Drastic increase in voters from last year

Pam Godfrey was elected president of the Senior Class Wednesday night in an election which brought far more people to the polls than in previous years.

"I'm ecstatic over the 825 people," SGA Election Chair Cliff Webster said. "I'm going to guess we had not more than 100 last year. It came off really smooth."

Godfrey received 67 percent of the vote, soundly defeating Mark Thigpen. The race was initially between Godfrey, Thigpen, and Chris McCain. However, McCain was disqualified when he failed to turn in his expense report on time.

Leslie Brewer won the Senior Class vice presidency with a 69.9 percent lead over Michael Papera.

Godfrey also mentioned the experience she and Brewer had and singled out their work with the National Speech Impairment Association and Gamma Beta Phi.

"We worked hard the past three weeks," Brewer said. "I'm glad it's over with."

County seeks damages after crash

Student sued after hitting patrol car

CAROLINE JORDAN
STAFF WRITER

Pitt County is seeking damages from the insurance company of an ECU student to cover the cost of damages incurred to a Pitt County Sheriff's Department vehicle during a traffic accident last year.

On October 2, 1997, Lt. Ronald Wayne Smith pulled left out of the Krispy Kreme onto East 10th Street. According to witnesses, he then cut to the left around traffic stopped at a red light. Smith stopped at the intersection of Cotanche Street and 10th with all emergency lights activated and slowly proceeded ahead when his vehicle collided with the vehicle of East Carolina University student Valerie Springle.

In the accident report, Smith maintained that he sounded the air horn while he was stopped. As he passed through the intersection he was struck by Springle, 23.

Springle stated in the accident report that she did not see Smith's car until just before the crash.

Smith was transported to Pitt County Memorial and treated for swelling and bruising, then released. Springle and three of the four passengers in her vehicle complained of minor injuries but did not seek medical attention.

"The police report and investigation does find that she (Springle) is at fault.

We are seeking through her insurance company damages to the sheriff's vehicle."

Janis Gallagher
Staff attorney for Pitt County

Springle was charged with failure to stop for police. Under General Statute 20-157 emergency and police vehicles are permitted to pass through red lights and stop signs provided that they exercise due caution.

In August, Pitt County filed suit against Springle for failing to keep a proper lookout and yield the right of way.

"We have filed suit against her," said Janis Gallagher, staff attorney for Pitt County. "The police report and investigation does find that she (Springle) is at fault. We are seeking through her insurance company damages to the sheriff's vehicle."

"I am not able to answer any questions at this time, until I review the case," said Jerry Allan, Springle's lawyer, of Walker, Barwick, Clark, and Allan of Goldsboro, NC.

Messages left at Springle's home were not returned.

Wilentz named outstanding teacher

Professor demonstrates passion for literature

RACHAEL HIGDON
STAFF WRITER

Dr. Gay Wilentz, a professor in the English department, has been awarded the Outstanding Teacher Award by the South Atlantic Association of Departments of English (SAADE).

"The award is a great distinction," said Sarah Davis, vice president and president-elect of the SAADE. "She has been invited to speak at the annual South Atlantic Modern Language Association (SAML) conference in Atlanta in November."

The SAADE is comprised of English department chairs from all over the Eastern United States.

In order to compete for this award, a professor must be nominated by his or her department chair and then write an essay explaining his or her philosophy of teaching. Wilentz is one of four English professors to win the award this year and is the first from ECU to receive this recognition.

"I feel strongly that teaching is a cooperative experience," Wilentz said. "We work together as a group to investigate issues in an atmosphere of respect."

Wilentz was named the Distinguished Professor of Teaching for 95-96 by the University of North Carolina and also won the departmental award for teaching six times, but has not won.

"Some people see me as the Susan Lucci of ECU," Wilentz said, referring to the soap opera actress who, despite her many nominations, has not won an Emmy yet.

Wilentz has been a member of the English department for twelve years and enjoys teaching multicultural works in order to share voices in literature that are not often heard.

"I enjoy the interaction in the office and in the classroom," Wilentz said. "Sharing my love of reading and my relationships with my students are the best parts."

Many of Wilentz's students share her passion for learning about other cultures.

"She has a unique teaching style in that she brings the culture to you through the book," graduate student Shau-Ann Longworth said. "She also allows you to explore the differences and similarities between your culture and the one you're studying."

Career Day offers opportunities

75 organizations recruit employees

RACHAEL HIGDON
STAFF WRITER

The General Classroom Building teemed with eager recruitment officers from 75 organizations and businesses for the 1998 Career Day. Students were given the opportunity to mingle and create contacts with businesses ranging from Golden Corral to BB&T that will benefit them upon graduation.

"Students go to school to advance themselves," said Bob Morphet, representative for the Center for Counseling and Student Development. "We need Career Day for students to learn what options are available and what qualifications they need to be successful."

The atmosphere was casual and relaxed, making it easy for the students to ask questions in an informal setting. "It is a learning experience for the students as well as the companies," said Debra Baker, Associate Director of Computer Technology

"It is a nice chance to spark interest and to get your name out. We talk to so many students that we hope they will come back and hear more later."

Nicole Manley
State Farm's Recruitment Representative

in Career Services.

"This is a good way for potential graduates to get an idea of the marketplace for jobs," said Leigh Ann LeClair, a representative for Professional Programs. "They can also get a better look at non-traditional companies, different job opportunities that are available."

