Protest draws community attention to police brutality

Students and non-students alike gathered together in front of the Greenville Police Station Thursday to protest police brutality.

The Federation of Partisans Against Police Brutality (FPAPB) and the Coalition Against Racism (CAR) helped orchestrate the Oct. 22 protest. There were around 30 people peacefully protesting on the corner of 5th Street and Greene Street.

"We came here today to speak out against cases of police harassment and police brutality," said Carlton Smith, a supervisor at the Mendenhall Student Center. "[We want] to confront the occupying army and to expose the fact that people don't have control of their own communities because people have no voice about what goes on in the police department."

The FPAPB presented demands to start community forums to inform people about their rights against the police, an end to the violation of human rights by the Greenville Police Department (GPD), and the police relinquishing information regarding the racial makeup of its forces as well as the department's hiring practices. The group's largest demand is for a community review board of the GPD. The CAR would particularly like this board to consist of trusted members of the community, including non-white and poor communities.

"The reason I am out here is because one incident of police brutality is one incident too many," said Chris Reynolds, a sophomore at Pitt Community College. "The police are here to protect and serve the people, not to brutalize them."

The protest also brought people together who were not members of CAR, yet still interested in the fight against police brutality.

"This is the first time I have attended any meeting with this group," junior Jeremy Reed said. "I am interested in more information from this group and about this subject."

Oct. 22 was the third annual day of protest against police brutality.

The GPD had no comment to CAR and did not bother the protesters because they had obtained proper permits to hold the protest.

Protesters at Thursday's rally hold signs to raise awareness of police brutality in the community.

Senior social work major Tytishia Frazier has been selected by the Organization of Black Faculty and Staff (OBFS) as the 1998 recipient of the Ledonia S. Wright Memorial Scholarship.

"She has chosen her discipline of social work because she is committed to serving others," said Taffye Benson-Clayton, director of the Ledonia Wright African American Cultural Center. "Ty is a model student and a model employee."

The $500 scholarship is awarded annually to the student who best represents Wright. The scholarship honors academic prowess, leadership and commitment to service. It is given on merit, financial need, campus and community involvement and leadership.

Wright was the founder of the first black student organization, Society of United Liberal Students (SOULS). SOULS has transformed into Allied Blacks for Leadership and Equality (ABLE).

"Leadership in and around the ECU community takes a lot of integrity and initiative," Frazier said. "As a minority, the scholarship is important just to carry on its legacy. I am honored to receive the award. She (Wright) represented someone who had a lot of leadership and integrity."

Frazier is a member of the Omicron Delta Kappa National Honor Society, has served on the ECU Media Board, and has been the president of ABLE and vice

