SHOWN WITH MRS. BYNUM IS J. B. SMITH AND FAMILY

At 100, Daisy Bynum Is Still Full of Music

Daisy Reeves Bynum sings old hymns almost constantly. And when the spirit moves her, she dances.

For dancing she grasps the steadying arm of a loved one.

She walks the same way, though it takes an energetic person to keep up with her.

The Cambridge Drive resident lived most of the first 92 years of her life on Clark Street. She was reared there by her older sisters, Mary and Ida Reeves, and she and her husband, Demous, reared their six children there.

She helped her husband farm some, worked in the Brown House Tobacco factory seasonally, and washed and ironed for the H.A. White family and others.

She has been a Christian almost all her life. Long ago she helped found Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church. But she later joined Philippi Church of Christ. Parnell and now has the distinction of being the oldest member of its Mother Board.

Her husband died 40 years ago. Mrs. Bynum has remained a widow since and has lived on into old age — extreme old age.

She is 100 years old today.

"I'm an old woman," she declares, looking out with bright eyes as she fingers a neat, white apron. She stands up with help, extends an arm and asks if you'll accompany her to the dining room for some pudding.

Her only surviving son, Parnell, is her mainstay, her major caregiver. To her, he is a young man, even though he's long retired from his job with East Carolina University. She reminds him often that she's an old woman and he'd best listen to her.

Eight years ago, Bynum moved his mother from her Clark Street home to his home in Cambridge subdivision.

He hires a woman to come in on weekdays to bathe and otherwise care for Mrs. Bynum. But weekends he takes the duty himself. One week a month, his sister, Mary Small, his only living sibling, comes from Hampton, Va., to give him a break.

"We just take each day at a time," he said. "Mama's still able-bodied. And as long as she is, as long as I can manage, she'll be right here."

Mrs. Bynum's other four children have died during the past 10 years. But there are plenty of grandchildren — 15 — and 14 great-grandchildren. And some nieces, nephews and cousins. Almost all of these gathered Saturday for a pig-pickin' in Mrs.

Bynum's honor.

"Mama seemed to enjoy it all," Mrs. Small said. "We had about 70 people there. It's not often that you get to celebrate the 100th birthday of a loved one. It was wonderful for us all to be together."

Firearms policy text is issued

Kelly M. Alexander, Jr., president of the N.C. State Conference of Branches of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) has released the text of a Model Police Department Policy on Use of Deadly Force and Use of Firearms.

The policy is intended to be shared with police chiefs across the state to help decrease incidences of police aggression against civilians, while providing the framework in which officers may defend themselves.

Alexander has asked the various branches across the state to discuss the model policy with their respective municipal police chiefs, county sheriffs, city and county managers. He is asking the branches to be ready to report on this activity at the organization's state convention scheduled for October 25-27 in Hickory.

Salient points of the policy as outlined by Alexander include:

- The importance of restraint in unholstering and discharging firearms.

- Authorizing shooting only when necessary to defend life, or to destroy injured or dangerous animals.

- Prohibiting shooting when innocent people may be endangered; warning shots; "shots in the air" to call for help; and shooting at or from moving cars, unless opponents are shooting at police.

- Permitting unholstering of firearms only when necessary to bring an unlawful situation under control.

- Requiring officers to report in writing all firearms discharges.

- Requiring all officers who discharge firearms to attend post-shooting psychological counseling.

- Establishing a board to review and adjudicate all firearms discharges.

- Suggesting means by which the firearms discharge review board may conclude their reviews.

- Requiring the police chief to act upon the recommendation of the review board; to make public the results of investigation and review and any resulting departmental action.

- Requiring officers be qualified by training before being permitted to carry firearms.

- Establishing procedures to record all firearms owned by officers; to allow identification of bullets fired from officers; and for on-duty officers to carry second weapons.

- Establishing guidelines for the carrying of firearms while officers are off-duty and for off-duty police action by officers.

Alcohol and Drugs Play Major Role In Violent Deaths

From a muggy mid-August Thursday to just before sunset on Sunday, alcohol and other drugs made mourners of three area families.

In four days, a self-inflicted rifle had killed a Winterville man; a smoky housefire suffocated a Snow Hill man, and a speedy car crash fatally injured a Bell Arthur man.

Police said the suicide victim struggled with a drug addiction for years. Autopsies of the other men showed they were drunk when they died.