"I found out about companies I didn't even know existed until today," said Rashawn Deans, an Information Processing major. "I also learned a lot about interview dates that will help when I graduate."

The wide array of representatives help the students learn about the little known positions that are available with both larger corporations and smaller businesses.

"It is a nice chance to spark interest and to get your name out," said Nicole Manley, State Farm's Recruitment Representative. "We talk to so many students that we hope they will come back and hear more later."

Career Day is the place to establish contact with future employers and to learn about the screening processes. It is also a way to put a name to a face for future reference.

"For seniors it is definitely a benefit to see what jobs are on the market," said Jody Gore, coordinator of ECU Ambassadors' alumni relations. Organizers agreed that the day was prosperous for both students and businesses alike.

Popular Duke bonfires under new regulation

DURHAM (AP) Impromptu bonfires after key Duke University basketball games may be no more. Instead, students may be allowed to plan the celebrations after certain games.

A proposal being discussed by administrators and student leaders calls for the Duke Student Government to prepare for the popular bonfires by obtaining a fire permit.

Previous bonfires have been started spontaneously by groups of students, provoking confrontations between students and campus police.

RALEIGH (AP) All of the Miller quintuplets have finally arrived home.

Three of the quintuplets still hospitalized since birth left Wake Medical Center in Raleigh on Wednesday with their parents, Nancy and Kent Miller of Wake Forest.

Grace, Ellie and Martin join the other two babies—Emery and Maggie—already deemed healthy enough in the past few weeks to go home.

NEW YORK (AP) President Clinton declared an emergency Monday in the U.S. Virgin Islands and ordered federal aid for local recovery work in areas struck by Hurricane Georges.

Senate kills minimum wage increase

WASHINGTON (AP) The U.S. Senate rejected on Tuesday a $1 election-year increase in the federal minimum wage pushed by Democrats.

By a 55-44 vote, senators accepted a motion to kill the proposal, which would have raised the minimum wage earned by some 12 million Americans to $6.15 on Jan. 1, 2000.

WASHINGTON (AP) The State Department has announced plans to deliver 300,000 tons of food to North Korea by the end of the year despite concerns over its military activities.

The announcement came Monday as the administration was preparing to deliver the final shipment of a 200,000-ton food commitment made last February.

Clinton holds review of economic crisis

President Clinton said today he understood that the government of new Japanese Prime Minister Keizo Obuchi can only do what is "politically possible" to deal with a spreading global economic crisis.

The two leaders, in New York for opening sessions of the U.N. General Assembly, held what Obuchi called a candid review of the current global crisis and Japan's efforts to deal with the situation by jump-starting its ailing economy and handling a serious banking crisis.

Survey Research Lab helps gather traffic data

Information needed for planning

STEVE LOSEY
NEWS EDITOR

The ECU Survey Research Lab and the Greenville Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) will be distributing travel surveys to study the traffic patterns in Greenville, Winterville, and the surrounding areas.

The information will be used to assist in future construction of roads and neighborhoods to improve the traffic in Greenville.

"The survey is designed to allow the Greenville metropolitan area to better plan for traffic so we can avoid traffic problems," said Ken Wilson, director of the Survey Research Lab.

The survey will also study how growth and development affect traffic.

The Survey Research Lab will be sending out letters to 2,000 random households in the Greenville metropolitan area explaining what the survey will be and what they hope to learn. Each household will then receive a phone call to find out basic information, such as size of the family and number of cars. The surveys will be completely anonymous. Each household will be assigned a coded identification number.

The households will then receive a travel diary, which they will use to record their travels for one single day. The surveys will be spread over 42 different days.

"We will get an idea of the trips people make," said Ron Svejovsky, Transportation Planner for the MPO.

The Survey Research Lab is attempting to include all demographics in this survey. College students will be represented in the survey, with one exception. Their surveys will only cover off campus travel.

"There are different types of trips for different people," Svejovsky said. "We will study college students, poor people, middle-class people, and rich people."

Svejovsky said that they will be studying the percentage of people who make cross-town trips and how long those trips are.

The information will be completely gathered by Thanksgiving. The Survey Research Lab will do the preliminary analysis and then let the MPO take over the final analysis.

The finalized data will be incorporated into the city's planning within a month.

"It will go into the planning process by January 1," Wilson said.

Wilson mentioned that there is now a generic national model of traffic flow used by North Carolina, but this would provide a much more accurate and reliable basis to plan future developments.

"This is the first time this has been done east of I-95," said Svejovsky.

"They (the MPO) are really excited about getting this information," Wilson said.

crime scene

September 21, 1998

At 11:16 a.m., a staff member reported receiving a harassing phone call at an office in the Malene Irons Building.

A student reported the larceny of his license plate at 12:08 p.m. from his vehicle parked on Dowell Way, east of Fletcher Hall. The license plate was recovered a few hours after it was reported stolen.

A staff member reported a male following a female employee in Joyner Library at 3:30 p.m. The male was identified as a non-student and banned from Joyner Library.

An officer responded to a report of a subject smoking marijuana east of Slay Hall at 9:35 p.m. The officer observed three students at that location and upon approaching the subjects, one of them swallowed a cigarette. The officer smelled a strong odor of marijuana at that location. The three students were issued campus appearance tickets.

Three non-students were banned from campus after they threatened two students on the east side of Cotten Hall.

September 22, 1998

A staff member reported the larceny of a telephone from the basement of Joyner Library at 3:14 p.m.