Contract means more online courses

Five courses expected by spring 1999

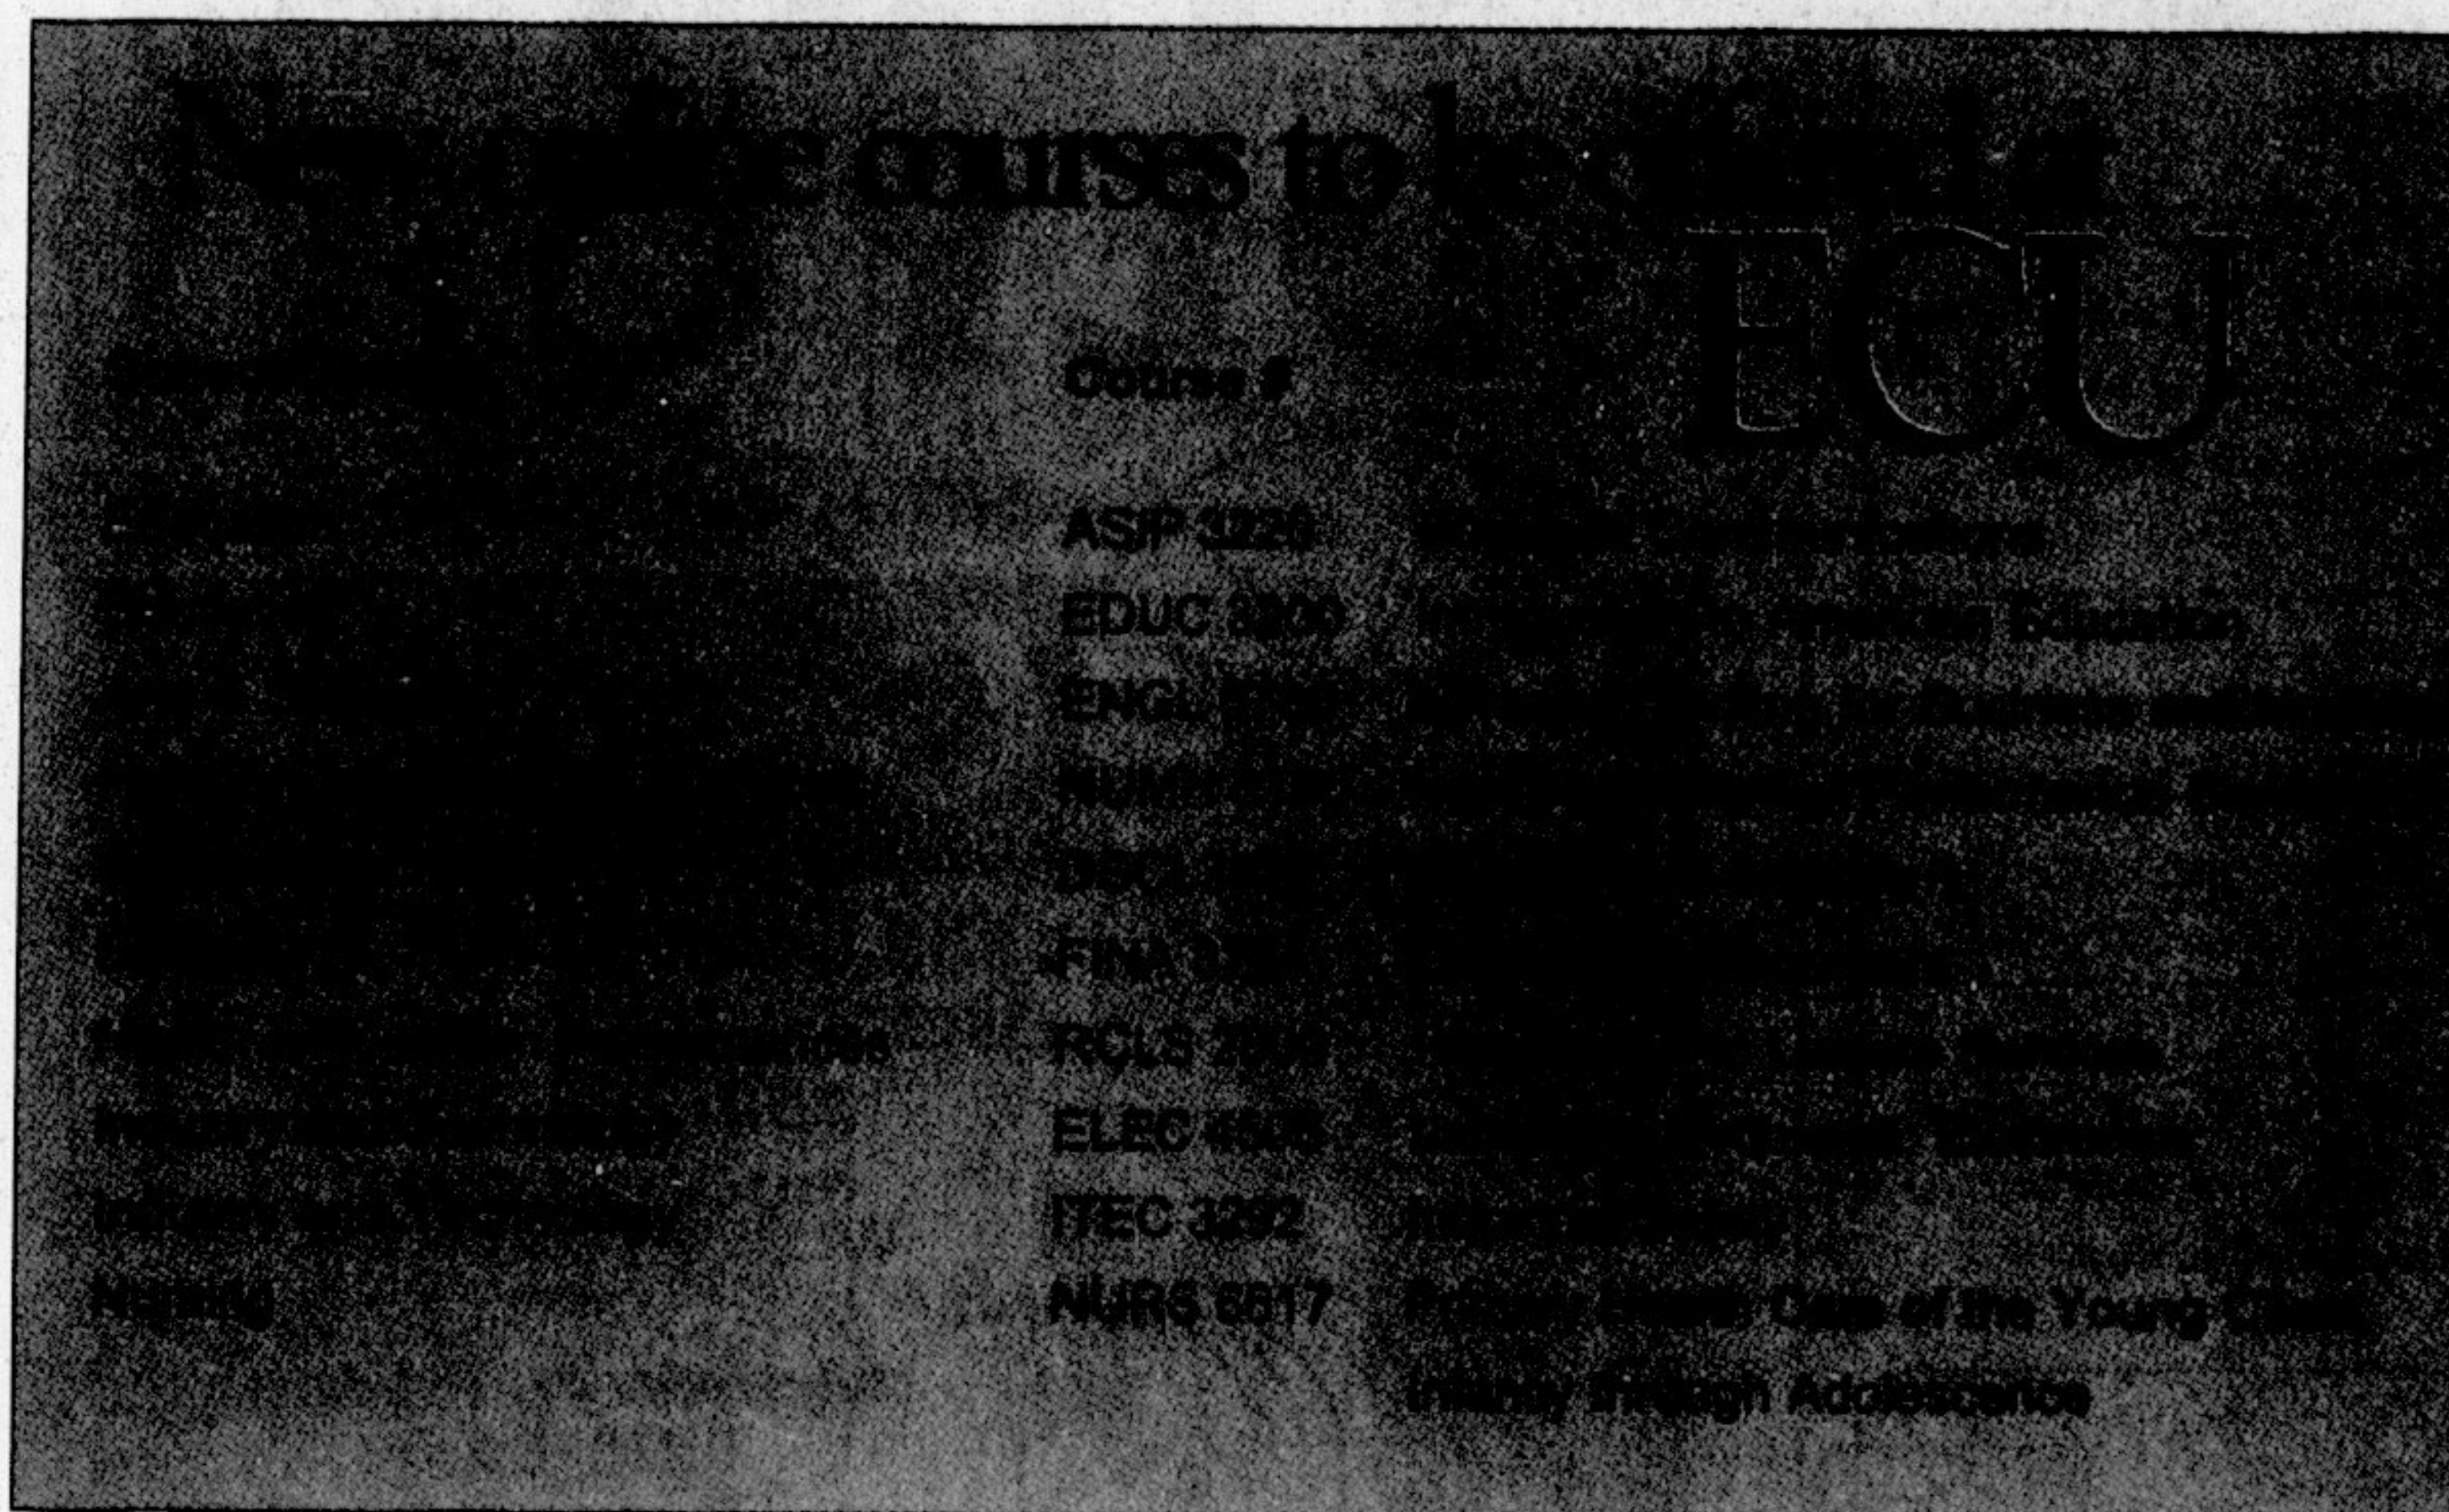

SUSANNE MILENKEVICH
STAFF WRITER

ECU has signed a three year contract with Real Education, Inc. for $30,000 to expand the online courses offered.

The Denver based company will help ECU make 20 more courses available online by the fall 1999 semester.

"Our goal is to have at least five courses available for the 1999 spring semester," Dr. David Watkins, special assistant to the vice chancellor of Academic Affairs said. "The other 15 would be available by the 1999 fall semester."

The distant learning program allows people worldwide to take ECU courses and receive credit for completed courses through the Internet. ECU already offers several dozen courses but wants to expand the program.

The contract for 20 more courses was negotiated by the Distant Education Extension Advisory Board and reviewed by the University Legal Council.

"The Legal Council checked the contract to make sure ECU was not entering a contract that will present legal problems," Dr. Richard Ringeisen, vice chancellor of Academic Affairs said.

Funding for this program will come from a bill that the State Legislature is currently working on that will provide money to public schools for distant education.

"If the bill is delayed, ECU will assume responsibility for the payments and will be reimbursed when the State passes the program," Watkins said.

It is more economical for ECU to expand its online program through Real Education rather than develop the programs itself Ringeisen said.

ECU faculty members will provide the content for the courses and will supervise the academic and curriculum matters.

Alcohol Awareness Week educates students

Events culminate Halloween night

RACHAEL HIGDON

Alcohol Awareness Week began Monday to educate people about the dangers of alcohol abuse and will continue through Halloween night.

"We are trying to help people become more aware of the use of alcohol and we have planned various activities to increase awareness of this drug," said Donna Walsh, director of Health Promotion and Well-Being.

Monday through Thursday students are invited by SADD to the Wright Place from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. to write about their experiences with alcohol on The Wall. Students are encouraged to express whatever their feelings may be, positive or negative, about the drug.

A new way to spread alcohol awareness has been added with the Wall of Remembrances, which will be located at the fountain near Wright Plaza.

"The Wall of Remembrances is for us to take time and remember those whose lives have been lost through an alcohol-related incident," Walsh said. "We are looking for pictures, notes, or poems."

Another new program is called "Where's Norm?" Students can win prizes from retrieving lava lamps hidden around campus and returning them to 210 Whichard. The lamps, all named Norm, are blue and black and wear sunglasses.

Historian dies at 72

Bratton writer of first official history

DEVON WHITE
STAFF WRITER

Mary Jo Bratton, retired professor, official ECU historian, and author of East Carolina University: The Formative Years, 1907-1982, died Wednesday in her Greenville home at the age of 72.

"Mary Jo Bratton was a very fair minded, wonderful woman," said Bodo Nischan, chair of the History Department. "[She was an] excellent scholar."

Since 1967, Bratton had been a faculty member of the Department of History. In addition to the time she spent teaching, she was the director of graduate studies in the History Department from 1986 to 1989. Bratton also served as the acting chair of the department from 1992 to 1994. She retired in 1995.

"[Bratton was] always friendly, fair, and on the ball," history professor Mike Palmer said.

In 1980 Bratton was delegated by ECU to write the school's first official history. East Carolina University: The Formative Years, 1907-1982, was published in 1986. In 1997, Bratton helped to write a summarized history of the university for a booklet celebrating ECU's 90th anniversary.

Bratton had received awards and fellowships for her articles and papers examining the history, culture, and society of the South.

"[Bratton] contributed a great amount to ECU over the years," Nischan said.

Bratton was born in Bluefield, West Virginia in 1926. Her parents were Thomas Josiah and Irene McKinstry Jackson. She completed her undergraduate degrees at Montreat College and Virginia Polytechnic Institute. She received a master's degree and a doctorate at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Bratton is survived by her children Jack, Jess, and Katherine.

publicized this week in campus computer labs. ECU was one of 50 schools as a trial site last year and students here helped develop the program which Walsh describes as "interactive and fun."

Forms will be available in Mendenhall and the Student Recreation Center for students to pledge not to drink on Halloween night. Also available will be the Safe Halloween Pledge during Midnight Madness at Mendenhall on Saturday night from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Midnight Madness is an alcohol-free alternative offered which will include food, beverages, and games.

Coinciding with Alcohol Awareness Week is the delivery of drug and alcohol awareness booklets to the residence halls.

Core surveys have shown that 74 percent of students believe their peers drink three times a week, when in actuality only 17 percent are reported drinking that often.

"We are trying to tell the students what is really happening at ECU," Walsh said. "There is a big difference in what is going on and what students believe."

president of ECU Thespians of Diversity. She has also been active in the community, volunteering at the New Directions Shelter, My Sister's Closet and the Little Willie Center.

She plans to attend graduate school to study family therapy.

"Tytishia has shown her skills in the leadership since her arrival at the university," Benson-Clayton said. "She was a transfer student and had to transition during her first semester here. But after the semester she flourished as an academic and a leader. The first semester she concentrated on grades and made academics a priority. The second semester she was able to build a solid GPA that she used to branch out to other organizations. Ty is not only active on campus but also in various committees and institutions."

According to Benson-Clayton, Wright built a comprehensive program on campus to serve and support the blacks at ECU. Blacks are now the largest minority group at ECU. The Ledonia Wright center holds programs such as tutorials, rap sessions and student academic and leadership achievement ceremonies.

RHA officers elected to represent students

Fund-raisers, activities planned

CAROLINE JORDAN
 STAFF WRITER

The ECU Residence Hall Association (RHA) officers for 1998-99 were elected to serve as leaders for students living in ECU's 14 residence halls.

