List 'Fuel Starvation' Cause Of Air Show Crash

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "Fuel starvation" was listed by the National Transportation Safety Board as the cause of a crash at a Greenville air show last year that took the life of Beverly E. (Bevo) Howard, one of the nation's most experienced and renowned stunt pilots.

Howard, 57, died in his special acrobatic aircraft October 17, 1971, when the ship crashed just north of the Pitt-Greenville Airport. He had completed a low-level, inverted, "hands-off" pass over the airport and was making an inverted turn when his aircraft snapped upright, struck a tree and spun to the ground, the NTSB said.

The flyer had more than 12,000 total flying hours to his credit and nearly 1,500 hours in his special acrobatic plane.

The NTSB said investigation showed "that the fuel tank of the aircraft was empty and there was no evidence of post-crash fuel spillage." The board's formal findings were that there had been "inadequate preflight preparation and or planning, mismanagement of fuel, fuel exhaustion (and) complete engine failure," and that the pilot had "failed to see and avoid" the tree.

E.H. Moser, president and general manager of the air show who had witnessed Howard's demonstration flights "at least 100 times," the NTSB said, reported he had not seen Howard follow his customary practice of adding "a minimum of five gallons of fuel" to his aircraft's tank before takeoff.

According to the NATB report, the aircraft — a Buecker Jungmeister 133 biplane made in Germany in 1937 and considered one of the most stable aircraft for stunt flying — "had been fueled twice four days before the accident with a total of 27.8 gallons of gasoline. Calculation of probable point-to-point fuel consumption for Howard's known flights before the air show indicated there would have been less than six gallons remaining on his arrival at Greenville.

The crash occurred after some four minutes of taxiing and 16 minutes of stunt flying, much of it as full throttle with resulting high fuel consumption."

Quoting Pitt-Greenville Airport manager Jim Darden as saying he heard no engine sound from the plane from the time it rolled upright just before striking the tree, the NTSB report said "Faced with complete loss of power, a pilot in inverted flight would have to roll his aircraft upright to make an emergency landing."

NTSB chairman John H. Reed said the accident holds "special meaning for all pilots."

According to Reed, "there is special tragedy in each of the more than 400 fatal accidents in U.S. civil aviation every year. But there is an especially cruel irony in the death of this highly-skilled and experienced pilot.

"Stunt flying perils aside, this accident clearly was preventable.

"Proper flight planning and pre-flight inspection of an aircraft are fundamental to safe flight for the beginner and veteran flyer alike."

Reed emphasized, "This accident shows how human failing can close out a pilot's logbook regardless of how many hours it records."

Howard, considered a millionaire, made his home in Charleston, S.C.

Bath, S. C. native, Howard learned to fly when he was 16 and began working with Hawthorne Aviation as a line boy at $10 per week in 1932. He became president of the firm which he served as board chairman at his death when he was 21, and was Eastern Air Lines' youngest pilot at 22.

Howard began flying in air shows in 1933 and was once the highest paid air show pilot in the country.

The first pilot to outside loop a light plane — in 1938 — Howard took first place in the International Aerobatic Championships in 1946, 1947 and 1949, and placed second in the competition in 1948 and 1950.

A physical fitness advocate, Howard swam regularly in the YMCA pool in Charleston and passed the 1,000-mile mark in the pool in July, 1968.

Note Relates Grievances

Air Force ROTC officials at East Carolina University were surprised when a caller about 10:15 a.m. today said the American flag at the university was flying at half-staff and upside down.

A detail sent to right the flag found a note attached.

The note, signed "Resist", termed the draft, the Army, President Richard Nixon and ECU president Dr. Leo Jenkins "Facists", and indicated that the flag had been turned upside down as a sign of distress.

The note said, "one year ago today, four students were murdered at Kent State, Ohio..." and indicated that the next day, "two black brothers were murdered at Jackson State."

The note continued, "...one week later six black brothers were shot in the back in Augusta, Ga."

B-1 makes first test flight

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — The B-1 strategic bomber completed its first flight Dec. 23. The aircraft departed Air Force Plant 42, Palmdale, Calif., at 10:31 (Pacific standard time) and landed at Edwards AFB, Calif., one hour and 25 minutes later.

The B-1 was rolled out of Rockwell International's final assembly facility at Palmdale Oct. 26. Since then, it has undergone ground engine tests, final checkout of aircraft subsystems, a series of low-and high-speed tests and an extensive review of the aircraft's readiness to fly.

The first flight assessed the B-1's low-speed flying qualities. After take off, the aircraft climbed to 10,000 feet where subsystem operation and flying qualities were evaluated, throttle transient tests and afterburner lights were conducted and the B-1's airspeed system was calibrated. The crew then brought the aircraft in for a landing at Edwards AFB. All tests were conducted with the landing gear down at a top airspeed limited to approximately 180 knots.

Following a stand-down during the holiday period, it is anticipated that test flights from Edwards AFB will be scheduled approximately three times per month.

This will allow time for Air Force and Rockwell engineers to assimilate the extensive test data gathered on each flight. Test results will be used in making the B-1 production decision, currently scheduled for November 1976. If approved for production in late 1976, the first production B-1s could enter the Air Force inventory at the end of the decade.

The B-1 has been designed to serve into the 21st century as a part of the Nation's strategic deterrent force.

Only two-thirds the size of the B-52, the B-1 will be able to carry nearly twice the payload — faster and far more effectively. Its "quick reaction" takeoff and nuclear hardening will assure its survivability should any enemy attempt to surprise land- or submarine-launched missile attack. Its faster speed, ability to fly at treetop altitudes, and its reduced radar cross section will give it a greater capability to penetrate an enemy's most advanced defense.

AIR FORCE SYSTEMS Command Aeronautical Systems Division at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, is responsible for overall B-1 system development. Maj. Gen. Abner B. Martin is the B-1 program director.

HIGH FLIGHT

By John Gillespie Magee, Jr.

Oh, I have slipped the surly bonds of earth
And danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings;

Sunward I've climbed, and joined the tumbling mirth
Of sun-split clouds—and done a hundred things

You have not dreamed of—wheeled and soared and swung

High in the sunlit silence. Hov'ring there,
I've chased the shouting wind along, and flung
My eager craft through footless halls of air.

Up, up the long, delirious, burning blue
I've topped the windswept heights with easy grace

Where never lark, or even eagle flew.

And, while with silent, lifting mind I've trod
The high untrespassed sanctity of space,
Put out my hand, and touched the face of God.

Airmen Dorm

Junior Grade BOQ

'Most Modern' EM, Officer Dorms

WASHINGTON — Air Force will be the first of the services to offer its bachelor enlisted and junior grade officers what some officials call the "most modern dormitories ever provided any U.S. servicemen."

Two weeks ago a contract was let to Community Science Corporation of Newport Beach, Calif., for the construction of 2574 officer and airmen dormitory spaces at seven bases.

As pictured in the accompanying floor plans, these barracks are unlike anything the services — AF included — have ever offered their bachelor airmen and officers.

The airmen rooms are designed for two enlisted men and allow 214 square feet of living space. There is ample closet space for storage, desks and chairs for each man, and a large bathroom which features a tub/shower arrangement. Both men will share a sink and small refrigerator. There will be outlets for television and telephones. Individual year round temperature controls are provided.

The rooms are to be soundproof. Thirty-two square feet of tack board comes with each room for posters, pinups, etc. Draperies, special "drop can lamps", and smoke detectors are standard.

The new junior officer quarters offer all the amenities included in the airmen rooms except that they are larger, have 360 square feet, a full kitchen, and are intended for only one man.

Furniture for both airmen and officer dorms will contribute to a "mod" motif, but may vary from base-to-base and from command-to-command.

More dorms of this design are slated for the future, but only at bases where an absolute need for barracks exists, such as remote sites, training bases, etc. It is AF policy to let as many single airmen and officers move off base as possible with BAQ. Ground-breaking at the seven bases will occur within the next three months. The bases are Dover, Del.; Homestead, Fla.; Langley, Va.; Mountain Home, Idaho; Norton and Castle, Calif., and McChord, Wash.

