The search for 20-year-old Gayle Alan Sanford III, who was wanted by the University of Arkansas Police Department (UAPD) for assault, terroristic threatening, false imprisonment and failure to appear ended early Monday morning in Greenville, N.C.

College police stations around the Southeast were first alerted to Sanford's activities when he was arrested on Jan. 25 for the rape and false imprisonment of a 19-year-old female student at the University of Arkansas. When Sanford failed to show up for his arraignment in February, it was discovered that he had left the state.

Warrants for his arrest were issued for failure to appear on the charges of battery in the third degree, false imprisonment in the second degree and terroristic threatening. Capt. Brad Bruns of the UAPD said there was no warrant issued for the rape because the prosecutor has not filed charges as of yet.

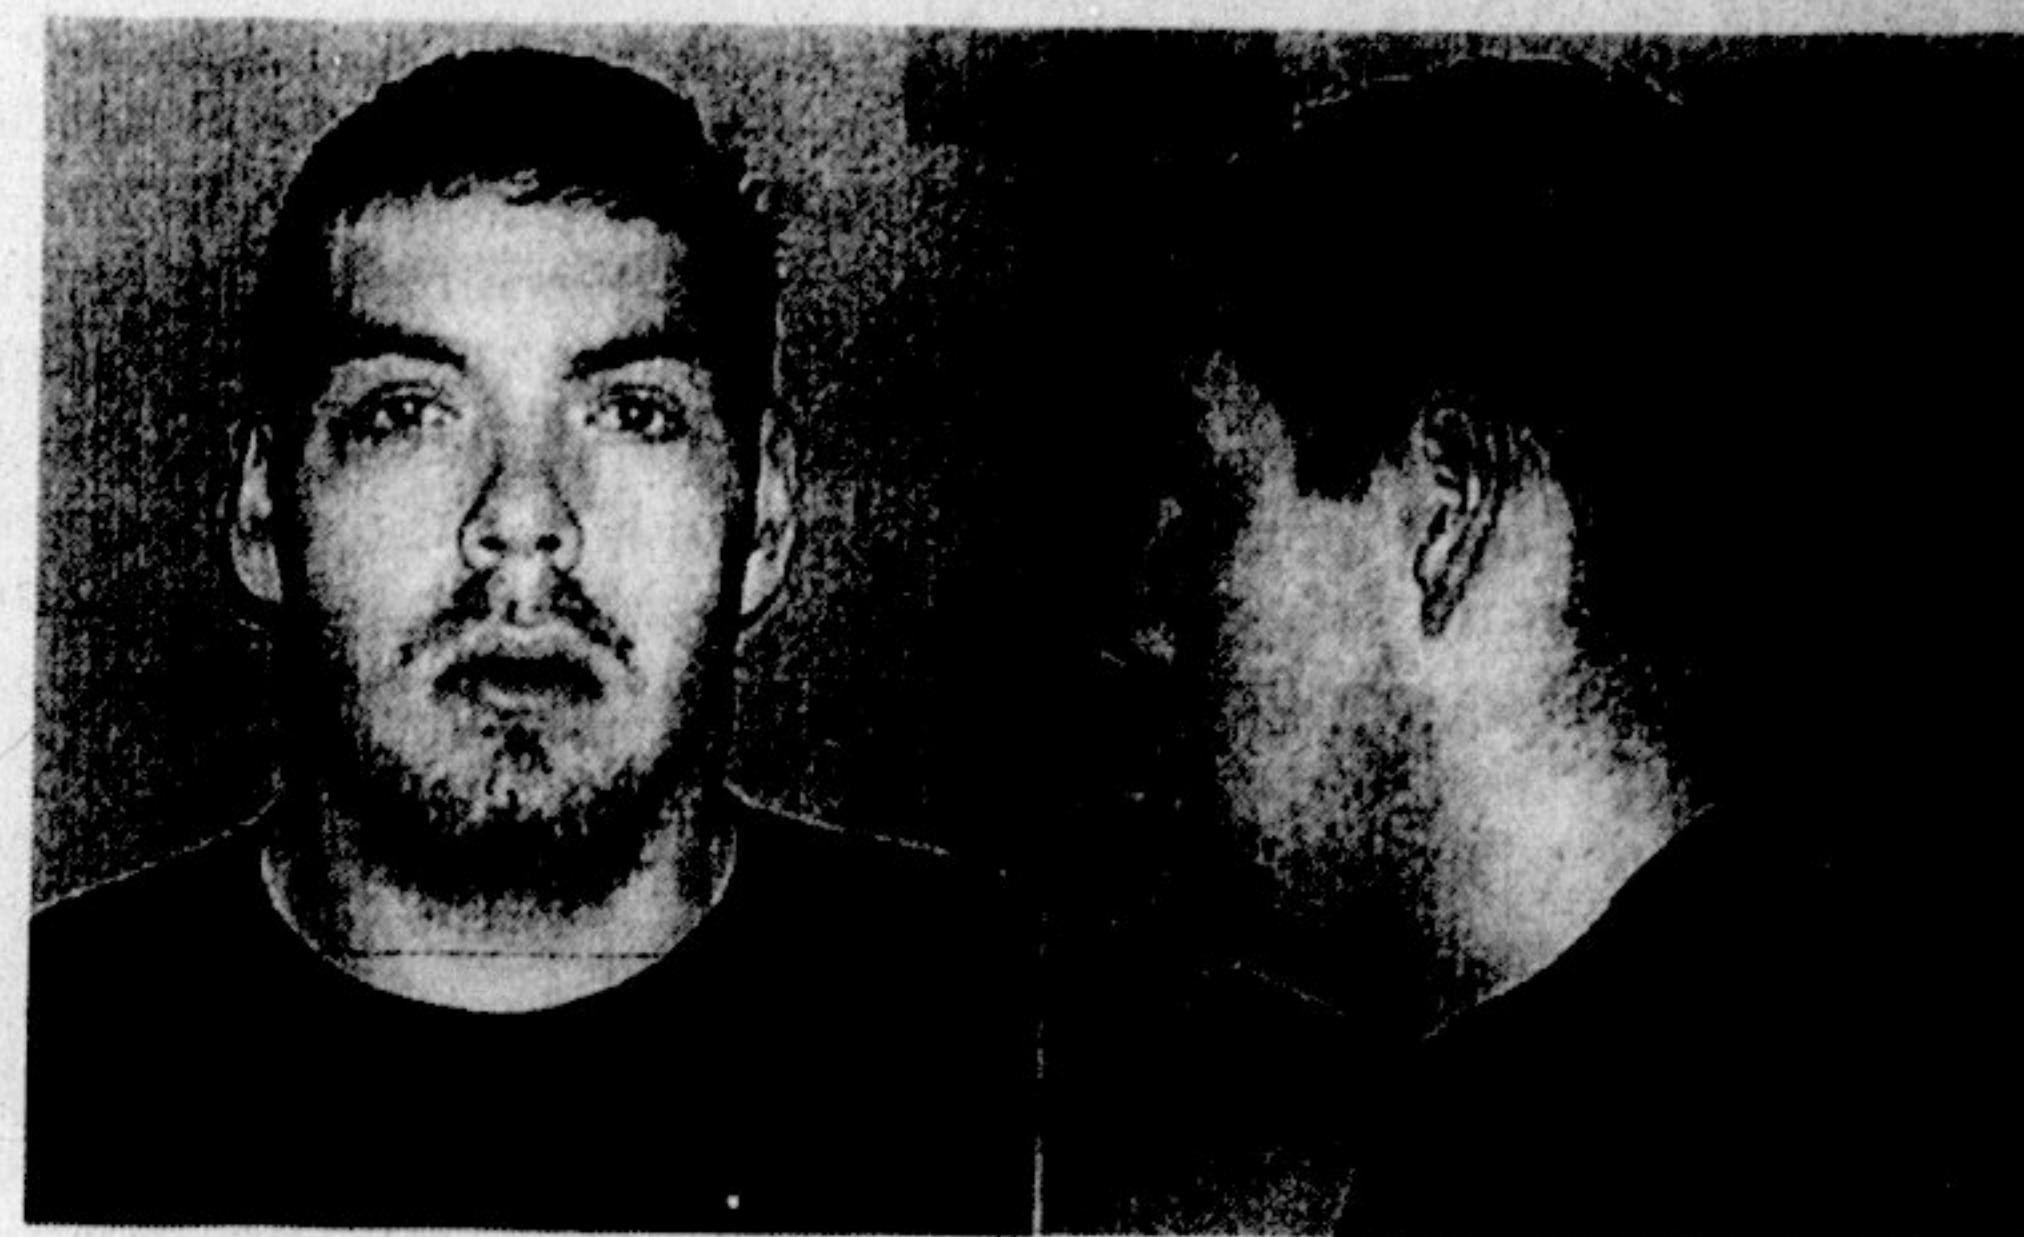

Police have been tracking Sanford's movement since February, but had been unable to catch up with him until now. He was seen on the campus of Clemson University three weeks ago.