Junior Sherry Ingram was Elected president of the RHA. Ingram will be the main student representative in all areas of on-campus housing.

"We are looking forward to doing new and different things," Ingram said. "This year we are going to try to start a little brother/sister weekend and also hold a campus wide formal."

Also elected were junior Sara Ehlers as vice president, freshman Marisa Kelly as secretary, freshman Joseph Croom as treasurer, and senior Elaine Lackey as national communication coordinator.

"RHA is a great opportunity for any student to develop leadership skills," Croom said. "It's not a very stressful job, but it's a very important one."

Croom is in charge of handling the RHA's $18,000 budget as well as coordinating fund-raisers.

"The budget is handed out by the school," Croom said. "We are allotted two dollars per student. We also get revenue from different sources, such as bed linens and the microfridge."

The RHA will be selling "exam buckets" as a fund-raiser. The buckets will include candy and stress relief balls and can be purchased by parents for students.

Another RHA sponsored activity is "Midnight Madness," which will be held at Mendenhall on Halloween.

"It's an alcohol-free event with movies and games," Ingram said. "RHA will be helping out Student Leadership."

According to Ingram, the RHA is also involved in various volunteer programs, including Habitat for Humanity and the Ronald McDonald House.

Members of the RHA are attending conferences across the United States in order to obtain new ideas for enhancing campus life.

"We are getting ready to go to the South Atlantic Residence Hall Conference," Croom said. "In the spring we'll go to Wisconsin."

Part of the budget is allocated for sending officers to conferences.

"Any student is welcome to come to RHA and voice their opinions," Croom said.

The RHA meets Mondays at 4:30 p.m. at Mendenhall Student Center.

Our View

We've all had that one teacher who truly inspires, the one who pushes you to expand your limits and find a passion for learning. We've also all had professors that flat-out don't do their job. Whether they fail everyone who walks through the door or ignore the needs of their students, they don't deserve to be at the head of a classroom.

As students, we have the means to affect the world around us. At the end of each semester, we are given forms to evaluate our teachers. Unfortunately, many students look at these forms as little more than another chore to do. Often, we rush right through evaluations without giving them the attention they need and justify it by saying, "It doesn't really matter what I say."

Some feel that evaluation forms are another rubber stamp ECU hands out. Actually, the opinions students express weigh heavily when a professor comes up for tenure. If you think you have the professor from hell, speak up! If he or she is really that bad, others will feel the same way and the powers that be will wake up and take another look.

Now that midterms are over, we should begin to give a little advance thought to these matters. Are you happy with the way your classes are being taught? If not, is it honestly because of faults of the teacher? If that's what it is, by all means, say so. However, back up what you say with reasons besides, "Man, this guy sucks." There is a space on the form for written comments and while it is not required it is important. If you put plenty of reasons behind your scores of "1", people will begin to take notice. If you don't give them any reasons, do you expect the people who look at the forms to pay attention? They won't take you seriously if you don't take them seriously.

Members of the younger classes won't remember this, but the evaluation forms used to be a lot less specific. The written portions were only added after people complained that they weren't detailed enough. If the written parts are just left blank, what good was adding them? TEC would like to encourage the administration to make the written portion mandatory too.

SGAs at some schools publish results of teacher evaluations for the students. An index of each professor would be valuable for us. Rather than relying on hearsay when it comes time to choose next semester's teachers, we could see what past classes have had to say. Many of us are putting ourselves into years of debt for this school. It's only reasonable to want to make the most informed choice possible.

Parental notification is a measure taken by the law in regard to juvenile offenses.

Therefore, also allowing universities to implement this measure is suggesting that a college student is not an adult and should be treated accordingly.

A law, proposed by John Warner of Virginia, if passed will give universities (among other institutions) the right to notify parents of students who commit alcohol and drug violations. The proposal's aim is to deter underage drinking and drug offenses that supposedly run rampant on campuses around the country. Lawmakers feel that the threat of parental notification will compel students to "reconsider" before taking any actions deemed criminal by the university codes of conduct.

Notification laws not needed

While the proposal may be a well-intended attempt to curb student alcohol and drug use, it is certainly not a very well thought-out deterrent. A college student is an adult. Whether or not he or she is a mature adult is not the issue. Part of college life (and any post-high-school graduation path) is the slow but sure attainment of responsibility and accountability. To notify parents at every offense most assuredly impedes the student's capability to deal with the consequences of his or her actions, i.e. breaking the law.

Parental notification is a measure taken by the law in regard to juvenile offenses. Therefore, also allowing universities to implement this measure is suggesting that a college student is not an adult and should be treated accordingly. This is a very dangerous concept that could be used in other areas that would prove to be very detrimental to students everywhere.

Another very important issue is privacy. Since a student is legally an adult, not to mention a citizen of the United States, there are certain rights which are "inalienable." Students have a right to privacy in the personal, medical AND legal matters that pertain to them. To inform anyone (even if it is a parent) of such matters is a direct violation of that privacy.

It is understandable that universities and lawmakers become very frustrated with student alcohol and drug violations, and hence, search for any way to curb these offenses. However it is not understandable that any entity would forgo common sense to accomplish this. When an individual can serve in a war and vote for a president, then surely this same individual can choose what personal information to tell his or her parents. Whether university administrators, lawmakers, or police agree or feel that it is in the individual's best interest is a non-issue. Essentially, the university's parenting of students and violating their privacy (and thus violating a basic principle of our country) will eventually do more harm than good. So, the adoption of this policy, if it is indeed passed, would be an unconscionable short and long-term mistake.

First of all, they want more money. That is fine. But the players want to have partial ownership of the teams. Well guess what. Owners are the bosses, and players are the employees.

The NBA strike has to be the stupidest thing I have seen in a long time. In a country where we view our sports stars as "heroes", our children's so called role models have decided to sell themselves, and their fans out, so they can make even more money. Here are some of the things that annoy me about the player's demands.

NBA strike reveals poor sports

First of all, they want more money. That is fine. But the players want to have partial ownership of the teams. Well guess what. Owners are the bosses, and players are the employees. They have agreed to work for their boss, and they get paid well. The player's demands have gone above plain fairness, and that's why the owners won't accept their demands.

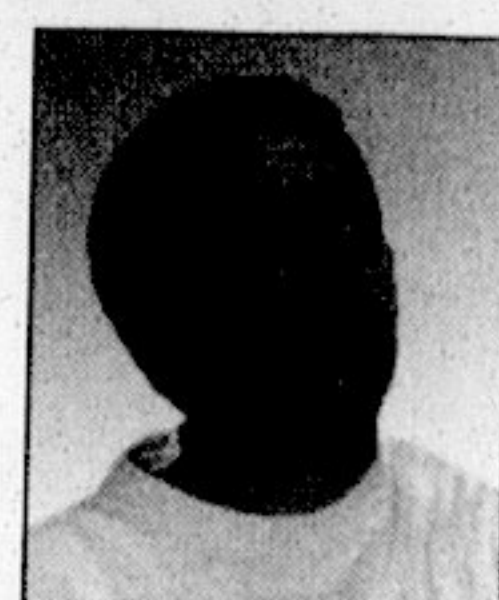

Second, they want to be paid during the strike. I'm glad the judge told them hell no. These little pretty boys want to have their cake and eat it too, and it's not fair to the fans and the owners. Heck, they even have the super rich Michael Jordan negotiating for them...when he's not on TV lying about how much he likes MCI or Rayovac batteries. Doesn't it annoy you that someone who makes almost "ninety million a year in salary and endorsements is telling their fans that they're not being paid enough?

Finally, the players have even speculated about forming their own league. Well I am sure that a league led by money grubbing, inconsiderate, Latrelle Sprewell and Dennis Rodman wannabes would be a whole lot better than the way it is now (sarcasm). I'm sure that if this would happen, basketball would become a spectacle, instead of a sport...pretty much like professional wrestling with a ball. I think I'll probably stick to the NCAA games from now on. They seem to like to play, regardless of money.

And yes, there was that Astronaut Ice Cream stuff. It was a good marketing idea, to be honest. Charge three bucks a pop for a brick of Neapolitan chalk and watch the kids go ape poop.

This time, I'm gonna talk about the nation's space program, and what's going on with it.

For starters, I don't like the space program. I like the idea of it; I just don't really see any advances coming from it. The only really useful thing that NASA ever brought typical Americans was Velcro.

You're probably thinking,

Space program mostly hype

"But Ryan-Dogg! What about Tang?" Well, here's the skinny on Tang. It is a dehydrated orange beverage that became famous because it was part of the diet of those guys who landed on the moon. When it came out in the early '70s, people flocked to their local markets and bought it by the metric ton, never giving a thought to the fact that it didn't taste particularly good, and it caused something that rhymes with "miahthea."

And yes, there was that Astronaut Ice Cream stuff. It was a good marketing idea, to be honest. Charge three bucks a pop for a brick of Neapolitan chalk and watch the kids go ape poop.

But aside of the useless products we have, and that's including the Hubble Telescope, they still can't seem to capture our attention like they did with the moon landing. They even have that channel on television-you know the one. It consists of slow-moving shots of the earth, back and forth. It's like the Kennedy assassination tape, only it lasts a few light-years longer. Boring photos plus no sound multiplied by the American attention span equals "nobody cares." The least they can do is interrupt the silence with a random alien popping up and threatening to destroy the universe.

But no! Instead, to boost their popularity, they are instilling the presence of Senator John Glenn. As you may know, he was the first man in orbit. Now, at age 77, he's back and about to go into the great unknown once again. The blast-off is scheduled for Thursday, and the reporters have been going nuts over it.

Glenn's presence is based around the project of Geriatrics in Space, which is a lot better than their usual projects, which include "Pigs in Space," "Ants in Space," and the ever-popular "Opinion Columnist Stephen Kleinschmit in Space."

For now, I'm not sure whether I believe that Glenn is involved solely for the advancement of knowledge. It seems like a pretty good idea to get more media attention, and thus more money to waste. At any rate, I'll be praying for Senator Glenn, seeing as he is now in his upper seventies. Let's just hope they pack a lot of Ensure.