Lingering Draft Faces Malingering Draftees

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Selective service officials fear men facing the tail end of the draft next spring may suddenly come down with an epidemic of the flu lasting just long enough to keep them out of the Army until the draft expires June 30.

The officials are trying to plan the draft's dying gasp to make it as equitable as possible and to minimize the chances for the imaginative to outsmart the system.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird announced Tuesday that "less than 10,000" men will be drafted next year. Selective Service officials said the highest lottery number to be called up would be "at worst No. 40, but probably much lower."

The officials said the fact the draft ends June 30 is an open invitation to men with low 1973 lottery numbers to try to delay their induction. Even a man with No. 1 will be home free if the Army has not been able to induct him by midnight June 30 when the draft law expires.

The issue is one of fairness rather than just getting bodies, as officials see it. They feel if the Army is going to call up say, Nos. 1 through 10, then they ought to take everyone in that group and not let the stayer ones slip by.

"In a sense its like the prelottery days," one official said. "Then the smarter kids, the college kids, knew the many loopholes and could often avoid the draft while the not-so-aware fellow was left holding the bag."

Officials point out that about half of all the men called up for induction have legitimate excuses for not appearing—they are ill or their cars break down on the way to the induction center. These men are normally inducted the following month so the delay does not matter.

There are also youths who oppose their 1-A classification and appeal to a higher level of Selective Service or to the courts. That can tie things up and prevent their being drafted for some time even if they lose the appeal.

Major Hardy Is Welcomed Back By Pitt Countians

By TOM FOREMAN, JR.
Reflector Staff Writer

Hundreds of well-wishers were on hand Saturday afternoon to greet returning prisoner-of-war Maj. William H. Hardy as the guest of honor at ceremonies here.

Maj. Hardy returned to Eastern North Carolina almost six years after he had been captured in an ambush and taken prisoner by the Viet Cong.

In addressing the gathering, he showed no favoritism towards communities in Eastern North Carolina. "I am proud to be from Haddock's Crossroads, I am proud to be from Winterville, I am proud to be from Ayden, I am proud to be from Pitt County,

I am proud to be from Greenville, I am proud to be a North Carolinian, and proud to be from the United States", he said.

Maj. Hardy and members of his family arrived at the Pitt Plaza Shopping Center at 2:30, where he was greeted by Dr. A. A. Best, a member of the state Good Neighbor Council. Dr. Best led the crowd in the singing of "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow."

A motorcade then took Maj. Hardy, his family and friends, to the National Guard Armory at the Pitt-Greenville Airport. There he was greeted by E. Glenn Cannon, Greenville chief of police, Col. Earl Bruton, commander of the ROTC unit at East Carolina University, the Angel Flight Drill Team of ECU, and the ROTC Detachment 600 Drill Team. The color guard was also provided by the drill team.

Music outside was provided by the J. H. Rose High School Band.

With his wife Theola at his side, and members of the motorcade walking behind them, Maj. Hardy entered the armory. Inside he was greeted by a standing ovation. Music indoors was provided by the E. B. Aycock Junior High School Band.

G. Henry Leslie, plant manager of Burroughs-Wellcome told the gathering, "Today, a grateful community welcomes the return of a native son who has spent five and a half agonizing years in a Viet Cong prison camp."

"Major Hardy loved his country, and the service in which he served. He saluted the American flag; he did not deface it. When he was called to serve, he stepped forward and pledged his allegiance."

"Today our community has a purpose in proclaiming this day Major William H. Hardy Day. That purpose is manifold in expressing our thanks and good wishes to him."

Leslie also thanked Major Hardy for his years of service and sacrifice in Vietnam.

Expressions of gratitude and of good wishes were made by Mrs. Ann H. White on behalf of the family, by John Taylor, for the Greenville City Council, and by Dr. Frank Fuller, also a city council member.

Miss Shirley Coward rendered a vocal solo entitled "Let There Be Peace."

Mrs. J. W. Maye, a teacher of Major Hardy when he attended W. H. Robinson High School in Winterville, introduced the major and gave the audience a short biography.

The East Carolina University's General Chennault Squadron of Angel Flight and Arnold Air Society entertained 30 local children Monday night in a Halloween Festival.

The Angel Flight is an honorary service organization for college women and is an auxiliary of the Arnold Air Society - the Air Force ROTC cadet organization at E.C.U.

Members of both organizations dressed in costumes appropriate for Halloween. Some of the characters portrayed were Dracula, Ragedy Ann and Andy, a fireman and a fighter pilot.

The party was held in the Salvation Army building. The party room was decorated in orange and black colors with a scare crow and jack-o-lanterns highlighting a fall harvest scene.

The children, ranging in ages from five to 13 years old, began the evening with a game of musical chairs with the winner receiving a prize. Bean bag throwing, apple bobbing, and fortune telling were enjoyed by all.

Refreshments of cake, popcorn, and Halloween candy were served and the evening was ended by each child receiving a present.

Angel Flight project concerns POW treatment

By LINDA EBON
(Staff Writer)

The National Angel Flight project for this year is a drive to get signatures for a petition requesting North Vietnam to honor the provisions of the Geneva Convention. Booths will be set up in the lobby of the Student Union this week for this purpose.

This project is undertaken on the national level at over 100 colleges and universities across the country. At East Carolina, the ROTC cadets and Arnold Air Society are working with Angel Flight to solicit 8,000 signatures for the petition, which reads:

"We the undersigned, petition the Government of North Vietnam to abide by the terms of the Geneva Convention with regard to the American Prisoners of war in Southeast Asia."

The Geneva Convention requires the identification of each prisoner, regular communication between the prisoner and his family, neutral inspection of prison facilities and repatriation of the sick and wounded. It has been confirmed that over 1500 U.S. citizens are considered prisoners of war of missing action. These prisoners are kept in solitary confinement.

are unofficially identified, and are not allowed to write.

"Our reasons are not political, nor military, but strictly humanitarian," said Fran Keeney, Commander of Angel Flight, "We know that Hanoi is influenced by world opinion and criticism. If the results of this drive are as large as we expect, we hope the petition will be presented to the North Vietnamese delegation to the Paris Peace Talks personally.

"It is our aim that, for one brief moment at least, a greater part of America can focus on the plight of our prisoners of war and missing in action in Southeast Asia," she added. "We of the Angel Flight and Arnold Air Society at East Carolina University feel we cannot afford to do less than our best in this effort," she said.

Flight program aids in getting license

Robert P. Benzon recently made his first solo flight. He is the first of 12 ECU students to do so this year and to take a step closer to obtaining a private pilot's license.

Benzon is enrolled in the Flight Instruction Program offered by the AFROTC detachment on campus. This program includes an extensive ground school taught by Colonel John D. Duffus, professor of Aerospace Studies. Such topics as pre-flight training, Federal Aviation Regulations, navigation, and the flight computer are covered.

AIR FORCE PAYS

The actual flying school is taught at the Pitt-Greenville airport by a civilian instructor under a government contract. The Air Force pays for the entire program.

The first solo flight is taken after approximately 9½ hours of flying time have been accumulated.

In addition to this solo flight, each student must plan and fly a local cross-country route. A total of at least 36 hours must be spent in the air before completing the program.

FINAL TEST

The final step in obtaining a license is the passing of the written test given by the Federal government.