In Pitt County, such deaths are becoming more commonplace, as a county medical examiner noted recently, with drugs — especially alcohol having a role in most unnatural deaths.

"Most vehicle-related deaths and more than half of the homicides and most of the large groups of violent deaths and suicides are also alcohol-related."

"More than half of the homicides and most of the large groups of violent deaths and suicides are also alcohol-related."

Hudson said such alcohol-related tragedies mirror injuries and fatalities occurring across the state.

"The incidences of deaths related to alcohol intoxication are certainly very high here, but I don't think that Pitt County is doing any worse or any better than the other counties," Hudson said.

Through years of toxicological studies of murder, suicide and accident victims statewide, Hudson said, medical examiners have detected a common thread of drug presence most notably alcohol. Coroners collected autopsy data over a 10-year period and published the findings in a 1989 report in the American Journal of Preventive Medicine.

The report said that alcohol was present in 62.8 percent of murder victims in the state, in 48.6 percent of accident victims and in 35.3 percent of suicide victims. It noted alcohol being detected in 14.4 percent of natural death victims.

More than half of the murder victims had blood alcohol levels exceeding the legal limit of .10, the report said. And, 39.7 percent of accident victims and 26.6 percent of those who committed suicide were considered legally drunk. Only 8.2 percent of natural death victims were drunk.

The report also found that alcohol was a factor in most weekend and nighttime deaths, especially in individuals who died between 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. While alcohol-related deaths generally did not vary seasonally, the report noted that most murders and suicides occurred in the summer.

In 1988, the state Department of Human Resources published a study of 200 house-fire deaths which showed that 112 victims — all ages 15 and older — were drunk when they died. Victims of cooking-related housefires were intoxicated more often than other victims, the study said.

In Pitt County, most traffic accidents — fatal or not — involve drunken drivers, according to 1st Sgt. C.E. Pearce of the state Highway patrol.

"A lot of the wrecks are caused by alcohol. About 50 percent of the drivers are drinking and that has held true for several years," Pearce said.

"I'm sure that abuse (of other drugs) is on the increase, we're all aware of that. But, so far, we have not seen a significant increase in traffic accidents related to that."

Pearce, whose office also covers Martin County, said the Highway Patrol is targeting drunken drivers. "Our number one objective is to get drinking drivers off the road and reduce fatalities."

He said a new state law which became effective on Saturday should deter drunken drivers. Under the new law, drivers of commercial vehicles are considered legally drunk if their blood alcohol level is .04, he said, noting that .10 had been the legal limit. He said any vehicle that weighs at least 26,001 pounds and transports people or property is considered commercial.

Highway Patrol efforts to curb drunken driving are paying off, according to Pearce. He said traffic fatalities have gone down in recent years and DWI arrests have gone up.

The Greenville Police Department has recorded only three alcohol-related fatalities in the past five years. Department records show 76 alcohol-related injuries in 1985; 87 in 1986; 55 in 1987; 59 in 1988 and 48 in 1990. Police say the most common alcohol-related crime locally is damage to property, noting that the city has averaged 100 cases a year since 1985.

Persons under the influence of alcohol or drugs may quickly become disoriented and find themselves in situations that are dangerous, even life-threatening, said Sandra Thomas, a local addictions counselor.

"The irresponsible use of drugs and alcohol leads to and results in irresponsible behavior because it disorients the brain and results in faulty or aberrated thinking," said

Ms. Thomas. "It pervades the total being — the physical being, the emotional-mental being and the spiritual being."

