Trouble in Detroit

Beating death of 34-year- old man by Arab immigrants raises tension between Blavks and local Arab merchants

by Simeon Muhammad

Detroit-Racial tensions remain Black and Arab communities here after the beating death of 34 year-old electrician Kalvin Porter by two Arab immigrants from Yemen. Adel Altam and Fadhel Mazeb used a stick and tire iron to allegedly beat Mr. Porter to death in front of his five children at the Sunoco gas station where the two men worked.

Both men admit to the attack and are being held without bond on second-degree murder charges according to police. They will return to court May 28 for preliminary hearings police confirm that one defendant made lewd remarks to Mr. Porter's 12- Daughter, leading to an argument and a fight"My children were there and watched their father beaten and choked to death by these men", said Barbara Ann Wrght the victim's fiancee. She joined protesters at the gas station on the evening of May 18 where she expressed her outrage at the

Ms. Wright expressed some satisfaction that that suspects Altam and Mazab were held without bond but, she is demanding along with community activists, that the gas station be completely. Some shut area activists want the gas station and store turned over to area residents as compensation for Mr. Porter's wrongful death

According to WHPR-FM moring talk show host Joann Watson, Sunoco world headquarters was contacted about the killing and issued formal apology to Ms. Wrightand the Porter family.

The gas station's owner who is also an Arab and was not present during the incident, also offered to to pay for Mr. Porter's funneral. Ms. Wright declined the offer

Black community and political leaders have joined protests at the East Side gas station, which has not reopened since the May 14 killing. The Detroit African American Police Association, among others, have come out publicly charging Mr. Porter's death was racially motivated. When questioned by police, Mr. Mazeb admitted fighting with Mr. Porter, hitting him with the tire iron and throwing more punches as the man lay on the ground. But according to police, Mr. Altam said Mr.Porter provoked the incident "for no reason," using the stick. Then, Mr. Mazeb wrestled Mr. Porter to the ground and held him, according to Mr. Altam's statements, reported by police. The suspects' himself a witness, said the killing was self defense. State Rep. Ed Vaughn called the death"tragic" and the result of attitudes

Very often around this country, the term racial profiling" surfaces to remind people that many law enforcement agencies scrutinize people who fit a certain arbitrary profile of someone perceived to be a danger or threat to society. However, racial profiling has raised many constitutional issues, such as privacy and equal protection concerns. The U.S. Customs Service is one of many agencies criticized for targeting racial minorities in illegal searches, a violation of the Fourth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. Janneral Denson recently gave congressional representatives a chilling account of how Customs her assed her in Florida. The hearing was about the inspection of pas sengers by the U.S. Customs Service.

On February 14, 1997, Janneral Denson (Jamaican American) tried to get a passport for her husband to come to the U.S. About 6 1/2 months pregnant, she encountered a horrendous climate of racial hostility after she got off a plane at the Fort Lauderdale Airport in Florida. The firs Customs agent stamped her passport and let her pass.

The second agent asked her if she could search her luggage. Denson was then asked a barrage of intimidating questions. Mrs. Denson specified the details of her visit with her husband, showed her marriage certificate, her husband's birth certificate, photos of the children, irnmigra tion documents, and other papers. Later, the agent tore a paper from Denson's notepad and asked her to describe her husband, write his lull name, address and phone number.

Hungry, Denson was escorted to a restroom and ordered to leanagainst the wall and spread her legs. According to Denson. she was asked to show her panty liner and the tissue she wiped herself with after she urinated. Wisely, Denson wrote down the badge number of the agents after she was denied the opportututy to contact her lawyer Mrs. Denson was then taken to Miami where she was humiliated and dehumanized flirther.

