PROTRACTED SERVICES.

To One and All.

From next Sunday we hope to protract our services at the Baptist church, and I take this opportunity to extend a cordial invitation to one and all to attend. Whether you be a Methodist, Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Baptist, or not a Christian of any denomination you are earnestly requested to be at every service and share whatever blessings God has in store for us. Rev. Wm. B. Oliver, of the first Baptist church, Wilmington, has kindly consented to be here and do the preaching after Monday night. His reputation as a preacher is well known and needs no comment. Suffice it to say that those who miss his sermons will miss a treat. Then Brethren, friends, do not fail to hear him. Let every body expect a great meeting and God will give it. Truly, C. M. BILLINGS.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Lichtenstien died last night. The body was taken to Charlotte this morning for burial.—Salisbury Herald 9th.

A Lovely Woman.

Of the new-fashion'd woman there's much being said Of her wanting to vote and a' that;
And of her desire to wear man's attire, His coat and his vest and a' that,
And a' that and a' that She may wear trousers and a' that;
She may even ride a horse astride; But a woman's a woman for a' that.

See yonder damsel passing by,
She's up to date and a' that.
She wears a man's hat, likewise his cravat, His shirt and collar and a' that,
And a' that and a' that,
His suspenders an' cuffs and a' that.
But do what she can to imitate man,
A woman's a woman for a' that.

The modern maid, for form arrayed In sweater and bloomers and a' that, Rides a bike exactly like What brother rides and a' that She may wear bloomers for shirts and a' that, Wear men's collars and skirts and a' that, May wear vests if she will, but the fact remains still
A woman's a woman for a' that.
—Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

Call it "guff, fiction, fairy tales, bluff, twisted truth, anything, but don't let the matter drop until you give me a chance to back up every claim I've made in favor of Clothes, Hats and Furnishings. Try a Suit of Clothes, a Hat, some Furnishings—that will do the business, and help to determine whether I preach facts or peddle fairy-tales.

It is said that the tax on lawyers and doctors exempts them from giving in any income. This has been done too by a "reform" Legislature. The "Big Five" save money by it as they are all corporation lawyers with good incomes.

Governor Carr has commenced proceedings against the Secretary of State, to prevent his publishing the mortgage law, and the case will be heard at the next session of the Supreme Court. So this omnibus law of the Douglasites will not be put in the code until after the hearing of this case.

The decision on the income tax cut off about half what was expected to be realized from it. It is said that Mr. Cleveland will not call an extra session of Congress to supply the deficiency. It looks as if it is impossible to reach by taxation the property of some of the rich men of the United States.

LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOTTINGS.

BY O. L. JOYNER.

An Arcadian Legend of Perique Tobacco.

Perique tobacco can only be raised in a small area of St. James Parish, La. Its growth is under the exclusive control of the Arcadians, who inherited the secret of proper cultivation as a sacred legacy from their French ancestors, says Mr. Isidore Hershheim S. Hershheim Bros. & Co., in an interview with a New Orleans newspaper reporter, and one of the oldest old Arcadians are fond of telling is as follows: "One of my ancestors was a man great in war, great in letters, great in all things that make men great. He loved peace, and gave to her the efforts of his greatness. Kings are ungrateful. When his greatness could no longer serve the king he was banished so that the people of France could forget him and his glory. He wandered on and on over seas and mountains. He lost his way one day; weary, faint and hopeless, he threw himself under the shade of a tree to die. His despairing dirge was: 'God and man have deserted me; let me die and forget.' He slept. He dreamed a strange, enchanting dream. A Peri, with soft brown eyes, brown hair and all the sensuous grace of perfect womanhood knelt over him, and kissed his brow with fervent love and passion. 'I am the Peri of Paradise,' she whispered. 'In my domain all men are happy, loving, peaceful. God loves all men. Look to nature for the solaces of grief, pain and sorrow. I will crown you with the leaf that is planted by the gods of content in the spring of the year and gathered in the first dew of the autumn month; the gods press it to their hearts for many months before they offer it as the elixir of joy to mortal man.' The intensity of joy awoke my ancestor. He sighed when he realized that the Peri's kiss was a dream. He placed his hand upon his brow and found that it was crownless. He was silent. God whispers; a strange aroma fills the air. Many plants of large spreading leaves, studded with dew, are spread around him. He eagerly plucked root, branches and leaves and thrust them in his pockets and bosom. One tender branch he placed next to his heart, for he hoped to again dream of his Peri. Once more he wandered, searching for peace and rest. Footsore and heartsick, he sat on a tree that had been hurled to the earth by a windstorm. He took from his bosom the green leaves that he had placed over his heart. They had turned a deep brown, and were soft and pliable. In anger he threw them into the fire he had built. A mist arose. The Peri was at his side. What dreams of delight!