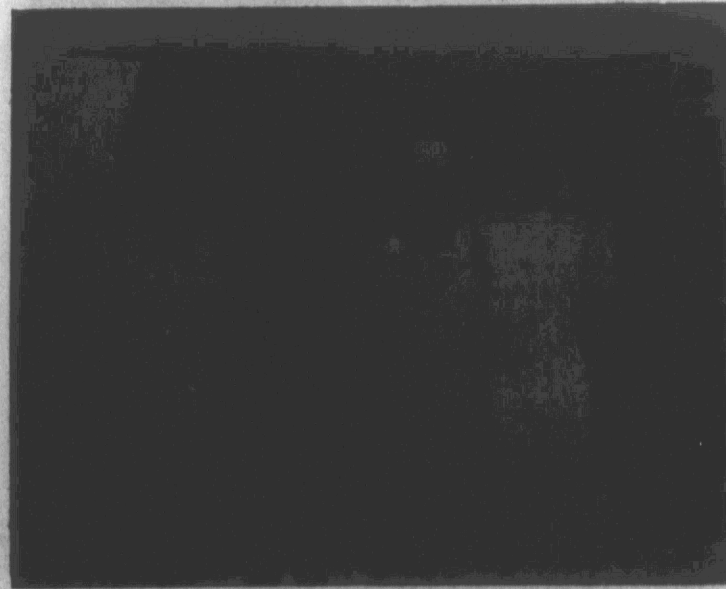

She said substance abusers cannot stop their addictions on their own, but need the help of family members and trained addictions specialists.

"Treatment is the answer, it can be very successful. But families are usually the only route to treatment because the impaired person is usually lost and difficult to reach," Ms. Thomas said.

"Educating the family is what gets people to treatment and it's just about the only thing that will work."

She said families must first stop contributing to the problem by doing such things as giving money to a substance abuser when he has none; allowing the abuser to live at home despite knowledge of a problem; ignoring the person's irresponsible behavior, and bailing out the person when he gets into trouble.

"This is a family disease and the impaired person is only the symptom-bearer."

Kenneth Hammond, UGUC representative and Jo Linda Saunders, city representative of the Greenville Economic Development Corporation, are two of the first year officers.

Do you have a cancer-prone personality?

1. Responding to emotional stress with feelings of helplessness and hopelessness;
2. A tendency to avoid conflict and seek harmony in all situations — an overriding need to be "nice";
3. Hiding feelings of anger, fear, and anxiety in the face of upsetting experiences and maintaining a rational and irrational front.

Many people have all three of these characteristics, but even one is potentially dangerous.

Mrs. Jean Darden and Mr. Charles Horne are the two new members added to the Comprehensive Plan Committee, August 1990. The purpose of this committee is to plan for the "future" of Greenville.

Plan interested persons to attend meeting #3 specifically: St. Gabriel School, 1101 Ward Street, Thursday, September 27, from 7:30 - 9 p.m.

Congratulations and God's Blessings on your 100 birthday, Thursday, August 30, Mrs. Dairy Bynum of 106 Cambridge Road.

Pro-Life Perspective By John C. Wilke, M.D.

Dear Christian Station Program Director:

Abortion is probably the most important and talked-about issue facing our nation. And, as we all know, the secular media has covered this issue almost exclusively from a pro-abortion standpoint. The networks and major daily newspapers talk about women's rights, but never the right to life of more than 4,000 unborn children killed by abortion each day. They talk about "choice," but never mention that the "choice" to have an abortion means stopping a beating heart.

Because of the increased focus on abortion, Christians and others who value and respect all human life are very aware that they must become informed and active on the life issues because the unborn and disabled cannot speak for themselves.

That's the role of "Pro-life Perspective." It's a concise (five minute), daily (five days a week), dose of truth on abortion and other life premature babies. The message comes from the National Right to Life Committee, the nation's largest pro-life group, through its president, Dr. John C. Wilke, who travels and speaks across the world.

First aired in January 1985, the program now broadcasts on more than 350 outlets nationwide. Many program directors tell me that "Pro-Life Perspective" is regularly one of the most, often the most, popular short format program in station listener surveys. Still, some communities, perhaps yours, do not hear the truth about abortion and other life issues because "Pro-Life Perspective" may not yet be broadcast in your area.

Won't you consider giving your listeners a chance to hear the real story about the life issue by airing "Pro-Life Perspective" on your station? It's especially critical now for pro-life Americans to become involved in the abortion debate since the media has given so much attention recently to the alleged strength of pro-abortion forces.

I've enclosed a sample of transcripts of "Pro-Life Perspective" so you can see the variety of ways the life issues are discussed.

If you would like to audition an tape of the program, please contact me at (202) 626-8833 and I will be happy to send you a tape and more information. By the way, "Pro-Life Perspective" is provided at absolutely no cost to your station. I look forward to hearing from you.

LETTER FROM SHERRY—HER ABORTION STORY

Today, I have a letter from Sherry. My heart was touched by it. Perhaps yours will be, too.

June 22, 1979 will forever stay in my mind and in my heart. You see, that is the day I had my abortion.

At the time, it didn't seem like it would be such a big, life-changing thing.....but it was — and it is.