Three students were issued state citations at 4:30 p.m. for possession of marijuana in Slay Hall.

At 11:49 p.m. a student was issued a campus appearance ticket for carrying a concealed weapon after he was observed placing a large knife in his pants pocket.

September 23, 1998

A student was severely beaten on College Hill Drive at 1:16 am by two unknown males. The victim was transported to the hospital by Greenville Rescue.

1:38 am - Possession with Intent to Sell and Deliver Marijuana - A student was arrested for possession of marijuana with the intent to sell or distribute. The arrest resulted after the investigation into an assault that occurred fifteen minutes earlier on College Hill Drive. Mr. McNeill's vehicle matched the description of the vehicle of the suspects in the assault case. A quantity of marijuana and cash were seized from the vehicle.

read and write," said Toni Blood, executive director of the Greenville Chapter of Literacy Volunteers of America. "We do that through tutoring."

The workshop begins today and continues Monday, September 28, Thursday, October 1, and Monday, October 5. Each class is from 7:00-9:30 p.m.

Many Greenville residents and ECU students volunteer at the center. Todd Norman, an ECU student, volunteers there on a regular basis.

"I volunteer once a week for about an hour," Norman said. "Almost everyone volunteering at the center does the same."

The tutors at Literacy Volunteers are all unpaid. Partial funding comes from the United Way and donations from the community also help the organization to run.

"On occasion we pay for some of the supplies out of our pockets," Norman said.

All the students that come in to be tutored come under their own free will. Television and radio advertisements promote the center. Statistics show that 1 in 5 people in Pitt County has a literacy problem.

"We are below the literacy average for America, so the organization is important for the community," Norman said. "Each person determines his or her own goals and the tutor facilitates those goals."

Any students that are interested in volunteering their time should call the Literacy Volunteers of America at (252) 353-6578.

Our View

For most of us, college is a time for finding out what life is about. Many people come to school and quickly discover that watching TV and drinking beer leave them feeling emotionally empty.

Everybody has different ways of dealing with that feeling. Some pour themselves into their studies to the point of neglecting all other parts of their lives. Others drown themselves with alcohol in clubs downtown. Quite often, people find themselves feeling just as empty as they did before.

A few students, however, find more fulfilling ways to spend their college days. They use their free time to volunteer for organizations around Greenville.

Most volunteer organizations are in dire need of people willing to donate a small bit of time to help other people. They provide necessary functions for people who sometimes can't afford them. Volunteers do things such as set up blood drives, raise money for charitable organizations, and educate people.

Many feel that they don't have enough time to give to volunteer organizations. Actually, most charities will take whatever time a person has available to give. Many work as little as one or two hours a week. That may not sound like a lot, but that little chunk of time can help change a person's life.

By volunteering one's time, a student can gain valuable experience that will help after graduation. Volunteers learn how to work well with other people and develop their communication skills. It also provides excellent material for resumes. Many employers will take another look at people who take time out of their busy schedule to assist the less fortunate.

We at TEC feel that by helping other people, people not only work to improve the lives of others, but actually help themselves too. The knowledge that the community is a little bit better because of one persons work helps that person get a little more rest at night.

Waitresses get tired of Ramen too

Upon selecting a restaurant, little Billy Beer Belly will first muddle through the barrage of phone numbers, parking tickets, and angry letters from Columbia House stuffed in his wallet to see how much actual cash is contained within.

Ahhh, college life- the bane of healthy eating habits. Take a quick glance through your fridge. What do you see? Probably four beers, a jar of mustard, and a carton of milk that just celebrated it's first birthday. Open up the cabinet. It most likely contains a case of Ramen noodles, two bowls and a coffee cup... ewww, don't look too closely at the coffee cup.

Ok, so where are you going to get that life sustaining nourishment that your body requires? Apparently not at your house, and I'd advise against sneaking into your neighbor's pad to borrow grub. Trust me, it's just a bad idea.

So the average college student of medium intelligence chooses eat out. I do it almost daily, but that stems from my incapacitating fear of grocery stores and dishwashers, so perhaps I am not a good example. We will instead use the typical drooling college stereotype that we all know and love.

Upon selecting a restaurant, little Billy Beer Belly will first muddle through the barrage of phone numbers, parking tickets, and angry letters from Columbia House stuffed in his wallet to see how much actual cash is contained within. This will be the deciding factor between IHOP, Waffle House, or the alley behind the Elbo as his eatery of choice.

If he comes up with eight dollars and change and knows from his photographic memory of menus that the Country Fried Steak and Eggs at IHOP is $7.39, should Billy eat at IHOP? No, my friends. Billy should carry his broke ass to the Waffle House, where country fried steak and eggs is $5.99, and he can leave Flo a two dollar tip.

However, this logic does not normally apply. Waiters don't like us. They see us coming and hide. We are usually drunk anytime after dark, and broke anytime after the student loan money runs out (usually the week after it's received.) We make a mess and don't give them any money to clean it up. What bastards!

This results in a generalization of all college students. I have held at least half a dozen jobs in food service, and granted, I know that college kids can leave you butt loads of money. But mostly they don't.

Waiters aren't there because they really, really love slinging hash and cleaning up after nasty little kids. This is not their career of choice. They are most likely working their way through school, or working part time somewhere else, or trying to move on to something better. And they don't really like you at all. They just smile so you'll leave the dollars.