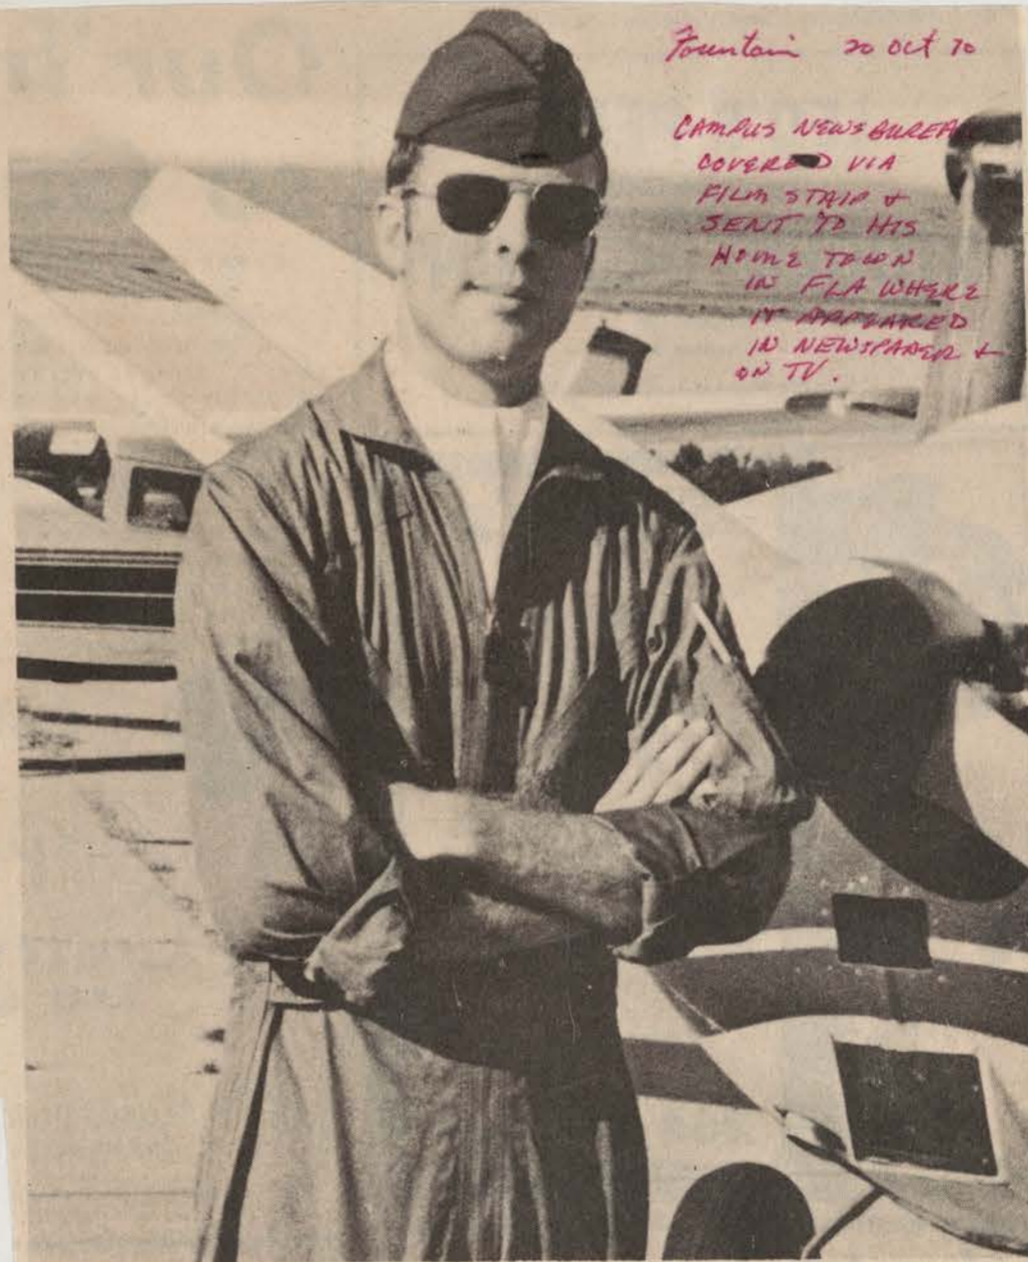

By the time each student actually receives his license, the Air Force has paid $900 for his training.

FOUR-YEAR SCHOLARSHIP

In addition to this free pilot training, the pilot candidate may qualify for a four-year scholarship that includes a $50 per month subsistence allowance.

INFORMATION

Male students interested in this program are urged to contact Col. John D. Duffus, extension 758-6597 or stop by room 128 Austin Building for information.

Flight Training Is Just One Of Benefits In ROTC

When East Carolina University graduating seniors received their diplomas Sunday, a number of men also received commissions in the U.S. Air Force as participants in the Reserve Officer Training Corps.

At least seven of these new officers came away with a little bit more than a diploma and a commission, because they have won a private pilots license through participation in the AFROTC flight instruction program at ECU.

According to Lt. Col. Kenneth W. Field, assistant professor of Aerospace Studies the flight instruction program (FIP) serves as a screening device to weed out those who "won't cut the mustard later on a pilots' and acts as a motivational device "to encourage people to come into the ROTC program."

Under FIP, ROTC seniors are taught to fly at no cost to the student. A contractor is engaged to provide 35 hours of flight instruction to the cadets, including 20 hours dual instruction and 15 hours solo flight. In addition, a ground school course is taught by ROTC instructors.

The ECU students have received their instruction over the past few years through a contract with Jim Darden at Pitt-Greenville Air Service.

Cost per student in the flight program, Col. Field said is about $860.

The officer explained there are two ways students can enter the ROTC program. First, he noted, a student can enter when a freshman, taking military subjects during his entire four years at the university and spending one four-week period at summer camp between his sophomore and junior years.

Or, Col. Field explained, a person can enter the ROTC program in his junior year, taking a heavier load of military classes after spending a six-week period in summer training.

In addition to the free flight instruction given qualifying seniors, Col. Field noted that other financial benefits are available to ROTC participants.

He said scholarships are available which provide for full tuition, laboratory expenses, incidental fees and allowances for textbooks. In addition, scholarship recipients and all cadets in the Professional Officer Corps (students in their junior and senior years) receive a subsistence allowance. The subsistence allowance totals $100 per month.

After graduation and commissioning, FIP pilot candidates enter a 48-week long program, where they receive 208 flight hours, 273 academic hours and 160 training hours in simulators to qualify them as Air Force pilots.

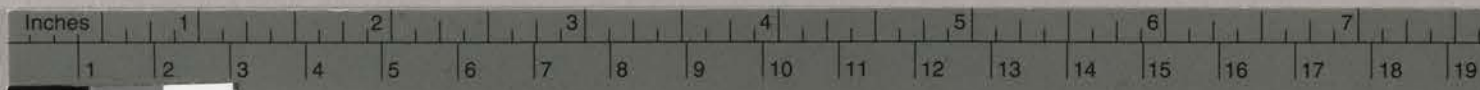

The seven cadets who have won private pilot licenses through the flight instruction program this year include David B. Stevens Jr. and Carl T. Knott Jr. both of Greenville; Billy R. Craft of Jacksonville; Ronnie W. Smith of Route 2, Hamlett; James A. Steele of Goldsboro; Franklin W. Sutton Jr. of Kingston; and Michael J. Ulmer of Annandale, Va.

Cadets solo

Fountain Head 13 Oct 70
Ten cadets in the ECU Air Force ROTC Detachment 600 made their first solo flights last week.

The cadets have undergone ground training with AFROTC instructors and have taken flying lessons preparatory to the solo flight with pilot James Darden of the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

The AFROTC flight program, consisting of 36.5 hours of flying time as well as extensive classroom instruction, is intended to orient potential pilots before they enroll in the Air Force pilot training schools.

Upon graduation from ECU and completion of the AFROTC cadet program, the students will be commissioned into the Air Force.

Those who become pilots will be trained to fly transport, fighter or bomber aircraft.

Airport services students

By BRENDA FORBIS
Staff Writer

The Greenville airport may seem small in size, but not in service.

Few students realize the services available to them by the airport, according to Jim Darden, airport manager and owner of flight services.

Although there are no regular commercial flights at the airport, charter service is readily available. Darden said the few students who use this service fly to a nearby airport to catch regular commercial flights.

