LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOTTINGS

BY O. L. JOYNER.

The following communication from Mr. J. W. Dixon, of Greene county will be read with interest by all the farmers:

WILLOW GREENE, N. C.,

July 16th, 1895.

MR. O. L. JOYNER,

Dear Sir:—In reply to your favor asking me to give you my views as to the management of a tobacco crop is at hand. In reply, I will say finding me in my infancy regarding tobacco culture. I fear my views will be of little value or interest, however, I am willing to do what I can to help my fellow man and if you find the following, my experience in tobacco culture, worth anything, you can use it, if you wish.

It seems to me that the greatest success that can be obtained in tobacco culture must be the result of careful thought and sober judgment from the very beginning. This it must be remembered is the base rock of all successful tobacco growers and without which it is only chance that success in tobacco culture is ever made.

In selecting land for tobacco I am always careful to pick out a medium gray soil from 6 to 8 inches deep with a yellow clay subsoil. I prefer rested land with a good heavy coat of muck. I break the land thoroughly early in October, just as soon as the muck has been killed by frost, then in February I sow broadcast about 20 or 30 bushels of cotton seed and then break land again by cross ploughing. In February I prepare my plant land which is a very important matter, for without plenty of vigorous, healthy plants, transplanting will be delayed and I always find the first setting the best.

The land should be burned to a crust about an inch deep, then drag off the coals, and to 300 square yards of land I put 20 bushels of stable manure and then dig it into the land. I then broadcast 100 pounds of guano, 150 of cotton seed meal and dig in with a rake, drag off all roots and trash and mix one tablespoonfull of seed to 100 square yards, mix in ashes, dry sand or guano. I sow over two or three times to get them regular and then pack them in with a roller which I find is the best and fastest way, I put a scantling frame around my bed about six inches high and stretch canvas across close and tight, so as to keep out insects. I then dig trenches around bed to drain off the water in case of wet weather. My experience is that manure acts better in a mellow condition than in a sour state, hence, I have about five times as much dirt as I have other manures into my lot and mix all my stable, hog pen and cow lot manure with the dirt, grade them all together and throw up in a compost, and let it remain until ready for use. If there have been hard packing rains the tobacco land needs a third breaking in April. If in a mellow condition I do not break the third time. Now comes the most important part, manuring and setting the plants. I run off my rows three and a half feet apart and very deep. I think this quantity of manure would make a very good tobacco, 200 bushels of the compost and 700 pounds guano. These manures should be put in very careful and regular to prevent spotted crops and an uneven stand. If you want to make good tobacco, you must not think of what it is costing to manure it, but think how much more it will cost to cultivate a poor crop than a good one.

Tobacco that is half manured requires about one-third more work, because the tobacco is poor and you keep working the harder trying to make something out of it. I find that a tobacco crop does better transplanted from the last week in April to the 20th of May. Tobacco lives much better set with a transplanter and the land just dry enough to require a little water to wash the roots of the young plants which gives it an early start. When set by hand the dirt is very often pressed too hard at the top and not filled at the bottom, which always gives you a late and uneven crop.

(CONCLUDED TO-MORROW.)

EVERY AFTERNOON (EXCEPT SUNDAY)

In closing his oration before the Press Association at Greensboro on last Thursday, Hon. John R. Webster, of Reidsville, said:

"It is a fact that North Carolina's great war Governor stood almost alone in appreciating the magnitude of the struggle from the beginning. The result was that North Carolina troops were the best clothed in the field. Had all the Southern Governors possessed the practical wisdom of Zebulon B. Vance our attempt to change the map of America might have succeeded. North Carolina owes it to herself to perpetuate his memory in imperishable stone. I point to him as the typical North Carolinian, the colossal figure around which the history of our dear State revolved for thirty years. In victory and defeat, in sunshine and shadow, he was our leader, counsellor and elder brother. All the powers of his gigantic intellect and noble heart were consecrated to North Carolina. What Washington was to America, Vance was to us, 'First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts to his countrymen.'

