AYDEN IS COMING.

Land Improvement Company Organized—Tobacco Warehouse Talked.

AYDEN, N. C. April 5th, 1895.

A great many drummers are noticed on our street.

Rev. J. M. Barfield moved into his new residence yesterday.

We have a man here with plenty of money who is talking tobacco warehouse strong. We believe it will come.

We cannot help from adding a word of praise for the DAILY REFLECTOR since its enlargement. It is quite a handsome little sheet, and better still, it gives the news.

Ayden seems to be on a boom, a land improvement company has been formed. The style of the firm is Eastern Carolina Land & Improvement Co., with Jesse Cannon, President; W. F. Hart, Vice President; R. W. Smith, Secretary; J. R. Smith, Treasurer. All of them are live business men and we believe this will be a big thing for Ayden.

Just 1892 Years Age.

The year 1895, according to some, will be a remarkable one, both from an astronomical and religious point of view. On next Friday—Good Friday—April 12, the haverly bodies which gravitate around the sun will be in exactly the same position they occupied in the firmament the day Christ died on the cross. It will be the first time such a thing has occurred since that great day, just 1862 years ago.

THE WOOL IN MY CLOTHING

Grows on a sheep's back and not on a cotton stalk. It would be a good idea for you to see that your Spring Suit is made of the kind that grows on a sheep, because it is better in every respect---wears better, looks better, holds color better and is finer.

Our $5, $8 and $10 Spring Suits are made of this kind of wool and they fit just like tailor made. All grades, all colors and all shapes. Fat or lean, I can fit you.

FRANK WILSON,

The Leader in Clothing.

P. S.---I can take your measure and make a beautiful Suit of Clothes.

The Springfield, Ill., post-office was robbed of $8,000.

Governor Stone has issued call for an extra session of the Missouri Legislature April 23rd.

A cyclone blew down a negro church in Georgia in which school was in progress. The teacher and forty pupils were buried under the falling timber and every one of them was taken out alive.

Saved the Building.

The Methodist church in Raleighville had a narrow escape from destruction by fire, one day recently. A few shingles were discovered to be ablaze on the roof. There was no ladder convenient so Mr. Latner Rogers who was near by climbed a tree, crawled out on a limb projecting over the church and jumped down on the roof a distance of ten feet. The boy climbed the tree and handed water down to Mr. Rogers by the bucket with a rope attached. Mr. Rogers was not injured in his leap and the church was in this way saved from destruction.—Raleigh Press.

LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOTTINGS.

BY O. L. JOYNER.

Florida is developing into a fine cigar tobacco state.

We hear that in some sections of the county the young tobacco plants seem to be freching on the bad.

We have frequently been asked what causes tobacco to frech. We don't know and don't think many do. Certain it is the absence from the soil of some quality which is required to make a healthy plant. Deep ploughing disturbing the top root will prevent it, it is said.

Just at this time farmers cannot give too much thought and attention to a thorough preparation of their tobacco land. If the land is thoroughly pulverized the young roots of the tobacco have no trouble in penetrating the soil and getting the full benefit of all manures, then again they will grow to a much greater depth in search of water in case of a drouth when the land is thoroughly prepared.

While the decreased acreage in in the old tobacco belt of this State and Va., may be and doubtless is equal to the increase in acreage in the eastern counties yet it is not a nice policy for our farmers to go into a big crop expecting fancy or even standard prices for medium or inferior tobacco, for they will be surely disappointed. Money out of a tobacco crop for the eastern farmers, as time and experience has often demonstrated, lies in the production of a fine crop. Good tobacco never goes begging even at stiff prices while it is a hard matter to sell common tobacco at any price.