The victim was taken to Ward 6 where she was given a cold sandwich and orange juice. Handcuffed to a bed, she was ordered to drink a clear laxative. She wasn't even allowed to call mom. Denson alleged that she was forced to use a bedpan and dump it after no incriminating evidence was found. Additionally Denson overheard an agent call her "that thing". Nonetheless, she finally drank the laxative mixed with orange juice and ice. Denson, who vomited after the cocktail, passed two clear stools. She was returned to Fort Lauderdale. For the next two days, Mrs. Denson had severe di- arrhea and excruciating pain. Hence, a doctor was forced to perform emergency Cesarean.

Ed Cox, a powerfiil Chicago at torney, is representing Denson and numerous other complainants. Many of his clients were abused and harassed at O'Hare International Airport. According to Cox, over 100 women, mostly black, from a multitude of stateshave complained about unlawful searches. All of the women have similar stories about having been handcuffed, x-rayed, and held communicado. We must do more to address perpetuating racial stereotypes, which encourage deep rooted bias against people of color.

RADCLIFF, Ky. (AP) -- A Christian high school stripped an 18-yearold senior of her valedictorian title and barred her from next month's graduation ceremonies because she is pregnant.

Leah Carr, who has a straight-A average, said she became pregnant six months ago. She said she expected some punishment but also support from officials at Dove Christian Academy, a school of 149 students run by Radcliff First Assembly of God.

``I feel let down, betrayed," Ms. Carr said. ``I love them, I Carr said. trusted them. I don't feel the support I was wanting. I don't expect anyone to pet me in my

The church pastor and the school principal declined to comment.

Larry Riggs, the parent of one of Ms. Carr's classmates, said he believes the school may have sent a bad message.

Town Sues Gang For Damages

CERO, 'Ill. (AP) -- The Chicago suburb that passed a law exiling gang members is trying to empty their pockets on their way out of town.

Cicero, a blue-collar community of 70,000 that was once the base of Al Capone's bootlegging empire, is suing members of two street gangs. claiming they owe more than $11 million for the emotional distress and property damage inflicted on the town and its residents.

A second lawsuit also seeks to have hundreds of gang members declared public nuisances.

"I think it's pretty clear this is the most extreme kind of nuisance you can get," Barry Pechter, Cicero's town attorney, said of gang activity.

The lawsuits filed Tuesday name as defendants the Latin Kings and Noble Knights -considered the two most active gangs in town -- along with 294 of their members known by nicknames like "Capone" and "Bat Man."

Last month, Cicero adopted an extraordinary ordinance aimed at running gang members out of town.

Under the law, believed to be the first of its kind in the nation, those involved in illegal gang activity have to promise not to do it again. If they refuse or go back on their word, they have 60 days to leave Cicero or face a $500-aday fine.

This is going to be punch two and three against the gang members," Betty Loren-Maltese, Cicero's town president, said of the lawsuits. They haven't seen punches four or five."

Besides the claims for damages, the suits also seek court orders barring gang members from all sorts of activities, including "gathering or appearing anywhere in public" with other defendants.

Officials at the Chicago office of the American Civil Liberties Union, who criticized the ordinance approved last month as unconstitutional, declined to comment on the lawsuits.

But University of Chicago Professor Stephen Schulhofer said government attempts to control gang activities have the potential to collide with basic freedoms.

If someone blocks the public way or breaks some law, they should be arrested," he said. "What you worry about is when something like this gives (the town) the power to sweep every Latin kid off the

Pregnant Valedictorian Student-Built Satellite in Trouble

by JOHN ANTCZAK The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES -- A Boston University-built satellite launched this week on a $12.3 million ionosphere research mission was apparently orbiting powerlessly today after failing to fully point its solar panels toward the sun.

The Terriers satellite ``seems to have run out of battery power," the university said. The batteries were good for eight hours without being recharged by the solar panels.

'We haven't heard from the spacecraft since yesterday, which leads us to believe the batteries are probably depleted," said Dan Cotton, a senior researcher at the university's Center for Space Physics who is principal investigator for the project.

Cotton said he was hopeful the solar panels will slowly charge the batteries and that eventually Terriers will turn itself on. The orbit and spin were believed to be correct.

