COMPANY "H."

Crack Company of the State Guard.

The Pitt county Rifles were out on drill Friday evening and made a neat appearance. There were 31 in line and their new suits cut quite a figure. The Rifles will compare favorably with any company in the State Guard. A drummer in front of the King House said he had seen a goodly number of the companies in the State on drill and had seen none that could down this one. Capt. Smith takes great pride in his company and the men love him. A little incident happened in sham battle, at Morehead, the Captain will pardon us for alluding to, which will show how the boys will stand by him. The Rifles were advancing on a little knoll, behind which the Wilmington Light Infantry was stationed. Just as the Rifles reached it the Wilmington company arose and advanced, which somewhat startled and surprised our boys, but the shrill voice of Capt. Smith was heard "Stand together men don't move an inch, Pitt county forever," and every man, from Coot Whichard to Claude Joyner, made a bold front and the other company scattered. Notwithstanding the recent Legislature cut down the appropriation from $250 to $150, the military spirit seems to be growing, and the people are determined that the State Guard shall not suffer. There are thirty companies in the State and there are on file thirty two applications for the formulation of other companies at various towns. The County Commissioners recently appropriated $75 to the Rifles. We wish they had made it $200. Wilson county last week gave the Wilson Light Infantry $200. A military company is a protection to any community and when you need the service of a company you need it then and nothing else will answer. We want to throw out a hint. The ladies of other towns

The Revenue Act passed by the Legislature is void and the State taxes will have to be levied by the Act of 1893. This will raise more revenue, but the school fund will lose the extra amount that it would have gotten under the Act of 1895.

Thus it turns out that the Legislature that talked so much about public schools did nothing for them, but destroy in a large measure their usefulness by abolishing the Board of Education and County Superintendents.

Brown and Satterfield the principal clerks of the Senate and House of Representatives of the last Legislature have been presented by the grand jury in Wake county for fraud in having a bill, in mortgage law enrolled which never passed the Legislature. The presentment is in the following words:

NORTH CAROLINA, } Sup. Court,
WAKE COUNTY, } July term '95,

The grand jury present that J. N. Brown, Enrolling Clerk of the Legislature of 1895, and S. P. Satterfield, Principal Clerk of the House of Representatives of the Legislature of 1895, unlawfully and wilfully violated the duties of their respective offices by permitting a certain Act known as the Assignment Act (the same being chapter 466 of the laws of 1895), to be enrolled as a public law of said Assembly when in truth and fact said Act had never passed the three readings required by the Constitution in either house of said Assembly.

V. B. MOORE,
Foreman Grand Jury.

Nagging Wives.

It is the peculiarity of the nagging wife to enormously exaggerate everything, even if she does not invent her grievances. Forgetfulness on the part of a husband is annoying, as it is in any one, but it is not a crime. A continual stream of scolding lasting three or four hours, over the failure to post a letter will cause any man to consider the effect disproportionate to the cause. If the husband be healthy, if he is not cursed with a highly nervous organization, what happens? The first thing is that any love he may have ever had for his wife dies, drowned in the flood of words. Having murdered his love for her, the wife keeps up the nagging; he speedily begins to look on her as being a nuisance: from this to dislike and then to positive hatred is not a long journey. If there be children, the husband may continue to live with her for their sake, but it is an awful home in which to bring up children. The man quickly learns that he has in his physical strength something in which he can claim sanctuary. He may not actually beat her, because the restraining influences of his training have not lost their hold on him. Perhaps it would be better for her if he did, for physical fear of a whipping might be sufficient to make her control herself. While he may not lift his finger to her, he will invariably become brutal. In such a contest the woman has no chance. He may not be, he probably is not, able to give the rapier-like thrust of sarcasm which comes so easily to her, but he can use the bludgeon of abuse and profanity with terrible effect. The nervous constitution the woman has created in herself by nagging, itself renders her powerless before this weapon of her husband. Such a family is hell on earth.—Dr. Cyrus Edson, in North American Review.

Many People Hurt.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 16.—A frightful accident terminated the Elks festivities at the Inlet Casino to-night, in which a large number of persons sustained terrible injuries from which some will die.

It was at 9:30 o'clock when the Grand Exalted Ruler of the Buffalo body, Meade D. Detwiler, of Harrisburg, had finished his address at the opening of the serial session of the Elks and was about to introduce J. G. Armstrong, of New York, when a crashing sound was heard. A moment later the floor, upon which there were almost a thousand people slowly opened, and the mass of humanity was precipitated to the first floor, a distance of twenty-five feet. Men, women and children were plunged into the hole and upon one another. The cries, shrieks, and groans were deafening, and the direst confusion. An alarm was immediately sent out, and all the physicians in town responded. The work of extracting the injured proceeded rapidly, and by 12 o'clock they had all been removed to the hospitals of their hotels.