GETTING OVER THE MIDTERM MASSACRE

Academic Support Center offers tutoring, counseling, strategy courses

PHILLIP GILFUS
STAFF WRITER

As midterms come to a close, many ECU students find that their grades are not looking so good. But, do not fear, there are many places on campus to help the struggling student.

The Academic Support Center recommends workshops as the first step to building a better academic career. They offer workshops dealing with such areas as academic motivation, career exploration, note-taking strategies, reading for comprehension, stress management, test anxiety, test-taking strategies, and time management. The Center for Counseling and Student Development offers workshops on "Becoming a Successful Student" and "Academic Motivation." Both help students explore how to better their academic performance.

"The academic motivation workshop is especially important," said Dr. Nancy Badger of the Center for Counseling and Student Development. "A lot of students can get tired and give up on school."

The times and places of Academic Support Center workshops can be picked up at B103 Brewster Building. Workshops provided by Student Development take place on Mondays and Tuesdays starting in November.

"We usually like to schedule the workshops around the middle of the semester, during registration," Badger said.

Students who feel completely at a loss on what to do may attend counseling sessions. These include individual and group sessions. Call the Center for Counseling and Student Development at 328-6661 for more information.

Another option available to students is tutoring.

"We have tutors mostly for freshmen and sophomore classes," said Marsha Lassiter, tutor. "There are some for upperclassmen classes, but someone should speak to professors in their department if they really need help."

For more information on tutoring, call 328-6931 or stop

Students who slack off for the first half of the year often find themselves in a jam when the D's and F's begin to have an impact, but many options are available for academic help.

by B103 Brewster.

A way to help improve studying for a class is to simply talk with the professor.

"Just ask the professor about his or her tests and how you should study for them," said Don Joyner, assistant dean of Undergraduate Studies. "Teachers can be creatures of habit, just by looking at your past tests, you should be able to figure out what your final will look like."

In the end though, it is up to the students themselves to study. There are many tips on how to study that everyone can do. When reading or studying for a class, try to take a break every fifty minutes. This helps retain information.

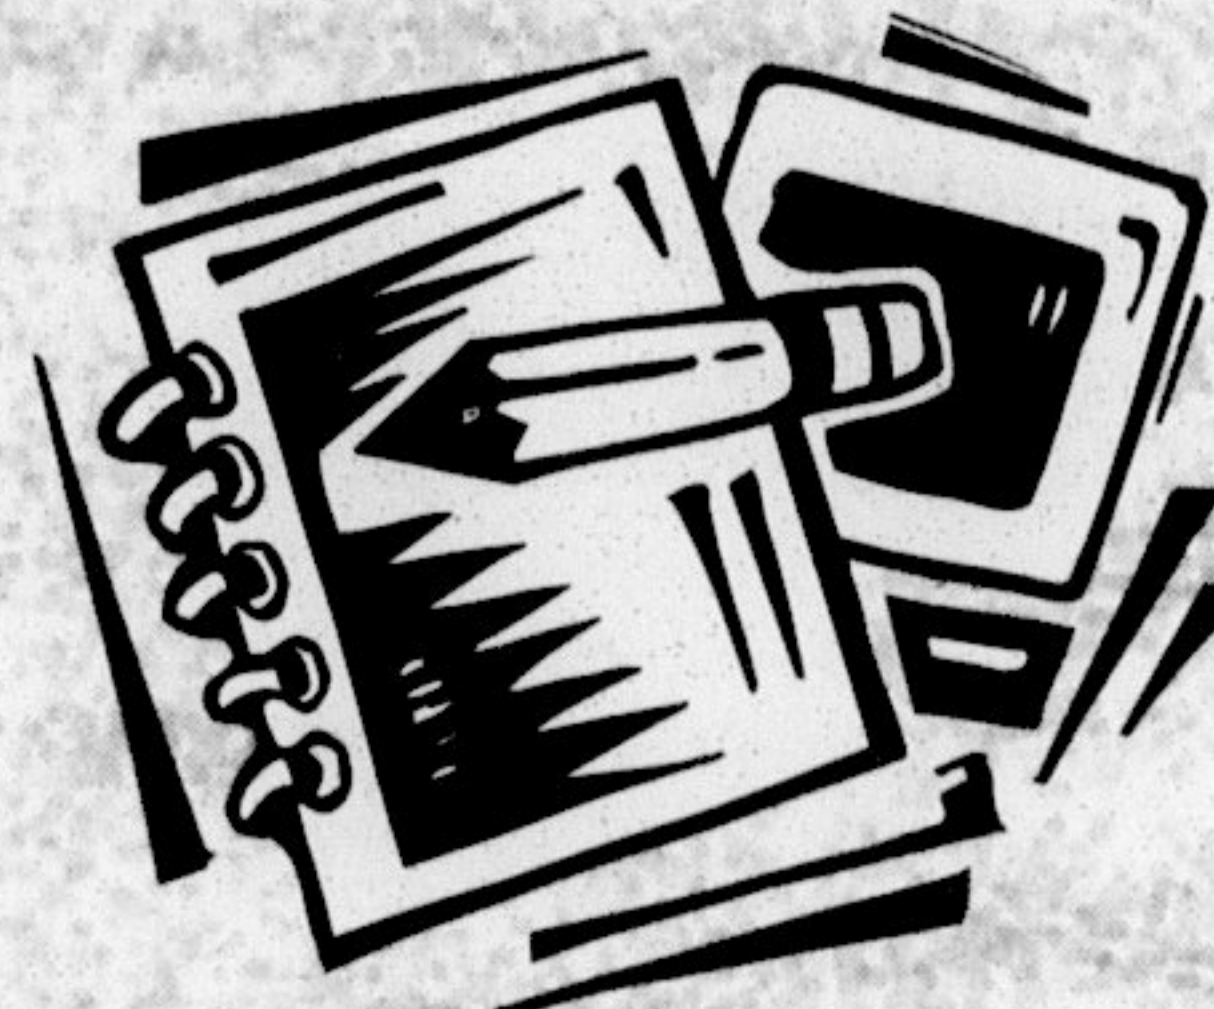

It is also important to set priorities about one's life. This can help students maintain a balance between work, study and fun.

A handout from the Office of Undergraduate Studies states, "Make social interactions a part of your life, not you life."

Before it becomes too late, one should always keep a eye on their grade point average before it falls too low. At the end of the semester, there might be a stamp signifying an academic warning, or worse, academic probation on your report card. For those students (including transfer students) who have attempted 8-31 semester hours, a 1.35 GPA is needed. If completing 32-63 hours, a GPA equal of higher to 1.6 is needed to avoid academic probation. An 1.8 GPA is need for 64-95 hours and an 1.9 GPA for 96 or

Easy Study Tips:

- Try to study at the same time and place everyday so it becomes habit.
- Don't study in a too relaxed environment, you may be tempted to go to sleep.
- Think ahead about schoolwork, try to plan out the semester.
- Go to class, it reinforces the subject information and allows you to ask the professor questions.
- Sit near the front of the class (It helps you pay attention).
- Study way before the test, not the night before (That should just be a time of review).
- When you miss a class, always get notes from others.

Recreational safety precautions important both on, off campus

Even though the winter season is quickly approaching, many ECU students are striving to maintain healthy and fit. They do so by using exercise, such as running or walking on and around campus.

While keeping in shape, students must also strive to keep safe.

According to Tom Younce, assistant director of the ECU police department, the campus area is a relatively good one, but students still need to be aware of what is going on around them.

Younce also said that the best place to exercise is at the Student Recreation Center.

"I encourage students to exercise at the rec center," Younce said. "They have an incredible facility residence halls, there are measures you can take to keep safe in different circumstances.

"If you plan on running in the evenings, wear reflective clothing," Younce said.

This allows other pedestrians and drivers to see you coming.

It is also best to run against the flow of traffic so you can see it coming toward you. Younce said it's best not to jog or that students can take advantage of." If you cannot make it to the rec center and you have to exercise around your apartment complex or

Arkansas Repertory Theatre performs Idols of the King

Showtime 8 p.m. in
Wright Auditorium

NINA M. DRY
SENIOR WRITER

Hey, all you Elvis Presley fans! Hold on to your blue suede shoes because tonight the Arkansas Repertory Theatre presents Idols of the King at 8 p.m. in the Wright Auditorium.

Written by Ronnie Claire Edwards and Allen Crowe, this performance began touring in early September. The show started in Arkansas, where it ran very successfully, and continued doing well on its 28 state tour. Their last stop will be in Ponoma, NJ on November 13.

The musical is more about the fans than it is about the King himself.

"It's about Elvis' devoted fans who worshiped him," said Carol Woodruff, marketing director of the department of University Unions.

"Some might call them loony, but it's a comical view of the fans' devotion."

The cast consists of three people: Kevin Bartlet, Dale Dickey and Lance Zitron. Bartlet and Dickey portray the many fans of Elvis—some funny, others touching, all obsessed.

"To name a couple, there is a motorcyclist and his ditzzy girlfriend who are hitchhiking," Woodruff said. "The girlfriend would like to write songs for Elvis. There's also an older couple who have placed their toilet on display because Elvis used it once."

Between the scenes, Lance Zitron, the Elvis impersonator and accomplished actor, recreates many of the King's popular songs such as Love Me Tender, Blue Suede Shoes, Jailhouse Rock, and Return to Sender. He will be accompanied by a live four-piece band.

Zitron will then place the icing on the cake for all Presley fans during the grand finale.

"Zitron will end the show wearing the legendary white sequined jumpsuit and cape, singing some of the King's greatest hits," Woodruff said.

According to Woodruff, even those who aren't die-hard Elvis fans will find this performance to be quite an experience.

"This production should sell out wherever it goes," Woodruff said. "I walk on extremely populated streets. The more congested they are, the higher the chances are of having an accident.