The satellite was developed under a NASA program to increase students' access to space. More than 60 students and faculty members worked on the mission since 1995.

Terriers, carrying instruments to produce 3-D images of the ionosphere, cost $6.1 million. Its share of launch costs amounted to $6.2 million.

Terriers and a separate defense communications satellite named Mublcom were launched late Monday on an Sciences Corp. Pegasus rocket dropped from a modified L-1011 jet flying off the California coast.

All seemed well when the 274-pound Terriers made its first pass over the Boston University ground station at 7:07 a.m. EDT Tuesday. On the second pass about 1 1/2 hours later controllers noticed it was not properly oriented and tried to reorient it with commands on the next pass. Terriers passed over silently 10 hours later.

Ray Lugo, NASA launch manager at Kennedy Space Center in Florida, said the Pegasus flight appeared normal but the data was being reviewed "to be sure that the launch did not contribute to the spacecraft's current prob-

The Pegasus is carried by the L-1011 to altitudes around 40,000 feet. The rocket then drops for a few seconds before its first stage ignites.

Terriers was the latest small NASA satellite to run into trouble.

In March, the $73 million Wide-Field Infrared Explorer satellite spun out of control on its second orbit. The fatal spin involved the unexpected venting of frozen hydrogen intended to cool the instrument.

In 1997, the $64.8 million Lewis satellite was lost within days of launch on what was supposed to be a five-year mission of hyperspectral imaging of Earth. It also began spinning, apparently due to excessive firing of an attitudecontrol thruster.

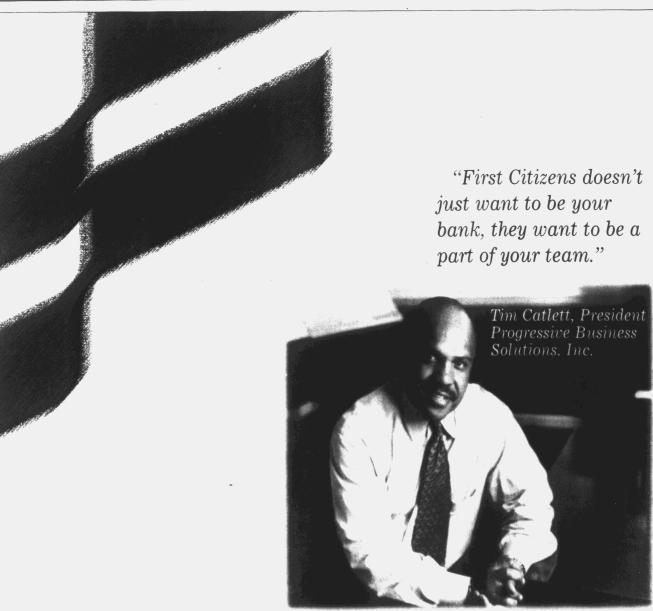

The problem also comes amid wider problems in the nation's space capability. In less than nine months six launch failures have wrecked missions involving three military satellites, two commercial communication satellites and a private Earth-imaging satel-

"He has been outstanding as an individual, and has shown great character under a very stressful situation.' Carter was best known for his athleticism and has already been compared to another former North Carolina player, Michael Jordan. While many rookies were hurt by the NBA lockout and the shortened training camp, Carter took advantage of the situation.

"The lockout was good for me because it gave me extra time to work on my name," Carter said. Carter is the second Raptor to win

"This is a great honor," Carter said. "I looked at all the great players who have won the award and it's going to be tough to live up to the things they have brought to their organizations and basketball cities.

"But I'm going to try my hardest ...to have a great career and do a lot of great things for the Toronto Raptors.

Carte hopes the award will get him a spot on the Olympic team. "That's my ultimate goal," Carter said. "That's the highest honor you could ever achieve.

I hope they consider me, but if not, I'll just work for the next one."

Holyfied-Lewis II is set.