Police officials said that being aware of Sanford's method of operation helped to bring him in to custody.

"What he commonly does is go into Internet chat rooms, like at collegeclub.com or something, to meet young women and get them to meet him in person someplace," Bruns said. "He talks to students all over the country this way."

According to an ECU police report, the search for Sanford began in Greenville when a resident of Umstead Hall alerted the ECUPD after she received an e-mail from an unknown person who wanted to meet her. Police were not able to locate Sanford at that time, but officers proceeded to post alert bulletins in the residence halls and at Joyner Library. Sanford was later found and arrested at approximately 2

Gayle Alan Sanford was arrested in Greenville for assault, false imprisonment and terroristic threatening earlier this year at the University of Arkansas. a.m. on Monday morning by ECU and Greenville police officers in the apartment of a Pitt Community College student who agreed to play a role in the investigation. "A lot of good police work was done in this case," said Tom

Campus planning meeting held*Parking, housing concerns addressedTerra Steinbeiser
NEWS EDITOR

Last week, the Campus Plan Core Group met to discuss the newest version of the campus expansion plan.

The latest rendering of the plan to expand the campus was derived primarily from one of the three original drawings that were submitted in December of last year. The plan chosen to be given to the BOT for approval underwent some modifications at the suggestion of groups like TUNA (The University Neighborhood Association) as well as university officials.

Krisan Osterby-Benson of Ellerbe Beckett Planning Consultants explained the four sections of the latest plan. The first part deals with the process and the program of campus expansion.

"This basically deals with the university's goals and objectives in terms of square footage needs," Osterby-Benson said.

The other sections outline community context issues, especially in terms of historic neighborhoods, the land-use plan and west and east campus expansion into the downtown area.

One of the main topics of discussion was the issue of parking. According to the new proposed plan, four or five parking decks may be in the future for the campus. Osterby-Benson explained that that there would need to be a balance between surface and structured parking. Currently all the parking areas at ECU are surface. The plan shows that the proposed parking decks will be built at Minges Coliseum, behind Aycock Hall (where Epps Middle School now stands), on the south side of Tenth Street, and toward west campus.

Other proposed changes included the idea to convert Cotten and Fleming residence halls into faculty and staff offices. New residence halls will be built at the bottom of College Hill and close to where Slay and Umstead halls currently stand. The university is also considering buying the Pirate's Place Apartments (previously known as Player's Club) and using the land for fraternity and sorority houses.

Bruce Flye, director of Facilities and Planning, emphasized that the construction and renovations on campus will be in direct correlation with ECU's enrollment needs.

"Timing is hard to plan in terms of the funding we'll need," Flye said. "We have a deficit need that needs to be taken care of first."

The campus plan is still tentative, however, until the BOT has time to review it once again and vote on it at their meeting on May 12.

Lewis plans total campus involvementCarolyn Herold
STAFF WRITER

Nell Lewis was recently named as the new director of the Ledonia Wright African-American Cultural Center. Lewis, who has replaced interim Director Ty Frazier, is an ECU alumna, who earned her undergraduate degree in 1969, and continued on to graduate work at a time when there were significantly fewer African-American students in attendance.

Lewis worked as the Pitt Community College (PCC) director of Community Outreach before coming to ECU. While at PCC, she worked as a school representative to all areas of Pitt County with schools, churches, social agencies, businesses and organizations to help identify individuals who would benefit from the resources that PCC had to provide.

As director of Ledonia Wright, Lewis says she plans to work to help total campus involvement with the center's activities.

"My overall goal is to ensure the center is more than a museum and social gathering place, but that it becomes an experience for all who visit," Lewis said.

She also plans to expand the center and to have it house an educational resource library about Africa and African-American history and culture.

"I emphasize that I do want to help to enhance the feeling of community on our campus by encouraging everyone to stop by the center to share in the African-American experience," Lewis said.

Lewis also plans to work with faculty members in all academic areas to collaborate on ways to encourage use of the center in their classes and lectures.

Ms. Lewis's duties include overseeing the daily operation of the center, working closely with minority student organizations on campus like the gospel choir, planning all programming for the center along with the Office of Minority Student Affairs, and aggressively seeking financial supporters to help reach the goals and develop the vision of the center.

"I am excited to be here because ECU is at the forefront in [cultural relations] in implementing initiatives that respond to the increasing numbers of culturally diverse groups," Lewis said. "I am so impressed by the warm, friendly reception that the administration, faculty, staff and students gave me even before I arrived on campus."

ACROSS OTHER CAMPUSES

Duke University—In an informal presentation to about 100 people at Duke University Friday night, "The View's" Lisa Ling reflected on the underrepresentation of Asian Americans in the mainstream media.

"Of the 26 primetime shows on television, not one showcases Asian Americans in leading roles," she said. "Even when the corporate networks are attacked for lack of racial diversity on television, minorities still only play small parts."

Citing her experience on ABC and her previous job as a television reporter, Ling talked about the lack of diversity in the media and explored the lingering Asian stereotypes in the news.

"Asians are only put on spotlight for violating human rights or stealing nuclear secrets," Ling said. "It conveys the wrong associations to the general public."

Ling attributes these American biases to remnants of a deep psychological distrust generated by American wars in the 20th century.

"Look at the wars that America fought in—World War II, Korea, Vietnam—and look at who the enemies were," she said. "On top of that, there is a sense of paranoia from Asian successes in America, especially in the early '80s, when the [Vietnam] war was just over."

Ling said both factors drove her toward her chosen profession. "There is a lack of diversity at the executive level, which translates into less sensitivity to minority issues," she said. "Unfortunately, there is little incentive for more minorities to apply in the media industry and improve the racial situation, which is what I want to do."

However, Ling is hesitant to serve as a role model for the Asian-American community. "Just because I am on TV does not mean I should be pressured to represent an entire generation ...," she said. "Does Barbara Walters represent an entire generation of middle aged, post-menopausal women?"

Ling suggested that if more Asian Americans applied for positions in the field, the media would lose some of their biases. "The time is ripe for Asian Americans and minorities to pursue media," she said.

Ling closed her presentation by encouraging Asian Americans to break racial norms in the media industry.

University of Texas at Austin—In response to racially offensive flyers posted across the University of Texas-Austin campus Friday morning, student organizations will hold a rally Monday to speak out on racial issues affecting students.

The National Alliance, an organization that identifies itself as a white separatist group, distributed flyers stating "Don't have sex with blacks. Avoid AIDS!" citing the names of three black men who allegedly "lied about being HIV positive and had sex with dozens of white women." The flyer also states incorrect statistics about black men and HIV.

The National Alliance distributed about 4,000 flyers among the Houston, Dallas, Waco, College Station and Austin areas last week. The group advocates the establishment of an "Aryan Nation" free of Jews and racial minorities, according to the Southern Poverty Law Center, a non-profit organization that tracks hate groups.

A spokesman for the National Alliance, who asked to remain anonymous, said his organization has chosen the university as a target in promoting its message.

The group has also been linked to racially motivated vandalism on campus, including posters defaced with neo-Nazi propaganda advertising the National Alliance Web site.

Students from the Anti-Racist Organizing Committee, Asian American Relations Group and International Socialist Organization will meet in the South Mall at noon Monday to hold a rally and speak out on racial issues affecting the University.

Robyn Citizen, a government sophomore and AROC member, said she was disappointed, but not surprised when she saw the flyer.

"The flyer is completely racist," Citizen said. "It's based off the misconception that black people are the only ones that can get this disease, and the idea that black men are sexually promiscuous."

Dana Cloud, an associate professor of communication studies and a member of the International Socialist Organization, said the flyers are another example of the perpetuation of hate on campus.