The Atlanta Constitution, wide awake and liberal as it always is, has a premium offered this year of two hundred dollars for the farmer who raises the best and most valuable one acre of tobacco, quantity and quality considered. The stipulations are in substance these: The competitor must file a written notice of his intention to compete for the prize with Constitution Publishing Co. He must have one acre, no more no less, must have it staked off and given in detail amount of manure used and mode of cultivation. Must live South of Mason and Dixon line but anywhere between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. Under these stipulations it occurs to us that a Pitt county, North Carolina, man ought to be able to get that prize. Everywhere Pitt county has offered her tobacco against that of any other section some of the premiums have been taken. Ex-Commissioner of Agriculture Robinson, of this State, and the Commissioner of Georgia and Mississippi, are the committee to decide the matter. We would suggest that Mr. D. M. Edwards, W. J. Jackson, and others of our farmers whose tobacco has taken premiums, make an effort to get this one.

Everybody noticed how dear the late Senator Vance became to the hearts of the Republicans and Populists—after he died. They lauded him in their speeches, last year and turned his utterances against the Democratic party. Yet their Legislature not only made no provision for a monument for him, nor for a statue of him in one of the State's vacant niches in statuar hall in the capitol at Washington, but it did not even go on record with an expression of a sense of the State's loss on account of his death. This paper and others suggested directly after his death, that the next ensuing Legislature should fill one the State's niches in statuary hall with a statue of Senator Vance, and if the Democrats had had the Legislature this would have been actively urged and such provision would have been made. The expense would have been provided for and without increase of the rate of taxation, either.—Charlotte Observer.

According to the New York Press Mr. Charles Broadway Rouss is now so blind that he cannot recognize his dearest friends. He has to be led about. But he goes to business every day and never forgets to ask: "Does anybody need anything this morning? Are there any letters from the old veterans who fought for the South?"—Richmond Dispatch.

JUGGLING WITH WORDS.

A Spurious Sort of Wit, But Entertaining Sometimes.

Some Clever Instances That Have Been Preserved in English History—A Little Tie in Verse Between Oxford and Cambridge.

Punning, or playing on words, though occasionally very clever, is a spurious kind of wit, says Peterson's Magazine. The following lines, however, by Lord Erskine upon Lady Payne introduce a similar play upon words:

"Tis true I am ill, but I need not complain,
 For he never knew pleasure who never knew Payne."

The poet Shenstone, author of the well-known lines about the warmth of a traveler's welcome to an inn, wrote this couplet upon a resident in the carpet weaving town of Kidderminster, who poured forth floods of verse:

"Thy verses, friend, are Kidderminster stuff,
 And I must own you've measured out enough."

James Smith is the author of a good epigram of the punning kind on a daughter who asked her father, as the dear girls do, for money:

"Dear Belle, to gain money, sure silence is best,
 For dumb Bells are fittest to open the chest."

The rivalry between the universities of Oxford and Cambridge has produced, as might naturally be expected, many neat epigrams. Oxford, even as late as the reign of George I., was persistently Jacobite; and when the house of Hanover came in that famous "home of lost causes" favored the pretender. The king sent some cavalry to the city of Oxford to keep the peace, and about the same time his majesty happened to present a library to the University of Cambridge. Here was a chance for an epigram, which an Oxonian promptly availed himself of in these lines:

The king, observing with judicious eyes
 The state of both his universities,
 To Oxford sent a troop of horse, and why?
 That learned body wanted loyalty.
 To Cambridge books he sent, as well discerning
 How much that loyal body wanted learning.

To which charge of lack of learning a Cambridge graduate cleverly replied:

The king to Oxford sent a troop of horse,
 For Tories own no argument but force;
 With equal skill to Cambridge books he sent,
 For Whigs admit no force but argument.

While on the subject of the universities it may be well to quote the following lines, which give a curious reason for the amount of learning possessed by Oxford and Cambridge:

No wonder that Oxford and Cambridge profound
 In wisdom and science so richly abound,
 When all carry thither a little each day,
 And we meet with so few who bring any away.