"History must speak the truth or it is not history. All honor to the loyal sons of North Carolina and the noble women who have consecrated their powers to the patriotic work of writing history. Chief among the number is Greensboro's distinguished citizen, Judge David Schenck. Words fail me to estimate the value of his services in vindicating the bravery of the North Carolina militia at Guilford Court House. That beautiful park, dotted with monuments and hallowed by the graves of revolutionary patriots, was a few years ago a desolate waste. With a heart full of love for his State, Judge Schenck bent all his energies to the work of finding the truth and publishing it, and now all North Carolinians are proud to honor the men whose memory was translated so long. Long may he live to enjoy the homage of his fellow citizens and may his example be emulated.

"The facts I have given cannot be repeated too often. They fully answer the question as to what position North Carolina is entitled to in the national family.

Verily we have a goodly heritage and should be proud of it.

"But what of the future? What shall we do with the great problems that are pressing upon us? Shall the old State stand as a barrier against the evils that threaten our land? Shall the worship of the golden calf be set up? Shall robbery by trusts be legalized? Shall money cheat the penitentiary and the gallows? Shall corporations be allowed to control the life blood of commerce? These questions must be answered. Let us face these problems bravely and hand down to our children in all its purity 'a government of the people, by the people and for the people.'

"God give us men. A time like this demands

Strong minds, great hearts and ready hands;

Men whom the lust of office does not kill,

Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;

Men who possess opinions and a will.

Men who have honor; men who will not lie;

Men who can stand before a demagogue And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking—

Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog

In public duty and in private thinking."

Just following the Silver Convention at Griffin, Georgia, and the big speech of Senator Morgan for the free coinage of silver comes the following from Washington in reference to Hoke Smith, showing that the gold bugs are awake and at work with a vim:

Secretary Hoke Smith, will leave Washington Friday for Georgia, where he will deliver several speeches against the free coinage of silver. The invitation to deliver the speeches has been extended by leading business men of important cities of the State.

His first speech will be at Gainesville, in the northern part of the State. He will then speak at Columbus, in the district represented by Mr. Moses, a free silver advocate, and then at Cordele, in ex-speaker Crisp's district. Each of these engagements Mr. Smith has made at the earnest solicitation of the sound-money Democrats in the different localities. Every effort will be made by the men in charge of the arrangements to gather together as many people as possible to hear the Secretary. At Cordele special trains will be run from Macon and Americus, the latter, the home of Mr. Crisp, and the former, for miles around each of the cities at which Mr. Smith will speak, will be carried by the railroads at half fare.

There will be a barbecue at Cordele, at which provision will be made for 5,000 people. Assurances have been received by the Secretary from those who have asked him to address them that large crowds of people are anxious to hear him.

In addition to the cities named Mr. Smith has been asked to speak at Rome and at a number of other towns in Georgia. It is probable, however, that he will confine his present efforts to three speeches and that later in the campaign he will accept the other invitations. Mr. Smith's addresses will practically open the sound-money fight in Georgia.

The purpose of Mr. Smith's visit just now is not, as has been supposed, to pave the way for his own candidacy for the Senate next year, but is solely to discuss the financial question.

Speaking of the matter to-day Mr. Smith said: "There is absolutely no personal politics in my trip. I am not in the Senatorship fight, but I am going to Georgia to make a few speeches at the request of the sound money men of the State. The election of a United States Senator from Georgia is still a long way in the future and many things may occur before it takes place. My desire now is to aid the party in declaring in favor of sound money."

SENT AS WRITTEN.

Young Operator's Bad Attempt at Revising a Message.

Several years ago a young man, whom we will call H, was employed as night operator at a small town in Illinois.

The second night of his service a circus arrived in town and with it a great many farmers from the surrounding country. H went on duty at seven o'clock in the evening. About an hour later a stranger came in to send a telegram. As soon as he had written and paid for the message the operator sat down to the instrument and proceeded to tick off the telegram, which was brief, and read, not including address and signature:

"Have seen the party send me the muneey."