"I know for a fact that ignoring [the National Alliance] does not make them go away," Cloud said. "Speaking out shows that they are not welcome here."

CRIME SCENE

April 6

Obscene Phone Call—A student in Garrett Hall was issued a campus appearance ticket (CAT) after Parking and Traffic reported that he had left an employee an obscene voice mail message.

Damage to Property—A student reported that his vehicle was damaged while parked east of Scott Hall. The radio antenna had been broken off and was laying on the ground.

Breaking and Entering—A student reported that someone entered her room without permission between 11:30 p.m. and 10:30 a.m. on. She said that nothing was taken, but they had cooked noodles in the microwave and ate half a Pop Tart.

April 7

Driving While Impaired—A non-student was arrested for DWI after he was stopped for turning left on a red light.

April 8

Driving While License Revoked, Probation Violation—A non-student was arrested for the above referenced charges after being stopped for driving the wrong way on Reade Street. Further investigation revealed that he was wanted by the Beaufort County Sheriff's Department and he was turned over to them.

Provisional Driving While Impaired—A non-student was issued a state citation for provisional DWI after being stopped for a traffic violation at the intersection of Fifth Street and Founders Drive.

Brush Fire—A non-student reported a small brush fire north of Parking and Traffic Services extinguished by McDonald's employees.

April 9

Underage Possession of Alcohol—A student was issued a state citation and CAT for underage possession pursuant to a traffic stop. He was a passenger in the stopped vehicle.

Younce of the ECU PD. "It was a good example of joint work between police departments."

When Sanford was taken into custody, he was in possession of some items belonging to a woman he is thought to have assaulted in a city near Greenville. The woman has not reported the incident.

"We're going to be contacting other campus agencies to see if there's anything else he's done that may not have been reported as well," Younce said.

It was also discovered that Sanford is wanted in Kansas for aggravated indecent liberties with a child.

Younce said that Sanford is currently being held in the Pitt County Detention Center awaiting extradition. Extradition occurs when a state surrenders an alleged fugitive of the law to the state in which the crime(s) occurred.

SGA NOTES

SGA Vice President John Meriac congratulated the new executive board. SGA Treasurer Overton Harper said only 97 of the 220 flood loans donated have been paid back in full. $22,350 is still currently due. Harper said students that do not pay back the loans will be tagged and/or will not be able to register. He added that those students' records will never be released in the future if needed at other universities.

Christy Lynch, junior class president, said the semi-formal SGA banquet will be from 7 p.m.-midnight April 17 at the Hilton. Lynch said the evening will be filled with speakers, awards, food and dancing.

Sadie Cox, representative and elected treasurer, introduced seven new constitutions: Alpha Kappa Psi Professional Business Fraternity, The Ject Kune Do Association, New Life Christian Fellowship, The Student Affiliate of the American Chemistry Society, Golden Key National Honor Society, Pre-pro Health Alliance and Epsilon Chi Nu Fraternity.

Lynch introduced a legislative bill for the funding for the 1999 senior class gift to remodel the front of Mendenhall Student Center and add an outside seating area.

Harper said the remodeling requires $3,000 from the SGA which has been saved since the 1998-99 school year when the plan was first introduced. According to Pam Godfrey, SGA president of 1999, Chancellor Eakin will fund the rest of the project if more money is needed. Representative Laura Stein said the Campus Safety Walk will begin at 7 p.m. Wednesday night in front of Mendenhall.

Na'im Akbar, co-chair of the minority coalition asked for SGA's support dealing with downtown discrimination through a written statement.

The welfare committee requested that Akbar and another member of the coalition join them next at 4:30 p.m. Monday to discuss the issue.

Steven Carmichael, representative and vice president of the Black Student Union, said he would be at the meeting with Akbar to answer any future questions and help write up a resolution.

OUR VIEW

"Webster's Dictionary" defines the notion of eminent domain as "the power of the state to take private property for public use with payment of compensation to the owner." While this process is mainly used for building housing in low income neighborhoods and urban renewal, it is now being used by ECU to take possession of and destroy the homes bordering campus toward Elm Street between 5th and 10th streets.

The land is slated to be used for new facilities with the majority being devoted to a parking deck. While a parking deck is drastically needed by the university, we believe that the reward is not worth the risk. These homes have housed numerous families that have supported the school for decades. They are having their loyalty thrown back in their faces by the practice of "eminent domain."

We as members of the student body feel that demolishing these homes is unnecessary and wrong. There is plenty of land for use around campus that doesn't involve demolition of people's homes and lives. Even though a parking deck is crucial to the university's survival, how are we to sleep knowing the price was so high that we had to take someone's home away so that we would not have to walk as far to get to class?

We are ready and willing to pay for further expansion of our beautiful campus, but not at the expense of the alumni, faculty, students and Greenville residents who call this land home. If the plan goes through as designed, where are these people to go? ECU is making bold strides into the future but are also burning bridges to the past.

LETTER TO EDITOR

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response to the article written by Ms. Long and Ms. Rodrigues, "Who knows what the future holds?" printed in the Thursday edition of TEC. I would like to ask these ladies if they have ever even looked at/read an issue of Playboy?

Playboy is more than just pictures. The magazine contains interviews, articles, advice, fashion, jokes and news among other worthwhile items. I know of many women who enjoy viewing the monthly publication. I have used articles found in Playboy as sources for several college papers. Since your concerns are so academically based, I thought you would like to know the intellectual value of Playboy. On the level of Playboy visiting ECU, college is about more than academics. It is a place for learning about life, trying new experiences and making decisions for your future. If the gorgeous women of this fine institution choose to have the experience of a photo shoot (which was not nude), you should applaud their courage to try new opportunities. You should not put them down because you do not agree. As for your attack on males attending ECU, assuming we are all "falling out of our chairs" over Playboy's visit is sexist and uncalled for. Do not assume having a penis makes you an uncontrollable, hormone-driven sex freak. All of ECU should be proud that the No. 1 men's magazine in America chose to feature some of the most beautiful women on the East Coast by visiting our campus.

The human body is a beautiful art form and sexuality is a healthy part of human existence. I do not understand why you find expression of the body vulgar and demeaning, nor an individual's right to make her own decisions wrong. If you wish to repress expression, exploration and the human body, please do it to yourself and do not denounce Playboy's visit or the people who participated.

LETTER TO EDITOR

Dear Editor,

As president of RHA, it is my responsibility to represent the more than 5,000 students that live in residence halls. In this role, I think that it is important that I express my views concerning the SGA elections that took place last week.

First, I feel that the candidates in the SGA election process had a total lack of respect for the system. These students had little or no regard for the judgments rendered by the Dean of Students Office or the University Honor Board. There are many rumors being spread about the candidates in this election and the Student Attorney General that have no firm foundation and are hearsay.

As a former Honor Board member, I value these two entities and their opinions very much, especially since I have had very positive experiences with them in the past. However, there has been a conflict in what candidates were told in advance of the election, and what they were told after the election. The Orr ticket was disqualified the night before the elections, but received written documentation from the Elections Chairperson that they could run on as a write-on ticket.

After the ballots were cast, the Orr ticket was then told that their ballots would not count because the stickers were used as a form of write-in for their ticket. This was not clarified to the Orr ticket prior to the elections. I would like to stress that the Honor Board and the Elections Chairperson need to explain any future decisions that are rendered concerning SGA elections, and that all the students involved are aware of why decisions are made and how they can correct any mistakes that occur.

Second, our voting system should be fair for the students that choose to vote and the candidates. It is common knowledge that poll workers are biased by making suggestions to students about who they should or should not vote for. I witnessed biased attitudes of poll workers at Todd Dining Hall, and I was very concerned when I saw this actually happen. In this particular instance, I felt that the student was being misguided because she was told that she could not vote for the Orr ticket because they were not on the ballot, a tremendous disservice to this student. As a member of the student body, I deemed it necessary to express my opinion to the persons at the ballot station about their practices, but felt that my opinion was ignored. I have also noticed that students have no privacy while they are casting their ballots, which is also an injustice for the student body and the candidates because some students may feel intimidated.

Since this has occurred on numerous occasions during the election, I formally request the scrutiny of this election to see if another election is warranted to benefit the students of ECU.

