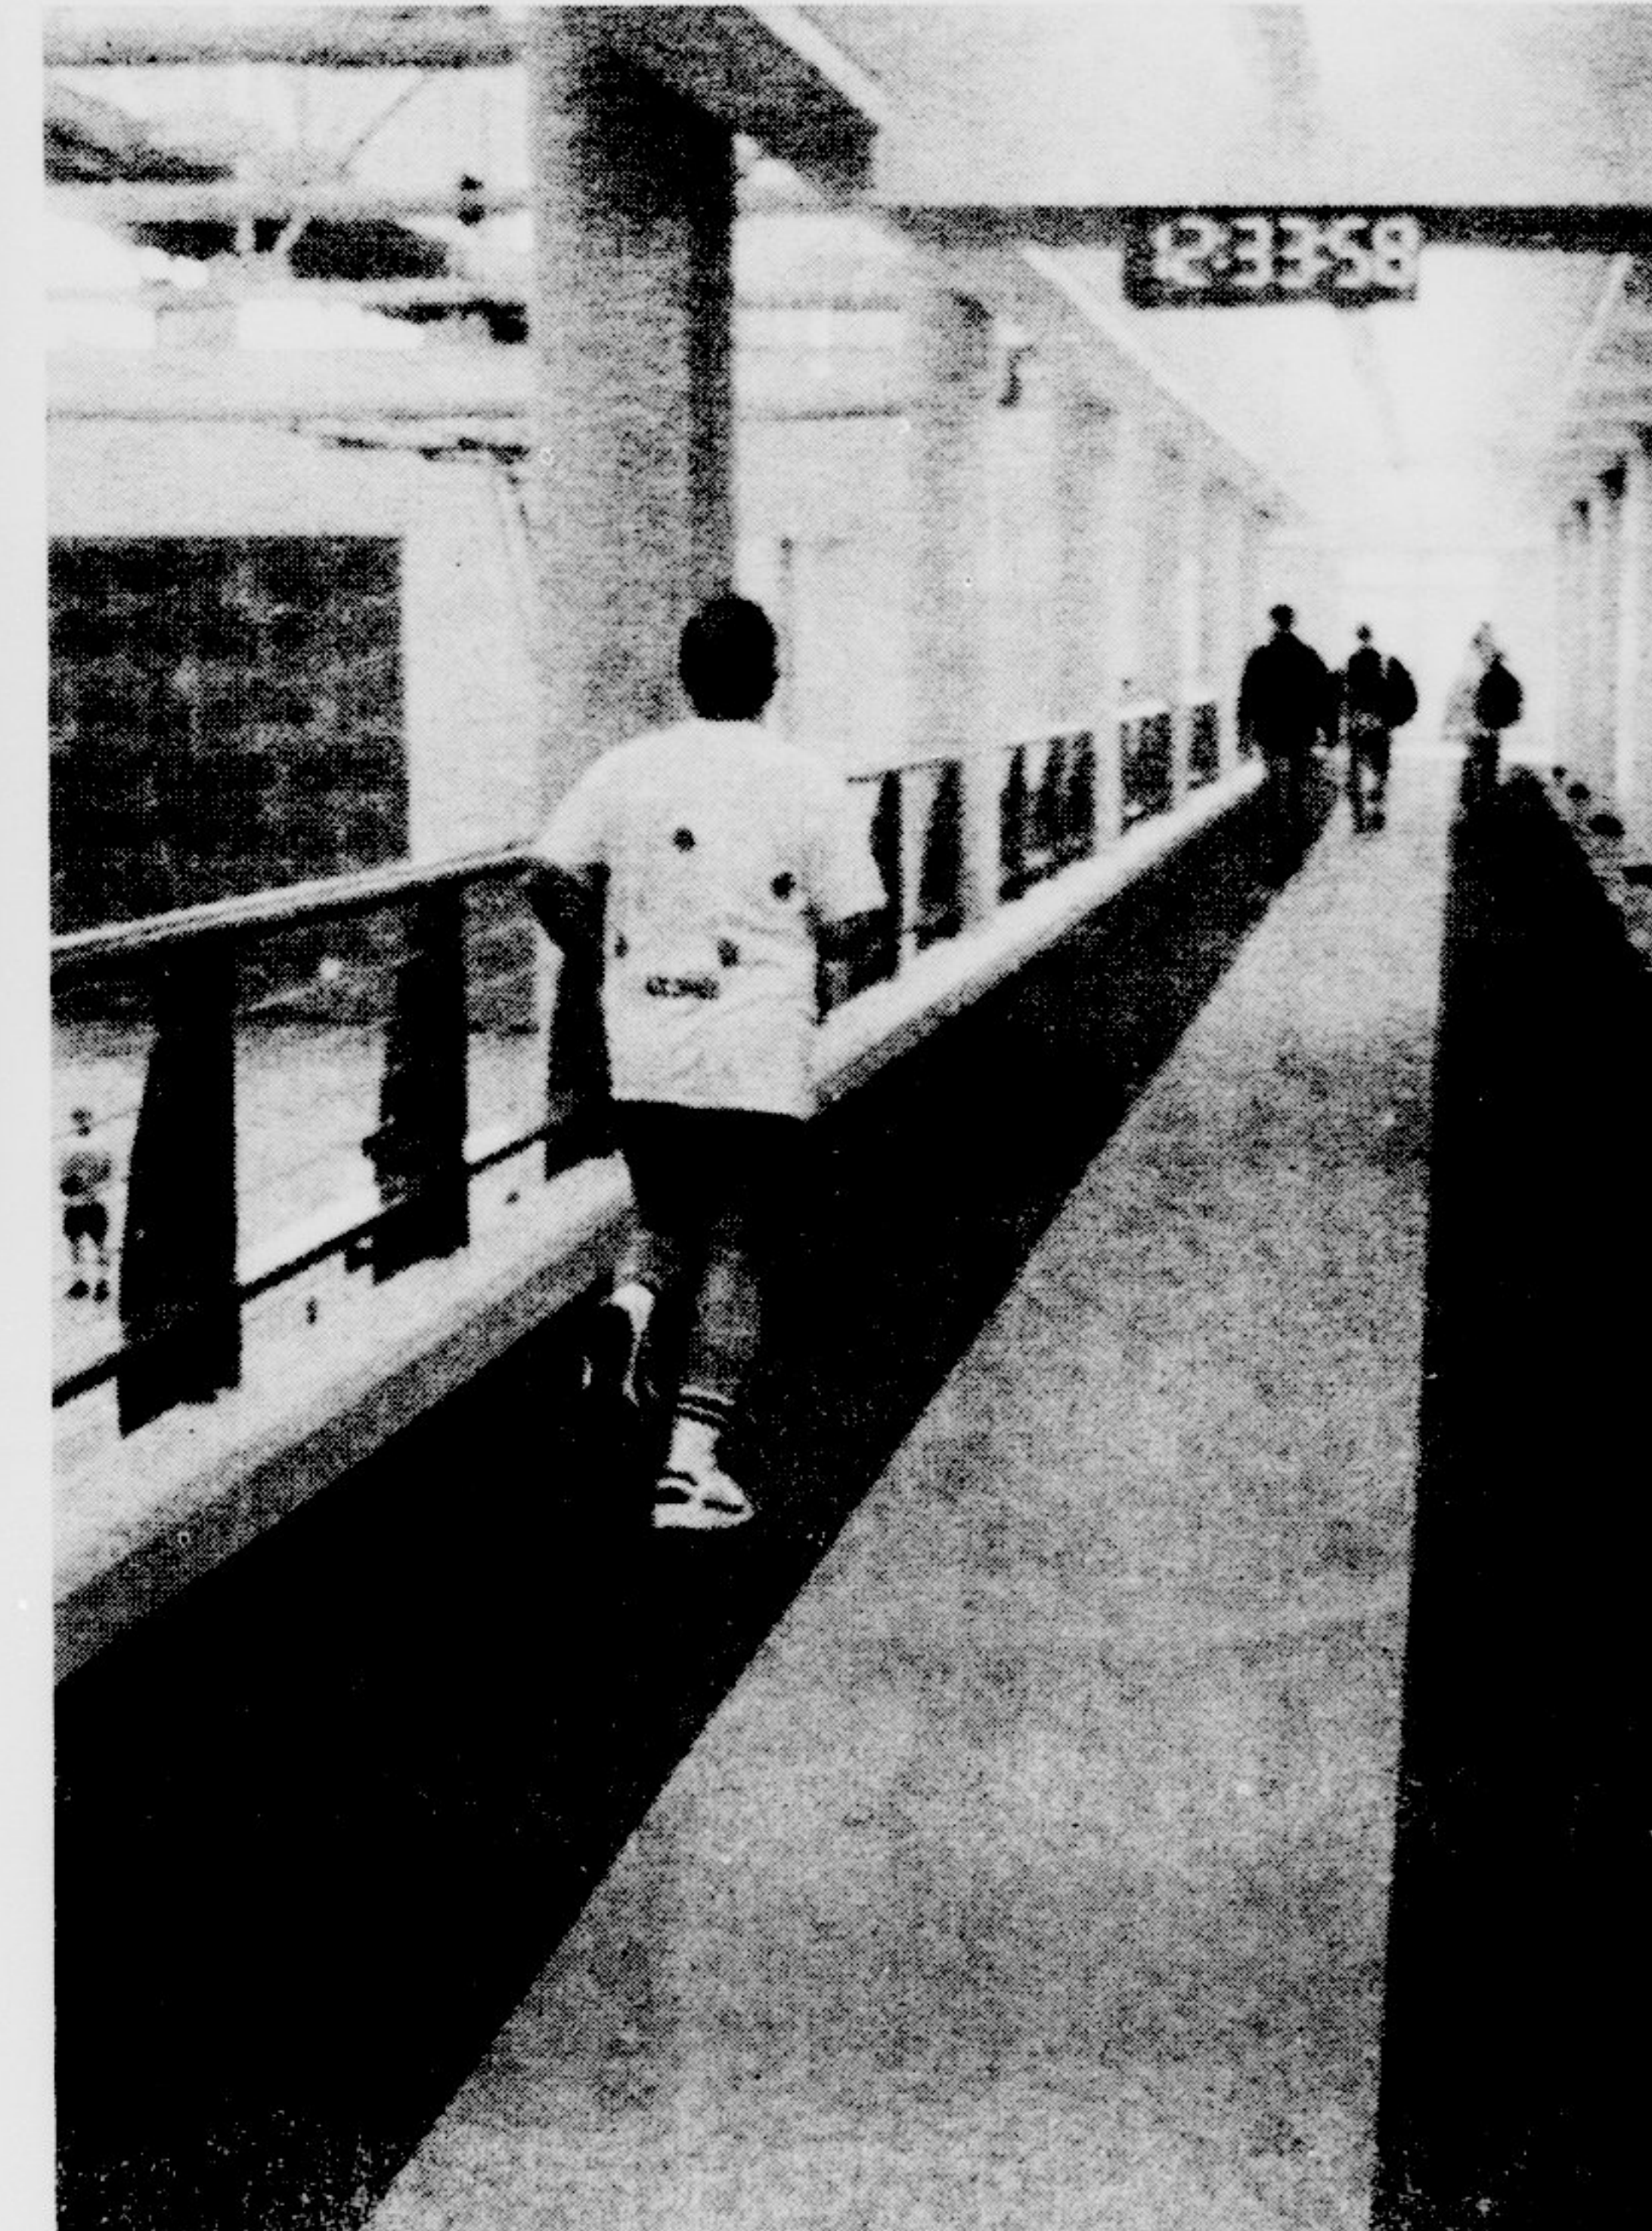

Memberships for faculty and staff, retired faculty and staff, recent alumni and trustees may be purchased for annual rate of $240, $100 a semester and $60 during the summer. Students may use the facilities free of charge, but they must have their ID cards with a current activities sticker. Guests of students and members may purchase a guest pass for $5 per day.