"I discourage people to run on such streets as 10th and 5th because of all the traffic," Younce said.

Also, there is always safety in numbers. If possible, a workout partner is a good idea because you can watch out for one another. If you do not have people to work out with, be sure to let someone know your whereabouts.

"Inform someone of your exercising plans as far as where you're going to be, how long you're going to be there, and when you plan on returning," Younce said.

If you plan on jogging around campus and you feel unsafe, the blue lights that are strategically placed throughout campus are there for your use.

"The blue lights are an excellent tool to use if one feels that they are being followed," Younce said.

Even if you can not speak into the call box, the ECU police will know exactly where you are by the blue light you have pressed.

Younce said if you are jogging/walking off campus and you feel unsafe, go to a well-lit, well-populated area.

Another thing to look out for is loose animals. It's quite intimidating when you're jogging down the street and a dog comes out of nowhere. You can never be too sure if the dog is friendly or if it wants to take a bite out of your leg. In situations like these, it's best not to panic.

"If you were jogging and you approach an animal, stop," said

Brenda Tripp, an animal control officer. "Running away will only increase the animal's prey drive."

Tripp said telling the animal "NO!" in a firm voice as they come toward you will also help prevent the dog from coming after you.

Also, if you see an animal loose in the same area on more than one occasion, there are things you can do.

"If you have a routine exercise route and you see a dog in that area frequently, call the Animal Control Center and we'll come and check the situation out," Tripp said.

Though it may seem that a world of reports, projects, and endless homework can seem too much at times, do not worry. ECU provides many services that have the purpose of making sure students stay in school for four or five years and becoming successful students.

Truly Awful Paintings Exhibited

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — A traveling exhibit of "bad art" started with a painting found in a trash can. Scott Wilson picked up what is now called "Lucy in the Field with Flowers" five years ago and gave it to his friend.

Jerry Reilly was taken by the painting's extreme clash of subject, proportion and color and, fatefully, asked for more. Now, he is executive director of The Museum of Bad Art in Boston, which owns more than 200 irresistibly awful pieces of art, 90 of which can be seen until Oct. 17 at The Ellipse Arts Center.

"It just grabs you by the throat," said Reilly, a computer programmer, of that first painting. "The more you look at it, the more you realize bizarre things have gone wrong."

Football program drops third loss of season

Post-season play chances put on line

TRAVIS BARKLEY
SENIOR WRITER

ECU's hopes of playing in a post season bowl game may have been dashed on Saturday after Southern Mississippi routed the Pirates 41-7.

The loss dropped ECU's record to 4-3 overall, and 1-1 in Conference USA. ECU must win its last four conference games to have a shot at a bowl game. C-USA has tie-ins with two bowls, sending its champion to the Liberty Bowl and a second team to the Humanitarian Bowl. As it stands now, Tulane and Southern Mississippi are in line to take those spots.

Since Tulane and ECU do not play this year, there was talk from Liberty Bowl organizers that the two schools would meet in Memphis if both went undefeated in conference play. Southern Mississippi made sure that didn't happen, now the Pirates need to win out and hope someone in C-USA upsets one of the top two teams.

ECU got off to a fast start against the Golden Eagles, with a nine-play 76-yard opening drive. Freshman running back Leonard Henry ended the drive with a 17-yard touchdown run, the first of his career.

"Scoring my first college touchdown against an opposing team like Southern Mississippi, it was a real big thing," Henry said. "I was hoping I would get back in there again, but didn't. It was a real big moment for me. I will never in my life forget it."

Unfortunately for the Pirates, their fast start didn't last. Southern Mississippi scored 41 unanswered points, beginning with Eddie Shaw's 54-yard punt return for a touchdown. Shaw's return was the latest special teams breakdown for the Pirates.

ECU head coach Steve Logan said up until Shaw's return his team had preformed well on punt coverage.

"That was the number seven punt team in the nation that we

ERIC COUCH

The ECU women's swimming team took charge and defeated the American Eagles 130-105 Saturday in Washington, D.C.

This event marked the first dual meet of the season for the Pirates and they won six events against the Eagles.

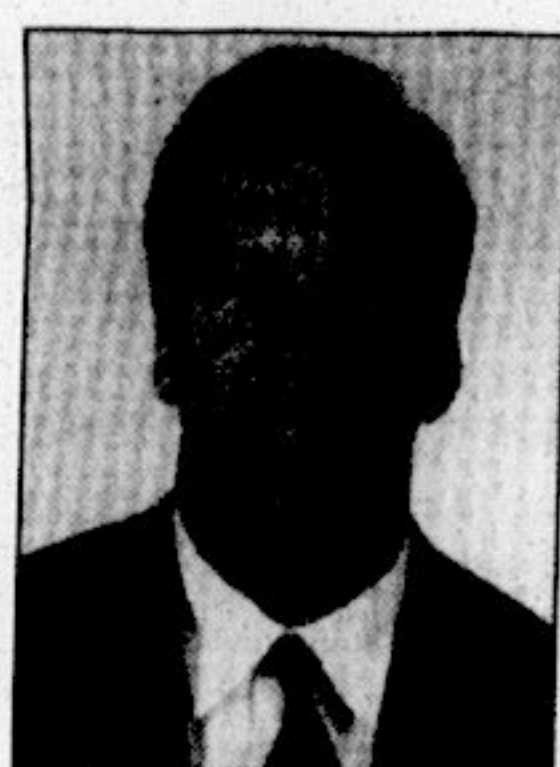

Head coach Rick Kobe was very proud of the Pirate's effort on Saturday.

"The women were able to dominate from the start and get the season off on the right foot," Kobe said.

Dana Fuller won the first individual victory of the season in the 1000-meter freestyle with a time of 10:27.66. Soon after Hollie Butler took the very next victory when she won the 200-meter freestyle in a time of 1:56.35. Butler also took the 500 free in 5:10.12 for her second victory.

A piece of ECU history was also set in stone on Saturday as freshman Courtney Foster won the 50-meter freestyle with a time of 24.81. This time marks the fifth fastest time in the history of the event for women's swimming at ECU. Foster also won the 100-meter freestyle in 53.87 which falls seventh on the ECU all-time list.

117.

"The guys lost a fiercely fought battle but remained close till the end," Kobe said.

Andy Byrnes took the first win for the Pirates in the 50-meter freestyle with a time of 21.79. Adam Gaffey, a last year college national champion set a time of 9:39.36 in the 1000-meter freestyle which ranks fourth on ECU's all-time charts.

On Sunday both teams saw repeat performances at James Madison. The Lady Pirates won their second meet in a row while the men lost their second straight to the Ducks.

For the women, Butler had

"The women were able to dominate from the start and get the season off on the right foot."

Rick Kobe

Head Swimming Coach

two victories with wins in the 200 and 100-meter freestyles. Also Brooke Wise presented a winning time of 2:11.95 in the 200-meter butterfly.

Another mark was made in the books on Sunday with freshman Heather Hagedorn winning the 200-meter backstroke event with a time of 1:06.80 which is the second-fastest in ECU history.

ECU also posted a win in diving with freshman Jessica Hunt scoring 216.98 on the 1-meter board.

ECU's men scored seven victories on the day but it just was not enough as JMU defeated the Pirates in a very close meet.

Adam Gaffey had two victories of his own winning the 1000-meter freestyle and the 200-meter freestyle. Richard Chen, Josh Lepree and Paul Pinther also had individual victories for the ECU men.

The diving team swept the competition as Willy Hayes and Ryan Baldwin both posted wins against the Ducks on Sunday.

Kobe was once again pleased with both teams on Sunday.

"We are pleased with where we are at right now and have to get ready for another tough two meets next week," Kobe said.

ECU grows with stronger competitors

Playing bigger teams makes a bigger name

JIM PHELPS
SENIOR WRITER

ECU's name becomes better known every time the school plays bigger, better teams. Pirate athletics has grown in name over the years through play with nationally known teams.

"When you play nationally known teams you get a great deal more national publicity," Henry VanSant, assistant athletics director, said. "You're on ESPN scoreboard, you're on ABC scoreboard."

Playing against bigger competition not only helps ECU's name grow, but it also helps the university's pocketbook. People are more likely to buy tickets to see nationally known teams.

"Look at the attendance for last Saturday's game against Army, which is certainly a nationally known team, and you see the difference between that and what we do against UT-Chattanooga," VanSant said.

Football is not the only sport that feels these effects. All the sports share in this, especially basketball. The Pirate basketball team also receives a lot of coverage when it plays nationally known teams.

ECU's track team has played many nationally known teams such as Nebraska, and traveled to other meets with national powers. This high-profile competition also helps recruiting.

"Playing these nationally known teams helps in recruiting," VanSant said. "All your top athletes want to play against these nationally known teams."

While ECU has played many nationally known teams in the past, it is currently adding more top teams to the lineup. The baseball schedule for this year reflects this with teams like N.C. State, Wake Forest, North Carolina and Ohio

Volleyball splits weekend games

Pirates defeat Virginia Commonwealth

JASON LATOUR
STAFF WRITER

The ECU Volleyball team earned a split in its two home Colonial Athletic Association games this past weekend, losing a tough match to William and Mary on Friday, and earning an impressive win over Virginia Commonwealth on Saturday.

After falling behind early against the William and Mary Tribe, the team rallied behind the play of Lucinda Mason who helped the Pirates claw back into it before eventually losing the first match 15-9. The inspired play of Tara Tobias and Ellen Gazdowicz, who recorded 12 kills and 12 assists, led the Tribe to a 15-10 victory in the second match. In the third match ECU came out strong, led by the play of Clint Claro who recorded 12 kills in the game, but the Pirates weren't able to overcome the strong defense of the Tribe, eventually losing 15-10.

The Pirates turned it all around on Saturday with an impressive straight game win over the VCU Rams snapping a three-match conference losing streak in the process.

"After Friday's loss to William and Mary, I told the athlete's to just wash it out of their minds, put it behind them," head coach Kim Walker said. "Apparently they did that. We came out aggressively and made better decisions."