When I was 19 years old, I lived with my fiancé for almost a year. I had turned my back on my Christian beliefs, family and friends..... all in the name of love. My lover's reaction to the possibility of my being pregnant was, "If that's how you plan to get me to marry you, then you're crazy!"

Fortunately, I wasn't pregnant. But, a month later, I was.

This time he spoke of his undying love for me and how he wanted us to have children, but how unfair it would be to all of us at this point.

"Don't you want your kids to have everything we can give them? He then mentioned an abortion.

I was so confused and afraid. I couldn't stand the idea of disappointing my parents. Moving in with him was one thing. A child born outside of marriage would be quite something else.

I wanted to keep everyone as happy as I possibly could. According to what I could find on the subject, abortion was really no big deal. No real medical risk — just a routine outpatient operation. I'd be home by mid-afternoon.

After all, it wasn't even a baby yet. I was never told anything... not about the risks, not about the pain and not about the development of the tiny human inside me.

The day came.

The people in that dirty brown building were very matter-of-fact as they showed me the tube to be used in the suction procedure and counseled me. They drew blood, prepped me and finally stood beside me as a strange, uncaring man took my child.

However, they weren't there one year later to take away the pain when I would hear a baby cry, and yet there was none. Mine was gone.

Since then, I have denied it, accepted it and hated it. I have wanted to talk about it. Yet, I refused to discuss it.

I hated myself for what I did and hated the right-to-life people for making me aware of it. It's shattering to find out after having an abortion that the blob of

Tony Brown Comments

Pete Stark, A Disgrace To His Race

A few years ago, a Washington Post writer wanted to know why I had been a speaker at the Fairmont Conference in San Francisco.

He didn't cover my message at the Republican-sponsored event featuring the Reagan Administration's new luminaries and an assortment of Blacks, many of whom were Democrats. Instead he implied that I was there without prior approval of those who opposed Reagan.

My response was that I did not live on the Post's plantation, or anyone else's, therefore I did not need permission to leave D.C.

I am reminded of this event because of the attempted spanking of Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan, a black, by a White liberal congressman, Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, a white California Democrat.

Stark called Sullivan "a disgrace to his race" because he differs with Stark on certain health care issues.

"I don't live on Pete Stark's plantation. It's too bad ultra liberals like Pete Stark haven't progressed to the point that they can accept the independent thinking of a Black man that does not conform to their own stereotyped views," Sullivan, the former dean of Morehouse University's School of Medicine, shot back.

We all know what attitudes Stark's comment reflected. The Black race is too inferior to analyze complicated issues of situations; that's what White liberals are for, he implied. Besides, who gave Sullivan or any Black permission to be a part of a Republican Administration; Blacks, after all, are wards of the Democratic Party, he blatantly implied.

Stark has never called a White man with whom he disagreed a "disgrace to his race." Sullivan, Stark said, was "an apologist for a racist administration." Why then has he never called a black in Congress who apologizes for racist Democrats a "disgrace to his race?"

Ron Brown, the black chairman of the Democratic Party, is an apologist for a racist party. He even apologized for Stark's racist slur against Sullivan. That makes Brown by Stark's own definition, "a disgrace to his race." But Brown was, also by Stark's definition, defending the designated plantation overseer, which makes what he did acceptable.

For Stark's information, and White liberals like him, Sullivan's politics are his personal business. Moreover, his record, of service to the Black community is exemplary.

Last week, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), the organization founded by Martin Luther King, presented Dr. Sullivan with one of its annual awards. SCLC also honored Martin Luther King III. I received SCLC's Black Empowerment Award.

As a leader in the field of medicine, Dr. Sullivan special-tissue actually had fingers and toes.

I went up and down trying to deal with what I had done. I couldn't tell anyone. Then, I finally found the answer.

I took it all to Jesus and asked Him to forgive me and to heal me. He has brought me to face it in hopes of helping someone who is where I once was. Now I can ask, "How dare they lie to us and kill these precious little ones?"

Today, I have a wonderful Christian husband who loves me very much. And as I write this letter to you, my five-and-a-half month baby growing within me is kicking and squirming as if to say that he or she has an opinion to be heard, too.

Signed, Sherry.

Does a baby in the womb hear what you're saying? Well, there was a time not too long ago then most of us had the impression that this was a dark and silent world.