For the future, we need to learn from and develop a process that will deter any unfair practices during our elections. Possible solutions are as follows:

1. Create a system that fosters privacy at ballot stations for the students by having private booths, where students can cast their ballot without intimidation.

2. Hire non-student workers to man the ballot stations, thereby eliminating any possibilities of students being biased while out the election box.

In closing, I am confident that any of the candidates from this election will do an outstanding job. The student body needs to understand that they have so much to lose, and so much more to gain, and that they are a crucial piece to this complicated puzzle in which they have the power to stop all the bickering and unfair practices that occur each year during our SGA elections.

Thank you,

Sydney offers track, diving, ballroom dancing?

Mark Larado
OPINION COLUMNIST

Surprisingly, it is yet another Olympic year. It is easy to know this because NBC is running commercials like, "NBC, proud owners of the Olympics of 2000, 2002, 2004, and 2006, if we live that long." This year the Olympics will be in Sydney, Australia-home of Foster's, kangaroos, and Yahoo Serious.

And like every Olympics before Sydney, each venue introduces a new sport to the Olympic repertoire. For instance, in 1988 when the Olympics were in Seoul, we were introduced to taekwondo. In 1992, we adopted men's handball. And in Atlanta, the U.S. gave the Olympics beach volleyball. This dates back to 1938 Berlin, when Hitler introduced us all to the "Jew, run for your life 200-meter," which was fortunately replaced by the triple jump in 1968.

So with all those historical events introduced into the Olympics, what event does the country that boasts that they are the most macho, manly, and burly in world want us to watch? Blind crocodile wrestling? No, ballroom dancing!

Yes, that's right, ballroom dancing is now an Olympic event. Now, I have to put my foot down on this one. I didn't mind synchronized swimming, I got used to table tennis. Hell, I looked away when it came to the walking 15-k. But I don't think ballroom dancing should be an Olympic event.

What scares me most about ballroom dancing? It's not the fact that it really isn't a sport. I'm scared that it will become popular. This happened to figure skating. Every time I turn on the TV I always see glimpses of "Legends on Ice," "Ice and the Legends," "Ice on Ice XXX," and I don't want ballroom dancing to end up with its own one-hour special always opposite a football game. The only thing that should be on opposite a football game, should be another football game (or nudity).

In addition, at the heart of every Olympic event is some survivalist nature. If the modern world was to come to an end, we can rely on the javelin throwers to spear us some food, weight lifters to help make houses, and maybe the synchronized swimmers could use their spectacular water show to put their prey into a hypnotic trance while some athlete like the hammer thrower sneaks up and knocks it out. You see, all of these are valuable skills if Olympic athletes were called upon to help us survive. The only time ballroom dancing will be needed as a valuable skill is if someone were trapped aboard a Navy frigate headed toward San Francisco.

If Sydney wants us to perceive them as being a land of "Mad Max" and Aussie Rules Football instead of the country where they filmed "Priscilla, Queen of the Desert," I suggest they combine events. I'm not talking about the decathlon-10 events over two days. I'm talking about combining events like the javelin throwers get extra points for hitting long-distance runners on the track. Just like NASCAR minus the flaming wrecks, long distance events are only fun to watch on the last lap. Now if we combine the javelin and men's five million-k that would be a fun event to watch.

Also, what the Olympics should do is to allow drug use by athletes in events that wouldn't necessarily enhance their performance, like give speed to badminton players. Hell, if they did that, we would create a whole new event; single-person badminton. Basically it would be one guy running around the net hitting the birdie either until his drugs wear off or he collapses of a heart attack.

So if we don't do something now, on Sept. 15 (which I don't even consider part of the summer) we'll be stuck watching ballroom dancing and listening to John Tesh commenting about it. I can handle John Tesh when he doesn't play his music, but I can't handle ballroom dancing.

Money corrupts Internet

Demosthenes
OPINION COLUMNIST

The Internet is supposed to be an electronic world in which free exchange of ideas and information can happen. I don't know what planet you are living on, but here on Earth, free can be a scarce commodity. The last time I went online to look for something, my e-world was bombarded by advertisements, bulletins and messages (not to mention the e-mails from Felisha at Clublove.com) all geared at extracting my money from my bank account.

You see, an electronic world is not only the perfect place to exchange all sorts of information, but it is also the perfect place to conduct business. So what is a money grubbing tycoon going to do when he sees the power of e-business? He is going to start up an Internet company and advertise his product all over the Web and anywhere else he can post his dot-com garbage.

Now who's site do you think will pop up first when you search for information on an item of interest—the independent organization who posts free info, or a site which is trying to sell you that item? Obviously, the businessman will ensure that his site comes first, thus hindering your ability to find what you need. Once again the introduction of money has corrupted a uniquely functioning system.

Born of the need to exchange research and ideas among university environments, the Internet has lived its innocent and free years and is now coming to realize the harsh reality of the world as it is bombarded by global economics. Where does it all stop, because whether you like it or not this is just the beginning.

You now have the option of free Internet connection if you so desire—but wait! What did I say about free? Free if you want to watch ads scroll across your screen while you try to download "South Park" sound bytes.

The power of communication is, in general, scary. Imagine walking around campus instantly connected by voice to anyone you wish to talk to through the microphone/receiver in your ear. Now imagine that you have to listen to running ads whenever you are not using your connection. Seems silly? It will happen if you let it—so where does it all stop?

Just like in sports and friendship, money corrupts, and will continue to corrupt the Internet with increased involvement. The Web is still a great way to find information, especially if you already know where to look, but you first have to get through the thin layer of dirt that now covers what you really want: free exchange. Where does it all stop? Until we meet again.

Time management key to happy endings

Exam time means added stress for students

Joe Schlatter
STAFF WRITER

With the end of the semester looming on the horizon, students are beginning their frantic preparation for finals. Many are also discovering they may not be as prepared as they would like.

Jennifer Rutherford, an ECU senior, is a criminal justice major planning on law school. She knows firsthand how important grades can be and how much final exams impact those grades.

"I have known I wanted to be a lawyer since my first year of high school but had second thoughts when everyone at ECU told me how hard it is to get into law school," Rutherford said. "I eventually just faced up to it and decided to do what I had to since that was what I always wanted."

Jennifer's single-minded focus is important when it comes to performing in school, according to Dr. Alfred Smith, assistant director of the Center for Counseling

"Having a clear goal is a good first start," Smith said. "If you know what you want you can work harder at getting there."

Smith and the other counselors advise students on a variety of issues, but finals time always brings about increased stress and fear in many students.

"Stress is a common problem all year but does increase at the end of the semester," Smith said. "The pressure of doing well coupled with outside stressors can overwhelm a student, especially freshmen."

Freshmen and women are Smith's most frequent clients. Women account for over 60 percent of those he sees and freshmen are represented slightly more often than other classes.

"The biggest problem students have is time management," Smith said. "If students would conceptualize more than one day at a time and work on a week or two weeks they would see less stress in everything."

According to Smith, time management and good study habits are crucial to arriving at finals time with the least amount of problems.

Other ECU students new to the college experience find it can be intimidating, but some of their own study skills have paid off so far.

Freshman Melissa Bradley knows that college is a new world with a lot of distractions, yet she feels she is doing well with the new pressures.

"I didn't ask for help studying during my first semester and ended up doing pretty well," Bradley said. "I was surprised that all my exams were cumulative, which I wasn't used to, but the study guides and cram-

STAY AWAY FROM MILK?!

PETA urges college students to drink beer while angering many

Maura Buck
ASSISTANT FEATURES EDITOR

Milk. It does a body good. Or so they say. According to People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA), milk may not be as good for the body as people think. In fact, beer may actually be healthier than a glass of the white stuff.

Recently, due to pressure from Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), PETA has modified its one-time harsh 'got beer?' campaign and turned it into a beer-is-a-healthier-beverage-than-milk argument. Although college students have been extremely receptive to the beer ads, PETA has decided to focus more on fighting the dairy industry through exposing the hardships of cattle instead of sensationalizing beer consumption.

"Personally, I don't find the 'got beer?' campaign all that offensive," said freshman Mike Slatken. "I know that I really wouldn't drink beer as opposed to milk just because they say it's healthier."

According to their Web site, PETA claims that dairy cows produce more than 100 pounds of milk a day—that's 10 times more than they would normally produce. Furthermore, PETA claims dairy cows are a threat to the environment. They expend more than 120 pounds of waste products daily, a number equivalent to that of two dozen humans. As a result, milk may actually do more harm than good to our bodies.