Claro continued her strong play, helping lead the Pirates to an early 7-0 lead in the first game before taking the game 15-9. The Pirates continued to pound the ball by rallying to a 15-10 win in the second game. In the third ECU pulled away from a 9-9 tie late in the game with the help of Mason whose service ace broke the tie. From that point on the Pirates never looked back, scoring five of the last six points to take the game 15-10.

"These athletes decided to forget what has happened in the past and looked almost unstoppable," Walker said.

Mason paced the team, finishing with nine kills, three aces, five digs and five blocks. Shannon Kaess also contributed heavily to the team's strong play, adding eight kills and nine digs.

The split leaves ECU with a 9-13 record overall and a 3-5 CAA record. The squad takes the court next Friday, traveling to Baltimore, MD to take on Morgan State. The Pirates then return to conference action with an away match against James Madison on Saturday, Oct. 31.

Campbell hosts tourney

Women's tennis makes strong showing

TODD TALLMADGE
STAFF WRITER

Over the weekend the ECU women's tennis team played at the James R. Nisbet Intercollegiate at Campbell University.

The tournament consisted of players from Charleston Southern, Coastal Carolina, ECU, Georgia State, Morehead State, Hampton, and host Campbell.

The Lady Pirates sent seniors Anne Svae and Catherine Morgan, along with freshmen Meredith Spears and Andrea Terrill to the tournament.

Anne Svae was able to get a number one seed and a bye for the first round on Friday. She won her second-round match against Georgia State's Nina Jansen, 6-3, 6-0. Later that day, she won against Charleston Southern's Julie Harnios, 6-2, 6-3.

"I had a lot of confidence going into this tournament," Svae said. "I have been playing real good tennis lately."

Catherine Morgan lost her first-round match against Georgia State's Jovana Kriskapa, 6-3, 6-1 on Friday morning. She was able to bounce back later that day and beat Morehead State's Amy Haybarker, 6-1, 6-0, in her consolation match.

Meredith Spears defeated Campbell's Megan Cannon, 6-1, 6-1, on Friday before falling to Georgia State's Kristina Jensen, 6-1, 6-2. Andrea Terrill came up on the losing end of her first-round match, 7-6(7-2), 6-4, against Charleston Southern's Kim Taber. Terrill had a bye in the consolation bracket before losing to Coastal Carolina's Megan Romine, 6-0, 6-1.

The team of Svae and Morgan joined together for a No. 2 seed in the doubles side. They were able to advance to the semi-finals after defeating Georgia State's sent out on the field," Logan said. "We had performed beautifully all year long, we've been coached well.

It wasn't a great run, it didn't need to be a great run, there was no contain. We've just got to go back and reemphasize it again."

Against Southern Mississippi, ECU was flagged for holding on four straight kickoff returns, leaving the offense with terrible field position for most of the game. Junior wide-out LaMont Chappell was called on to return kicks against Southern Mississippi but had several returns brought back because of penalties.

Southern Mississippi freshman Derrick Nix led all rushers with 116 yards on 27 carries and scored two touchdowns. Junior linebacker Jeff Kerr said Nix was as good as advertised.

Kerr returned to the Pirate line up after missing the Alabama game with a concussion. While Kerr was glad to be back on the field, he said he was disappointed with the way the game unfolded.

"It's just sickening to us, really," Kerr said. "We know that we're a lot better defense than what played last week. We've just got to come up with the plays."

Logan said making plays turned out to be the difference in the game.

"The score is not indicative of the difference in the programs," Logan said.

ECU will look to rebound on Saturday when the Pirates host the Houston Cougars. Game time is 3:30 p.m.

State all appearing on the schedule.

This year the Pirate football program is continuing to dive into huge competition with teams like Alabama, and will lock horns in the future with other nationally known teams such as Duke, North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N.C. State and Miami.

"Our schedule is getting more nationally competitive each year," VanSant said. "It's important for all our sports to play strong, nationally known teams. If you really want to be good, you have to play good teams."

Student Life

A BIWEEKLY GLANCE AT WHAT'S HAPPENING WITH THE DIVISION OF STUDENT LIFE

Let the Madness Begin!

You're facing a dilemma. Spending a cold Halloween night downtown dealing with masses of overzealous and possibly intoxicated souls is a scary prospect. Then again, the thought of a quiet night at home on Halloween is a drag. What's a fun-loving student like you to do?

Why not join 2,000-3,000 students and guests and come into Mendenhall on this night? Midnight Madness, sponsored by the Division of Student Life, offers a free Halloween bash that's full of stuff to do, free food, free entertainment, free novelty attractions, and free giveaways. There will be plenty of chances to win cash prizes, either by winning at the costume contest or Bingo. Besides the free prizes and giveaways, students can feel the rush of driving a virtual stock car, learn their fates from fortune tellers, make a music video, and dance the night away.

Forget the hassle of trick-or-treating for free food! ECU Dining Services is offering the perfect Halloween menu to satisfy any sweet tooth. Join other ghosts and goblins at Midnight Madness for free candy apples, cotton candy, snow cones, popcorn, and peanuts. From 11 p.m. - 1 a.m. Mendenhall will serve a Midnight Breakfast Buffet. Don't miss our scrambled newt eggs with lizard tails and fish scales, haggish hashbrowns, ghoulish grits, tombstone biscuits, monstrous milk, and orange blood!

Midnight Madness starts at 9 p.m. and ends at 2 a.m. Students need only present their ECU One Cards to enter the bash. Each student may obtain one guest pass, which must be picked up prior to the event. Guest passes can be picked up beginning October 26 at the Central Ticket Office from 8:30 a.m. - 6 p.m. or at the Todd Dining Hall Meal Plan Office from 8 a.m. - 5 p.m. On Halloween, guest passes may be picked up at the Student Recreation Center from 11 a.m. - 10:30 p.m. In place of a Saturday night Hendrix film, Halloween Cartoon Shorts will be shown as part of Midnight Madness (guest passes required).

Midnight Madness at a Glance

HAVE A HALLOWEEN TO REMEMBER!! MAKE A PLEDGE AND PLAY IT SAFE!!

For a Halloween to remember, follow these tips...

- Respect other people's rights, and your own.
- Choose not to drink.
- Respect State laws and campus policies.
- Stay out of dangerous situations involving alcohol, whether in a car, a bar, or a bedroom.

PLAY IT SAFE AND SIGN THE PLEDGE!
HAVE A HALLOWEEN TO REMEMBER!

- I promise not to drink on Halloween.
- I will not ride in a car when the driver has been drinking.
- I will watch out for my friends, take care of myself, and have a safe Halloween.

Halloween is afoot in the Emerald City and it just may be the most anticipated social event on the ECU party calendar.

Downtown streets are shut down to cars while the people mingle freely, masquerading through the bowery and passing through the bars. The open-street atmosphere makes it easy for those in costume to see and meet their fellow freaks as they wind their way through the crowd.

The downtown Halloween ceremonies have taken some beatings in the past. A bad rap wasn't even the worst of it. Crowds who refused to go home when asked by police were maced until they left.

Much of the added commotion and festivity is due to the area's sudden Halloween population surge. People come from the ends of the earth for a taste of the ECU Halloween street spectacular. Every corner of your house ends up slept in. Your cousin and his next door neighbor from Hoboken pass out, smearing clown make-up on the kitchen floor tiles. Your roommate decides to have a late-night gathering for all the people he found dressed as Alice from the Brady Bunch.

Costumes are very important for Pirates with spirit.

The latest trends in television and scandal, along with the old standbys, are among what will be seen this year on the scene.

"We sold out of the Monika Lewinsky wigs and berets in six hours", said Party Success' Ian Tortorella. The packages are officially marketed as "The Intern".

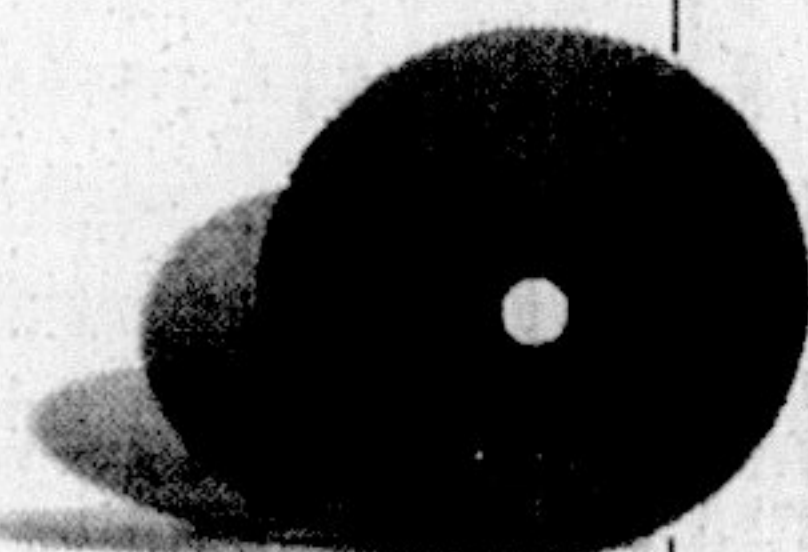

Of course right next to that get-up is, yes, you guessed it, Bubba Clinton. The difference with the Bill Clinton mask is that, unlike the

Son Volt Wide Swing Tremolo

9 out of 10

Son Volt is a band. They spawned from the now extinct country-rock pioneer band called Uncle Tupelo, which disbanded in the early 90s. Jay Farrar (now the songwriter/lead singer of Son Volt) worked in collaboration with Jeff Tweedy to produce four almost equally brilliant records, picking up hordes of fans spanning the country.

Then, in 1993, following the release of their finest album entitled Anodyne, Farrar shrugged his shoulders and left the band high and dry, causing them to split up and head down separate roads. Tweedy went on to form the critically praised rock outfit Wilco, while Farrar set up his stakes with Son Volt.