Can you imagine being in a profession that requires you to suck up to people, heed their every call, submit to their every whim, just for your daily bread? It sucks. And the saddest part is that it is terribly hard to find a job where you can make as much money in as short a time as waiting tables. That is not counting that fat $2.15 an hour you're raking in.

So humor them. Leave the dollars. They need them just a s badly as you needed that chili cheeseburger that they so lovingly brought to your table, without dropping it, and then went back to get you ketchup for your fries, and then went back to get you some more Dr. Pepper, and then went back to get you some mayo, because you are so freaking hard to satisfy. If you can't afford to leave a tip, then for god's sake stay home, wash your coffee cup, and make some Ramen noodles.

Or at least hope that I'm not your waiter.

Don't take loved ones for granted

By the time I hung up, my face was virtually streaked with tears, and I was greeted by the loving arms of my girlfriend. A select few moments ran through my mind as I lay there holding back the tears that make me feel like less of a man.

How can things happen the way they do? Just this morning, I woke up so that I could go see my girlfriend sing at church, and everything was cool. Afterwards, she and I came back to my room to watch a movie and, once again, everything was cool. Then, I called my mom to wish her a happy birthday (it being her birthday and all), and she proceeds to tell me what she got with the money my brother and I gave her, and as usual, everything was cool.

But then she tells me that my Great Aunt Louise passed away on Saturday. After that, everything she said was blocked out by my thoughts. I somehow got through the conversation and ended it with my most sincere "Happy Birthday" message, but all I could think about was the news of my aunt. This woman was wonderful. Every time I saw her, she was in a good mood. She always had a kind word.

By the time I hung up, my face was virtually streaked with tears, and I was greeted by the loving arms of my girlfriend. A select few moments ran through my mind as I lay there holding back the tears that make me feel like less of a man. I remembered the Thanksgiving at the Holiday Inn in Roanoke Rapids, and Christmas at my cousins, and the time she, my mother, my grandmother, and I went to see my cousin in a musical. It was only a few months ago, and it is just so strange to believe that it's all over now.

The thing that makes me feel bad is the fact that she had been in the hospital right here in Greenville, and I had never gotten up there to see her. That brings me to the actual opinion part of my opinion column.

We seem to have too much going on nowadays. Not all, but a lot of us, have come to college and all but abandoned our life back home. All we have to keep us informed are letters and the occasional phone call. We come to ECU feeling like we are in the real world, and sometimes we forget that there's a real world back home, too. If someone you care about is sick or ill, you should take that time to go see him or her. People need other people to survive. We cant afford to get so caught up with our own deadlines that we forget about the people that helped us along the way.

I have to live with the fact that my aunt may have died not knowing that I cared about her, and it's too late to change it. Well, it's not too late to start thinking about others. If you care about someone, and they don't know about it, take them aside one day and just tell them. Tomorrow may be too late. I'd be willing to bet that someone wishes they had confessed something to the two teenage boys that were killed in an automobile accident in Wilson last Friday.

Maybe some day, when my time is up, I will be able to tell her how I feel. Until then, I can just take a few minutes every now and again and pray. I can tell God, just as I told you, what a wonderful woman He is getting. I keep thinking about her when I am not occupied with something. I can feel the tears welling up as I type. Regret has a funny way of staying with you...don't let it get you, too. I can hardly read the screen.

For Louise Threewitts: Rest in Peace. We miss you already.

Women, look out for each other

The thing that troubles me the most about sexual assault and rape is that the young woman is somebody's daughter. Some loving father's little girl. Somebody's fiance or girlfriend. And for many of us, it could be our sister.

I, first, and foremost, would like to apologize on the behalf of all the gentlemen at ECU for whatever poor excuse of a "man" that committed the rape at Garrett Hall this past Sunday. Out of all crimes that are be committed, I feel that rape and sexual assault are the most detestable, and would very much like to see the criminal be punished in a very inhumane fashion, such as a nice public flogging, or the removal of several fingers with a nice dull, rusty kitchen knife.

The thing that troubles me the most about sexual assault and rape is that the young woman is somebody's daughter. Some loving father's little girl. Somebody's fiance or girlfriend. And for many of us, it could be our sister.

I care for my little sister Lauren more than anything in the world. She wants to grow up and be like me, and come to ECU in two more years. With all the recent assaults on women in the dorms in the past year, I don't think that I can, in good conscience, recommend campus living to her. The same brochure that is sent out to all students each year that exonerates the environment of diversity of dorm living tells nothing of the closeted thieves, vandals, violent drunks and sexual offenders that could live just a floor above or below her. And if anything happened to her, don't think that I wouldn't be above getting extremely violent with the accused.

I like what Duke University is doing. They have a special building, open 24 hours a day for women to call or go to if they need an escort, a place to sleep, or a place to sober up. But since we don't have it yet at ECU, I can only recommend that you ladies follow a couple of guidelines to keep yourself safe. Don't play drinking games. But if you must, make sure it's with people you trust. Many guys can drink twice the amount of alcohol as you, and still only have a mild buzz. Also, go to parties with a couple of your friends. That's why I admire sororities so much. The ladies always look out for one another. Finally, don't be afraid to have guy friends. Men, by nature, are not bad. There's just that small percentage of idiots that would do a great service to humanity by removing themselves from the gene pool.

Broadening your horizons

Discendo linguam peregrinam, portae patent plurimae
(By learning a foreign language, many doors are opened)—Latin

NICHOLAS KALAPOS
STAFF WRITER

Today's world has become a cultural melting pot. In America, English is quickly becoming a second language and many jobs are moving more towards multi-lingual employees.