PETA contends that milk contains contaminants such as blood, pus, hormones and pesticides, and is linked to numerous dangerous health conditions such as obesity, heart disease and even cancer.

A study completed at Harvard suggests that milk could actually cause osteoporosis. Ironically, milk has long been believed to prevent this bone affliction.

Still, the question remains: Is drinking beer the real solution to these claims? Many students feel that this may be taking things a step too far.

"I think that the PETA people used manipulation to try to get to college students when they chose beer as an ad device," said junior Tabitha Boulding.

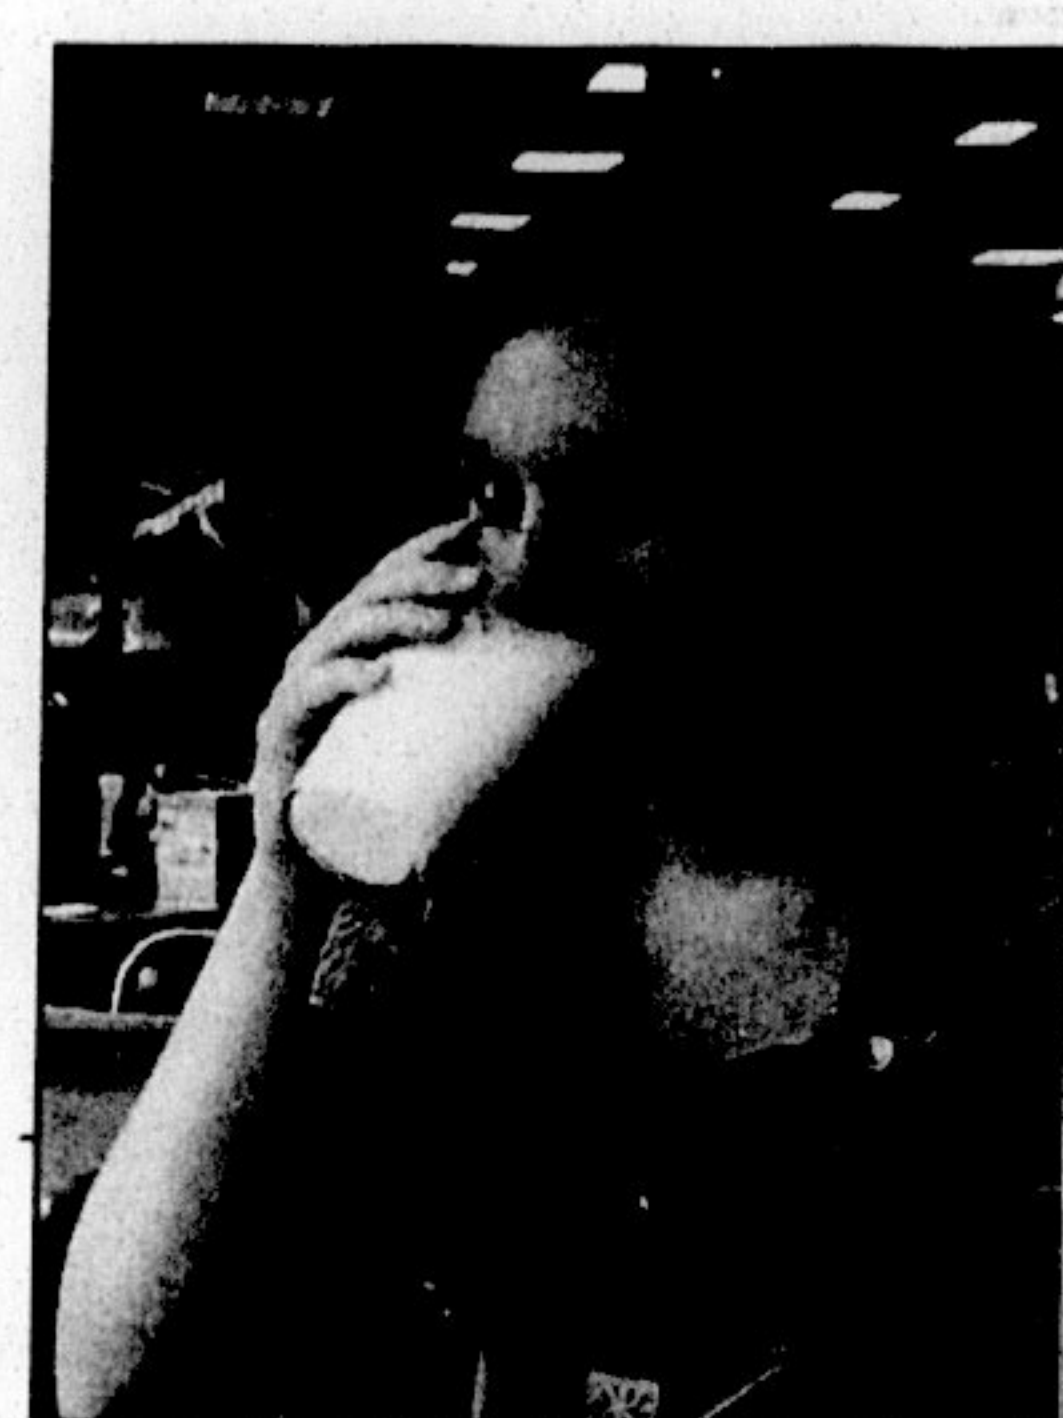

Dr. Betty Straub, director of health promotions for Student Health Services, feels that PETA's campaign strategy is out of line.

"Truthfully, I think that they could have used a 'got milk?' ad with a red circle and a slash more effectively than the 'got beer?' campaign," Straub said. "I think that it's a shame when an organization appeals specifically to college students in such a way."

We've all seen the ads hailing the utility of milk for our bodies. Who hasn't seen Kristi Yamaguchi with a milk mustache telling us that without milk she wouldn't be as strong as she is?

"The entire campaign is ridiculous," said freshman Stacy Tyner. "I would never choose to drink beer over milk."

Milk has long been believed to be a source of nutrition, providing muscles with protein and providing essential nutrients to the body, making it strong and healthy.

"For women, by the time they are 18, they seem to get diet-conscious," Straub said. "As a result, they tend to cut out milk and dairy products from their diet, a condition that will affect their bones more and more as they age."

Recently, PETA agreed to pull the 'got beer?' campaign from college campuses nationwide. However, MADD is still pushing for a complete ban of the promotion of beer. In addition, PETA included a donation of $500 to the MADD organization, which was subsequently refuted by MADD because of their continued support of beer consumption. You can check out more information on the PETA Web site at www.milksucks.com.

Good health dependent on balanced diet

Supplements, alimentation should provide necessary vitamins

Essi Akakpo
STAFF WRITER

You are what you eat, according to the adage every mother passes on to her children. The fact is, experts say the surest way an individual can prevent poor health is by obtaining his or her recommended daily allowance of essential vitamins and minerals.

"Vitamins help the body to function normally; they act like regulators and they help in the creation of new proteins," said Catherine Sullivan, nutrition intern at the department of family medicine.

"Vitamins also help protect us against heart disease and from developing various cancers," said Laura Hartung, campus dining nutrition director.

Fruits and vegetables are excellent sources of a wide variety of vitamins. Beta carotene and vitamin A are found in vegetables like tomatoes, collard greens, green leafy vegetables and sweet potatoes, and in fruits like papayas, peaches and watermelons. Broccoli, strawberries and red bell peppers are very high in vitamin C.

Valuable sources of vitamin B12, B1 and 2 are present in milk, yogurt, beans, chicken, while vitamin E can be found in nuts, wheat germ and vegetable oil.

"Pay close attention to your antioxidant food sources—beta carotene, vitamin A, vitamin C and E," Hartung said. "Antioxidants are shown to interfere with the disease process by neutralizing harmful molecules in our bodies called free radicals and to slow down the aging process ... people who eat five to seven servings of fruits and vegetables per day are 50 percent less likely to develop cancer."

If certain fruits and vegetables are out of season or just too expensive, another way to get the vitamins you need is by taking a vitamin supplement.

"The supplements are a valuable source of vitamins also," Sullivan said. "But your alimentation (diet) already provides a certain amount of vitamins, so you have to be cautious about the supplements; 50 to 100 percent of the daily value is reasonable."