WBA champion Evander Holyfied and WBC champion Lennox Lewis are to meet in November in Las Vegas in a rematch of their controversial heavyweight title unification draw March 13 in New York. No date or site has been set, but a six-fight deal was announced Wednesday involving Don King Productions and Park Place Entertainment, the world's largest gambling company and operator of 17 casinos and resorts in the USA, Uruguay and Australia.

The Las Vegas Rview-Journal reported that the fight would be Nov. 6 at the Mandalay Bay hotel as a joint venture between Circus Cirus Enterprised Inc. unit and Park Place's Las Vegas Hilton. Time Warner Sport President Seth Abraham was quoted by USA TODAY last week as indicating a Nov. 13 date.

When they met in March, many observers felt Lewis had won the decision. But judges scored a draw, triggering investigations by boxing and political bodies and changes in New York boxing rules. The pay-per-view rematch will be shown at all Park Place properties, and the firm will share with King all merchandising. King also is to provide 12 other bouts on the card. King called it "a perfect match of Las Vegas market giants" in a statement, saying the deal allows Park Place "the flexibility to do these fights at any of its properties or in a joint venture with other casinos, while providing Don King Productions the continuity we need for our programming."

As a former teacher, it's no surprise Lozelle De Luz, Ph.D., helps prepare neighborhood students for college. Although she owns three McDonald's in Wilmington, Delaware, she also finds time to get involved in the community on a state and national level. Lozelle mentors minority student athletes for college and helps to feed the homeless through annual programs she helped establish as External Vice President of the National Black McDonald's Operators Association. Her faith in the potential of every person makes a difference in the lives of everyone Lozelle touches.

Spiritual Thoughts

Dr. George Hawkins

The Bible commands us to "lay hands on the sick and they shall recover (mark 16;18). The obedient act of laying on of the hands is accepted and practiced by almost all churches of every denomination. Evangelists, pastors, ministers and throughout the world embrace this order . when this is done in sincere faith, our hands can become instruments of God for healing and deliverance.

In the old testament, priests laid their hands on the sacrifithe priest would lay hands on the one being ordained. The Book of Acts records how spiritual gifts were given by the laying on of hands

Jesus used the laying on of hands more than any other action to bring healing to people with all Kinds of diseases and infirmities. When children were brought to him he laid hands on them and blessed them (Matthew 19:13) we read in Luke 13:13 that when a woman with a live" spirit of infirmity came to Jesus, He laid hands on her and said, "Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity. The key to the power released in the laying on hands is simply to put our faith to work (James 2:17-22,26). It is this kind of faith in action that raised the daughter of Jairus from the dead. This ruler of of a symagogue came to Jesus and plead, "please, come and lay your hands on her, that she live. Jesus went to Jairus house, and on the way word came that the child had already died. Jesus calmly said "Don't be afraid only believe." He stood by the child's bedside, took her hand and commanded, "Damsel, I say unto thee, arise" The crowd of people outside the home was astonished as the child stood up and walked around the room. But Jairus wasn't surprised at all he had focused his faith on Jesus and believed in his heart that "When Jesus lays hands on her she shall

PERKINS FAMILY RESTAURANT

On a Saturday in April, I grabbed a young friend of fine and we headed headed out to eat. We decided to go where no Andrews family member had gone before: Perkins! On the corner of Hooker Road and Greenville Boulevard sits Perkins "Family" Restaurant,

We were warmly greeted by the hostess, who immediately seated us and gave us our menus. From the menu, all the food appeared appetizing and hearty. I ordered the turkey stuffing, potato pancakes and turnips. My guest, Edwanna, or-dered the cheeseburger, fries, and a milkshake.

As I found the food to be a little bland and tasteless, I exchanged the potato pancakes for something edible: Green beans. Unfortunately, the green beans

I guess the cashier saw my expression; rather than face the "Wrath of Marie," she didn't ask about the meal. The cashier then added a double sales tax to the meal. When I asked him why, he shrugged and said "that's the way we do it here.

I asked for my receipt and ran, not walked, for the door.
