For Charity's Sake.

This evening at 7 o'clock a meeting of ladies will be held at Mrs. A. L. Blow's for the purpose of organizing a circle of the King's Daughters to look after charitable work in the community. All ladies of the town are invited to attend and become members. There is much suffering in our midst especially during such severe weather as this, and the ladies are taking the right steps to relieve it.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

Samuel W. Fort, well known in New York theatrical circles, is dead.

Snow is two feet deep in Michigan, and in many of the Northern States the temperature is away below zero.

The filing for probate of the will of the late Senator Jos. E. Brown, of Georgia, shows his estate to be worth $2,500,000. No bequests are made, but the property will be equally divided among the heirs.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SATURDAY.

The General Assembly to-day did nothing except of a local nature. A bill, which will pass, was introduced to take the public printing away from bidders and it is said, give it out to Butler's organ here as patronage. To-day's session of the Senate was characterized by unusual interest. A resolution to recall the bill sent to the House repealing the law letting the public printing to the lowest bidder was defeated. It provoked a heated debate.

The first attack on city charters was made by Mr. Grant, of Wayne, in a bill to amend the charter of the city of Goldsboro.

Resolutions were adopted instructing Senators and Representatives in Congress to endeavor to secure the repeal of the 10 per cent. tax on State banks, and certain objectionable features of the internal revenue laws.

A heated debate arose over the proposition to elect a President pro tem. This procedure was argued by the Democrats to be unconstitutional and without precedent. The constitution provides for the election of a President pro tem, in the absence of the Lieutenant-Governor or when he is acting Governor. The proposition was defeated.

Superior Court.

The following cases have been posed of since last report:

Porter Johnson, assault with deadly weapon, guilty, 60 days in jail with leave to Commissioners to hire out.

Peter Plummer, assault with deadly weapon, not guilty.

Porter Johnson, carrying concealed weapons, pleads guilty, judgment suspended upon payment of costs.

Jesse Baker, assault with intent to commit rape, not guilty of intent to commit rape but guilty of simple assault.

The theatrical company that is on the road playing "Uncle Tom's Cabin," have recently met with much adverse criticism. The pictures they display by way of advertising, and the play itself, grossly misrepresents the Southern people. The company had billed to play Goldsboro Saturday night, but upon arrival there were waited upon by a committee of prominent citizens and informed that it was against the sentiment of the community for them to present the play there, and trouble would follow if they attempted it. The company left at once for Newbern.

The action of the Populists and Republicans in taking away from Lieut. Governor Doughton the right to appoint the committees as speaker of the Senate was high handed and revolutionary and without precedent. At least twice in the past the Democrats had a majority in the Senate when there was a Republican Speaker and it was not even intimated that this should be done. In fact it has never been attempted before in North Carolina. Talk about this being a conservative Legislature! We venture the assertion that never before has there been more radical legislation than will be enacted before this mongrel body shall adjourn.

In another place some or at least one such measure is referred to. What a spectacle the body will present before their time expires can hardly be suggested now.

DAINTY BOUDOIRS.

Where New York's Heiress Debutantes Receive Friends.

Gertrude Vanderbilt's White Parlor — Her Cousin's Room Where Are Combined Spanish Negligence and French Taste.

Not less dainty than jewel cases are the boudoirs of the young women who will come out this winter as New York's heiress debutantes. Many of these boudoirs, or "morning rooms," as they are familiarly called, have been newly fitted up for this coming out season; and are as elaborate as money can obtain, while keeping the exquisite daintiness of a French boudoir.

The much discussed and very unpretentious little girl, Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, has a white boudoir as one of a set of three rooms in the Fifth avenue palace facing Central park. There is a sleeping-room, a dressing-room and a parlor or boudoir, just as she chooses to call it. This last is a large, almost square room, fitted up entirely in white without so much as a dash of gold; nor are even the fire dogs brass, but of white metal.

Between the two great front windows, and banked on either side with growing plants, is a large oval mirror of French plate, so fine that once a new chambermaid walked into it thinking it another room. All around the oval mirror are wild flowers in a garland, whose ends are held by flying boys.

Over the mantel, which is white enameled wood, there is a similar mirror, similarly treated, and a border with the same floral design adorns the white wall. It is not a bare room. There are too many fresh flowers, too many girlish mementoes for this. But its simplicity is so pronounced that many another and less favored girl would plead for something "a little showier." The furniture is blue and white and the carpet, woven like a rug, is the same.