When Son Volt put out their first album, Trace, many found it to be everything they could hope for. Its delicious blend of hard rocking riffs and slow acoustic gems was alluring. Then, in 1997, the band followed up with the record Straightaways. This album was basically a continuation of Trace, but it didn't do anything to expand on the sound, and thus was widely considered a disappointment. Some started to wonder if Farrar had run out of ideas.

Well, some people should quit their wondering and go pick up the new disk Wide Swing Tremolo. Son Volt is back in full force, and this is shown quite clearly from the start with their opening track "Straightface." The song is a flat-out rocker, complete with loud crunching guitars and harshly distorted vocals.

This leads us into the next song "Driving the View," which has the words "underground hit single" written all over it. It has a lovely melody, and the harmonies provided by bassist Jim Boquist are possibly the most consistently perfect in the country rock genre. Indeed, these first couple songs are a more hyped-up side of Son Volt than most of us have ever heard, which brings us to the third song, "Jodel."

Jodel is the biggest waste of space I have ever listened to. It is 41 seconds of off-key harmonica, and that is putting it nicely. I hate it. This song is the sole reason for this album not getting 10 out of 10. It's that bad. I'd feel more comfortable listening to a swarm of 17-year cicadas climaxing with one unifying yet piercing screech. Nope, "Jodel" is not a good song.

Just when you think that this band is completely out of their

Cashmere Jungle Lords rock!

Caleb Rose
Assistant Editor

Peasant's Cafe was host to an adventure two Saturdays ago when Richmond Virginia's Cashmere Jungle Lords propelled a packed house into their own little world of Pulp music.

Imagine yourself buying a ticket for a trip to various places around the world. That is the experienced in 2 hours upon seeing this fantastic trio. The unique style of music the Jungle Lords produce could be the soundtrack to this adventure.

After the opening band, Greenville's own King Monkey, began the evening with fueled Rockabilly and excessive consumption of Pabst Blue Ribbon, the Cashmere Jungle Lords took the stage and made sure everyone's seat belts were buckled before the adventure began.

After several introductory tunes, the band hopped into a vintage Jaguar and went on a spy hunt as they plowed through "Paradise," from their disc titled Southern Barber Supply, as well as "Pixie Dust," also from the album. The spy hunt ended at the beach and it was time to go surfing. A slew of surfin' songs filled the ears of the crowd, among them the album track "Sweeper."

At night on the beach when all is peaceful, it's pleasant to hear Caribbean sounds fill the air. The band took a chance with these differently flavored songs, noting that this was one of the first times that they had been played to the public. Much to the band's surprise, the tunes were a hit and with their closing, the beach adventure was over.

Once the Caribbean cruise had landed, the "peasants" in the audience found themselves on the border of Texas and Mexico listening to "Fernando," a tune named after the name singer/songwriter Dominic

Antz rips the rug out from under Disney

Ryan Kennemur
Movie Reviewer

4 out of 4 possible Ryans

Hey Disney/Pixar Productions! You've got a new butt to kiss! That's right, kids. Dreamworks INC. picks up where they left off with Small Soldiers and make it a one-two punch with the release of their newest animated masterpiece, Antz.

Let's begin with the understanding that this is not a movie for kids. There are a few curse words (which added to my enjoyment), a giant army-style fight scene that depicts soldier ants being melted by acid-spewing termites, and ants are burnt to cinders by a human with a magnifying glass. Pretty hardcore imagery.

The movie centers around one worker ant named Z-4195, voiced by neurotic

Unfortunately, the entire cast was wiped out when the best boy spilled a beer at the cast party...

Woody Allen, who is under the impression that there is more to life than moving dirt from place to place. Likewise is Princess Bala, voiced by Sharon Stone, who is being forced to marry General

Mandible (Gene Hackman) against her wishes. Mandible, along with the aid of Colonel Cutter (Christopher Walken) plans to eliminate all the worker ants by drowning them, thus making a supreme society of soldier ants.

Other notable roles are Sly Stallone as a soldier ant that falls for a worker ant, voiced by Jennifer Lopez. Also Dan Aykroyd and Jane Curtin play some very WASPish wasps.

That's the basic introduction, but there's more to the story that meets the eye. This movie is more than just an excuse to make another cartoon using Toy Story-esque animations. Antz has political statements out the wazoo. In fact, it would be a good idea to go out and read Anthem by Ayn Rand before viewing it. Themes of socialism run amok in almost every scene.

First of all, the newborn ants (in larva form) are immediately set in front of a committee and deemed whether they are suited to be workers, in which case they are given a pickaxe, or soldiers, in which case they are given a helmet.

Secondly, the ants are not allowed to think for themselves. They are so used to doing nothing but work that they actually enjoy it and ask no questions. They are told when to dance, when to sleep, and anyone that defers from the norm is punished.

By the end of the film, however, Z-4195 is able to overcome the elements and reform the entire commune. The animation during the final scene is so realistic, you can actually see the socialism crumbling down to the ground.

Antz is a miniature view of our own society, and the fact that it can poke fun at it is reason enough to see it. Like the tag line of the movie states, "Every ant has his day." Let's hope that these particular ants have more than just one day in the sun, for these insect stars will be shining for years to come.

minds, they follow up with "Medicine Hat," which is a catchy albeit lyrically confusing little ditty, and possibly the best song on the disk.

The remainder of the disk is just as strong, mixing the usual spellbindingly beautiful hard-road ballads with the crunchy guitar-fueled rockers that Son Volt fans have come to appreciate. It's like their other albums, only better.

On the opening track, Farrar sings of carrying in a new day. A new day, indeed.

Space Ghost sends message of hope

Miccah Smith
Interviewer to the Stars

OK, don't read this if you don't know who Space Ghost is. You'll just end up confused and angry, and I don't want that. But if you're a huge fan, like me, you'll be pleased to know that I got to talk to Space Ghost live on the phone the other week with some other college media people from around the country, courtesy of Rhino Records. We had the best time. I hope you enjoy reading our interview. It is a tribute to my mad journalism skills! This transcript segment is from our actual interview on October 15.

SG: Hello young Americans!
ME: (Laughing uncontrollably)
SG: Miccah's been carbo-loading!
ME: (coughing) I'm coughing!
SG: Oh, you're coughing?
ME: Hello, I'm a big old fan of yours!
SG: Oh, give Daddy a big phone kiss!
ME: I read your review in Ray-Gun.
SG: How'd I do?
ME: It was the bestest....Do you get paid more for being a superhero, or are you discriminated against and actually paid less?
SG: It's actually less, because some bosses are cheapskates. You're doing the TV show but you're still having to save the world. There's no bonus for saving the world.

I'm gonna be famous for this...

ME: (Laughing uncontrollably)

SG: Bless Miccah's heart.

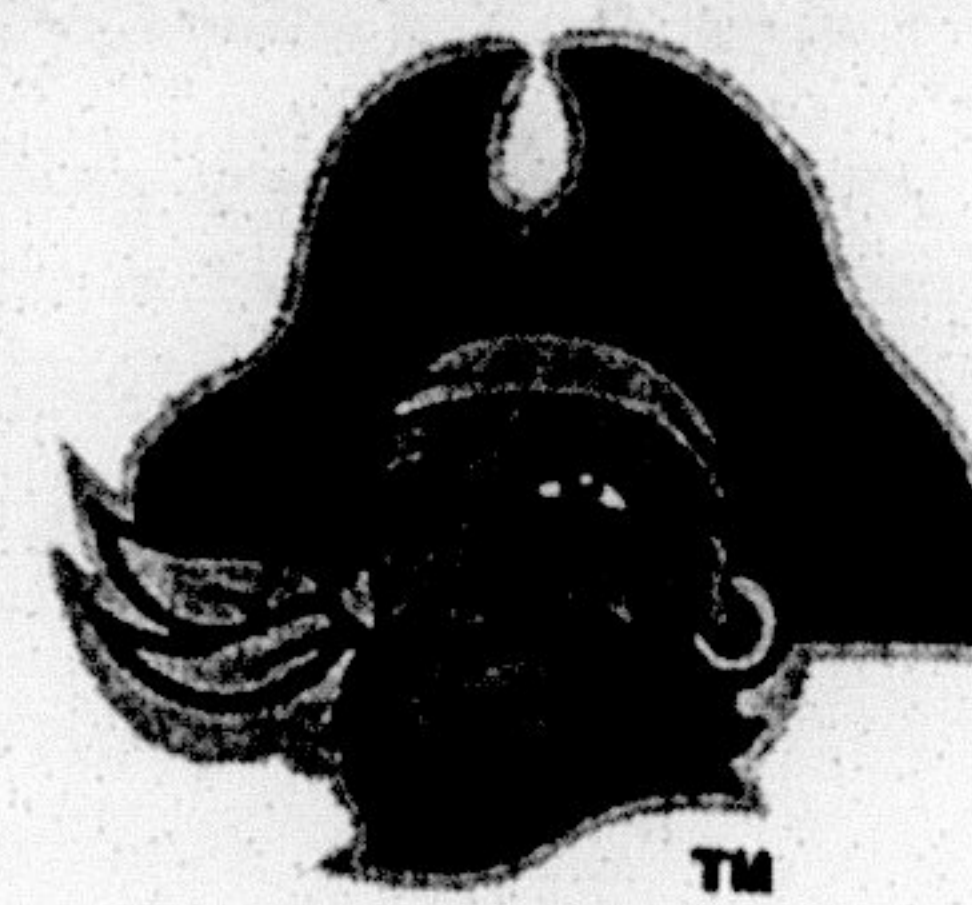

ME: (Laughing uncontrollably)

SG: God bless Miccah, she's getting me through this.

ME: First off, Space Ghost, Jim says hi. I just wanted you to know that.
SG: Jim owes me money!
ME: Do you have a girlfriend? Are you eligible?
SG: Space Ghost is what they call on your planet "sweet available beef."
ME: I'll be calling you later....What're you doing for Halloween, Space Ghost?
SG: I'll be sitting here handing out chick peas, as usual.