To Prevent Horses From Balking.

To the Editor of the Richmond Dispatch:

I have a remedy for balking horses which is as simple as it is sure, and feeling that it would be of great interest to many of your readers I give it to you, as follows: When the horse refuses to pull do not strike him a lick but go very quietly and get a handful of dirt and rub it in his mouth, then replace yourself in the seat of your vehicle, and either speak to him or draw the reins, when he moves off promptly. The effect is wonderful. His ears relax from that stiff, backed position, his eyes from fierceness to the kindest of expressions, as he seems to forget the past, and he licks his mouth as he goes.

S. GRANT KING.

THE REAL ARTICLE.

An Actual Sea-Serpent Captured and Landed.

Authorities at the Smithsonian Institute Have Seen But One Other Member of the Same Variety in the Finny Tribe.

Down on T wharf, in the shop of John R. Neal & Co., is what the fishermen firmly believe to be the only original sea serpent—that is, those of them who hazard any conjecture on the subject at all, for most of them simply shake their heads and wonder in silence, says the Boston Transcript. It was brought in by the schooner Mary Cabral and has since been reposing in a tub of water in Mr. Neal's loft. It is about five and one-half feet long, with a round, snakelike body, surmounted for its whole length by a fin eight inches in height. It has an enormous tail, which it is thought would give it almost any speed. But its chief beauty is its mouth. It would kill a pie-eater with envy. The jaws are about seven inches long and the extent to which the mouth can be opened is limited only by the amount of room there is in which to open it. There are three rows of teeth, the first being about an inch long, and different from any teeth which any of the fishermen have ever seen. They are not saw-edged, like a man-eating shark's, or pointed, like a sand shark's, but are flat and blade-like, very sharp at the point, almost translucent and slightly flexible.

The creature was taken on a trawl on Le Have Bank, and made a desperate fight before it could be got into the dory. The man who took it said that it came to the top of the water with its fin erect and its mouth wide open, and looking as big as barrel. Mr. Neal, and, indeed a good many of the fishermen, are sure that this beast, or its kind, is responsible, in conjunction with the tropical imagination of the summer-hotel proprietor, for most of the sea-serpent stories. There are the oft described mane, the big mouth and the large, glaring eyes. As to size, anyone who has seen a fish jump on a line and then seen how much smaller that same fish looked after he had been hauled in, knows how deceptive the size of a fish in the water is.

"If you should see him traveling on the top of the water," said Mr. Neal, "with his mouth open and about a third of his length out of water, and coming straight for you, you'd be ready to swear that he was one hundred feet long when you got ashore." Mr. Neal says he has the highest authority in the country for stating that this is an entirely new kind of animal. Another of the same kind, but only about three feet long, was taken about two years ago, and drawings and a description were sent to the Smithsonian institute at Washington. These were examined and word was sent back that nothing of the kind had ever been seen there before. Drawings of this one have also been sent.

A BLOOD-WON TROPHY.

The Saving of Our Grand Old Flag
at Fredericksburg.

From time immemorial the armies of every warlike people have set the highest value upon the standards they bore to battle. To guard one's own flag against capture is the pride, to capture the flag of one's enemy the ambition, of every valiant soldier. In consequence, in every war between peoples of good military record, feats of daring performed by color bearers are honorably common.
The civil war was full of such incidents. Out of very many, two or three stand as especially noteworthy.

One occurred at Fredericksburg on the day when half the brigades of Meagher and Caldwell lay on the bloody slope leading up to the confederate intrenchments. Among the assaulting regiments was the Fifth New Hampshire, and it lost 186 out of 300 men who made the charge. The survivors fell back sullenly behind the fence, within easy range of the confederate rifle pits. Just before reaching it the last of the color guard was shot and the flag fell in the open.

A Capt. Purdy instantly ran out to capture it, and as he reached it was shot through the heart; another captain, Murray, made the same attempt and was also killed, and so was a third, Moore. Several private soldiers met a like fate. They were all killed close to the flag, and their dead bodies fell across one another.
Taking advantage of this breast-works, Lieut. Nettleton crawled from behind the fence to the colors, and bore back the blood-won trophy.—Harper's Round Table.

Helen Keller.

Helen Keller, the deaf, dumb and blind girl, who is the modern Laura Bridgeman, and is being educated in a private school in New York, writes and composes fluently upon the typewriter. The keys of the machine have the letters in bas relief upon the buttons. Miss Keller, who is about fourteen years of age, has marked ability, and has received recently two hundred and fifty dollars for a short sketch of her impressions of life from the editor of a young people's magazine.
