

I think I positively change the LGBTQ community by educating people about it. Whether the person is younger or older, I feel like educating them about the LGBTQ community will most likely benefit them in the future. Some people already have their set thoughts about the community based on their upbringing, whether it be religion, culture, or class. I do feel however that educating people on certain topics within the LGBTQ community could either change their views or help to transform a negative standpoint into a positive one. With that being said, people are who they are and we have to accept that.