RENTAL SERVICE

A twin engine charter plane to Raleigh, which seats up to five passengers costs $85. A single engine plane, which seats up to three passengers, costs $40.

Qualified faculty members or student pilots may take advantage of the rental service. In fact, Darden said, several faculty members are regular customers. A Cessna 150, which seats the pilot and one passenger can be rented for $20 with the pilot and $14 without.

Perhaps the most beneficial and interesting service for students is the FAA-approved flight school, said Darden, a veteran World War II fighter pilot.

STUDENT TRAINING

One full-time and two part-time pilots are on hand to train student pilots. Full-time instructor, Jim Davenport, is an ECU graduate with instructor, commercial and instrumental flying licenses.

To teach the student skillful management of the plane is the main objective of the course, Darden said. The lessons continue as long as progress is achieved.

One may earn a private, commercial, instructor or instrumental license. Most students earn private licenses, Darden said, although several have gone all the way to instrumental flying (learning to operate in clouds and rough weather).

If a sufficient number of students are interested, ground school classes can be arranged in each of these areas.

Lessons, with an instructor, are $24 per hour in a four-place plane; $18 per hour in a two-place plane, and are available by appointment. Presently a Cessna 172 is being used.

For the past five years, the flight school has trained the ECU Air Force ROTC unit. Graduates are eligible to go directly into flight training in the Air Force, putting them a step ahead of those without previous training.

NOT LIMITED

Airport traffic is by no means limited to local charter services and lessons, however. Athletic teams have chartered Piedmont or Southern airline planes to pick them up here. Parents often fly in their family planes to take students home for vacations, Darden said. Entertainers frequently arrive at the Greenville airport in private planes; or, the Greenville charter service may pick up an entertainer at a nearby airport and fly him here, as was the case when Drew Pearson came several years ago.

TRAFFIC PROBLEM

There is rarely a traffic problem at the airport, said Darden. Transit corporation planes are much more frequent visitors to the airport than in previous years, as more businessmen now fly into Greenville.

The busiest day at the airport recently, Darden said, was the day of the eclipse, when planes came from all over the eastern United States.

Emergency landings are also rare, Darden said. However, occasionally, lost pilots have been heard on the radio and "talked into" the Greenville airport.

Carl Summerell came away with top honors at the East Carolina Football Banquet last night. Summerell won three of the seven awards presented to outstanding members of the 1973 Southern Conference Championship team.

Summerell was named the Most Valuable Player on the team, then added the Swindell Memorial Award, for team dedication, and the Lansche Award, as the Outstanding Senior.

Mike Myrick was named the winner of the E. E. Rawl Memorial Award, presented to the senior who best shows scholarship, athletic ability and character.

The Outstanding Player Award went to Carlester Crumpler, record setting running back for the Bucs, while Greg Troupe was the recipient of the Blocking Trophy.

The Outstanding Freshman Award went to Jim Bolding, who was third in the nation in interceptions.

Coach Pat Dye announced during the evening that Summerell had been selected for the College All-America game in Texas to be played June 22. Summerell will quarterback the East Team.

The featured speaker for the evening was former Clemson University athletic director and coach, Frank Howard, whose talk consisted of anecdotes from his long career.

"But I've retired as coach and athletic director," he told the audience. "They said it was for reasons of health. I made the alumni sick."

He then turned to Clarence Stasavich, current ECU athletic director and former head coach and said, "What's the reason you quit, Stas? the same thing?"

Howard told East Carolina to remain in the Southern Conference and not try to join the Atlantic Coast Conference. "The ACC has the most ignorant faculty people around," he said—a dig at the 800 rule in that conference. "All the best football players around ended up in Georgia."

Howard talked about the former boss of Dye, Alabama Coach Bear Bryant. "he's the only coach I know who can hire a college president and give him a one-year make-good contract. While the rest of us have two-platoon football, he has three-platoons. One for offense, one for defense, and one that actually goes to class."

Returning to Stasavich, he asked if he had ever given up the single wing and gone to the "T"? "No," Stasavich replied.

"Maybe that's why you're not still coaching," Howard said.

Turning to Dye, he asked him to "look at me, boy! This is what you're gonna look like after coaching for a while. I told that to another fella and he quit right there."

Howard then told the group that they had a fine coach. "He played under a good coach, a tough coach, and he became a tough player. He had to be tough under Wallace Butts. And he coached under Bear Bryant. In fact, I tried to hire him three different times. He knows his football."

Howard then gave the formula for winning: a good administration, a good headcoach, good assistants, a good recruiter; good players who are good students who love football, and a lot of luck. "You've got to have the wind blowing in the right direction; you have to get the breaks with the officials, (and you have to know how to talk to them); you have to make the close plays, and you can't give up the big ones."

Cadets Urged To Build 'More Peaceful World'

Dr. Leo Jenkins, president of East Carolina University, urged ECU's Air Force ROTC cadets to contribute to "the making of a better, safer, more peaceful world for all" at the annual Pass-in-Review ceremony on the campus Tuesday.

In a brief address before the cadets and several Air Force officials, Dr. Jenkins praised ECU's AFROTC Detachment 600 for its service projects, such as March of Dimes and Red Cross blood campaigns and fundraising drives for underprivileged children.

"We need officers who see the power of military force applied to civic actions and humanitarian efforts, who can wage peace as effectively as they engage in combat," said Dr. Jenkins.

"We need leaders who respect tradition, but who are not afraid to question it."

Seventeen cadets received special recognition for outstanding academic and ROTC records.

Names, awards, parents' names and hometown addresses of the award recipients include: GREENE COUNTY, Farmville — James Benjamin Lewis Jr., Armed Forces Communication and Electronics Assoc. Award, son of James B. Lewis, Route 1.

PITT COUNTY, Greenville — Carl Thomas Knott Jr., Distinguished Cadet Award, son of Carl T. Knott Sr., 1108 Ragsdale Rd; and William Frederick Whiteford, Distinguished Cadet Award, son of Jacob Charles Whiteford III, 1736 Beaumont Drive.

Cadet Chosen Group Cmdr.

Air Force ROTC Cadet Lt. Col. George Thomas Miller has been chosen Group Commander of East Carolina University's AFROTC Detachment 600.

A senior psychology major at ECU, Miller is minoring in philosophy. He is a member of both the psychology and philosophy honor societies and of Phi Sigma Pi honor society for outstanding students.

He is employed by ECU as a dormitory resident.

Miller is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Miller of Concord and a graduate of Mt. Pleasant High School.

Awards Received By Two Cadets

East Carolina University Air Force ROTC cadets George T. Miller and James A. Steele have received awards for outstanding performance.

Both are recipients of the AFROTC Distinguished Cadet Award, given to cadets who demonstrate an unusual degree of ability, initiative and other leadership qualities.

Miller, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Miller of Concord, is currently serving as Group Commander of ECU's AFROTC Detachment 600.

Steele, current Deputy Commander, is the son of Carroll R. Steele of 104 Holly Road, Goldsboro.

Receives Award

East Carolina University ROTC cadet James A. Steele, son of Carroll R. Steele of Goldsboro, has received the AFROTC Distinguished Cadet Award. He is deputy commander of ECU's Detachment 600.

ation. In exchange, they agree to serve for two years on active duty and must participate in certain classroom training and drill programs.

The end of the Vietnam war also brought an end to the demonstrations and protests that hurt many ROTC programs, forcing some colleges to abandon them completely and causing others to make them voluntary instead of mandatory.

"Things are more relaxed now," said Richard D. Van Antwerp, the Naval ROTC commander at the University of California at Berkeley, a center of some of the bitterest antiwar demonstrations. "We can wear our uniforms on campus without any trouble."

The Pentagon does not have over-all figures for the school year that just started, since enrollments are not complete. Figures for past years show a steady decline — from 160,900 students in 1970 to 63,200 last year.

ROTC officials on campus, however, say the downward trend has been reversed.

