The Unkissed Kiss.

I have kissed the girls a plenty,
Aged from one year old to twenty,
Kiss better far than honey. I can taste
their sweetness yet.
But far dearer than the kisses
Given me by kindly misses,
Is the ever verdant memory of a kiss I did not get.

For one winsome little fairy,
With grace so light and airy,
Kept me ever fondly saying "I'll achieve
my purpose yet."
But at length she slowly vanished
With the gift for which I famished,
And she left me sadly sighing for the kiss I did not get.

Reader, pardon this digression—
Does pursuit or does possession
The greater pleasure bring? I really cannot say, and yet,
I've forgotten many misses
Who bestowed on me their kisses.
But I'll always recollect the girl whose
kiss I did not get.

Now, of course there is a moral
In this simple story, for all Those indiscreet young ladies, who will sometimes much regret
That they gave their kisses freely,
For they'll find a lover really
May remember more than all the rest
The kiss he did not get.

Gr. Carrick's House Struck.

During the severe rain storm last Friday evening, the residence of Rev. Thos. Carrick, in the Southern part of town, was struck by lightning, tearing several brick from his chimney and passing down through same it divided, as the chimney was a double one, and went into five different rooms, tearing plastering from the walls and breaking several household articles. It also tore some weather-boarding partly off. No one was hurt and no very serious damage done, we are glad to learn.—Lexington Dispatch.

The Rifles had a meeting this afternoon and twenty-nine men, besides the Captain and Lieutenants reported to go to Raleigh. A few others are expected to report to-morrow.

WASHINGTON, N. C., May 17.

Quite a number of young people joined Mrs. Sarah Russell and her school in their annual picnic yesterday at Public Landing, about three miles down the river. They all enjoyed it highly and are under many obligations to Mrs. Russell for such a pleasant day.

Wednesday at Salt Lake City an enthusiastic meeting was held to discuss means to promote the interest of the silver cause. Fully 2,000 people were present and many prominent men took part in the discussion.

A man named Boggs visited Raleigh with a view of getting the Chamber of Commerce of that city to send delegates to a "sound money" convention to be held at Memphis, Tenn. The Raleigh people declined to send delegates.

The Supreme Court of the State has rendered a decision that the charging of fines, premiums and penalties by Building and Loan Associations is unlawful and usurious. The Associations doing business in the State are considerably wrought up over the decision, and it is said such enterprises have suffered a severe blow.

James B. Colgate, writing to the New York Tribune, predicts that, owing to the rapidly increasing production of gold, the mints will have to shut down on the free coinage of the yellow metal. He says the average cost of producing an amount of gold which, at the fixed price, is worth $1, is about 60 cents, leaving a profit of 40 cents to the miner.

LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOTTINGS.

BY O. L. JOYNER.

OVER A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

A few years ago a Virginia correspondent to the Petersburg Independent and Appeal in writing upon the early history of tobacco quoted from Burk's history of Virginia to prove that tobacco was first found growing in Virginia soil. According to Carantan's authority Sir Walter Raleigh first discovered tobacco on Roanoke Island on the eastern shore of North Carolina. Be that as it may, for a long time we have contended that tobacco was a plant adapted naturally to the eastern soil, and there is no doubt but that there was a time when tobacco formed one of the principal crops in the eastern counties, as the following, for which we are indebted to Mr. A. L. Blow, will show. It was an act passed by the General Assembly of North Carolina in 1791, and speaks for itself.

An act to establish an inspection of tobacco at Greenville, on Tar river.

Whereas it may be beneficial to many citizens of this State, that an inspection of tobacco be established in Pitt county, on the South side of Tar river, at the town of Greenville:

1. Be it therefore enacted by the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the county court of Pitt shall annually appoint two discreet and careful men, well acquainted with the nature and quality of tobacco, to be Inspectors thereof; who shall take the same oath, be subject to the same rules, regulations and restrictions which Inspectors of tobacco are subject to in this State.

2. And it is further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Inspectors so appointed shall have and receive from the owners of tobacco, the sum of four shillings for each and every hogshead, and the sum of one shilling for each and every hundred weight of transfer tobacco by them inspected, in full compensation for their trouble.

3. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the tobacco so inspected shall be held and deemed merchantable, as if the same had been inspected at any other inspection in this State.

Unlucky Number.

"I ain't a superstitious man," said Hiram Berry to a friend, as they worked together in the field, "but once in a while it does come on you kinder convinin' that signs come true. I'm reminded of one ter'ble certain case up to our house." "Yes, we callate we hev hed a real case, not 'zactly spiritual, no, but convincin'."

Feeling that his hearer's appetite was sufficiently whetted Hiram went on.