"We are far behind other countries in language development," said French professor Martin Schwarz. "One reason is demographics and another is that for years, the United States was an isolationist. Today in our global village, companies look more for multi-lingual people."

Demographics are a big disadvantage for language development in America. Europeans have a distinct advantage in that in a few minutes, they can go to a country where they will be totally immersed in another language.

"Total immersion is the best way to learn a new language," said Spanish professor Helga Hill. "My son spent four semesters in college taking German, but didn't become fluent until he went to Germany with the ISEP program."

Though immersion in a language is a factor, age is yet another problem that may impede the learning process.

"To truly master a language, you should start before the age of ten," Schwarz said. "It is around this age that the vocal cord sets and once it sets you will probably have an accent in any language that you learn."

Hill believes that in America we wait too long to begin teaching a foreign language.

"In America we start to teach a language way too late," Hill said. "European and Asian schools start children in languages while they're still in elementary school."

During the early stage of development a child is able to learn more than one language at a much faster rate.

"Students at the college age can still learn languages, but they need to study harder," Hill said.

Both Hill and Schwarz agree that learning a foreign language is essential to have a liberal arts education.

"The language is essential to a liberal

Many non-traditional students must balance career, school, family everyday

2,800 adult students enrolled for fall '98

And you think you have it tough. Imagine what it's like dealing with a career, paying the bills, managing a family and on top of that, going to college. That is exactly what 2800 adult students are having to do at ECU this year.

These students often have different needs than their younger counterparts. Forget about "Back to School" starring Rodney Dangerfield, adults going to college for the first or second time have quite a balancing act to perform. The ECU Adult Student Service Center tries to make that transition easy.

"We try to get the necessary information out to them," said Shelly Myers, director of Adult Services.

Currently Adult Services is in a period of adjustment. Myers, who has been the director for a few weeks, still feels that they can address any troubles that the adult student has.

From information on support groups to child care, to places where the students can meet with fellow adults, the service center is there for those who need it.

"One concern that is prevalent is the need to meet with students their own age," Myers said. "Usually Mendenhall Student Center is a great place to meet fellow adult students. There is the Adult Student Association on campus which is a great organization out there."

There are certain conceptions held about adult students. For instance, it is thought that they like to sit in the front of the class-

Fair prepares many for life after college

Various majors wanted in many fields

ERIN ALDERMAN
STAFF WRITER

If you are preparing to graduate and looking for a job and you didn't attend career day, you may have missed a very valuable opportunity.

On Wednesday September 23rd the annual Career Day was held. Now I know many of you are wondering how that concerns you.

Career Day, according to Dr. Jim Westmoreland, Director of Career Services, "introduces organizations and businesses that will come to campus for interviews during the fall and/or spring semesters."

The event is for the whole university and was created so that students could learn about the many possibilities for employment and graduate schools.

Westmoreland believes that anyone who is interested in his or her career or career possibilities will benefit from the event because it is the perfect opportunity to meet and greet employers from around the area.

You may not have expected to see many of the businesses that were there. Representatives from corporations and organizations such as Burlington Industries, Aerotek, Campbell University Law School, Nations Bank and other unexpected business attended the event.

Still wondering what you may have missed? Westmoreland believes that attending Career Day and meeting the representatives from various businesses will increase your networking and may help in your future employment search. Think that none of the businesses would have anything to do with your major?

Westmoreland points out that by introducing yourself to the representatives and speaking with them you may come to realize that many of the businesses you believed had nothing to do with your career just might surprise you.

Many of the businesses that attend Career Day are large corporations that employ people from a broad range of majors.

For instance, a communications major may not see the need to speak with a retail company, but the organization may have a need for a public relations specialist or a person with writing skills.

Trish Haney and Angela Goins, representatives from John Hancock Mutual Life both agreed that they were very impressed with the students they had met at Career Day.

Haney explained that their hope in attending the event was, "to bring December graduates into the Raleigh office for interviews and interest them in sales with John Hancock."

Haney went on to say that while they are only looking to hire strictly sales and marketing positions, they are interested in hiring people from all backgrounds with various degrees.

Novant Health, a health care organization with two large hospitals located in Winston Salem and Charlotte was also at the event.

Representative Kim Cardwell was there to answer any questions and advised that students shouldn't be too quick to assume that businesses at Career Day have nothing to offer a student with their degree.

"Make sure you talk to and ask, we hire people for housekeeping, dietary, and management," Cardwell said.

By asking the right questions you may be surprised to find that many businesses are looking to hire graduates with various degrees and majors.

Westmoreland advises that to make an even better impression on a company you may be interested in, write a thank you letter to the representative you spoke with.

House moms create home away from home

Acting as surrogate mother not easy job

NINA M. DRY
SENIOR WRITER

Sorority members get the best of both worlds; the independence that all students strive for when they leave home to attend college, and the cozy atmosphere mothers have somehow learned to create and perfect for any situation. Sororities have house advisors, better known as house mothers, that know just how to create the home away from home environment.

Most women hear about this kind of job from their daughters who were either involved in sororities or have friends in them, through word of mouth or through advertisements in the newspaper. Those who are interested set up an interview with the sorority's president for the job.

"We look for someone who is responsible and can basically be our surrogate mother while we're at school," said Carrie Rogers, president of Zeta Tau Alpha.

Once the house chooses a person to become the house advisor, besides taking care of the house, she also becomes the surrogate mother to all the sorority residents.