In addition to the low annual rate faculty and staff members receive a few other benefits. Faculty and staff receive reduced rates for aerobic class registration, priority registration and reduced rates for trips and workshops and reduced rates for outdoor equipment rentals. They also receive free equipment check-out services.

"The center is a great value," said Jane McDonald, wife Dr. Kenneth McDonald of the Medical Center. "Who, we were members of the Athletic Club for ten years. For my husband and I to go it cost us $840 dollars annually. At SRC membership is half of the cost and this is a better facility. I am so proud of ECU for this center."

The SRC will be open Monday through Friday from 6 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. and Saturday through Sunday 9 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. during the academic year. The juice bar and snack center opens 30 minutes later and closes 30 minutes before the center.

Overall students are pleased with the new facility.

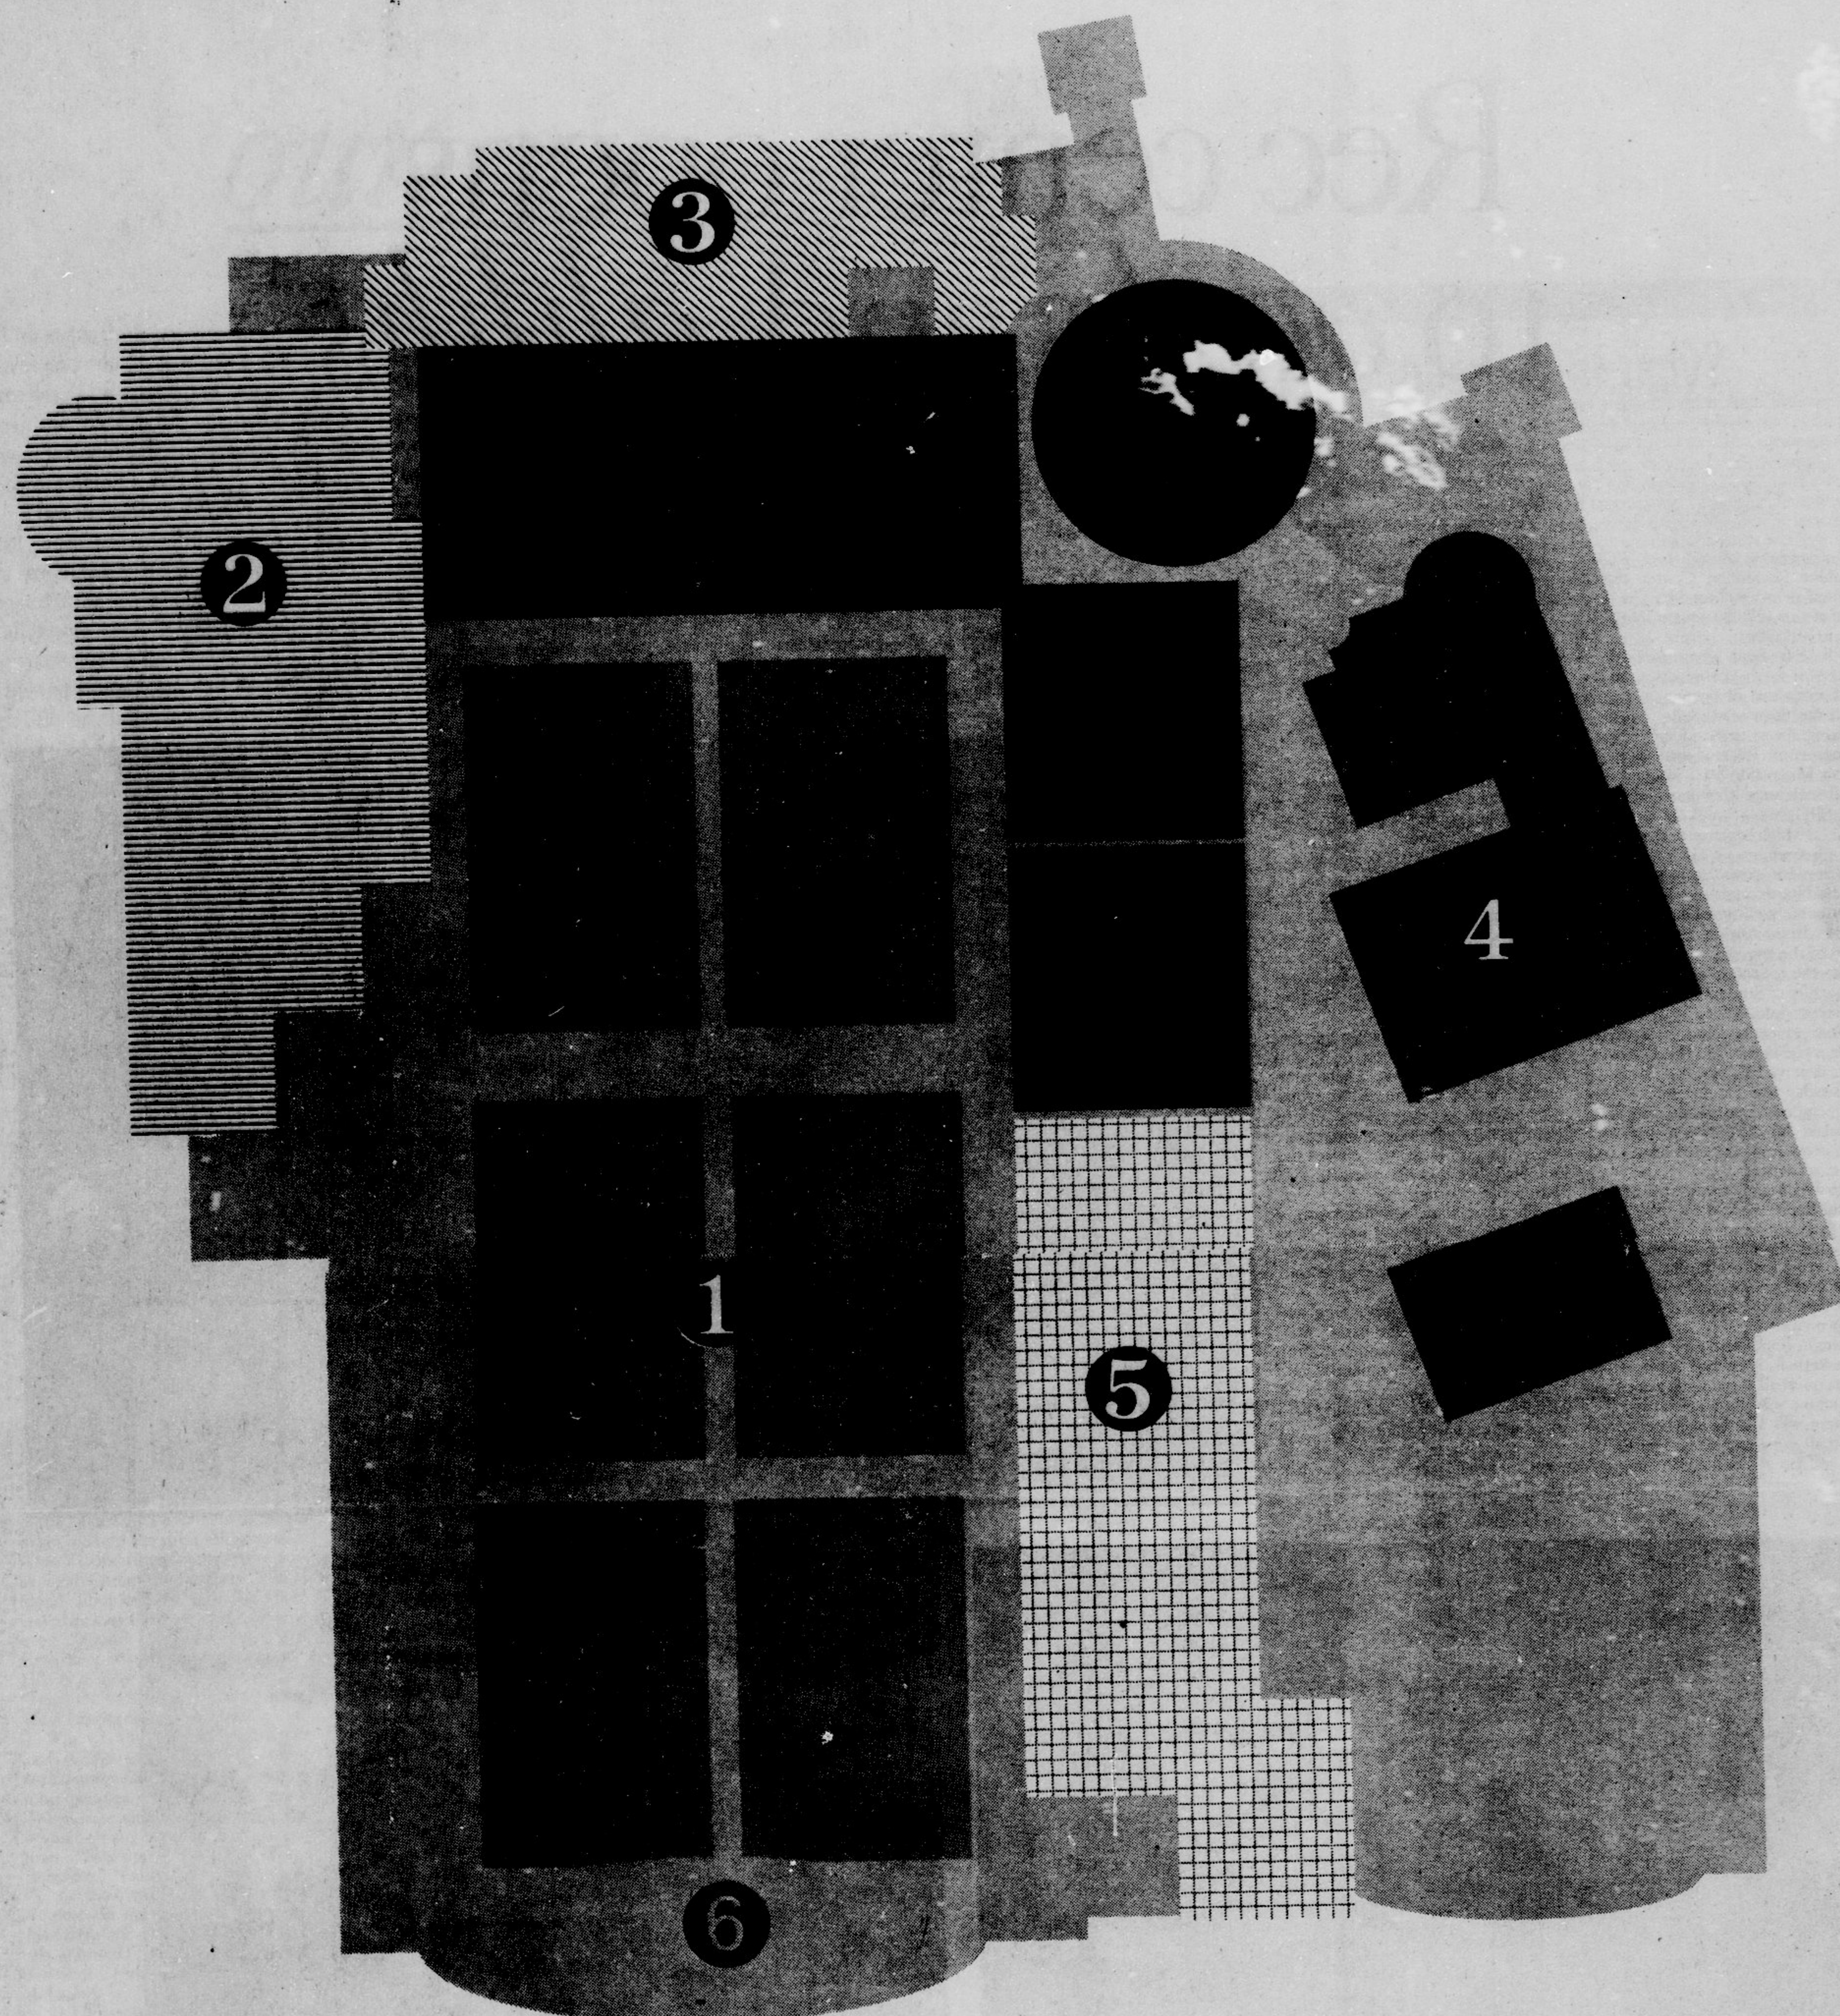

"The center is fantastic," Biology major Michael Cariveau said. "Compared to other schools the equipment and staff are excellent. I transferred here from NC State and the machines there are not half as nice."

NANCE MIZE
DIRECTOR OF RECREATIONAL SERVICES

Yes, East Carolina, there is a Student Recreation Center. The long-awaited opening of this facility arrived at 12 noon on Monday, Jan. 13 with its Grand Opening Celebration. Students, faculty and staff poured into the rotunda area of the center as the ribbon-cutting was performed by Angie Nix, president of the Student Government Association, Dr. Al

Matthews, vice chancellor of Student Life, and Nance Mize, director of Recreational Services.

An anticipated 500-1000 people were expected opening day, however, over 2000 came through the doors.

In celebration of the opening, many activities and special events have taken place. Samples of fresh-squeezed juices and snacks were provided by the Center Court Juice Bar and faculty member Carroll Dashiell, Jr. and his four-piece jazz band provided music for the participants on opening day.