When the operator had nearly finished sending the message the receiving operator telegraphed back, "What are you givin' us?" referring to the spelling of the message.

The rules of the Western Union Co. prohibit any conversation on the wires between operators, but nevertheless this rule is frequently broken. It is also a strict rule that messages shall always be sent and words spelled as they are written, even if, as is often the case, the words are spelled wrongly.

But at the time H took this job he was as ignorant of these rules as an Indian, so to the operator's query as to what he was "givin' him" he replied thusly: "Make it read 'Have seen the party, send me the money.'"

"That's more like it," said the receiving operator.

"I guess the bloke that wrote it never saw the inside of a school," said the sending operator.

The next moment he was chilled to the marrow by the soft words that wafted o'er his shoulder.

"Young fellow, that was a cipher message. I am a detective and also an operator. I heard your remarks on the wire, and if you don't send that message the way I wrote it, I shall sue your company for fifty thousand dollars. And, furthermore, if you don't take back and apologize for the remarks you made about my schooling I will pound your head off." These words came from the "bloke" that wrote the message.

It is superfluous to add that the apology was forthcoming and the telegram sent again according to the "bloke's" rules for spelling.

Cannot Disguise Himself.

"I am endeavoring to become quite English," writes a Boston man in London, "because it will save me from the tips of the first magnitude which servants expect from Americans. I have mounted a perfectly hideous Derby. I carry my right glove in my left gloved hand and swing a walking stick in my right. I wear an English collar, and an English scarf with an English pin in it; my English cuffs are spacious. I am having more clothes made at the Prince of Wales' tailor's. And when I go outside the hotel—it is directly opposite the Abbey—the first cabman up says: 'Driven many American gentlemen, sir, know where they want to go, sir!' Such is the vanity of ambition!"—Boston Transcript.

PATTI'S PRIVATIONS.

A Thirsty Prima Donna Before the Concert.

Pity the privations of the prima donna. Here is a story of Mme. Patti which may be appropriately enough recalled. Once, when she returned from her daily drive, she was exceedingly thirsty, and asked M. Nicolini to have procured for her a glass of water. Nicolini was horrified. "What!" he shrieked. "Ma mignonne, you know that you are going to sing to-morrow night, and the water will chill your blood. Oh, no! I forbid water." "Then give me a taste of wine," pleaded the thirsty Patti. "Wine!" roared Nicolini. "Ma mignonne, you are going to sing to-morrow night, and you know that wine will heat your blood. No, I cannot permit wine." "Please, cannot I have something wet?" pleaded Patti, with parched lips. Nicolini pondered long and deeply, and at length with his own hands carefully prepared for the great singer a soothing draught of magnesia.

A RADICAL CHANGE.

King's Chapel Swaps Episcopal Doctrine for Unitarianism.

As long as the British occupied Boston, King's chapel was the ruling power in religious circles. The British officers, who had been boisterous members of the riding school in the Old South church during the week, would throng to the King's chapel on Sunday for reverent worship. But this very sacrilege to the puritanical Old South proved the ruin of the aristocratic worship in King's chapel. It was brought about in this way: The members of King's chapel courteously invited the members of the old Old South church to worship with them while the damage caused by the riding school was being repaired. This invitation was grudgingly accepted. But this ill-mated union brought about a startling change in the belief of the King's chapelites. They became dissatisfied with Episcopal doctrines, yet continued to favor Episcopal forms. The result was, the adaptation of the Church of England service to Unitarian doctrines, and the First Episcopal church became the First Unitarian church of Boston. So the Puritans squared their accounts at last with the haughty old governor, who must have squirmed uneasily in his tomb at the hybrid metamorphosis his pet church had undergone.

An Unmistakable Exception.

"Remember, my son," said the prudent father, "that politeness doesn't cost anything."

"Yes," was the reply, "I've heard that."

"You don't doubt it, do you?"

"Well, it certainly costs me about seven dollars a week to get any politeness out of the waiters at our hotel."—Washington Star.