"If something happens to one of the girls, it's like it is happening to your own child," said Lara Lee, house mother at Alpha Delta Pi for 11 years. "You get so close to them, it makes you sad to see them graduate."

In return, the ladies of the sorority try to show their love and appreciation for their house mothers.

"We love Myrtle," Rogers said. "She does so much for us—she's a very hard working lady."

"The girls do so much for me," said Myrtle Latimer, Zeta Tau Alpha house mother for the last five years. "I talk to the girls every morning. It makes me feel so special."

Although being a house mother has its rewards, it is not an easy task. Many responsibilities go along with the job, such as purchasing the groceries, maintaining the house—if anything is not working properly, she must call the repair people. The house mother must also work closely with the maid and the cook, making sure their jobs run smoothly, and basically hold all things together.

"My main responsibility is to make sure everything is taken care of and running smoothly at the house," said Joan El-Khatib, Alpha Omicron Pi house mother for the last six and a half years.

"My main objective is to keep them happy and well fed," Latimer said.

Usually, house mothers live in the sorority house in their own mini apartment with living room, bedroom and bathroom free of charge.

"You do not have to worry about bills while living in the house," El-Khatib said.

"We have a lot of safety devices that I probably couldn't have if I were at home," Latimer said. "I feel very safe here."

All in all, these women love what they do and like the environment they are in.

"I like working with these girls," arts education," Schwarz said. "There is no replacement for reading a book in its original language because some things just don't translate. You can't claim to be well educated if you know nothing about cultures other than your own. Language is the primary form of expression for a culture and is thereby irreplaceable."

Schwarz also pointed out that to obtain a doctorate at many colleges, you must be able to read and translate in at least two languages other than your own.

Schwarz feels that in order to retain the knowledge of a second language a person must continue to practice.

"The best way not to forget is to stay practiced," Schwarz said.

Schwarz suggests doing things like watching foreign news and movies, reading foreign magazines, books and newspapers, all of which can be a great help, and to try using the internet to increase your skills and stay up to date.

Schwarz and Hill agreed that there are not as many students passing foreign languages as there should be, but that it was from their lack of interest and bad study habits. Students should study the language everyday so that it is always fresh in their minds.

Remember before just randomly choosing a language, you should find one that you want to learn or that you think that you have a chance to use more regularly. There are a number of jobs in the area for multi-lingual people.

"Many companies that come from overseas have to hire a certain number of Americans for their operations, but they need bilingual people," Hill said.

Check with the language department on the third floor of the General Classroom Building for job opportunities for multi-lingual students.

Mothers

El-Khatib said, "It keeps me young."

"The whole job is enjoyable," Lee said. "I love being involved with the girls' lives."

Even though the majority of sororities have the luxury of having a mother away from home, fraternities do not. These women think it would be a great idea for fraternities to have house mothers.

"I think it would be nice if they had someone to make them home-cooked meals," Latimer said.

"I don't know why fraternities do not have house mothers, but I think the boys would appreciate having one," Lee said.

Contrary to these women's beliefs, some of the guys in fraternities are quite content with their current situation and see no need for change.

"I think frats do well enough without house mothers," said Josh Nail, house manager at Kappa Sigma.

"It's good to have the option of having house mothers, but it should not be forced," said John Meriac, Vice President of Tau Kappa Epsilon. "[Not having a house mother] gives young guys the opportunity to obtain some leadership experience before they go out into the real world."

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — Using radar-like forensic equipment, investigators spent their holiday weekend combing through a trash-ridden home where they earlier pulled eight corpses.

It's possible, police say, there are more bodies hidden in or around the home of Kendall Francois, who is suspected in the murders. So far, police have released the names of seven of the eight women found.

Most of the women had been reported missing over the last two years and had histories of prostitution and drug use.

On Sunday, police identified one of the bodies as Mary Healey Giaccone, a 29-year-old Poughkeepsie woman. She was last seen in February 1997.

The other six victims are Catina Newmaster, 25; Catherine Marsh, 29; Gina Barrone, 29; Wendy Meyers, 30; Sandra French, 51; and Audrey Pugliese, 34.

According to police, finding Pugliese's body was a huge surprise.

stereotypes were true for certain reasons.

"I think that I'm more active in the classroom than other students," Lowenstein said. "I'm getting an undergraduate degree because I'm changing careers, so I have a vested interest in doing well in class."

Adults students have many sacrifices to make in their lives. Whether they are watching their finances or managing their time, it is tough.

"You can't go out to eat all the time anymore," said Troy Martin, a second-year adult student. "I know many people that have bills to pay and kids to take care of. It's hard to balance it all."

As far as interacting with younger students, there does not seem to be any problem. Most adult students are seen as "experienced" by their younger peers.

"I have a lot of students come up and ask me questions about different things," Martin said. "I've already been through a lot and can usually give them good advice."

"One thing that varies among the adults is their experiences in getting back into the 'school mode.' Some find it difficult to study and cram, while others quickly adapt to the world of pop-quizzes and research papers.

But for all these students, the benefits definitely outweigh the disadvantages.

"It's fun here," Lowenstein said. "I'm enjoying my time at campus."

"Everyone is friendly here, I haven't had any bad experiences yet in my two years at ECU," Martin said.

"We are of course indebted to our sponsors," said Henry VanSant, associate athletics director. "We've been real pleased with the business community's response to supporting our athletic budget and program."