Martial arts and aerobics class demonstrations on Tuesday night, wherein bricks and boards were broken with bare hands and mental toughness, caught the attention of many. A miniature trade show featuring 13 different club sports teams allowed students an opportunity to sign up for practice and team competition. The evening culminated with a ski machine giveaway. The ski machine was donated by The Bicycle Post.

Probably the most publicized event of the week was scheduled for Wednesday night in the outdoor pool - yes, the outdoor pool - for the Polar Bear Party. The featured event was "A Dip with the Dean" where Dean Ron Speier bared his legs to lead others in braving the arctic waters in the pool. These chartered Polar Bear members earned a t-shirt, a chance to win a VCR, and some hot chocolate.

Completing the week's events will be a mini-tournament tonight from 6-8 p.m. Tournament play will include basketball, racquetball, walkball and a wheelchair basketball game. If you want to show off your hidden talents or just get out and play to your heart's content, come to the Sports Courts area to sign up. A root beer "keg" party, complete with munchies, will be held at the Center Court juice bar during tournament play.

And the event the entire community has been waiting for, the SRC open house, will be held from 2-4 p.m. on Sunday. This is designed to provide members of the Greenville community with an opportunity to see what the facility is like. Refreshments will be provided and tours of the center will be conducted, so please come join the celebration at the Center.

ourview

The long holiday break is over and you know what that means. The start up of classes, the hassles of changing your schedule around and the joy of buying textbooks.

Now if you haven't used up all your Christmas money it's a good thing because you'll need it for those books. As we all know at ECU you have two choices when it comes to buying books. You can go to UBE, or the student bookstore. And with only two places to purchase these books, you can bet that you're not going to get a great deal on prices. We at TEC hear complaints that match our own of how the prices of books seem to be outrageous and what, is worse you don't see very much of that money come back into your pockets at the end of the semester when you sell the books back.

