LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOTTINGS

BY O. L. JOYNER.

Mr. J. S. Jenkins has just returned from Richmond, Va.

Greenville expects to reach the five million mile post this season.

There are a good many primings coming to market ungraded. In this condition they cannot sell well and hence a great deal of dissatisfaction from such sales.

Forbes & Moye have commenced work on their new prize house. It will be located just west of their warehouse, and in convenient proximity to it. Thus the Greenville tobacco market continues to increase its facilities.

The Woman's Edition of the Southern Tobacco Journal issued for the benefit of the Twin City Hospital is just out. It is a literary treat indeed, and contains interesting reading matter on various topics, spiced with literary taste, which can only emanate from the minds of cultured female writers, tempered in their expression by the genial influence thrown around them in their sunny southern homes. Following is the Greenville market report as prepared by Mrs. R. R. Cotten for that issue:

GREENVILLE MARKET.

Although the youngest tobacco market of any note, in North Carolina, Greenville shows a record full of encouragement for the future. The town is surrounded by a fine country where the culture of tobacco was commenced about ten years ago.

The first experiments were so satisfactory and the increase of acreage was so rapid that the necessity of a home market soon became evident.

The first warehouse was built in 1891, and the Greenville Tobacco Market dates from that year, when 200,000 pounds were sold. Another warehouse was built in 1892, and that year the two warehouses sold 1,200,000 pounds and in 1893 the same two warehouses sold 2,200,000. This increase of business and the continued increase of acreage in the surrounding country, stimulated the business men of the place and another warehouse was built in 1894, when the sales increased to 3,250,000 pounds. That year the Greenville market paid out $300,000 for tobacco, while the local cotton market only distributed about one half that amount. This increase of circulating currency has caused an increase of business in every branch of trade, and lifted to some extent the dark cloud of pressing necessities which had depressed the farmer.

The average price of tobacco for the last four years has been 10½ cents.

There are eight prize houses here now, with bright prospects of others at an early day. The American Tobacco Company has one 40x140, with five floors, and with a capacity for re-ordering a half million pounds during the season.

The increase of population in Greenville since 1890 has been equal to, if not greater, than for a decade prior to that time. This is directly attributable to the tobacco market, which is proved by the fact that the neighboring towns have not increased proportionately.

The present season opens auspiciously. Still another warehouse has been added and another increase in sales is assured. The growing crop in the surrounding country is large and fine, cures have commenced, primings are already coming in, and live, energetic men in charge of the market, and fine facilities for handling the weed, a prosperous season is confidently expected.

We are requested to announce that the opening day of Greenville College Institute, is changed at the request of patrons from August 25th to September 2nd.

Thirty Cents for Two Bottles.

A young man in town was badly sold this morning. He received a box by express on which there was 30 cents charges. He was very much elated with thoughts of an bouquet from his girl, but imagine his surprise upon opening the box to find that it contained two empty half-pint "ticklers" with a note explaining that it was learned he was paying a premium on empty bottles. He said he would not have minded paying the 30 cents so much if the bottles had even been filled with Panacea water, but their bare emptiness almost produced tears.

Hundreds of martins can be seen in the vicinity of the depot these evenings. Throngs of them roost in the oak trees in Agent J. R. Moore's yard, and in the Hooker & Bernard prize house.

THE PRESS CONVENTION.

The convention of the North Carolina Press met in Greensboro last week and had a most enjoyable time, said to be the most enjoyable that has ever been held during the existence of the Association. In a parenthesis we must be allowed to say that is error. The year of the meeting at Goldsboro in 1889, we think it was, when the Convention after its adjournment at Goldsboro, accepted an invitation to Glen Alpine Springs, was the most delightful of all in the history of the Press Convention. That, including the delay at Turkey Tail station was the climax of earthly happiness. Perhaps the present members of the gang were then babies in arms, but that meeting was the best of all. The flood at Beaufort was a sorrow that changed the purpose of the Convention, but disastrous as it was, it was a breeder of joy out of sorrow. Out of it came the happiness of Glen Alpine and out of the accident and delay at Turkey Tail came the joy of that glorious and never-to-be-forgotten night. McDiarmid, who yet lives, thank the good Lord, was in full feather, and the silver rattle of his laugh echoed through the darkness as a bugle call to mirth. Harrell, who was emphatically a dull, was provoked to wit by the magnetic ripple of Mc's unrivalled laughter, whose reserve fund furnished a supply of laughter for his own and others wit and humor. We had thought we were a lucky man when we found a soft cushion in an open head barrel of wheat, which was pleasant enough, but as we slept and snored we sank down in the yielding wheat until our nose and our toes were brought in contact, and then we entered on a stentorian burst of nasal and laryngeal melody that endangered the rafters and shingles on the roof and completely threw Mc's side show in the shade and made pretty Miss Mock, of Salisbury, to whom we had offered our hand and heart five several times at Glen Alpine, faint from pure exhaustion from laughter. We would have died an inglorious death in that wheat barrel "drowned," as it were, in a barrel of cereal, had not old Mc, kind, dear old soul, stopped laughing long enough to dig us out of that barrel of wheat which our perspiration was rapidly converting into starch, by pulling and hauling us out by our nose and toes, laughing all the while as he, strange to say had never laughed before. God bless old laughing Mac. We hear he has grown rich on the husks of the "Robesonian." Well, we have often said a Scotchman could grow rich on less food than any other human who could eat dirt and go naked.