So that ECU does not appear opportunistic, and too readily accepting of monetary donations, it's important to consider the package deal that the sponsoring businesses are offered. Included are passes for VIP tent parking, where refreshments are provided, and tickets to the game. They are also identified as the sponsor or co-sponsor on t.v. and radio advertisements and are recognized by their company banners displayed throughout the stadium, usually at the entrances. Plus, they're allowed to present scoreboard messages and PA announcements, and the front cover of the program is printed with their logo. Frequently the companies have the opportunity to distribute items such as hand-held fans, with promotional advertisements, after being approved through the athletic department.

Runners finish
third in RaleighMen compete at N.C.
State Invitational

STEPHEN SCHRAMM
SENIOR WRITER

The men's cross country team competed in the N.C. State Wolfpack Invitational this weekend. The Pirates finished third behind national powers N.C. State and South Florida.

"To finish third with teams like N.C. State, which is in the top ten, and South Florida, who's in the top twenty-five, is good. They also beat some of the teams that beat them last year, like UNC-Charlotte and UNC-Wilmington. So that's a good beginning," head coach Leonard Klepack said.

The Pirates were led by junior Justin England who followed up last week's first place run by finishing fourth overall with a time of 24:10. Sophomore Stuart Will was not far behind, finishing sixth overall with a time of 24:22.

"Justin England ran one of his best races. He set a school record for that course. Stuart Will also finished in the top ten," Klepack said.

Sophomore Steve Arnold and Junior Brian Beil finished 18th and 21st respectively. On a day of strong team performances, the most promising results were those put in by ECU's three freshmen. Jason Trant placed 24th and was followed by fellow freshmen Craig Littlefield and Justin Poretti, who finished 31st and 32nd.

"We ran a good team race," Klepack said. "Arnold, Beil, Trant and Littlefield finished in the top thirty, so it was a good showing. We were very pleased with the way our youngsters performed."

Regardless of their respectable performance, the new coach continues to see areas where there is room for improvement.

"We're trying to get them to run closer. They need to run as a pack. We need our three, four, five, six, seven and eight runners to run closer together," Klepack said.

Next on the schedule, the Pirates will next host the Overton's Cross-Country Invitational. This tournament will be held this Saturday at Lake Kristi in Greenville.

The new, 52,000 square foot, $10 million strength and conditioning center will be located between Dowdy Ficklen Stadium and Williams arena.

The ECU Pirate Club is in the process of raising $10 million dollars through the "Kickoff to Victory" campaign, designed to build the new sports strength & conditioning center for the student-athletes on campus. This new complex will be arranged between Dowdy-Ficklen stadium and Williams Arena. The new building will be 52,000 square feet with two floors. The first floor will be 22,000 square feet for strength & conditioning. The second floor will have a banquet hall and terrace from which Pirate Club members can watch football games. The banquet hall will double as a study hall during the week for the student-athletes.

"This new complex will be one of the largest in the nation. This should allow us to attract the top student-athletes we can," athletics director Mike Hamrick said. "We are excited with what this will do for the campus and the community."

"All of the student-athletes will be able to achieve their full potential and goals in life," head football coach Steve Logan said. "In 1990, we had about 85 student-athletes using about 6,000 square feet for strength & conditioning. We will now have over 400 student-athletes using 22,000 square feet."

Open weekend to benefit footballPirates use weekend to prepare for Army

JIM PHELPS
SENIOR WRITER

Pirate football will take a break this weekend, at least from game time. This weekend is open for the team and will provide time to prepare for the Army game, scheduled for October 3.

"We are using this time to prepare for the wishbone," head coach Steve Logan said. "This comes at a good time because it is a real difficult thing to prepare for and it gives us an extra week to get lined up right."

The strategy that has worked for the Pirates so far this season is the option on offense which has reinvigorated their running game.

"We struggled so badly last year running the ball that we've gone back to a two-back set. The option is doing good for us," Logan said.

The Pirates have been at 150 yards a game for all three games, which has continued to be their goal.

On defense, the Pirates have gone back to a basic fundamental defense set with very little pressure.

"We're trying to bend and not break, and we've been doing that," Logan said.

The players that have stood out the most so far this season are those making up the defensive front.

There has been a big improvement in the performance by this group.

"They are playing like they should have been playing all of last year," Logan said. "They played good as sophomores and then tailed off as juniors, and we've got a recommitment and they are playing really well up front."

This time is not being used to make changes to the line-up. Against Virginia Tech, 62 team members were played, 64 against Chattanooga, and 54 against Ohio.

"We're playing almost two-deep everywhere, some places three-deep, so the line-up thing is not an issue. We're playing a lot of people," Logan said.

The quarterback situation will remain the same all season. Whoever looks the best will go to the upcoming games, as Logan is not looking for a starting quarterback.

"We've got three kids that have played so far this season, and before the season is over all three will play...it's whoever's hot goes," Logan said.

The coaching staff is moving players around as is the case of Bobby Weaver, who played a little at the halfback position against Ohio. Weaver is one of the fastest players on the team.

"We're just getting our best athletes on the field," Logan said.

The Pirates have suffered no injuries so far this season. Because they have been blessed with this good fortune, they can focus on their mission: using this free week to prepare for the wishbone offense and conference opponent Army.

Women's soccer defeats VCU, 5-1Team picks up first conference win of year

MARIO SCHERHAUFER
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

The ECU women's soccer team swept over Virginia Commonwealth in its second conference game of the season, winning 5-1 on Tuesday afternoon.