At Berkeley, for example, there were 120 recruits for Navy ROTC last fall compared with an estimated 135 to 150 this fall. At the University of Mississippi in Oxford, Army ROTC enrollment up 19 per cent this year after a six-year decline.

Parade And Awards Day

Cadets in East Carolina University's Air Force ROTC Detachment 600 will march in their annual "Chancellor's Review" Parade at noon Tuesday, May 14.

The parade and an awards ceremony will take place at the Archery Field on College Hill Drive. In case of inclement weather, the parade will be cancelled and awards ceremonies will be held in 214 Library Building.

Awards will be presented by ECU Chancellor Leo Jenkins, Mrs. Howard A. I. Sugg, Regent of the Major Benjamin May Chapter of the N. C. Daughters of the American Revolution, and by Owen Kingsbury of the American Legion.

In addition to cadet awards, two Air Force ROTC staff members, Tech. Sgt. Ernest W. Fadely and Staff Sgt. William B. Langley will receive Air Force Commendation Medals for Meritorious Service.

Fadely is completing a 20 year career in the Air Force.

Bloodmobile Gained 403 Pints In 2-Day Visit At EC Campus

The two-day Bloodmobile visit to the East Carolina University campus this week netted a gratifying total of 403 pints of blood, according to Pitt Blood chairman Billy Ross.

Ross said that Monday's visit resulted in the collection of 185 units while Tuesday's donation total amounted to 218 pints of blood. He added that there were 28 persons rejected on Monday and 50 on Tuesday.

Both visits were sponsored by the Reserve Officers Training Corps at ECU with Corps member Larry Spivey heading the successful drive.

Mrs. Ruth Taylor, executive secretary of the Pitt chapter of the American Red Cross, reported that approximately 30 potential donors were turned away due to a forced early closing of registration by personnel of the Blood Center out of Norfolk, Va.

She said that the nurse in charge of the Bloodmobile here decided to close registration at 3:35 p.m. as opposed to the normal 4 p.m. closing hour. Mrs. Taylor added that she appealed to the Blood Center personnel to continue the visit until 4 p.m. but she was not successful.

The secretary pointed out that the attitude and willingness of the ECU students to help in the visits was "exceptional." She also cited the "wonderful cooperation" of the fraternities, sororities and other campus organizations.

Ross and Mrs. Taylor thanked the ROTC for its sponsorship of the visits and also the women of the Service League and volunteer nurses who assisted.

The officials reported that the next visit of the Bloodmobile to Pitt County is scheduled for Dec. 10 at the Moose Lodge here. Students who were not able to give blood during the campus drive were urged to participate in the December visit.

ECU Donates Near 400 Units To Bloodmobile

DAILY REFLECTOR 23 Oct 70

Douglas Morgan, chairman of the Pitt County Bloodmobile, today revealed that 396 units of blood were contributed by 489 ECU students reporting to the bloodmobile on its campus visit Monday and Tuesday at Wright Auditorium.

On Monday, 186 units were given, with 37 rejects. Tuesday, an even larger turn out resulted in 210 units collected, with 56 students rejected. Most of the rejects were due to volunteers having a cold or virus, thus not qualifying them to give at the time.

"Cadel Jeff Wilson and the Air Force ROTC are really to be commended for an outstanding job," Morgan commented. "This hard working group and the Angel Flight went all out to make this the successful drive it was."

Morgan also expressed appreciation for others whom he said "worked diligently to make it an effective drive." These are the volunteer nurses from Greenville, members of the Greenville Service League, and the offices of the Deans of Men and Women. The deans offices, Morgan noted, were instrumental in getting word to the students. Top contributors as groups were the Alpha Zeta Delta Sorority and for fraternities, the Sigma Phi Epsilon.

"I have been told," Morgan commented, "that many of the students give as a memorial gesture to Tate Nabors." Nabors was an ECU student who died following a motorcycle accident.

With the successful two day collection, Morgan commented, "We are now 146 units behind our quota. We were 260 units behind, and hope to close the gap even more in the future drives."

The next collection date is December 2, when the bloodmobile will be sponsored by the Moose Lodge at the Moose Lodge in Greenville.

Blood drive set

The Air Force ROTC sponsored blood drive returns to the ECU campus April 21-22. The blood drive will be in South Cafeteria from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Wednesday, and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Thursday.

Through passage of a new law, of 18 years or over will not be required to present parents' signatures to donate blood.

The leading fraternity and sorority donating blood will be awarded plaques by the Red Cross. Excuses will be given to students who miss class while donating blood. There will be refreshments in the dining hall for those who donate.

2-Day Blood Drive

The American Red Cross Bloodmobile is coming to Greenville again for a two day collection drive.

Mrs. Ruth Taylor, Executive Director of the American Red Cross has announced that the Pitt County bloodmobile unit will be on campus at East Carolina University for a two day drive Wednesday and Thursday.

On Wednesday the unit will be on hand from 11:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. On Thursday the hours will be from 10:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m.

The AFROTC is sponsoring the drive on campus.

"Our quota for each day is 160 units," Mrs. Taylor commented. "However, we hope very much to surpass this amount in this drive, as we now stand 295 units behind our designated quota for this time of year." Citizens from the community are urged to take part in this drive along with students and faculty from ECU.

The bloodmobile unit will be located in the vicinity of the South Cafeteria on campus.

Mrs. Taylor announced that Douglas Morgan, chairman of the Pitt County American Red Cross Bloodmobile Unit had resigned the chairmanship. "He has done a marvelous job for us over the past four years," Mrs. Taylor said, "and we regret Doug will not be with us longer."

Topped Blood Quota

East Carolina University students on Wednesday and Thursday once more proved in tangible terms their concern for others.

By giving 380 units of blood in the two day American Red Cross Pitt County Bloodmobile drive, they went over the top, surpassing by 60 units the 320 unit quota for the drive.

Had it not been for the large number of rejects, a total of 75 (due mostly to donors being unacceptable because of having colds), the over-the-goal tally would have been much greater.

"Those kids did a beautiful job in turning out," Mrs. Ruth Taylor, Executive Director of the Pitt County Chapter of the American Red Cross commented.

"And I want to say how much we appreciate the truly fine job accomplished by those promoting and taking the drive on as a project," Mrs. Taylor added. She said that Greg Garland and Al Day, both of the AFROTC, were co-chairmen of the drive.

Others she cited for providing valuable assistance were members of Angel Flight; Phi Sigma Pi, a national honor fraternity whose efforts were headed by Tom House, student nurses from the university; and members of the Greenville Service League.

Two Bands For Dance-A-Thon

Two live bands will furnish the music today and on until midnight as Greenville's first Dance-A-Thon gets feet tapping in a fund raising project for the annual March of Dimes campaign.

The Rose High School Dance Band and the Amusement Park, a local dance band will furnish music for the 12 hour plus dance marathon that begins at 11:30 a.m. in Wright Auditorium.

Participants — singles, couples or groups, wishing to take part in the dance for March of Dimes are asked to secure a sponsor. Sponsors will agree to pay so much per hour for each hour the person he sponsors continues to dance (or move in time to the music after the first few hours).

Thus, if a sponsor agrees to sponsor a couple, at say, $2.00 per hour, and the couple manages six hours of continuous dancing, then the individual, merchant or business firm sponsoring that couple would donate $12.00 to the March of Dimes campaign. Participant cards are to be picked up at Wright Auditorium.
Members of the East Carolina University AFROTC and the Angle Flight are sponsoring the Dance-A-Thon. This is the next to last even of the 1973 campaign for the March of Dimes. The final event is to be a 25 mile Walk-A-Thon.
Funds raised through the March of Dimes campaign go to research and assistance to victims of the various diseases that cripple children.

Will they relive 'They kill horses'?

The Arnold Air Society of the ROTC here will sponsor a DANCE-A-THON Feb. 17, in Wright Auditorium to raise money for the March of Dimes.

The 12 hour Dance-A-Thon, which will begin at noon and lasts until midnight, is open to the public, and anyone or any organization may act as a sponsor.