Regrettably, the interview was cut short. Otherwise, I could have brought you all the inside scoop on what Space Ghost eats for midnight snacks...

BLACKBEARD'S BENCH

AHOY, YE PIRATE STUDENTS:

The Sports Marketing Department and Pirate Basketball are looking for some enthusiastic students to become charter members in "BLACKBEARDS BENCH." As a charter member you will receive the following:

- An original BLACKBEARD'S BENCH t-shirt.
- Pre-game "parties" with Coach Dooley's game plan for the opponent.

All we ask is that you recruit your friends to attend the games. Each student will receive a punch card with the numbers 1-20. At the end of each men's and women's home game, the Sports Marketing Department will punch each card with a special mark. You can earn a BLACKBEARD'S BENCH t-shirt, pizza coupons, Gatorade gear, admission to the pre-game parties and a pizza party for 10. Anyone who attends 20 games will be entered into the grand prize drawing of free tuition for Spring 1999, compliments of Pepsi.

Pirate hoops needs an intense atmosphere in Minges Coliseum, and it all begins with YOU. Support Coach Dooley, Coach Gibson and the Pirate basketball teams during the 1998-99 season!

For more information call the Sports Marketing Department at 328-4530.

LEO:

(July 24- August 23)

Listen to a friend's advice on money matters - an objective point of view is what you need. Your sweetheart may be feeling neglected, and accuse you of unrealistic expectations - so make the time for romance and more intimacy. It's time for a few practical steps to improve your image.

VIRGO:

(August 24 - September 23)

There will probably be a strong urge to immerse yourself in creative pursuits. Keep an open mind and you may be pleasantly surprised at the results. Both business and household projects enjoy favorable influences; and you may get a bonus for recently positive efforts.

LIBRA:

(September 24 - October 23)

The more you depend on your reserves, the stronger you are. You inspire family members likewise. There are some self doubts lingering which only you can work through. Self-improvement efforts will succeed. Remember - if you can't say any thing nice, don't say anything at all.

SCORPIO:

(October 24 - November 22)

Spend time with close friends and you'll find that your friendships and loves are very fulfilling. There is someone trying to undermine your position with flattery and bribery. Keep your cool. There will be great news about money, and possibly a new, lucrative job offer.

SAGITTARIUS:

(November 23 - December 21)

It will be an effortless and pleasurable week for you. Keep in mind you do have the power to make all sorts of changes for the better. Everyone seems overly emotional as of late, so be on guard for lies and accusations. Harmony will be restored at home by week's end.

CAPRICORN:

(December 22 - January 20)

Wherever you are, you will be surrounded by friendship and luck. Unexpected money is coming your way. Both family and work responsibilities are heavy, take one situation at a time. Be aware that guidance comes through your dreams. Positive vibes continue at home.

AQUARIUS:

(January 21 - February 19)

You need to travel in order to check out an opportunity to increase your income. Don't neglect a mate who's starving for attention. Both your professional image and reputation is boosted to new levels. Your charm and magnetism take you through any sticky situations right now.

PISCES:

(February 20 - March 20)

It's a week of heavy mental stimulation and challenges. Both innovative and unconventional approaches work. Your assertiveness takes you far at work and your family's happy and enjoys being together. Plan your entertainment and include others from the sideline.

Birthday Week:

Your closest relationships are stable for now, but your inner voice may be prompting you to take time alone for self-renewal. Professional advancement is at hand, so keep yourself on the straight and narrow. Your creative urges may turn into profit.

Don't mess with Carrie...

That bucket of pig's blood will look great with your corsage...

Miccah Smith
Fountainhead Editor

Carrie is just one of those movies you can turn to again and again every Halloween for sheer, unadulterated shock and creeping terror. Yeah, but it's a prom movie, you say. I know, I know. There's no excuse. But just hear me out. There's something about the lo-fi filming style, unrelenting carnage and utter chaos in Brian DePalma's 1976 film version of Stephen King's first literary success that gives it a permanent standing above any other film of its kind since. Many have tried, and failed, to make prom night into such a terrifying experience onscreen. King's formula is simple enough: take one girl with groovy telekinetic powers, add a psycho mom and a horde of loudmouthed high-school kids who hate her guts. Shake well, and serve with a splash of pig's blood, heh-heh. Piper Laurie is chillingly one-dimensional in her role as Carrie's holy-roller mother, a distant but violent creature who floats from door to door in a black robe collecting donations for

Midnight Madness time!

Nina M. Dry
Staff Writer

With Halloween fast approaching, it's time to decide what to do on the big night. Should you go to the movies? How about billiards or perhaps singing the night away to Monster Mash? Maybe a night of dinner and dancing? Well you can do all of this and more at the Seventh Annual Midnight Madness on Halloween night from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. at Mendenhall Student Center.

There's a little bit of everything for everyone to enjoy. They'll have their usual favorites from years past such as billiards and glow bowling.

"This is our second year we've done glow bowling," said Carol Woodruff, marketing director of the department of university unions. "There are special pins and balls that glow under black light."

If you are looking for a quick glimpse into the future or the answer to some of your undying questions, check out the fortune tellers, wizard, or psychic hotline for some insight.

"Our wizard and the psychic hotline will be available at the student organization booth, while there will be a couple of fortune tellers in the Mendenhall lounge and in the gallery upstairs," Woodruff said.

Then there is the ever-popular video karaoke. Realize those dreams of becoming a singing sensation and walk away with a video of your five minutes of fame.

"Karaoke is always popular every year," Woodruff said. "It will be held in room 244 from 9 p.m. until 2 a.m."

There will also be a chance for you to get your dance on with DJ J. Arthur from 11 p.m. to 1:30 a.m.

Once you've worked up an appetite with all of the singing and dancing, head on over to the dining hall for an all-you-can-eat breakfast buffet. Food will be served from 11 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Contests and games such as bingo, a pumpkin carving contest and a costume contest will give you a chance to win some prizes. See your R.A. or the resident coordinator for more information.

"We will have cash prizes for the best male costume, best female costume, and best group costume," Woodruff said. "All those interested in participating must be in Hendrix Theater by 11:30 p.m."

According to Woodruff, other prizes include glow in the dark and regular mugs, wind-up knick knacks and official Midnight Madness t-shirts.

"The ECU Student Stores assist us in getting those t-shirts printed each year," Woodruff said. "We definitely appreciate their support."

There have been some new events added to the Midnight Madness line-up. While going from event to event, you can stop into Hendrix Theater to watch cartoon shorts — mini Halloween cartoons that will be shown before and after the costume contest.

The Ghoul Cafe, Mendenhall's haunted house, has been replaced this year with Evil Landing which will be held in the social room. All people involved are keeping a tight lip as to what will be going on in the haunted house. All that has been said is that aliens will be involved — the rest is top secret.

The last new addition is the virtual reality Nascar ride. According to Woodruff there will be four cars set up with a grandstand set up around her church. Her other hobbies include sewing, singing and self-flagellating, plus ignoring and generally repressing the delicate Carrie in a house heavy with dark wood and religious art.

Well, our heroine enjoys the same warm companionship and good times at school too, as if that were a surprise. After joining an attack on Carrie with tampons in a locker room in the opening sequence, one girl feels guilty and gets her boyfriend, a puffy-haired jock with GOOD GUY stamped across his forehead, to ask Carrie to the prom and show her a good time.

Can we skip the rest of the movie and go straight to prom night, please?! (Why yes, that is John Travolta with a bucket of pig's blood. Now hush up.)

Carrie gets herself all duded up in a gorgeous petal pink satin gown she made herself, and naturally her mom has to try to screw things up.

"I can see your dirty pillows," she says, just to keep things light.

"They're called breasts, Mama, and every woman has them," Carrie answers.

Smart comeback. Did you ace rhetoric last semester?

So she takes off for the prom, which is charmingly crammed into the school gym, not knowing of a fiendish plot (involving Travolta and the aforementioned bucket o' pig's blood) to embarrass her in front of the school.

DePalma, in his wisdom, saves all the best stuff for last. Once you've seen Carrie's terrifying face streaked with pig's blood, eyes bulging, body tensed, damnation oozing from every pore, you'll never forget it. The scene brands like a hot iron.

Carrie snaps the gym doors shut with a telekinetic blast, leaving herself plenty of time to leisurely extract the vengeance for which a million tortured, misunderstood high school girls' souls have cried out since time began: total, brutal, indiscriminate and full of neat pyrotechnics. 'Nuff said.

Carpin's girlfriend was mumbling in her sleep one day. Carpin makes a point to dictate stories behind the songs, a good habit for any tour-guide. Many of the non-album tunes had this Tex-Mex feel to them, mainly because of Carpin's Mexican ancestry. Don't forget your roots.

Finally, we flew out to California to try out the movie business. Carpin sings in the first line of "Mr. Melrose Ave", "I wanna be a Hollywood movie star." If this is true, he should consider sticking to his night job as a musician because the Cashmere Lords have a unique gift in delivering such a solid traditional presidential mask, Bill is depicted with tongue hanging out and lipstick kisses all over his blushing face. Other popular costumes include Southpark, Batman and, in keeping with school spirit, the Pirate. Also Zorro, with its basic costume, is a popular choice among low-maintenance guys.

"We've sold tons of Pirate stuff because of the home football game that day," said Tortorella.

"Ninety percent of the customers have been college students."

guys with hairy chest wigs and girlfriends with pitchforks to stick them with. Of course, cross-dressing also runs rampant on this night, and not just in designated situations, either.

"Girls are buying everything sexy, like French Maids and Sexy Nurse costumes," said Myra Smith, owner of Party Success. Around the store fishnet stockings and sex kitten outfits hang among the traditional Zorros and Freddy Kruger costumes.

"We try and push people to create original costumes," said Michael Gwaltney, who does the design work for Party Makers. "Some people are spending 50 or 60 dollars".

But the bottom line is that it's not the price that counts on Halloween, but how many people you can scare.