The on campus bookstore will buy your book back at half of the original price you bought it for and then turn around and sell it back for three-fourths the original price. What this means is a 25 percent mark up.

That may seem like a large mark up to the students, but the manager of the bookstore says that they barely break even because of overhead costs like bills and workers salaries.

But don't blame it all on the bookstore. The publishers have some say so in what the prices are to be set at. While we understand the need for them to cover their costs, it seems to us that the students still shell out a large chunk of money for some books they may only use once during the semester.

What would be nice is if the students had an alternative to the book stores in which they could sell back their books and buy them for a price that was more feasible to them. UNC-Chapel Hill has a program similar to that. They have a place run by a student organization on campus that sets up an area where students can set their own prices on books and other students can come in and buy those books if they want.

That student would get most of the profit while the rest might go the organization. Now the program is much more detailed than this, but the idea does spark some interest.

Nobody could say if the idea would fly here, but instead of complaining, a program could be set up to help combat these prices that seem to be out of the students reach.

Nobody has extra money laying around these days, and most of us are penny pinchers. It seems ridiculous to pay the amount of money we do for books but isn't that what college is all about? It teaches us that life is one large dollar sign, and that nothing comes cheap.

GUEST COLUMNIST

How does television convey the real meaning of Christmas?

I was Christmas shopping, my self of course, looking for a Christmas album to get me into the spirit of the season. What I found changed my entire outlook on Christmas. Yeah, I found albums like Jingle Cats and Grandma Got Runover by Reindeer, I even found one called "The Cryptkeeper's Christmas" where HBO's Cryptkeeper sang songs like "Deck the halls with parts of Charlie."