Although they were only up 2-1 at halftime, the Lady Pirates out-shot the Rams 25-2. The win leaves the Pirates 5-2 overall this season, and 1-1 in the Colonial Athletic Association, while the Rams fall to 2-4 on the season and 0-2 in the CAA.

"After a difficult and disappointing loss to George Mason last week, I was concerned about our mentality and our ability to rebound," head coach Neil Roberts said.

"They (George Mason) brought us back to earth but it was good that it happened so early in the season," goalkeeper Amy Horton said.

Stephanie Wrass was the first to trick VCU's off-side trap when she picked up a long pass from Erin Cann and scored in the 24th minute.

Nevertheless, VCU stuck to its off-side trap tactic throughout the entire game. Receiving long passes over the heads of VCU's defense, the Pirates' strikers were allowed many chances for more goals.

"We knew about VCU's off-side trap but we felt comfortable about it and adjusted to it very well, especially in the second half when we got more out of our chances to score," Roberts said.

Without facing any serious challenge before, ECU keeper Horton had to reach behind her to get the ball out of the net, when Rebecca Ruth rocketed the ball over Horton's hands into the goal for the tie at 32:10.

The tie was broken one minute later when Shana Woodward scored off a penalty kick to give ECU the 2-1 halftime lead. Amanda Duffy was fouled inside the box and the referee did not hesitate to call the foul.

"From my point of view, I couldn't tell if she (VCU's keeper) hit her (Duffy), but I take the PK," Roberts said.

Early in the second half, Kim Sandhoff, ECU's most productive scorer at this point in the season, added both a goal and an assist to the game. Freshman Tara Carpenter scored the goal-of-the-day when she saw the keeper out of the goal and shot the ball above her extended arms into the net. Abi Temple added a goal after receiving a long pass from ECU's defense, for a Pirate victory, 5-1.

Besides ECU's offensive playing style, Wrass was outstanding in the Pirates midfield and junior Jill Davis' defensive job was considered "the anchor for a good game" by keeper Horton.

"Considering we have never beaten them (VCU) before, I'm very pleased with the way we played today," Davis said. "I knew we could beat them but I didn't expect such a result."

"The whole team did an excellent job of keeping the ball in the offense. I rarely had any chance to prove myself today," Horton said.

The Lady Pirates will take a break before traveling to the University of Richmond to continue CAA play on Sept. 30, at 7 p.m. "It's going to be a very difficult game. The team is my personal rival," Davis said. "But this year I think we are going to beat them."

Golfers bring home second place

Team competes at Hoya tournament

STEPHEN SCHRAMM
SENIOR WRITER

The ECU golf team headed to Leesville, Va. this weekend to compete in the Georgetown Hoya Invitational. The Pirates went to the tournament as one of the tournament favorites, thus they expected a strong showing. They finished second to host school Georgetown.

"I was disappointed that we didn't win it. I thought we were the best team there," head coach Kevin Williams said.

Though they didn't leave as champions, the Pirates still performed well individually and as a team. ECU was paced by junior Marc Miller and freshman Frank Adams. Both Miller and Adams shot 73 on Saturday and 70 on Sunday to finish with a 1-under-par 143 and a tie for seventh place.

"I played pretty well. I had to battle the first day. I made some putts that made the difference," Adams said.

Fellow freshman M. Chad Webb shot a 71 on Saturday and a 73 on Sunday to finish with an even-par 144 and in thirteenth place. Webb's accomplishment is made several chain restaurants and companies willing to support ECU athletics," said Angie Wellman, sports marketing director. "Sometimes we go out and solicit their support and use the resources we have through having contact with these companies, and other times enthusiastic Pirate fans come to us wishing to donate."

Though the sponsors are acknowledged during the football games, it is not directly to this team or program that the money is admitted. Instead, all donations enter a general fund and are apportioned throughout the entire athletic department.

Because the continuously growing athletic program and its funding needs are so dispersed, numerous and new sponsors are always appreciated.

"We're constantly looking for increased sponsorships," VanSant said. "We may never reach any maximum number, but we are still grateful to the sponsors who already support us."

Support is certainly the key idea when considering sponsorships, so all of ECU should value this foundation on which our athletic events, that we find so entertaining and so full of energy, are built upon.

The banquet hall, will be about 8,000 square feet, will have capacity of approximately 500 people. The banquet hall will be used by a variety of organizations.

The Pirate Club is one of many campus organizations anxiously awaiting the construction and opening of the new facility.

"This gives the student-athlete and the Pirate Club great expectations down the road," said executive Pirate Club director Dennis Young. "We currently have over $4 million donated for the new complex. We plan to start building next fall and construction should take about a year and a half."

played. This was the first time in as far as I can remember that five guys shot 75 or better. That is the type of consistency that we need to get this program to the next level," Williams said.

Putting was one of the coach's main concerns at the tournament, however.

"We didn't putt very well. We had a 291 on the first day and I thought that was high. We struck the ball well, we just didn't take advantage," Williams said.

The Georgetown Hoya Invitational is unique, in that a team must bring six players instead of the usual five. The sixth men play each other in the Gerry Kenny Sixth Man Classic. ECU's representative, Scott Campbell, finished second with a six-over-par 150.

"If you count our sixth man, we blew out Georgetown," Williams said.

The Pirates return to the links on October 12th for the Mocs Fall Invitational in Chattanooga, Tenn.
