Col. Harry Skinner has just been on a brief trip to Washington City. While there he seems to have lost his bearings and fallen into the hands of newspaper reporters. The Charlotte Observer correspondent writes the following about him:

Contrary to his custom, Harry Skinner submitted like a lamb to the shearing interview this morning. He tells me that as all three parties in North Carolina are for free silver, the Populists will not go over to the Democrats; that Tom Reed is stronger in the Old North State than McKinley; that, on his count, leaving such States as Michigan, Iowa and Indiana in the doubtful column, the silver Democrats in the national convention will still lack 80 votes of a majority; that nevertheless he thinks they will largely influence the body; that the people like the Legislature's action better on reflection, especially its treatment of county government, the schools and the State institutions. Harry says, however, the Legislature might have let alone the school management. He is here to show his little son the city and take his daughter to school at Baltimore, and goes home to-night by the bay boat.

The national convention of Republican leagues met at Cleveland, Ohio, Wednesday. Nothing was done but the appointment of committees and the introduction of one or two resolutions. The main fight is on the silver question. The convention is divided on the question of adopting any platform. North Carolina was not represented.

For the Reflector.

"REFLECTION."

BY MRS. ALICE E. JOYNER.

Forty years ago I was a young bride. The trials of life I had never tried; All seemed bright and prosperous to me, Since then many troubles I have been brought to see.

As the years rolled on more experienced I became, And I learned that a great many worked for fame.

A great and prosperous land we possessed, But soon we were all in great distress.

Our homes that were so cheerful and bright, Were soon over-run with sorrow and fright,

'Tis sad to return to the old home now, And see so many changes I scarcely know how.

It seems like a dream that I have awakened To come back and find my dear ones all taken, And scattered in different parts of this land, Which was once a loving little band.

I have wandered among strangers, who were kind to me, May God bless them and keep them from dangers free, Although my afflictions for three years have been great, I have learned to be patient and learned to wait.

Now, my dear children, when this you see, Read with care and think of me, One whose love goes out for you, Who has always been to you so true.

The changes here have been so many, A true friend is hard to find if there be any,

The time has come when I must try To learn the wherefore and the why

The people of my younger days Are nearly all in their graves; In their homes now strangers dwell, Of the past it's sad to tell.

I am now at my old home to brood over the past; May God work out all good for me at last. Now, sixty years of my life have passed away.

And according to nature I have but a short time here to stay.

May God bless me and strengthen my faith.

Keep me from temptations, and give me grace.

That I may pass safely over the river to the other side,

With Jesus and his angels forever to abide.

EVERY AFTERNOON (EXCEPT SUNDAY)

It is reported that the store being built out near the tobacco warehouses is to be used for a bar-room. We also hear that a petition from the Tobacco Trade and warehousemen will be taken to the Board of Councilmen asking them not to issue a license for liquor to be sold out there. To our mind the Councilmen could hardly do a worse thing for the town than to allow a bar-room to be established in the tobacco quarter. During the tobacco selling season large crowds are gathered around the warehouses and prize houses every day, some working, some selling, some buying, and some just looking on, and to place a bar-room in the midst of such gatherings disorder and disturbances might be looked for as daily occurrences.

One idea in locating the tobacco business as far out as it is was that it might be free from the contaminating influences of bar-rooms. For several years they have enjoyed quiet and good order out there and no disturbing influences have prevailed, and now to place a bar-room out there would simply mean to break up this good order and to give the warehousemen and buyers a great deal of annoyance. The location is so far from the main business portion of the town as to be beyond police surveillance unless a special officer should be placed out there, and it can be seen at a glance that to do this would cost the town ten times the revenue it would derive from the license, to say nothing of all the annoyance, trouble and hindrance to business that would ensue.

Of course every reader of the REFLECTOR knows that it is opposed to bar-rooms anywhere, but if the town must have them keep them confined to their present bounds where they can be under the eye of the officers.

We trust the Councilmen will not allow a bar-room to be placed out in the tobacco quarter, and if they have the good order and business prosperity of the town truly at heart they will not.

It Won't Make Business.

The following from the Richmond Tobaccoist is true. Read it carefully and then act upon the suggestions thrown out. It says:

It won't make business. What won't? Sitting down and telling each other what has failed in the past, what others have been unsuccessful in doing, telling what we can't do, without faith in anything, any plan, any suggestion, in anybody—just ready to oppose every proposition suggested to make business better. Something else besides growling, croaking, pulling back and opposing and denouncing will have to be done to move things and establish and make business somebody's plans and ideas will have to be adopted. Co-operation in work and money is the need. Money, time and talent must be spent, what no one alone can accomplish, and would then only benefit the individual, must for the whole trade's interest, be undertaken by the whole trade. First agitate, then agree on a plan, then execute and push. Leadership we want now especially; workers and open pockets will follow the right one's example.

If the young men set up these last few weeks, to be shot at by all sorts of orators and advice-givers, will do their best to keep their heads level until cold weather, doing what they can all the while to show that they are willing to work hard for small pay and keep at it until they are worth something, determined not to loaf at any rate, and to be honest or die, they needn't bother about taking anybody's advice as to the rounds on the "ladder of fame," or "victories in the battle of life," or "working out destinies," or following "guiding stars to the temple of fame," or anything of the kind.—Biblical Recorder.

ADVICE TO GIRLS.

Just What Love Is, and What a Lover Should Be.