Replacing poor eating habits by pill-popping without caution may cause some harm to the body.

"Pills can be harmful in excessive doses," Hartung said. "It's a lot easier to overdose using a pill, while it's very hard to overdose by eating the food source of vitamins."

For instance, too much vitamin D can cause irreversible kidney, heart and blood vessel damage and bone malformation. Also, too much vitamin C can cause diarrhea and urinary tract abnormalities.

"Do not over supplement!" Hartung said. "A multi-vitamin is OK as a protective factor, but too much can be harmful. Never take a supplement that exceeds the RDA by 150 percent."

In a casual survey, students were asked if they add fruits and vegetables to their alimentation. About 50 percent said they usually have fruits and vegetables but don't really care about getting vitamins.

"I don't think students get their vitamins naturally from foods," Hartung said. "According to a survey I took two years ago, of the 1,446 people who ate in our restaurants, only 53 percent of them felt their current eating habits were healthy. Students think healthy eating takes too much time or money. Anything worthwhile in life takes some effort. There is some truth to 'you are what you eat.'"

Matthew David Hubal, 22, was pronounced dead at Centinela Mammoth Hospital. The accident occurred at about 3 a.m., the Mono County Sheriff's Department said. Hubal and his friends apparently had hiked a ski run called Stump Alley and undid some yellow foam protectors from the lift towers, said Lieutenant Mike Donnelly of the Mammoth Lakes Police Department.

The pads are used to protect skiers who might hit the towers. The group apparently used the pads to slide down the ski slope and Hubal crashed into a tower. It was not clear if the tower he hit was one with its pad removed. "With the cold temperatures, the snow was probably pretty fast," said Donnelly.

ming with my notes pulled me through."

As a nursing major, Bradley says she knows her grades are important but feels she has a handle on her classes. Her roommate, freshman Jessica Lassiter, has found things a bit easier.

"I had a few cumulative exams in high school so that didn't really shock me, but the difficulty of some of my exams last semester still surprised me," Lassiter said.

Time management might not have caught up with them yet, but both agree that they have particular study styles.

"I don't study in groups. I tend to do better by myself," Lassiter said.

Bradley also finds relying on herself is the way to go. These roommates feel they will be ready for finals—when they get to them—and will finish their first year with good grades.

Jennifer Rutherford has found as she finishes her senior year that the skills she learned at school are the way to go. She stays with her reading, she sets goals for each day and finds herself ready for finals.

With exams less than a month away it's time to begin preparing by creating study schedules and planning time to study with a group or in a quiet place. And if all of this is still overwhelming, give the counselors at the Center for Student Development a call. After all, it is all about the grades.

Herrion, Hamrick respond to charges

Coach says he did not incite fight

Stephen Schramm
SPORTS EDITOR

Mike Hamrick, ECU director of athletics, and Bill Herrion, head men's basketball coach, responded to recent allegations that Herrion's rhetoric may have played a role in a late-season brawl.

"I have also discussed this matter at length with Coach Herrion, and I have been impressed with his honesty and candor," Hamrick said in a statement released Friday. "While never inciting players to physical violence toward one another or anyone else, he recognizes that phrases used commonly by coaches to athletes can be subject to misrepresentation."

"While it was reported that this was a program in which fights were encouraged in practice, based on what I have learned from speaking with the players, this was not the case."

Fighting was not promoted, competition was. In fact, prior to the one reported incident, there had been no fights involving basketball team members. Aggressive-sounding language, common to athletic coaching, however, can easily be taken out of context and portrayed in a way never intended."

In the release, Herrion also responded.

"This past season, I have coached the way I've always coached," Herrion said. "I believe that there are certain fundamental principles necessary to build an outstanding basketball program. Included in these are maximum effort; commitment, loyalty, and trust between coaches, players and support staff. In retrospect, if I have made statements which could have been misinterpreted, I truly regret doing so. I would never encourage fighting among my players."

"I believe that my reputation and track record speak for themselves. In no way do we promote fighting in our basketball program. Rather, we promote the achievement of excellence through maximum effort and dedication."

Herrion came under fire following allegations that his coaching style caused a locker room fight between players Quincy Hall and David Taylor. Following the fight, trainer Jim Bazluki, who voiced his concerns over Herrion's conduct, did not have his contract renewed.

Pirates drop two to Rams

ECU splits Sunday doubleheader

Stephen Schramm
SPORTS EDITOR

With an unblemished CAA record and the top spot in the conference on the line, the Pirates lost two out of three games to VCU this weekend at Harrington Field.

"We didn't play well this weekend," said ECU shortstop Lee Delfino. "We can't look upon this negatively. There's 56 games in a season. We've got to come out and play hard. We've got to come together as a team and start playing like we are capable of doing."

The Pirates lost the first game of the series Friday night, 3-2. Saturday's game was suspended due to heavy rains. That set up a double header on Sunday. The Pirates won the first game 2-1 but fell in the second, 5-4.

In Friday's game, the Pirates took a 1-0 lead on an RBI double from Nick Schnabel. Schnabel would then score on a ground ball from Bryant Ward. In the top of the fourth the Rams answered with a two-run homer from Davy Martin off Foye Minton.

In the seventh, the Rams' Robbie Gragnani led off the inning with a single. Outfielder Matt Davis sent a base hit into left field that moved Gragnani to third. Gragnani would then score on a base hit from Chris Gerrity.

Minton was pulled in the top of the eighth. He allowed three runs on eight hits over seven innings. He collected nine strikeouts without issuing a single walk.

Despite Minton's strong outing, the Pirates were unable to mount much offense and the lefthander picked up the loss.

"Obviously we didn't swing the bats well," said Head Coach Keith LeClair. "They didn't swing the bats well either, but they did a better job with situational hitting than we did."

Following rains on Saturday evening, the Pirates took the field Sunday looking to avenge their first conference loss of the season. However, this time it was VCU righthander Bo Acors who almost washed out the Pirates.

Acors did not allow a hit until Schnabel sent a line drive into left field. Following a walk to ECU James Molinari, Bryant Ward laid down a bunt that moved the two baserunners into scoring position. With runners on second and third, ECU's Joseph Hastings sent a base hit past first. Both runs scored and ECU took a 2-0 lead.

While Acors was keeping the Pirates off the basepaths for much of the day, ECU righthander Jason Mandryk was also having a fine afternoon. His only run came in the top of the seventh off a sacrifice fly from pinch hitter Tim Allen that scored Jose Pabon.

After eight strong innings, Mandryk was pulled in favor of righthander Cory Scott. Scott walked Martin and gave up infield hits to VCU's Cory Bauswell and Jose Pabon to load the bases. Scott then struck out Gragnani and Allen and got Davis to ground out the shortstop to end the game in dramatic fashion.

"They got a couple of good bunts down," Scott said. "I had a lot of confidence in the team behind me, so it was pretty easy to throw strikes in the ninth inning. As long as I threw strikes, it would be pretty easy to get them out."

In the second game of the doubleheader, the Pirates went ahead once again. In the second inning a single from catcher Cliff Godwin scored Hastings to put the Pirates up 1-0. The Pirates added two more runs when Delfino cracked a two-run homer in the third inning.

"I felt like I was getting good looks for most of the day," Delfino said. "I just wasn't putting the bat on the ball. I was just fortunate to get one."