What happened to Christmas? When I was a child, I waited for such Christmas season with much anticipation. Christmas to me was the most magical thing on the earth. There were shows on television that weren't on any other time of the year like "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer," "Frosty the snowman" and "I was the night before Christmas." I would plop my little self down four feet from the television and gaze at the animated figures as they showed me what Christmas is really about. Or did they?

Is Christmas based on a reindeer with a red nose and an island of muskitoes? Or is it based on a magic man made of snow that melts and becomes the spirit of Christmas?

I don't think so.

If there's TV shows aren't about Christmas, then what are they about? Have you heard of people called "New Agers?" New Agers are the people who put humans on a shelf with God, or just try to take God off the shelf. The real sin a New Ager is that they take their poisoned ideals and candy-coated them so one has no idea what they are doing. They have effectively taken the "Christ" out of Christmas, replaced it with the symbol of our Generation "X" and turned our sacred holiday into X-mas. How could we have let them take the birth of our Lord away from us? How did they do it?

By attacking on all sides. First, they attack us with TV Christmas specials and even create TV commercials implying Christmas is a state of mind, not the birth of our savior. Then, they got on radio. There are several songs like "Here comes Santa Claus."

Then we got it where it hurts: elementary school education. Children sing "Jolly Old St. Nicholas." It's funny when people can't say that there's Santa Claus on TV, because it'll ruin the child's "ego," but parents everywhere let those TV shows tell our kids that a deer, a snowman and a far man in a red suit have taken the place of baby Jesus and Mary.

The only Christmas special that I will let my children ever watch is "Merry Christmas Charlie Brown." The characters in the show struggle to work together to put on a play about the birth of Christ. Along the way, they find out what the story is really about. Chuck felt sorry for the poor little Christmas tree because nobody would pick it, then everyone complains because the tree wasn't lavish enough.

The main Christmas story kids should be learning is the one in Luke, Chapter 2. "And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus that all the world should be taxed..."

What is the meaning of ugly?

Some of my colleagues and I were discussing what is "ugly" this weekend. We thought that ugly is an opinion. So, keeping that in mind, we decided to look it up in Webster's New World dictionary. Third College Edition. The book has four definitions for ugly.

Each of the four uses words like unpleasant, aesthetically offensive and repulsive. Now, each of those "defining" words is just about as vague as the one in question. So, a little back-tracking was necessary. It was found that both of the previous editions of the same dictionary defined ugly as "the opposite of beauty."

Ahhh, well now everything was much clearer! In a book of definitions, we got opinions. Granted, definitions are based on consensus of opinion. But what is the consensus on ugly?

Certainly, we college students can come up with a better idea of what ugly is than the aforementioned. Now, I'm not going to lie and say that I have never said that so & so was ugly. Judgmental as it is, it is sometimes unavoidable. But as I get older, I start to realize that passing that kind of judgment is myopic and crass. (Boy, do you ever feel like life is just one big 12-step group?) So, how do we come up with a definition for ugly that is not only politically correct, but has sound and fair reason behind it?

Well, it has to be an objective term, but at the same time it has to be cut and dry.

We don't want any gray matter here, that just wouldn't be fair. What about anything perceptual that induces immediate vomiting? No, no, too messy. Okay, how about something that causes physiological, visceral, or psychological discomfort? Nah, too Freudian. Got it! Any animal, vegetable, mineral, or sound that drives you to a point of delirium where you want to crawl back into your mother's womb? Nope, definitely way too Oedipal. This is sad.

If I try to sit back and think of something ugly, my mind wanders to things like cranberry sauce and Tommy, the grade school bully. Though both have points that make me "feel" a certain emotion that I associate with ugly, each still has facets that I could deem worthwhile. For example, my mom knows that I don't like cranberry sauce, so she doesn't bother asking me if I want some. Moreover, Tommy may have tripped me a lot getting on the bus, but at least he's in jail now. So, when it comes to a few random things that I find "ugly" I have alternate feelings that make them not so "aesthetically offensive."

What is so troubling, is that I know this word exists, and so does a definition behind it. But, I can't seem to find the ideal example of it. Why is that? Maybe, and I'm just speculating (SAT word), the word can appropriately be thought of as a passing of judgment. Judgment is defined in one way as "an opinion or estimate." Ah, my point is coming to a head! What is an opinion? Opinion is defined as "a belief not based on absolute certainty or positive knowledge but on what seems true, valid, or probable to one's own mind." There you have it! With a little bit of reasoning and logic we find that "ugly" is a relative term. Meaning that it is no way based in fact. You cannot show someone something that is ugly.

Point being, that I'm tired of everyone labeling something in a negative way. The word ugly doesn't permeate a good feeling in the person who uses it, nor in the object of that harsh judgment. Now, I'm not some whacked-out hippie looking for utopia, I'm just sick of thinking that things are ugly. Because when I think ugly thoughts, I feel ugly, and I'm simply running out of the value that gets my mind off the subject.

Ultimately, I'd like to leave you with one last definition. Judgmental: "Judgments considered to be lacking in tolerance, compassion, and objectivity."

So, what kind of human being are you?

Have an opinion about current issues?

Of course, we all have opinions about things that go on in our world. But if you possess good grammar skills and a unique way of expressing them, then you should apply to write for us.

All you have to do is fill out an application at our office.