Every dancer must have at least one sponsor, and sponsors must pledge a certain amount of money for each hour danced.

BREAKS ON HOUR

There will be a five minute break after each hour, fifteen minute intermission after three hours.

Participants under age 14 must be accompanied by an adult. Participants between age 14 and 18 must have a permission form signed by a parent or guardian. The Dance-A-Thon will be chaperoned.

Interested persons should pick up their registration form anytime in room 109 Whichard Annex. Complete instructions are on the forms.

TWO BANDS PLAY

Two bands are booked for Saturday's entertainment. Refreshments will be served and trophies be given for the longest dancer and the kookiest dresser.

Local disc jockeys will act as masters-of-ceremony at the Dance-A-Thon. The event may be partially televised. Final arrangements have not been confirmed, however.

Capt. Gerald A. Fabisch of Aerospace Studies is acting as this year's director for the Pitt County March of Dimes. He said Pitt County has not done anything like this in about 12 years, and that this year's goal is $10,000. Capt. Fabisch hopes the Dance-A-Thon will bring at least $500.

EFFORTS CONTINUE

Past March of Dimes' efforts have included a mother's march, a march by the ROTC and money has been raised by mailers.

Much of the money raised will remain in Pitt County. The county will receive a sizable portion for its battle against sick-cell anemia.

Capt. Fabisch has described this year's results as "beautiful." "Everyone has been co-operative," he says, "but we'd like to see more youth participation."

Cadets Netted Nearly $4,000

A lucky day for the East Carolina University AFROTC cadets last Saturday in their Marchathon activity netted the boys in blue nearly $4,000 in their part of the annual March of Dimes campaign.

"Their total collection by the cadets comes to $3,938.93," Captain Gerald Fabisch revealed this morning. "It's so near the $4,000 mark that we're going to make one added effort to bring it to that, which was the goal the cadets had set.

Fabisch, 1973 campaign chairman, said the response to the various activities in the campaign were splendid. "Altogether, we have now reached the $8,200 mark in our March of Dimes campaign," he said. The 1973 goal is $10,000.

In addition to the nearly $4,000 collected by the cadets, the three day Mother's March on January 19, 20, and 21 has, according to co-chairman Mrs. William Bruner, "netted $3,105 to date. We still have some kits out to be reported, and hopefully will get about $500 more," she stated.

The Jaycette Coffee Day realized about $100, with possibly more to come in from merchants.

Fabisch said that in addition to these three fund raising drives, another $1,100 had been collected from mailers sent out, and that more was still to be expected from that source.

Two other major events are scheduled for the annual March of Dimes drive. One is the Dance-A-Thon to be held at Wright Auditorium on February 17.

The other event, originally scheduled to be held February 3, has now been postponed until sometime in March. That is the Walk-A-Thon. Fabisch said a new date would be announced within a few weeks.

Tomorrow is going to be a busy day for about 100 AFROTC cadets and 20 of the feminine counterparts, girls of the Angel Flight.

For the 19th consecutive year, the boys and girls in blue from East Carolina University will be on street intersections in Greenville, Ayden, Farmville, Winterville and Bethel for the annual March of Dimes Marchathon.

For the 1973 event, Cadet Captain Thomas Shubert, a native of Hicksville, New York, and Cadet 1st Lt. Ron Lipe of Asheville are co-chairmen for the Marchathon.

"Hopefully, we will also be joined by representatives from the fraternities," Cadet Captain Shubert commented.

Shubert is also drill master for the AFROTC Drill Team, a select group of a dozen cadets who will again this year furnish the highlight Marchathon attraction for the entertainment of the public.

"The drill team will perform in two locations during the morning in Greenville," Shubert said. "We'll be at the Pitt County Courthouse from nine til about ten-thirty, then go to Pitt Plaza where we'll perform until noon time."

"In the afternoon," the drill commander pointed out, "we will make appearances in Farmville and Bethel." He said that some of the drill routines the team will perform will include the Queen Anne, Salute, Black Out, and the 13, 16 and 20 count manual. "We'll also do the In-A-Squad-Halt," he added. All of these are elaborate military drills designed to display the dexterity and discipline of military march and drill exercises.

Shubert explained that the local Army Reserve unit will be giving assistance to the AFROTC unit. "They are supplying us with a two and a half ton truck with driver, and will in addition supply us a food truck," he stated.

The 1973 Marchathon begins tomorrow morning at nine o'clock and lasts until five in the afternoon.

"Our people will be on just about all of the major intersections in Greenville," Shubert said, "and will be at main points in the other towns we're covering."

He mentioned also that when a person contributes he would be given a piece of identification paper to place in his windshield to show that he already made his contribution.

As the collection progresses during the day, plans are to periodically post the results. Shubert said this would be done at one central point, at Wachovia Bank at Fifth and Greene Street.

Shubert said "we are all hoping this is a successful drive and that we'll reach our goal of $4,000. Our group feels this is a very worthy cause, and we're happy to do our bit to collect as much as we can to help out."

Colonel Earl D. Bruton, AFROTC Commanding Officer at ECU, expressed his pride in the efforts of the young people giving their time to the cause.

"They're doing a great job," said Bruton. "I hope they'll continue to support their success."

Few people are aware of the use of research in the treatment of children born with birth defects.

Netted $1,000 For UNICEF

The annual Greenville Halloween Trick or Treat campaign conducted during the last week-end of October netted a total of $1,000.28, according to Mrs. Matt Gustafson, 1973 chairman for the UNICEF drive.

All across America, young children, like those in Greenville, canvassed from door to door to collect funds in what has become a traditional event for American children in helping children in less fortunate lands. Children in affluent European countries also join in an annual collection campaign. Worldwide, these volunteer contributions form a substantial portion of funds used for needy children in less developed countries.

The Greenville campaign, sponsored by Church Women United, is, as in past years, accepting additional contributions for a short time from persons whom the young campaigners may have missed. "If the Trick or Treaters missed your house, please send your contribution to me," Mrs. Gustafson said. Her address is 210 Pinewood Road, Greenville.

She also expressed her appreciation to Captain Gerald Fabisch and the East Carolina University R.O.T.C. cadets for their assistance in collecting at intersections; to Girl Scout Troop 97 and Boy Scout Troops 124 and 452; to Greenville-Pitt County Boys' Club, and the 21 churches taking part.

March Of Dimes Goal Is Topped

The goal has been reached. Aiming at a total collection of $4,000 for the annual March of Dimes campaign through their traditional Marchathon, members of the East Carolina University AFROTC made it with a little plus.

The $4,024.73 final tally is of the result of the day long activities conducted by about 100 cadets and 20 Angel Flight girls on January 27.

The Marchathon was organized under the auspices of the Arnold Air Society and carried out by members of the AFROTC under the guidance of Cadet Major Carl T. Knott Jr. of Greenville.

1973 March Of Dimes To Be Launched Jan. 19

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The 1973 March of Dimes campaign is being readied for a full-scale launching on January 19. Jerry Fabisch, campaign director for 1973 has announced.

Fabisch, an Air Force Captain stationed with the AFROTC unit at East Carolina University, revealed that the March of Dime canisters have already been placed in numerous stores and businesses in the area.

The new campaign director, who succeeds Air Force Captain Gary Schaal, the 1972 director, listed six major events that will be held in January and February to highlight the collection of funds for the fight against diseases that cripple children.

The six events scheduled to date are:

—January 19 — Mother's March. To involve about 200 to 250 women, this program, being handled primarily through the Junior Women's Club, will be headed by Mrs. Joy Bruner. The women will conduct a house-to-house campaign on that date. Fabisch said in some instances husbands might be accompanying their wives on this drive.

—January 26 — Jaycette Coffe Day. This traditional activity is under the direction of Mrs. Etsel Gordon and Mrs. Gaynor Mills. A number of stores will be donating coffee, served by Jaycettes, with collections going to the March of Dimes.

