

The President of the United States has the confidence of our people, perhaps more completely than any other President in my day. He knows and he sympathizes with our people. He is not afraid to take all the people into his confidence all the time and on all subjects; he is not afraid to trust the people in any of our public questions. He is taking a nation crippled in its finances and industries and trying a great experiment; he calls it an experiment. It is being worked out by the best minds in finance and the various industries in our nation. At the present time it seems to be working out in a most successful manner.

At Warm Spring, Georgia, through the best minds in the line of medicine, he is working out an experiment to cure crippled people. This experiment is coming through in a most satisfactory manner. To make this project a success the people of the United States are holding thousands of dances tonight to raise money for an endowment to help those who cannot help themselves back on their feet. This is a Rooseveltian policy, for individuals and for a nation.

We are pleased to hold the dance in the campus building of East Carolina Teachers College tonight. The occasion calls for the whole-hearted support of all sober minded patriotic citizens. The occasion calls for conduct on the part of our citizens in keeping with the purpose for which the dances are being held. We want only right-minded men and women to attend; people who conduct themselves in a way that will be in keeping with the cause for which the dance is given. If you come, I am sure you will properly conduct yourself. If you cannot come, buy a ticket and let your money help save unfortunate citizens.

We are expecting to have a great time and hope to have you present.

Day of President's
Building in campus
Rohls address
Tuesday Jan 21, 1924