"One day last week Mary was going over to her mother's to set a spell with her, an' so she kinder purposed to stand us off on the noon meal.

"She didn't git nothin' for a relisher, but just warmed up some fish an' potatoes, so's to git it easy. 'Long 'bout 'leven o'clock Aaron's folks come over, kind of unexpected, an' as they kep' a-settin' and didn't make any motion to go, she asked 'em all to draw up, an' hev a bite. There's seven of us an' five of them, with the children, an' we hed to dish out the meal with consider'ble caution. Fact is, I hed to divide an' subtract more than I've done sence I used to figger in school.

"Just as we hed settled down comfortable, in come Nehemiah, lookin' as thin an' hungry as a b'at in the spring. He drew right up to the table. I say table because there wasn't nothin' else left. Mary felt it pretty keen. "I tell you," says she, "it's unlucky to hev thirteen to a table—especially if there's only enough food on it for twelve." An' lookin' at it all ways, it's one sign I hev a toler'ble good faith in. The circumstance was convincin'."

A Thief was Left in the Sofa.

What appears to be a new, clever scheme for robbing a house in broad daylight was discovered in New York, Tuesday, among those who reside in the fashionable part of East Seventy-sixth street. A furniture wagon bearing no name was driven up to the residence of Nathan Hoffheimer. A sofa was taken out by the two men in the wagon, and although the servants knew nothing of the furniture being ordered, they allowed it to be taken into the house. Three or four hours later the men and furniture wagon came back. The men explained that a mistake had been made; that the sofa was not ordered by Mrs. Hoffheimer, but by another person. They offered many apologies to the servant for the "stupid blunder." Later in the evening a search of the room developed the fact that valuable silverware was missing, as well as one or two articles of jewelry. The girls were positive that the men could have taken nothing, as they were closely watched. The family evolved the theory that there was a third man secreted in the interior of the sofa.

The Livery Horse.

Hardly any class of animals suffers so much from ignorance, carelessness and cruelty on the part of drivers as the livery horse. Many of the people who hire horses know nothing about driving or caring for them; many others, since they do not own horses, care nothing about any injury to them provided they do not have to pay for them, and still another class takes pleasure in driving them at the top of their speed as long as they can go, regardless of their distress.

Then there are the drunken drivers, reckless of everything, the drivers who want to race with everyone who come along, and the people out for a "good time," and whose idea is to "let'r go."

There are people who over-drive, who do not water, who water when the horse is overheated, who do not blanket, and others who commit all remaining kinds of offences against horse-flesh—the one idea being that since the horse is not their own it don't make much difference.

One Dollar Out.

An old man who kept a provision store in a factory town was more or less old in his ways, and by some persons was thought to be "not over and above bright." The rougher young fellows of the neighborhood called him "Old Pro," and in other respects treated him rudely. One day three of them, to use their own expression, "put up a job on him."

They filed into the shop with an air of importance, and one of them demanded:

"How much do you ask for a yard of pork?"

"One dollar," answered the old man.

"I'll take a yard," said the spokesman.

"Where is your money?"

The dollar was produced, the dealer pocketed it, and handed the customer three pig's feet.

"How is that?" said the fellow.

"Why," answered Old Pro, "three feet make a yard, don't they?" — Youth's Companion.

She Supposed They Knew.

A story at the expense of the expense of the Appalachian Mountain Club of Boston is related in Happy Thought. An excursion party from the club, it appears, had gone to a rural part of the State, and in default of sufficient hotel accommodations,
 some of the members were obliged to seek quarters in a farmhouse.

Simplicity was the order of the day. Everything was scrupulously clean, but there was a natural absence of some of the luxuries of high-priced city hotels.
 Some of the ladies of the party discovered that there were no
 keys in the locks of their rooms,
 and waited upon the farmer's
 wife.

That good woman was surprised.
 "Why," she said, "we don't usually lock our doors here, and there's no one here but you. But then I suppose you know your own party best."

The visitors did not insist upon the keys.

Slight Omission.

One little thing omitted! What a difference it makes sometimes,
 especially in cooking.

A Frenchman, having eaten
 plum-pudding for the first time,
 was so delighted with it that he asked his English hostess for the recipe, which of course she gave him. He carried it home, gave it to his wife, and at the same time gave her an enthusiastic account of the delicacy.

Not long afterward the dessert
 came on the table in a soup tureen, and was ladled out into soup plates.

"What is this, my dear?" asked the Frenchman.

"Plum pudding," answered his
 wife.

He laughed at her, and she produced the recipe, which, as she declared, had been strictly followed. And so it had been, for the English lady had omitted all mention of the cloth. The ingredients had been put, according to directions, into a pan of boiling water, had been cooked for the prescribed time, and had come out—soup.—Youth's Companion.