You wonder how you will know when love comes, and you seek for a definition of it in poetry and romance. That wild feeling which sometimes possesses an untrained girl and results in her eloping with a young man, who does not know the meaning of love in its best sense—is that this great emotion? No, a thousand times no. Is that exaggerated passion described in novels, and which seems to you to entirely ignore the sensible side of life, and to express in extravagant words and more extravagant deeds—is that love? No, a million times no. Love is, first of all, unselfish. Then it is sympathetic. Then it is reverential. No man ever loved a woman who urged her to disobey her parents. No matter what he may have said, the love that suggested this was a poor love—a base imitation of the real metal. It is not love which wishes you to think only of it and to drive away from you every other good feeling.

Why, my dear girls, when love comes to you it will make you eager to be more thoughtful of every one of those who care for you. It will make you pitiful and anxious to help those who have not had this great blessing, and it will make you long to be close to God himself, for this felling surely comes from Him and is of Him. Your lover is a poor one if he is not your friend, and yet you may have a friend who is not a lover. Your lover becomes a part of your life. What you do interests him, what you think about is a pleasure to him, and when you are with him each of you unconsciously lays bare the life that has been spent apart, and each gives a sympathy as to all that has been done. True love is forgiving. The man who loves you will be merciful to your faults, but he will also help you and stand well by you, so that leaning on him you do not commit this same error again. And you? well, when without a word from him, you know there is trouble and worry, you will prove yourself, if you love him, his angel of consolation. Asking no questions, you will be told all, and the instinct of love will guide you to the right, and you can offer, not only sympathy, but wise speech. This is only possible between people who love strongly; between friends there may be confidence, but there is nothing absolutely like this. To a friend one cannot lay bare one's heart's desire or heart's ache, but to that one being who has the best of you there is nothing too sacred to tell and nothing too secret to whisper.—Ruth Ashmore in the Ladies' Home Journal.

A Story of Two Words.

"O, if I were lucky enough to call this estate mine, I should be a happy fellow," said a young man.

"And then?" said a friend.

"Why, then I'd pull down the old house and build a palace, have lots of prime fellows round me, keep the best wines, and the finest horses and dogs in the country."

"And then?"

"Then I'd hunt, and ride, and smoke, and drink, and dance, and keep open house, and enjoy life gloriously."

"And then?"

"Why, then, I suppose like other people, I should grow old, and not care so much for these things."

"And then?"

"Why, then, I suppose in the course of nature, I should leave all these pleasant things—and, well, yes—die!"

"And then?"

"O, bother your 'thens!' I must be off."

Many years after the friend was accosted with:

"God bless you! I owe my happiness to you!"

"How?"

"By two words spoken in season long ago. 'And then!'"

Many of Us Have Been.

One of our exchanges says a newspaper should give a party candidate the same support he receives from him.

A man who does not contribute a cent towards the support of a party paper until he is a candidate for office, should not expect the editor to waste over fifty dollars worth of space booming him for office.

Yet editors are often chumps enough to do it, and we suppose we are one of the chumps, for we have frequently supported men who have never so much as looked into this office.

Yes, we have been a chump for party's sake.—Durham Sun.

The police of New York and Philadelphia have been notified to arrest Actor King Headley, of New York, at the instance of his wife who claims that he secured $10,000 from her under false pretenses, and then deserted her.

Senator Quay declared in an interview at Pittsburg Saturday that the republican leaders are making a mistake in helping the democrats agitate the silver question. He says republicans ought to stick to tariff if they expect to win in 1896.

The executive board of the Olneyville, R. I. strikers authorize a denial of the story that the strike has been declared off. The evident intention of the strikers is to go to work in all save the Atlantic and Fletcher mills and to draw on the operatives outside those mills for financial help.

THROUGH THE WEST.

The first yield of '95 wheat has brought 95 cents a bushel in St. Louis.

Iowa farmers report that the recent rains insure the best corn crop Iowa has had in twenty years.

Carl Browne, Coxey's famous lieutenant, has married the latter's eighteen year old daughter, Miss Mamie Coxey.

The candidacy of Senator W. B. Allison, of Iowa, for president, will be launched at the National convention of republican league clubs at Cleveland, Ohio.

Meetings were held in all the Chicago wards Saturday evening to elect officers of democratic clubs. In most of the meetings free silver men predominated.

The Idaho Statesman has information that a movement is on foot to make W. A. Clarke, the Montana copper millionaire, the democratic candidate for vice-president.

Ex-Governor Campbell says he is not a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor of Ohio and would not accept it if it were offered him on a silver platter.

Out of 102 papers, in Kansas, 17 are for free and unlimited coinage of silver 16 to 1, while 85 stand squarely on the money plank in the last republican national platform.

Professor Daniel Kirkwood, LL. D., late professor of mathematics in Indiana State University and one of America's best known astronomers, died Wednesday, aged 81.

Dispatches from Olathe, Emporia, Fort Scott, Wichita and Caldwell, Kan., and Hennessy and Perry, Okla., report a heavy twenty-four-hour rain, which will be the saving of the corn crop.

The silver senators from the mining states are trying to arrange a plan to commit the convention of the National League of Republican clubs, which meets this month at Cleveland, O, to free silver.

It is reported that an agreement has been reached by which Dakota's embezzling treasurer is to surrender and turn over all his property to the state and take whatever sentence the court may impose.

Dispatches from Lima, Ohio, say that Senator Brice has had a conference with a number of his party friends, to whom he has announced his intention of becoming a candidate for re-election as United States senator.

Bring on Your Trotters.

It is learned here that the Club at Greenville will not let any but Pitt and Green county horses enter the races there on the fourth. Some of our horsemen are displeased at this and think it a little selfish. But it is perhaps a compliment to Beaufort county horses. We have some horses that are faster than any they have, and we are authorized to challenge them for a tilt with a neat little stake at the back of the challenge.—Washington Progress.

The above is an entire error as there is a purse of $100 open to all. We would be glad to have the Washington horses, especially those that are willing to trot for the purse or for an outside stake, they to name the amount.