—January 27 — Marchathon — A successful fund-raising affair in past years, the annual Marchathon is again being conducted by members of ECU's AFROTC. About 100 cadets, in full uniform, will collect funds on street corners in Greenville, Ayden, Winterville, Farmville and Bethel. Drill teams will also perform at various shopping centers during the day. The Marchathon, arranged through the Arnold Air Society, will be under the supervision of Cadet Mayor Carl Knott.

—February 3 — Walkathon — This public participation event will feature a 25 mile scheduled walk. Cards will be provided in advance for persons wishing to participate, who will then be responsible to get a sponsor. Merchants, firms, churches or other sponsors will designate the amount per mile they will be willing to contribute for each mile successfully covered by the walker sponsored. Refreshments will be served at waystops for walkers.

PAULA PFEIFER . . . 1973 March of Dimes National Poster Child, is shown here with Air Force Captain Gerald Fabisch, campaign director for the local 1973 March of Dimes campaign. The photograph was taken in Atlanta where Fabisch attended an orientation session for campaign personnel. Paula is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Pfeifer of Tulsa, Okla.

—February 9 — Carolina Today. On the morning of February 9, members of the AFROTC drill team will perform on WNCT-TV on the Carolina Today program. Also scheduled to appear on the program will be John Diffu of Raleigh, Chairman of the Eastern Sector of the National foundation March of Dimes.

—February 17 — Dance-A-Thon. A new activity in the March of Dimes campaign. Fabisch notes this will be based loosely on the dance marathons popular during the depression years. To be held at Wright Auditorium, it will be open to the public and is expected to run for 18 hours. Like the Walkathon, the Dance-A-Thon participants will be issued a card in advance and secure a sponsor. Refreshments will be served.

Fabisch said the vehicles and drivers to support the AFROTC activities would be supplied by members of the 398th Supply Company, Heavy Materiel General Support, of the U. S. Army Reserve Center. The company is commanded by 1st Lt. Kenneth Wheeler.

Members of the AFROTC Angel Flight will be assisting the cadets, and Miss Cheryl Berry, of the administrative offices of the AFROTC and Cadet Ronald Lippe are special assistants to Fabisch in the overall program.

As a public service, Fabisch said he would be happy to accept appointments with civic clubs, churches, or other groups to show three short color films . . . Paula, a film about the 1973 March of Dimes Poster Child; Keep On Waling, the story of a young boy without arms; and Mother's March. Interested persons can contact Captain Fabisch by telephoning 758-6597 or 758-6598.

"We have high hopes of reaching the $10,000 mark in our 1973 drive," Fabisch commented. Last year we passed the $8,000 mark, and I believe the people of Greenville and the county will make this an all-out year for helping."

Honoring nation's defenders

Veterans Day ceremonies begin

■ East Carolina University also plans to honor veterans at today's football game and tonight with a free performance of the Tar River Community Band.

The Daily Reflector

People across Pitt County will gather today to honor the more than 10,400 veterans who call the area home.

Veterans Day ceremonies are planned today in Greenville, Ayden, Bethel and Winterville. East Carolina University also plans to honor veterans at today's football game and tonight with a free performance of the Tar River Community Band.

Veterans Day was authorized in 1954 as a holiday to honor all the nation's veterans. It grew from the commemoration of the end of fighting during World War I which occurred on Nov. 11, 1818.

In the late 1960s, Congress moved Veterans Day to late October. However, the holiday's link to Nov. 11 was strong, and the observance was returned to Nov. 11 in 1978.

The Arnold Air Society, a service organization connected to ECU's Air Force ROTC, marked Veterans Day on Friday with a program honoring prisoners of war and missing in action service members.

The 2000 U.S. Census showed 792,646 veterans live in North Carolina, according to the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs. More than 10,400 live in Pitt County.

Today's local celebrations include:

■ The town of Ayden Veterans Day Program begins at 8:15 a.m. at Veterans Memorial Park on Third Street. The program will focus on recognition of

Report Aids House Unit's 2-Way Fight

By LES HONEYCUTT

WASHINGTON.—No major legislation is in sight this year as a direct result of recommendations made this week by the President's Commission on Veterans' Pensions.

But the report, played squarely into offensive and defensive strategy of the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

On one hand, the 415-page report gave the committee's leadership an out for its opposition to a general service pension bill, supported by the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars. Both groups have generated increasing pressure for enactment of a general service pension. The commission, headed by retired Gen. Omar N. Bradley, not only urged against a general pension bill but asked that the program generally be integrated into the existing social security system.

ON THE OTHER HAND, commission recommendations for increased compensation rates—generally advocated by the House committee—can be used as a lever to gain that objective. Heretofore, the Administration has recommended against disability compensation hikes.

What form a compensation increase will take is still undecided. The President's Commission says an increase is warranted for veterans seriously injured as a direct result of service. Veterans' groups have been pressing for a general increase, and have asked that Congress correct the disparity created in 1952 when veterans rated 50 percent or more disabled were granted a 15 percent compensation increase, while ex-GIs rated less than 50 percent disabled were given only a five percent boost.

THE PRESIDENT'S Commission believes veterans in the lower disability brackets are well taken care of, but asked this week for higher rates for ex-servicemen whose disabilities are more serious.

Defense Sets Pay Study

'Ultra' Panel Will Survey All Services

WASHINGTON.—The Pentagon has formed an ultra top-level pay committee to hammer out a service-wide compensation system that provides adequately for management as well as for "officer and enlisted technicians."

Deputy Defense Secretary Ruben B. Robertson, Jr., created the panel late last month. In laying down the ground rules, he indicated that the present pay and promotion systems both may be in for considerable change. He scored the practice of "rewarding technical ability by rank," saying it "tends to depreciate authority and responsibility."

The "Defense Advisory Committee on Professional and Technical Compensation" will be headed by Pentagon personnel chief Carter L. Burgess. Prominent government and industrial leaders soon will be asked to serve—and help solve the increasingly severe problem of skilled manpower retention.

Months of study by the panel are anticipated.

FINAL RECOMMENDATIONS and Defense's remedial legislation will be ready for Congress by next January, Robertson said. A key part of the Committee's goal will be to secure substantial raises for (See DEFENSE, Page 12)

ANG, Reserve OK Barracks

WASHINGTON.—Air National Guard and Air Reserve installations people have agreed on a standardized barracks for summer training sites, and the plan is being studied at USAF headquarters, an AFR spokesman said this week.

In reaching accord on the structures, AFR "bought" the 40-man masonry barracks now going up at Air Guard training sites. Continental Air Command, responsible for Reserve training, wanted a 400-man dormitory type structure.

Installations people pointed out that the costlier dormitories had "little chance" of getting through either USAF headquarters or the Bureau of the Budget. No oppo-

School for GI Kids Approved in House

WASHINGTON.—The House this week passed and sent to the Senate a bill setting up a War Orphans' Scholarship program for children of men who died as a result of service-connected injuries or diseases.

The House also approved a five-part GI housing bill, including an amendment offered from the floor, which, in effect, extends the World War II GI loan program for another year past its July 25, 1957 deadline.

Meanwhile, the House Veterans' Affairs Committee put off a vote for the second time in a week on major compensation and pension proposals.

THE COMMITTEE declined to vote until it heard Gen. Omar Bradley give a report on the recommendations of the President's Commission on Veterans' Pensions, which he heads.

After hearing General Bradley, the committee again delayed a vote on the proposals until further hearings could be held. It planned to call major veterans' groups to Capitol Hill again to comment on their proposals in face of the Bradley group report.

USAF Okays Rank Waiver For Reserve

WASHINGTON.—Continental Air Command's drive for 30,000 new Air Reservists, which opens May 1, got a big push from the Pentagon this week when headquarters okayed waiver of skill-level and rank requirements for prior-service personnel enlisting in AFR combat wings.

This means that Reserve Wings can fill vacancies with men of higher skill levels and rank than authorized, provided personnel of authorized levels are not available and the enlistee is qualified to do the job. The order is effective immediately, but the program won't get its big test until ConAC kicks off the recruiting campaign.