Now that's been dispelled, for we know that in the fourth month the baby is capable of hearing, and after that; say, after the sixth month, the hearing is so detailed that babies remember things.

I'm looking at an article in the Medical Tribune from a few weeks ago. Its title is, "Caution: Noise May Peril the Fetus." The subtitle is, "Is Noise an Intrauterine Threat?"

Let me just give you the first couple of paragraphs, and I'm quoting:

Investigators at the University of Southern California could hardly believe their ears when they began eavesdropping on pregnant women and their fetuses. Using specially designed and protected microphones, they found that human fetuses live in an almost totally unfiltered world of sound.

"In listening to what a baby was hearing, which included just normal noise, such as traffic, alarm clocks and telephones, I couldn't believe what a baby is subjected to," Dr. Phelan said. He said at one point he had to turn the monitor down because, "I couldn't stand the noise."

He noted that there is, "an almost complete duplication of sound in the womb, minus about 10 decibels." And certainly not what we had anticipated.

We've always known that the baby listened to the mother's heart. That's a constant pounding that literally surrounds the child. But how much else?

These researchers, listening in on the microphone in the womb, said this, "We heard almost everything, from people talking twelve feet away, to a door opening in a room, to a cart going down the hall with the door closed. The clarity was incredible. It was very easy to tell who was talking in the room. There's an almost complete duplication of external sound inside of the womb." Isn't that interesting?

The doctors then went on to note that we protect our own ears from loud noises. What about the baby? When a pregnant woman works in a factory, she often wears earmuffs to block out the noise. Now we know that the baby listens at almost the same decibel level. The researchers asked, "Can this have a detrimental affect on the baby?"

There is certainly no question that loud noises affect the unborn baby, most obviously by increasing the heart rate and body movements of the baby. The author suggest — and let me quote them. They suggest that, "anxiety and discomfort may be experienced by unborn babies exposed to 100 decibels or more."

Well, that is a fair amount of noise — 100 decibels or more." But in any case — isn't that interesting? Your baby hears everything you and your husband say.

AFL-CIO

Well, we won another big one and I'll bet that a lot of you didn't read anything about this in the newspapers. We defeated a major move by pro-abortion forces to get the AFL-CIO union to take a pro-abortion stand. Let me tell you, if they had taken a pro-abortion stand, it would have been headlines coast to coast.

Pro-life perspective (continued from page 3)

It all began in the fall of 1989 when a group of five unions proposed to the ruling council of the AFL-CIO that it take a pro-abortion stand. Mr. Lane Kirkland appointed a committee of 18 people to study it and make a recommendation. There were only three who were pro-life on the committee.

Mr. David Andrusko, editor of the National Right to Life News, designed a striking poster. It had a large picture of Lech Walesa, from Poland, and it simply said that if this resolution passes he couldn't belong to an American labor union—because Walesa is strongly against abortion.

Early on, I obtained information that the main argument in union circles for passage was this. Union membership is declining. The percent of women in unions is increasing. Since all women favor abortion, therefore, if the unions is increasing. Since all women favor abortion, therefore, if the unions take a pro-abortion position, they will attract more women. End of Argument.

I knew this was not so. More women oppose abortion than men. More blue collar people oppose abortion than white collar people. So we suggested a major poll to a national neutral pollster. Its results astonished the union leaders. It showed that 77 percent of members of union households felt that the AFL-CIO shouldn't take a position on abortion. Of those who feel it should have a position, 43 percent said it should oppose abortion, while only 31 percent favored it.

Better yet, polling of union members showed a small majority opposed to abortion. But among union women, opposition to abortion ran at a better than 2-to-1 rate. Well, don't you worry. Through a variety of channels, every union local in the United States heard about that poll.

Cardinal John O'Connor of New York, known to be very sympathetic to unions, wrote a strong statement which also really shook the union leaders up. After reiterating his own strong union sympathies, the Cardinal pointed to a Supreme Court decision that would allow members of professional organizations and unions to withhold part of their dues in the event their union took a position on an issue that was offensive to the member.

Leaders in the pro-life movement gave this wide publicity. You heard us drumming on it constantly in our newspaper. The flood of letters that went in must have been overwhelming. Many locals petitioned against the resolution.

Finally, the committee that had stacked 15 to 3 against us ended up voting 15 to 3 with us. That recommendation went to the central council of 38 leaders, and the vote there was 35 to 3 in favor of not passing the resolution. This magnificent victory happened because a lot of you were working on this, and I have a hunch an awful lot of you were praying, too.