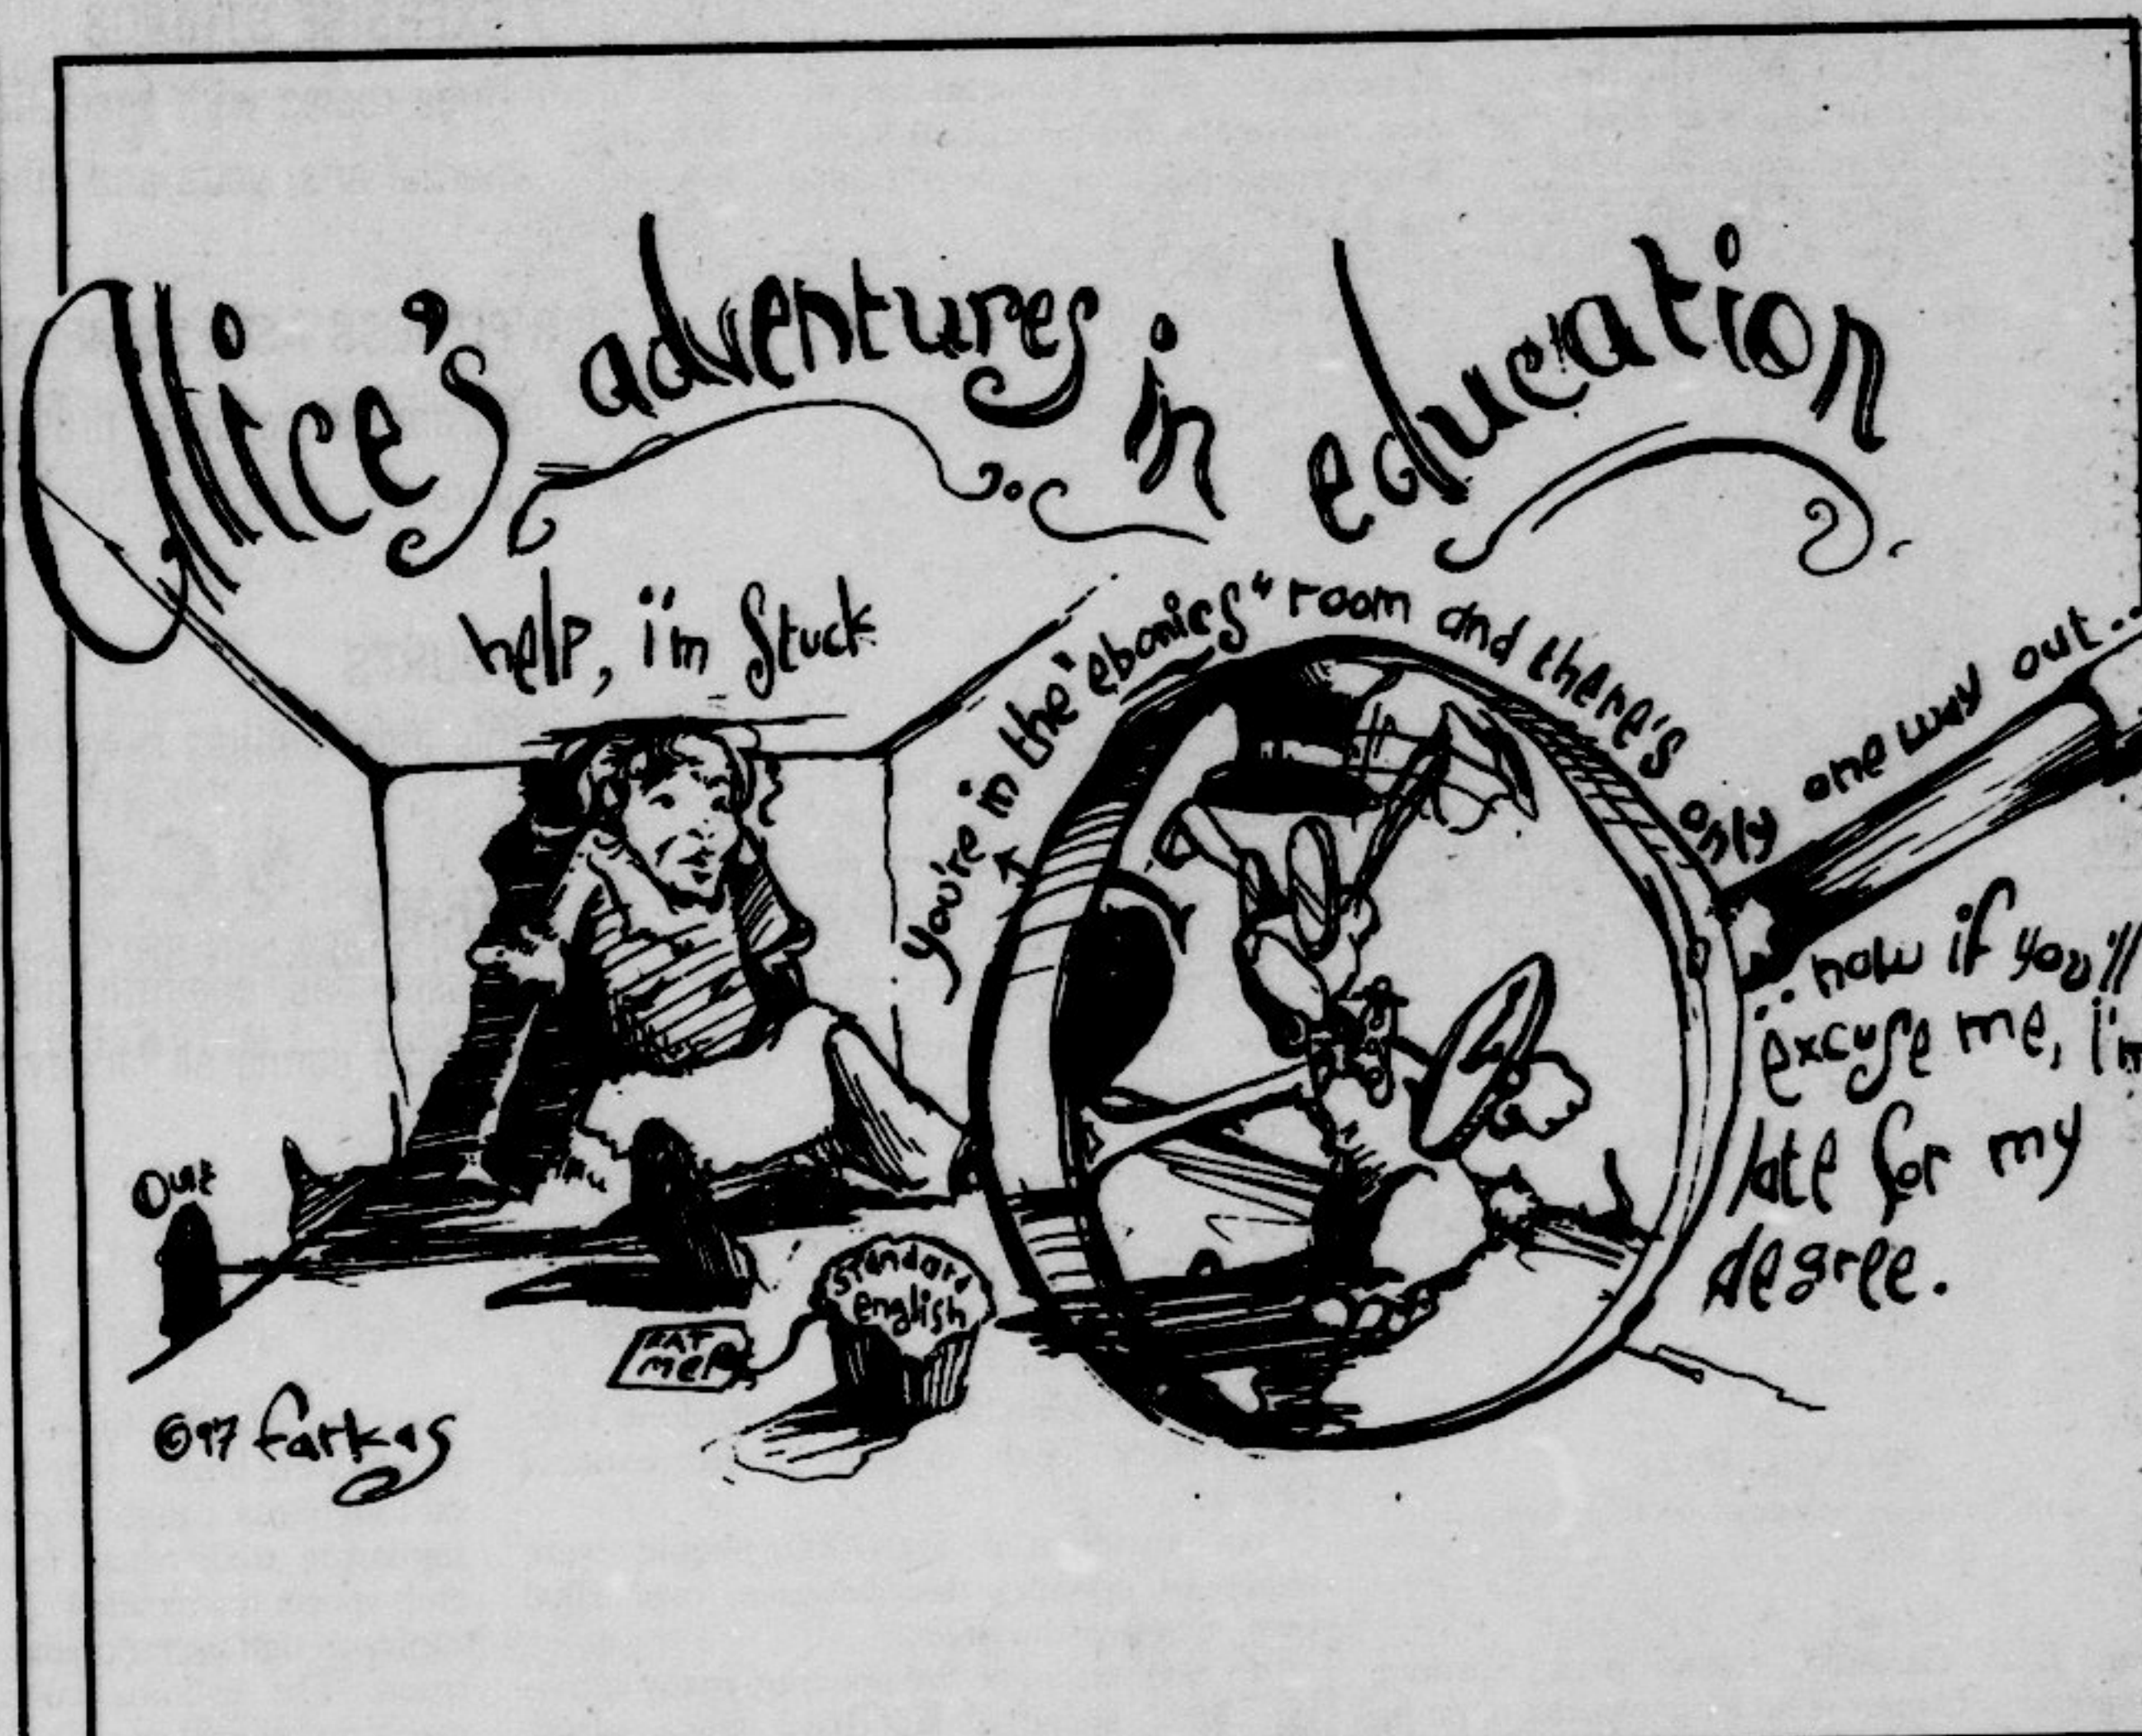

We are located on the second floor of the Student Publications building (across from Joyner).