The room where Miss Gertrude's cousin, Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, receives her girl friends on her somewhat brief visits to New York, is best described by one of the young ladies to whom Miss Consuelo served chocolate one afternoon:

"We found Connie's room a pile of bear rugs, and she begged us to excuse her if she kept one wrapped around her, as our New York days are so 'beastly.' The room was hung with rugs, and upon the plate glass tables lay curios of all countries. We enjoyed looking at the photographs taken by Mrs. Willy K., and we greatly enjoyed seeing a collection of oriental scarfs gathered by Consuelo herself on her last yachting tour.

"After a great deal of chatter, Connie drew out a china table loaded with cups and saucers 'personally conducted' across the water; and we had chocolate prepared by a French maid. The room was a combination of Spanish negligence and French taste that was very attractive but wholly different from any belonging to the other girls."

Another envied debutante of the winter is Miss Edith Morton, the daughter of New York's governor-elect. Miss Morton is tall, fair, vivacious and highly accomplished. Her private rooms in the mansion at Rhinebeck abound in pictures. Upon the walls hang hunting emblems. There are her spurs, her riding whip, her cap and tiny riding boots. There are fencing swords, too, for this young lady is athletic, and a small gymnasium stands ready for her use.

Miss Mabel Gerry, the daughter of the famous S. P. C. C. president, makes her debut this winter, while yet an unmarried daughter, Miss Angelina, remains in the family. Miss Mabel can boast a series of homes. In the Gerry's Newport mansion she has her daintily appointed boudoir; in the Gerry town house she has the same; and, more than all, on her father's yacht she has a parlor as luxuriously fitted up as those of the mikado's pet daughter. Miss Gerry is Frenchy in dress, like nearly all the season's debutantes.

Miss Alice Shepard, a daughter of the late Eliot Shepard, will come out with her cousins the Vanderbilt girls, and Miss Ethel Stokes, a less conspicuous but enormously wealthy girl, will make her appearance about the same time. Nearly all of these girls will come out at teas; and all will have a chance to entertain privately for a few weeks before undergoing the ordeal of a grand ball.

IVORY FOR THE MARKET.

The Supply is Diminishing—A Timely Suggestion.

Naturalists and commercial experts are bewailing the fact that there is danger that the supply of elephant ivory may soon be exhausted. At least sixty thousand elephants are slaughtered yearly to obtain the amount of ivory necessary to supply the world's demand. The value of ivory depends somewhat on the locality from which it comes. West African ivory is the most valuable. It is exceedingly fine-grained, and some of the choicest specimens have the semi-transparent appearance of onyx. The best ivory comes from animals found in very warm and humid atmospheres. In northerly situations, where the air is cooler and dry, the product is coarse and harsh, lacking the velvety elasticity of the other. Guinea ivory is slightly greenish at first, but whitens upon exposure to the air and light. Vegetable ivory is obtained from taqua seed, and is a valuable substitute for the real article. There are several manufactured ivories, of which celluloid is best known and is, perhaps, the most valuable. In view of the enormous consumption of ivory, the establishment of elephant farms is suggested. The animals are extremely docile in captivity, and when reared with domestic surroundings are manageable and may at the same time be made useful as beasts of burden.—N. Y. Ledger.

AN AMERICAN COUNTESS.

Lady Randolph Churchill and the Snake on Her Arm.

There are certain women in the world who capture public attention to that degree that everything they do is promptly chronicled. Lady Randolph Churchill is one of them. When returning home from India with Lord Randolph, she noticed a British soldier tattooing a deck-hand. It dispelled the ennui that had seized upon her as an incident of ship life, and from watching the operation from her deck chair she concluded to try it herself. She had the artist brought before her, and asked him for some designs. He suggested the Talmudic symbol of eternity—a snake holding its tail in its mouth. Lady Randolph was charmed and bared her arm for the operation. Lord Randolph swore and protested. But the tattooing was done—so it is said, at least—and it is described as a beautifully executed snake, dark blue in color, with green eyes and red jaws. As a general thing it is hidden from vulgar gaze by a broad gold bracelet, but her personal friends are privileged to see it and hear the story of the tattooing.—N. Y. Advertiser.

From present indications cotton will cut a small figure in the crops this year.

The Oxford Ledger has begun its eighth year. A mighty good paper it is, too.

The man who keeps out of debt seldom does any complaining about hard times.

Make few debts early in the year and you will have less to pay later in the year.

The man who shouts in church and won't pay his debts had better use well what time he has for shouting here.

The performance by the Chick Concert Company was very good last night and they announced an extra fine programme for to night.