Well, we rejoice at the success of this Press Convention, and regret that we can be with them, only in the spirit. —Elizabeth City Economist Falcon.

We read the above from the pen of Col. Creecy, the oldest member of the State Press, with more than ordinary pleasure. At that time we were one of the little fellows of the Association, in fact the youngest, being then not quite seventeen years old, but we remember distinctly the night at Turkey Tail station waiting for the train to get out of a land slide at Mud Cut. Col. Creecy in the barrel of wheat and Bro. Mc Diarmid's laugh will long be in evidence.

Regard the Stock.

It will soon be a leisure season for farmers. Many good people come to town and thoughtlessly hitch their horses or mules to a post or a walling where they stand hours and hours together in the hot sun. This injures the stock, besides being a source of severe suffering. In the hot sun the horse or mule gets thirsty and hungry; and it all could be avoided by a little care. Be merciful to the faithful beasts, for they serve their owners well. Put them in a shade and water them. —Scotland Neck Democrat.

Wise Words.

A lie has no conscience.

The world was born blind.

When love has the power it will always help.

We enjoy much when we are thankful for little.

Whoever goes wrong himself leads an army astray.

When you find yourself getting downhearted look up.

Every young man must either go up stream or drift down.

It costs something to do right, but a great deal more not to do it.

I'll-gotten wealth cannot build any kind of a house upon the rock.

Never step over one duty to perform another. Take them as they come.

The man who does not improve his talent will be sure to misjudge his master.

The greater the house built on sand, the more foolish the man who builds.

When the prodigal started back to his father's house he didn't have to go all the way alone.

A good many things can be found out about human nature by charging ten cents admission.

Don't be a Bump on a Log.

Be something, do something, if nothing else, march to the music, keep up with the procession—don't be just a filler of space—a bump on a log, that never has and never will accomplish anything. Popularity is a very nice thing to have, it makes a man feel contented and happy, but it sometimes exhausts his pocketbook and makes him afraid to either act the man, or express his own opinion. If you cannot lead in the thought of the world, be content to follow, but not until after honest investigation has convinced you that what you are doing will accomplish the greatest good to the many. Unstability may make you think that you are the most important individual in the city, the center of attraction, the pivot around which all must revolve to meet the desired end, but be sure you are following the bubble of soap, that for a short time reflects all the beauties of the rainbow, but the bubble will burst, and like your unstability, ephemeral popularity, burst when you little expect it. You can do nothing without independence of action, and a will and opinion of your own. Don't be a bump on a log—be a man. —Washington Messenger.

Wanted.

A friend who will recognize me when I am compelled to wear patched pants; who will take my hand as I am sliding down hill instead of giving me a kick to hasten my descent; who will lend me a dollar without two dollars security; who will come to me when I am sick; who will pull off his coat and fight for me when the odds are two to one; who will talk of me behind my back as he talks to my face. Such a friend is wanted by ten thousand beings throughout the whole world.

A Photographing Bullet.

A bullet provided with a tiny photographic outfit of its own is the latest invention of a German named Herr Neesen. In carrying out this ingenious idea, Prof. Neesen has provided a bullet which carries a miniature photographic plate. This plate, which is very sensitive, is slipped into a slit in the bullet so as to receive its light through a pin-hole in the conic or forward end of the missile. In this manner a gyrating line is traced on the plate, which is a complete record of the bullet's oscillations from the moment it leaves the muzzle of the gun until the impact with the target.

Singular Test of Sanity.

An Italian named Nino was on trial at New York for the murder of his wife. To test his sanity two medical experts resorted to a singular method. They went to Nino's cell and there rehearsed before him the supposed scene of his wife's murder.
 Next a dummy was introduced, and the prisoner was asked to show them just how he had committed the crime, which he did. All this time a recording instrument had been attached to the prisoner's wrist, and as it showed that the action of the man's pulse had not been accelerated during the mock tragedy, the experts concluded that he must have been insane when he did the deed.
 They did not believe it possible for a person to feign insanity for any length of time.—Springfield Republican.

Watch Dials.

When watch dials are enameled
 they are first prepared with a backing of sheet iron, having raised edges to receive the enamel in powder, which is fused. After cooling, the lettering and figuring are printed on the plate with soft black enamel by transferring. The dial is again placed in a "muffle," or oven-shaped vessel, to fuse the enamel of the lettering or figuring.
 The enamel used is composed of white lead, arsenic, flint-glass, saltpeter, borax and ground flint, reduced to powder, fused and formed into cakes.

The Mule's Misfortune.

An old darky lived in the south
 who was a great barterer, and it was very hard to beat him on a trade. It seems he had sold a mule, guaranteeing him faultless. The purchaser shortly after came back in a great rage, and said:

"Look here, you rascal, that mule
 you sold me is blind in one eye; you assured me he had no faults."

"Dat's right, sah; dat mule habe
 no faults. If he am blind in one eye, dat am his misfortune, not his fault."—Harper's Round Table.