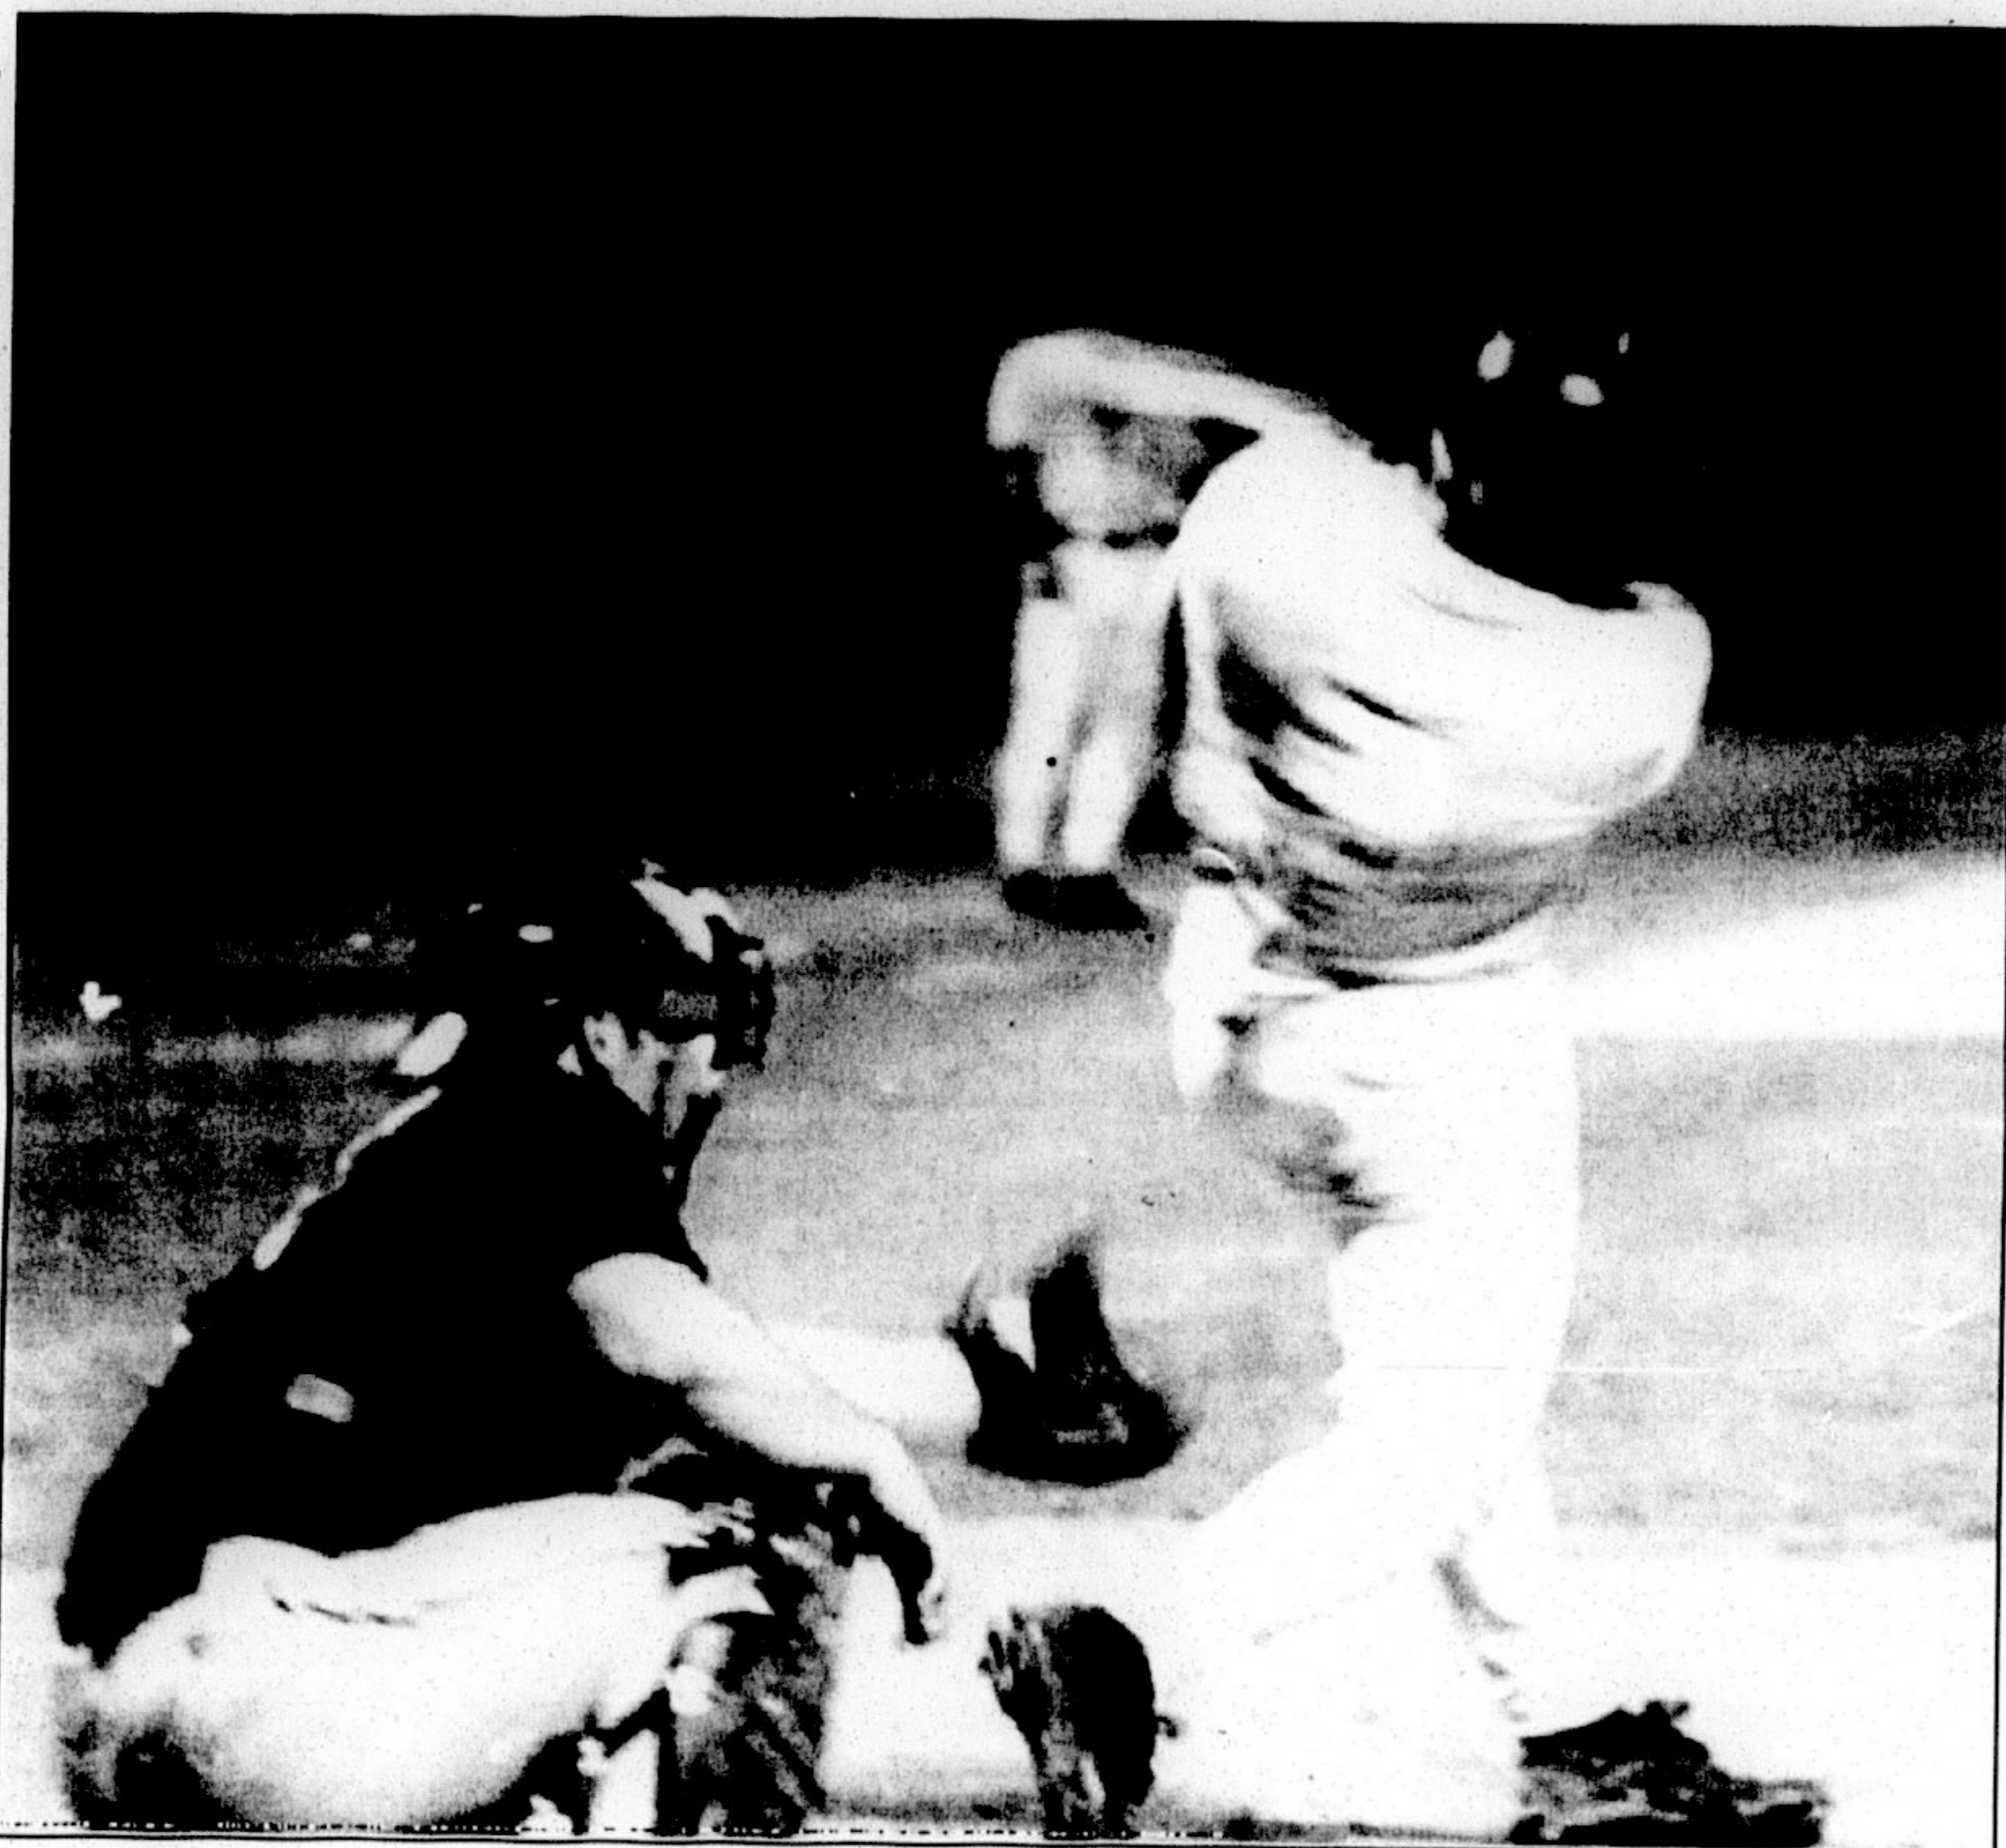

In the top of the fourth, the Rams answered, scoring two runs of their own on two sacrifice flies by Martin and Bauswell.

In the fifth, VCU knotted the game at three when Kevin Elrod scored on a Gragnani ground ball.

Gragnani put the Rams up 5-3 in the seventh when his base hit scored VCU's Brian Mohr and Elrod.

The Pirates would cut the lead to one when Molinari doubled, scoring Ward. That would be as close as the Pirates would come as the Rams went on to win 5-4.

Tennis team falls to N.C. State

Lady Pirates lose to Wolfpack 6-3

Ryan Downey
STAFF WRITER

The Lady Pirates lost a hard-fought match against N.C. State last Thursday.

The match was originally scheduled as the final match of the season but because of a postponement earlier in the season there will be a match Tuesday at home against Richmond.

The Lady Pirates started with leads in four out of the six singles matches which opened the contest, but were unable to hold on to early momentum, succumbing 6-3 to the Wolfpack.

The team had many close matches that they nearly pulled out. Senior Asa Ellbring started off strong against Marissa Gildemeister but lost in three sets, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2. Her doubles partner Hrushida Kamthe got the only win at the No. 2 spot against Brie Glover, 6-4, 6-3.

Freshman Emily Kohl lost a hard-fought match in straight sets against Myrna Bawono at the No. 4 position, 7-5, 6-1. Sophomore captain Meredith Spears lost at the No. 5 to Kristen Nicholls, 6-3, 6-1. Singles was rounded out with sophomore Andrea Terrill losing to Landis Strader 3-6, 7-5, 6-2.

"We played a real tough match today," said Tom Morris, ECU Head Coach. "They played the critical points in the critical matches better than we did. We had chances to win in three tough, hard-fought matches that we just did not capitalize on. Right now we are not winning matches against tough teams and we need to work on that."

The match was a positive situation that got out of hand toward the end with ECU establishing themselves but they were unable to keep up the intensity.

"This was going to be our day," Kamthe said. "We could have beaten this team but we lost it at the end."

Lyndall Jordan who lost a long match to Loni Worley, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4 was still positive after the match.

"We played well even though we lost," Jordan said. "This has been a good season. We have played better than last year and have a good future."

"We've had a good season," Morris said. "We had a ten-game winning streak earlier in the year and showed a lot of improvement from last season. As far as against State, we had a chance to win which shows how far we have come. Last year they beat us 8-1, and this year we played a much better match and lost 6-3."

"We had a lot of close matches, and in those close matches State responded better at the critical points. We are heading in the right direction. We were upset that we lost because the match did mean a lot to us, but we are heading in the right direction. We want to be competitive with the local ACC schools, and that is what we are building toward."

The team will close out the season against the Richmond Spiders Tuesday.

BRIEFS

Single rules out 215

Duval to join Masters