Meadowbrooks Residents Decide to Fight Back

by Cynthia Marvin

Residents of Meadowbrook have decided to fight back against the type of behavior which has turned their quiet neighborhood into a place where parents are afraid to let children play in their front yards.

On August 16, Meadowbrook rallied together to form a neighborhood association. They named their new association "Concerned Citizens of Meadowbrook".

"We cannot sit back and watch alcoholics, drug dealers, and bad people come in and take over our neighborhood," Terry Bynum said. Bynum is the newly elected President of the association.

What concerns Meadowbrook residents most are litter problems, speeding traffic, junk cars, unsafe housing, loud music being played until all hours, and drugs. These problems are plaguing other Greenville neighborhoods, as well.

Meadowbrook is not facing this fight alone. The City of Greenville will actively participate in helping residents address these concerns. The two groups (Meadowbrook and City staff) were brought together at the urging of Greenville's Mayor Pro-Tem, Rufus Huggins. The Mayor Pro-Tem organized the get-together and arranged to have City personnel in attendance.

Thirteen city officials and staff members attended the meeting on August 16 at the Operation Sunshine Building. They listened to Meadowbrook residents explain the problems.

On hand to answer questions from Meadowbrook citizens were: City manager Ron Kimble, Police Chief Jerome Tesmond, Fire/Rescue Chief Jenness Allen, Public Works Director Mayo Allen, and Chief Building Inspector Jim Kaufman. Also attending were Capt. Nelson Staton, Sgt. C.J. Hardy, and Off. James Tripp of the Police Dept., Asst. Fire Chief Raymond Carney, Traffic Engineer Glen Whisler, Sanitation Superintendent Terry Anderson, Human Relations Officer Jesse Harris, and Public Information Officer Cynthia Marvin.

"We're here to give you the support you need in this community," Mayor Pro-Tem Huggins said.

Terry Bynum, organizer of the meeting, spoke passionately to his fellow residents about the need to clean up the neighborhood. "Our neighborhood used to be a beautiful place - look at it now," Bynum said. "Somebody's got to do something. Things are getting worse day by day."

He explained why he no longer lets his children play in his front yard. "I found three syringes in my front yard. My kids don't know not to pick them up. We have to clean up this neighborhood not only for us - but for our children, especially for the children."

Over the next few months, the citizens of Meadowbrook and the City of Greenville will work together to solve the existing problems. Those problems are not different than those facing neighborhoods in the cities all across the United States. But in Meadowbrook, citizens have decided they are not going to take it anymore.

Gantt calls For Education Partnership

U.S. Senate nominee Harvey Gantt today called for a "major investment" by the nation in early childhood education.

"More than one million North Carolina children began public school last week or this week. I believe we must make a commitment to invest in our children's early education so that future generations of North Carolinians can compete on a national and an international level in an increasingly competitive work force.

The most cost-efficient investment in education is pre-school investment. If we invest in our children early on, the chances they will drop out of school at the 8th or 9th grade are greatly diminished," Mr. Gantt said at a news conference at the Davidson-Cornelius Developmental Day Care Center.

"My opponent, Jesse Helms, has consistently voted against what matters most to North Carolina families — the education of their children," said Mr. Gantt, noting that Mr. Helms voted against an expansion of the Head Start program, against student loans, against President Bush's Excellence in Education program and even against the school lunch program.

"Education will be my top priority when I go to Washington," said the former Charlotte mayor whose four children attended Charlotte's public schools.

"I will work to bring together a partnership of parents, teachers and administrators, business and government to make sure by the time children get to kindergarten they have a proper orientation for education. We need to do this in a more comprehensive way than we are doing it now so that we can touch as many of our children as possible.

"We know that if North Carolina's children start out with a positive attitude toward school and a desire to learn we can turn around our low SAT scores and high dropout rates," Mr. Gantt said.

Mr. Helms has voted against education programs aimed at everything from day care centers to grants for college students:

HEADSTART AND DAY CARE

- In 1989, 1985, 1982, and 1981, Mr. Helms voted against funding for Head Start. The program offers early child developmental education to disadvantaged preschool children in a structured curriculum. It also provides the children with day care, medical attention, and lunches and snacks.
- Mr. Helms has voted against funding for Title XX, which funds day care around the nation, consistently since 1979.
- In 1989, Mr. Helms voted against the Act for Better Child Care which provided $1.75 billion to low-income parents for child care. It also granted funds to the states to expand child care programs.

ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY SCHOOLS

- In 1987, Mr. Helms was the only senator to vote against the Elementary and Secondary Education Improvement Act, which provided for programs such as the Rural Educational Opportunities Program, the

Mr. Helms And Education

Family-School Partnership Program, and the Comprehensive School Health Program.

- In 1990, Mr. Helms was one of only eight senators to vote against President Bush's Educational Excellence Act, which provided for expansion of the drug-free schools program, cash awards to elementary and secondary schools which make substantial progress in raising student achievement levels, and the establishment of a National Board for Professional Teaching Standards.
- In 1989, 1987, 1986, 1985, 1983 (three times), 1982 (twice), and 1981 (three times), Mr. Helms voted against funding for compensatory education, which provides assistance to school districts with concentrations from low-income families.

HIGHER EDUCATION

- In 1986, Mr. Helms cast the only negative vote against the Higher Education Act Amendments, which provide aid to colleges and to college students. In 1980, he was one of only four senators to vote against the Higher Education Act.
- In 1989, 1987, 1986 (three times), 1985, 1982, and 1981 (five times), Mr. Helms voted against funding for Pell Grants, which assist students from low-income families in gaining access to post-secondary education.

- In 1987 and 1986, Mr. Helms voted to eliminate the State Student Incentive Grants program, a federal-State cost sharing partnership which encourages the development and expansion of need-based education grant programs. Neither measure had more than 18 senators supporting the cuts.
- In 1987, Mr. Helms voted to eliminate the College Work-Study program from the Federal Budget.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

- In 1989, 1987, 1986, 1983 (twice), and 1982, Mr. Helms voted against funding for vocational education programs.
- In 1987, Mr. Helms was one of only 18 senators to vote for

Victimized by Liberals

by Walter E. Williams

The liberals, their fellow travelers in the conservationist and environmental movement, and a short-sighted, immoral Congress have messed up or country. The Middle East crisis is an early warning of things to come. Let's face it; we've put men, planes, ships, and tanks in the Middle East for one reason: to protect our access to oil. Anyone who says we're there to make the area safe for democracy is whistling Dixie. The dominant feature of the Middle East is the contempt they hold for democratic principles, human life, and liberty.

Many people say we don't have an energy policy, but that's not true. We have a policy, but it borders on insanity. Let's look at it. Point Arguello oil field, off the California coast, has been ready for two years and could add as much as 4.2 million gallons per day to our domestic oil supply. It could be on line in just six months. However, the California liberals, with the help of state officials, have shut it down.

According to conservative estimates by the American Petroleum Institute: Accelerated leasing of the outer continental shelf oil fields could yield 32-million gallons/day; lease and development of the Arctic National Wildlife Range would yield 20-million gallons/day; onshore Alaska leasing would yield 27-million gallons/day; and onshore leasing in other states would yield about 5-million gallons/day. These facts lead me to the conclusion that, if we have to land troops to insure access to oil, they would be better deployed in Washington.

Several countries generate most of their electrical power from nuclear energy. In France, nuclear plants generate 68 percent of their electricity. Americans invented nuclear energy, yet it accounts for only 18 percent of our electrical power. It takes us more than 10 years to build a nuclear power plant because of costly litigation and regulation. In Japan and France, the process start-to-finish is slightly over six years. Moreover, their are built at approximately half of what it costs us. You say, "Oh, that's because their plants are less safe." Nonsense, French plants are built to U.S. specifications under license from Westinghouse.

Liberals demonstrating all over the country have hamstrung our nuclear power industry. With media complicity, they claim nuclear energy is unsafe, but they can't point to a single U.S. citizen who has died as a result. Doing the bidding of the environmental crowd, Congress sabotages our nuclear development. As a result scores of people die each year from coal mine accidents, black lung disease, and air pollution from power generation by coal.

Americans may be able to weather the high prices of oil, but the real liberal-generated disaster is in the not-too-distant future. Several Third-World countries, including Iraq, are developing intercontinental missiles. If Iraq had those missiles now, Saddam Hussein might very well target New York, Washington, or Los Angeles in response to any U.S. military action against him. Sure we'd

Attitude your best asset in getting a job

An Open Letter to a Discouraged Teenager

Dear Kid: Today you came to me for a job. From the look of your shoulders when you walked out, I suspect that you've been turned down before. Or maybe you believe that nobody wants to hire a kid just out of high school.