Dr. Parr, who attended on Queen Caroline to read prayers and perform other services, was succeeded in these duties by a man named Fellowes. Hence this epigram:

There's a difference between
 Dr. Parr and the queen:
 For the reason you need not go far,
 The doctor is jealous
 Of certain little Fellowes
 Whom the queen thinks much above Parr.

In a similar vein is the following epigram upon a certain Bishop Goodenough, who was about to preach before the house of lords:

"Tis well enough that Goodenough
 Before the lords should preach;
 For sure enough they're bad enough
 He undertakes to teach."

Mohammedan Tree Worship.

To a certain degree the inhabitants of all the Mohammedan countries are worshippers of the tree known as the date palm. One of the prophet's most supreme and binding injunctions is: "Honor thy paternal aunt; the date palm, for in paradise was it created, and from the very heap of dust out of which Adam's body was formed."

The Mohammedans also have a tradition to the effect that when Adam and Eve were driven from the garden they were allowed to take with them a date seed, and that from that single seed sprang all the date trees now known. By some admirable providence the original date seed was planted and the tree grew where the temple of Mecca now stands, and from its trunk was hewn the cradle which often lulled the infant Mahomet to sleep. The Mohammedans declare that all prayers are fulfilled which are made with the knees pressing upon palm wood, or with the same kind of wood in the hand.—St. Louis Republic.

Abraham Lincoln's Grandfather.

R. T. Durrett, of Louisville, at one time an editorial writer on the Courier-Journal, in a letter to City Controller Sturgeon, makes the following reference to the grandfather of Abraham Lincoln:

"The grandfather of President Lincoln settled in Jefferson county, Ky., in 1780 on a tract of 500 acres of land, where the old Long Run Baptist meeting-house now stands. The land bears date of March 4, 1780, and his name appears in it as 'Abraham Linkhorn.' He was killed on his land by the Indians in 1786. Morgan Hughes also owned a tract of 500 acres of land adjoining the Lincoln tract, and, like Lincoln, was one of the earliest settlers of Jefferson county. On this land of Hughes an old station, known as Hughes' station, was built at an early date, and Lincoln was residing in this station when he was killed by the Indians."

Mischief Done by Wind.

When the prince president, on his journey through France, came to Bordeaux a triumphal arch had been erected for him by the prefect at the entrance of the town. A wreath suspended from a rope was to be let down upon his head, and the arch bore this inscription: "He has well deserved it." But a gust of wind carried off the wreath, so there was nothing left but the rope with the legend: "He has well deserved it."—Le Figaro.

J. M. Blow and W. F. Burch are preparing to establish a news depot and will handle a full line of periodicals. It will be under the management of Mr Blow and conducted in a portion of Mrs. Higgs' millinery store.

Not an April Fool.

The Greenville REFLECTOR celebrated "all fools dry" by adding four columns to its size and considerably increasing the amount of reading matter. We hope the improvement is a permanent one, and not an "April fool."—Salisbury Herald.

He Was Overlooked.

A little boy was heard to remark that he had already had the "chick-enpops, munks, weasles, hooking cough and brow-keetus," and had been cured of them all, but he had never yet seen his picture in the newspaper.—Salisbury Herald.

- A lazy man who had time?
- A young man who didn't know?
- An old man who didn't remember?
- A politician who wouldn't promise?
- A pretty girl who didn't look saucy?
- A town go forward rapidly when part of its people put against the other part?
- Any kind of weather over which somebody did not grumble?
- A man who did not know exactly just how every other business ought to be run except his own?
- A mother who felt that her boy was to blame for anything?
- A candidate who did not think he was the man until after the election?

Teachers' Tax.

This is one thing the newspapers have failed to mention, the teachers' tax. Every teacher, now under the new law, is required and compelled to pay one dollar before he can stand an examination as teacher. Heretofore they were allowed the privilege of standing an examination every two months without paying one cent unless they wished to be examined on a special date not at the regular time.—Statesville Mascot.