David Duval, who has been a consistent performer on the PGA Tour, will be joining the Masters tournament in May. Duval, who has won the 1997 U.S. Open, is expected to be one of the favorites to win the tournament. He will be joined by other top players like Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson.

This is something I think you can't beat," Singh said while slipping a size 46 green jacket over his broad shoulders.

David Duval and Loren Roberts tied for third place with 70 and Woods, trying to pull off the greatest 36-hole comeback in Masters history, got within three strokes of the lead but were overtaken by Tiger Woods in the final round.

Stottlemire hopes ### to continue rebuilding

Yankees manager George Steinbrenner hopes to continue rebuilding the team this season. He has made several trades to improve the team's defense and offense. He is confident that the team will be competitive in the playoffs.

The treatment will include four months of chemotherapy, meaning Stottlemire will miss the Yankees' home opener against Texas on Tuesday. He does not expect to miss many games this season.

Chmura arrested for sexual assault

Green Bay Packer tight end Mark Chmura was arrested Monday on accusations of sexual assault. Two females, ages 17 and 18, alleged Chmura and another man had inappropriate sexual contact with them at a Hartland area residence over the weekend, said Waukesha County District Attorney Paul Bucher.

Chmura, 31, has not been formally charged, Bucher said. Chmura is entering his ninth season in the NFL after sitting out most of the last following a neck injury he received during the second game of the season. A Packers spokesman said the team will comment once the team has more information.

MOVIE REVIEWS

MAN ON THE MOON (R)

The life and times of Andy Kaufman, who was considered one of the most innovative, eccentric and enigmatic comics of his time, provide the basis for this biographical drama starring Jim Carrey as the master manipulator, a comic who made up his own rules. Featured players include Danny Devito as Kaufman's manager, George Shapiro; Courtney Love as Lynne Margulies, a documentary filmmaker who fell in love with the comic; and Paul Giamatti as Kaufman's best friend, Bob Zmuda.

DEUCE BIGALOW MALE GIGOLO (R)

Deuce Bigalow is a fish tank cleaner until he gets a temporary job watching over a gigolo's house. But when Deuce accidentally wrecks the house, he is forced to compensate by becoming a gigolo himself! He takes on interesting clients (a tall Swedish woman, a rotund eater in drag, a roommate who curses every five seconds, a nurse)...and together with a detective chasing Deuce down...

Thank You ECU Sophomores

Over ninety percent of you responded to the Sophomore Institutional Evaluation Form promptly and efficiently. Your opinions of ECU instruction, offices, and services will be compiled into reports that will be available for your review on the Planning and Institutional Research website (www.ecu.edu/pir) this summer.

A compilation of your responses will be sent to the University of North Carolina General Administration where it will be compared with responses from sophomores at each of the other UNC campuses. These reports will be provided to the North Carolina legislature.

Your opinions are also important within ECU. ECU administrators and faculty will review compilations of the data you provided to identify areas of strength to build upon, as well as weaknesses to be corrected.

Again, Thank You for helping to improve ECU's programs!