ConAC has been testing the relaxed rank rules at four wings, one in each numbered air force, for several months. The command recently requested permission to apply them command-wide.

"OPERATION BUILDUP," the tag put on the upcoming recruiting campaign, aims to enroll 30,000 prior-service technicians to beef-up AFR's 24 reserve flying wings. Vacancies to be filled include aircraft and aircraft engine mechanics, transportation, supply, communications, operations, radio. (See AF OKAYS, Page 33)

Defense Budgeting Under Fire As AGs Wind Up Convention

By BOB HARDESTY

AUGUSTA, Ga.—The Adjutants General Association ended its three-day annual conference here this week with words of both optimism and caution.

The State National Guard commanders were told that the Army has no intention of infringing upon the present status of the Guard Bureau in the Pentagon. (See separate story).

They were told that the Army and Air Guard strengths are at their highest peaks in peacetime history.

Injecting a note of pessimism, however, Maj. Gen. Karl F. Hausauer, adjutant general of New York, told the group that unless the Guard does something to improve its training requirements, the Army Reserve will soon become the foremost Reserve component in the nation.

In addition, the AGs were told repeatedly the Administration's decision to balance the budget has wrecked the Guard's construction program.

In other developments during the three-day meeting, the adjutants general:

• Questioned whether the Department of Defense has been ignoring the Guard or neglecting to render it proper assistance.

• Were told by the director of Selective Service that Americans today have "too many logical reasons and excuses to avoid fighting" or participating in the Ready Reserve.

• Heard a prediction from the chief of the National Guard Bureau that the Department of Defense will soon approve two years duty with the Guard as the equivalent of four months of basic training for the purposes of overseas service.

• Were told that the Army sees no reason why Guardsmen who receive ROTC commissions cannot (See AGs, Page 12)

Approximately 25 members of the U.S. Air Force Reserve meet each Thursday night at 8 p.m. in the Austin building at East Carolina College.

They are members of Flight D, 9947th Air Force Reserve Squadron.

Under the command of Maj. Robert Michaels, the unit offers reserve officers in this area a specialized training course which is conducted on a pay status at Stallings Air Base in Kinston. The training covers a number of subject fields.

Officers and airmen are also able to obtain regular promotions as members of the reserve unit.

Toward Retirement

Each officer and airman must earn a total of 50 points per year in order for the year to count toward retirement. He is given a total of 15 points and he then must earn the additional 35 points to make a total of 50.

A maximum of 60 points per year can be earned toward retirement. Points can also be earned in other ways than attendance at meetings. The reservist can earn retirement points by taking correspondence courses, attending summer camps or lectures.

training the 9947th Reserve Squadron offers a general meeting which is also held Thursday nights at the college. This training is conducted on a non-pay basis. Reservists hear lectures by members of the group, civic leaders, regular Air Force personnel or they view training films which supply up-to-date information on the latest developments within the U.S. Air Force.

Social Side

There is a social side to belonging to the unit also. Frequently, the 9947th has a commander's night. A supper or party is usually held in connection with the commander's night. Administrative officer for the squadron, 1st Lt. William F. Landing, points out that there are many advantages to belonging to the unit.

"First, needless to say, an Air Force reservist gives of his time, education, skills and experiences, to the overall make-up of national defense and security of the United States in an effort to build a strong, prosperous, peaceful nation."

Training

"Second, your local Air Force reserve unit offers specialized training for airmen. This training is on a pay basis according to rank. Each pay period last two hours and there are 24 meets a year. The present course of specialized training concerns administration and the various problems of the Air Force. Specialized training means additional income for reservists and close association with the expanding achievements of the regular Air Force. In addition to this reservists work for promotions and eventual retirement from Federal service.

For interested veterans, airmen and officers, Landing pointed to a statement by General Charles B. Stone III, commander of Continental Air Command:

"It is generally conceded that any future conflict will be furious and of short duration. Thus the reservist may be of invaluable assistance to the nation at some time."

ROTC Week Proclaimed

The week of April 12-19 has been proclaimed ROTC Week in North Carolina by Governor James Holshouser.

According to the proclamation, military training goes back over 150 years on college campuses and the Reserve Officers' Training Corps continues the tradition it started in 1819.

Holshouser said military training has been offered to the college students in North Carolina throughout its history and students in ROTC have made significant contributions to their colleges, communities, states and to the Nation.

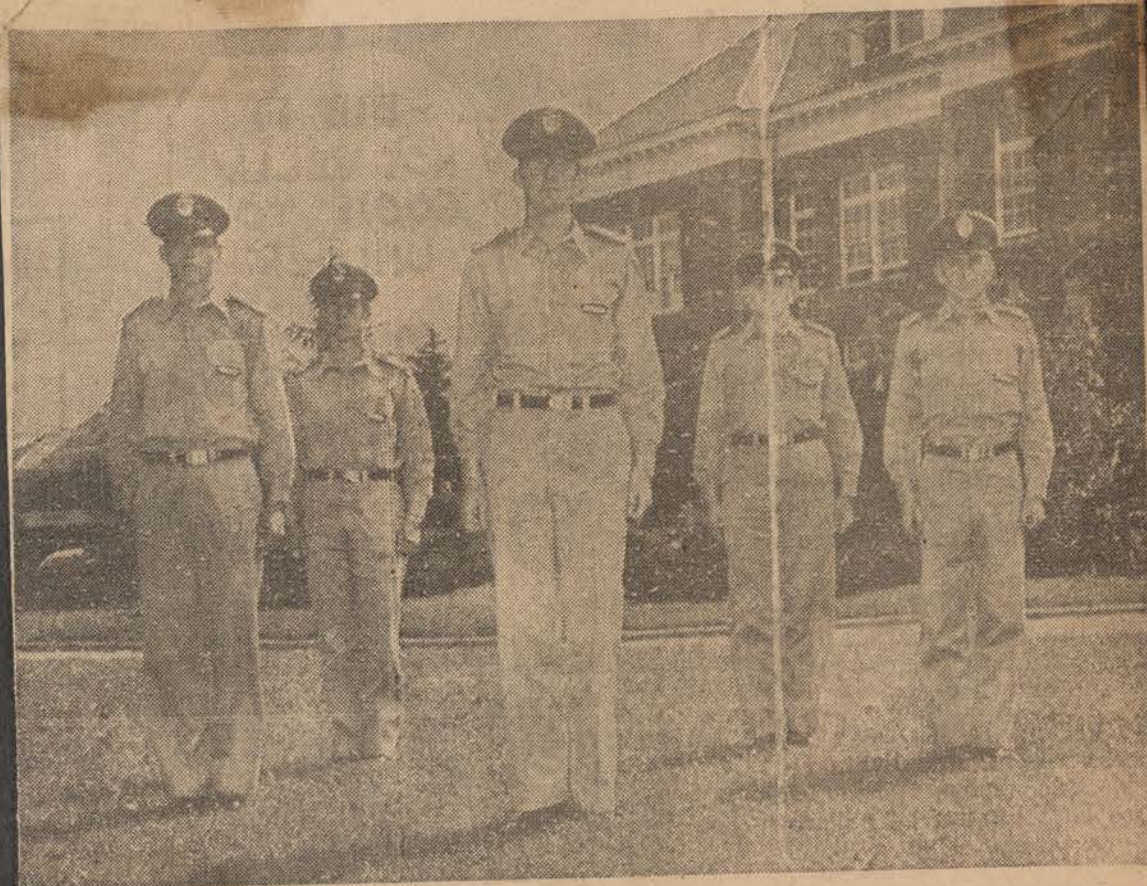

He said tens of thousands of young men who have taken ROTC have gone on to serve in the armed forces in peacetime, wartime, and in times of national emergency, with many giving their lives to preserve the democratic way of life.

"It is fitting that we recognize their unselfish service," Gov. Holshouser said.