"At last my ancestor awoke. All pain, despair and sorrow had disappeared. He knew that he could always summon his Peri to his side while he could burn incense sweet from the leaves that grew in her garden of paradise. To cultivate them became a labor of love with him. When he succeeded he called them Perique, which he said meant a source of unending strength and joy."

SENSE OF TIME

Chickens Which Knew When One Particular Train Was Due.

"I am always interested in the trifling things of a long journey," said the trans-continental traveler, "because I find as much entertainment in them as in the scenery and in my fellow-passengers. For instance, I was traveling from San Francisco to Portland, Ore., recently, and we stopped for water at some little station in lower Oregon. I learned that it was the custom of the porter of the buffet car to throw away the scraps at that station. To my surprise I found a group of chickens drawn up waiting for the train to stop. The buffet car was at the rear of the train, and the porter appeared on the rear platform just when the train came to a standstill. The chickens recognized him at once, and set up a clucking and a talking that showed that they were there for some purpose.

"When the porter threw them some bits they screamed and raced and scrambled for them in a fashion that set the porter and the few spectators who knew what was going on into great laughter. The porter had his favorites and especial friends among the chickens, and gave them curious names as he tossed out bit after bit.
 The chickens stood off and looked at him first with one eye and then with the other, and the porter declared that they were winking at him. He took care that each chicken got a square meal, but the fowls didn't leave until the train had started.
 The porter told me that for a year he had been feeding these chickens and their intimate friends. He only passed through the place three times a week, but every time he came through these chickens were on hand. The curious thing about it, the porter said, was these chickens knew the days of the week and were able to keep track of them in some way."—N. Y. Sun.

DOG EAT DOG.

A Street Fakir Who Met With His Equal for Once.

The street fakir was stationed on a corner with a machine that an investor could spin around, and "if it stops at a watch yer get the watch, but if it don't yer sere of a smoke." Such was the language of the fakir, says the San Francisco Chronicle.
 A man stood by and watched things for a few minutes. He saw several cigars given to speculators, but the bright steel index never stopped on the watch or the revolver.
 He carried a very stout cane.

Going up to the turntable he stood abreast of the watch, and held his heavy cane fairly up and down. He put down a nickel, gave the index a twist, and, to the surprise of all, it stopped right over the watch. The crowd cheered and jeered, and the fakir tried to look, as if he liked it.

After depositing the watch in his pocket the stranger edged around the table till he stood abreast of the revolver. The cane was again held straight up and down, and another nickel was thrown on the table. The index was sent flying around and it stopped right over the revolver.
 The crowd was too surprised to cheer any more, and before the fakir had recovered his composure the stranger walked off.

An officer from one of the ships near by had watched the whole proceeding, and going after the stranger asked permission to see the cane.
 The stranger handed it to the sailor, who found it weighed eight or nine pounds. It was a powerful magnet.

"It was one of the cleverest cases of dog eat dog that I ever saw," said the navigator.

HIS LITTLE JOKE.

Fred Douglass Came Merely to Lend Color to the Occasion.

Fred Douglass, though very sensitive on the subject of any distinction drawn between negroes and mulattoes to the disparagement of the former, was always ready to crack a joke on his own color. He often laughed over the witticism of Mrs. Fred Grant at his expense, when they met at the Chicago convention of 1888. "The convention had been in session several days, and there had been some balloting the day before," he said, relating the story to a friend. "I was sitting with Mrs. Grant and her party, watching the balloting. To my surprise one vote was cast for me for president of the United States. It had no sooner been announced by the tellers than Mrs. Grant turned to me and, with the most charming smile imaginable, said: 'You must be the dark horse of this convention, Mr. Douglass.' At a meeting of the free religionists in Boston some years ago he was among the speakers. Referring to the rule of the assembly which limited the time of the speeches, he said he never made a short speech that he was satisfied with, and never made a long one that anyone else was satisfied with.

"I came here," said he, "not to speak, but to listen, to learn, not to teach; in fact," he added, "I came here merely to give color to the occasion."—Kate Field's Washington.

The Real Objection.

"Don't you think that Snopkins' manners are very affected?"

"No. What makes them really objectionable is that they're natural."—Washington Star.

WILL SAVE YOU 25 PER CENT.

For the purpose of adding to my already large and well-selected Spring Stock, I am now in the northern markets for a second purchase and in a few days will offer goods and prices that will astonish you.

The northern wholesale merchants are anxious to sell during April as they dread having to carry goods over into the summer, and I am taking advantage of the inducements they hold out. My customers will be given the benefit of these low purchases and can save money by waiting to see my goods.