Well, it happens that I did hire a teenager today. He had a big smile on his face and he wore a necktie. What was so special about that kid? Experience? Not really. He didn't have any. It was his attitude that put him on the payroll instead of you. Attitude, son. A-T-T-I-T-U-D-E. He wanted that job bad enough to put on a clean shirt and take the time to find something out about our company before he came down here. He did his best to impress me. That's where he edged you out.

You see, kid, folks who do hiring look for young people who have a spark. They want someone around who looks energetic, eager and rarin' to go. Your first questions were, "What are the hours? How many vacations would I get?" and, "How much do you pay?" I knew when you asked those questions that you weren't going to get a job here.

I couldn't care less that you're behind in your car payment. That's your problem. What I needed was someone with enthusiasm who'd keep his eyes open and work for me like he'd work for himself. If you have even the vaguest idea of what I'm trying to say, let it show the next time you go looking for a job. If you do, you'll be head shoulders above the rest.

You know, kid, men have always gotten jobs the same way they get girls. They case the situation, wear a clean shirt, put their best foot forward and appear interested. Maybe jobs aren't plentiful right now, but a lot of us can remember when master craftsmen walked the streets. By comparison, kids today don't know the meaning of the word "scarce."

You may not believe this, but all around you there are employers who are looking like crazy for smart, alert, energetic young people. When they find one, they can't wait to get him or her on their payroll. If you paid a dime's worth attention to what I've said today, you'll land a job pretty darn soon. Good luck. You're going to need it.

Gem of the Day: if you find yourself looking forward to Mondays more than Fridays, be careful. You are in danger of becoming successful.

Tony Brown's Comments

ized in training young Blacks as doctors, an empowerment of the individual and enhancement of the Black community. On March 28, Sullivan, a founding member of the Medicine Education for South African Blacks, announced that MESAB was establishing the Mickey Leland Scholarship Program in South Africa. Out of 30 million Black South Africans, only 96 are pharmacists.

While stark was out playing Big Democrat Liberal Daddy to his Black constituents in California, Sullivan was receiving the Outstanding Contribution to Medicine Award given by the National Medicine Association, the nation's Black doctors, and the Black Women's Political Action Forum Award.

The Washington Post called Stark's comments "malicious" and "belittling." The White House called them "bigoted" and "shameful."

What is really shameful is that there is no record of one significant Black group over honoring Pete Stark or any evidence that he has ever done anything for Black people.

But there is evidence that his attitudes towards Blacks are based on the racist assumption that they have a "place" — and that place is where White liberal Democrats like him tell them it is.

Pete Stark, therefore, is a disgrace to his race.

Black Dollar Days deserve your support

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) will be sponsoring a consumer awareness demonstration, Black Dollar Days, starting on September 13 and spanning the month of September.

NAACP is urging African American consumers to spend their dollars on goods and services from Black-owned businesses. The demonstration is being held in Greenville, N.C. on Sept. 13. The local branch NAACP is coordinated with several local banks to ensure that an adequate supply of two-dollar bills will be available for those participating in the demonstration.

NAACP Black Dollar Days is an economic awareness demonstration, designed to emphasize the consumer spending power of the African American community and the need to leverage that spending power in the overall economy. The NAACP is very concerned about the weakening economic climate for African Americans, one third of whom are stuck in debilitating poverty, while a fledgling middle class is stagnated and losing ground financially.

Increased job opportunities and business opportunities are absolutely essential for the survival of the black community. Only to the extent that African American consumers recognize our worth and value in the overall economy and begin to teach our dollars some sense, will employers and corporate America begin to take seriously the demand of fair share, economic parity.

By participating in this national economic demonstration, African Americans will be sending a very strong message to the merchants and providers of goods and services, that we expect our fair share of the jobs and business opportunities available, and will begin to modify our spending patterns towards those merchants that contribute to our communities' growth, and away from business concerns that do not.

Achieving economic parity requires informed consumers and a sensitive market place. Aggressive economic activism is needed at the local, state and national levels, by individual consumers, organizations, churches and others. We must spend our money wisely by doing business with those who do business with us.
