LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOTTINGS

BY O. L. JOYNER.

Tobacco sticks seem to be very much in demand this year.

The primings that are coming now, generally show good colors. We hope they are true forerunners of the crop.

In traveling around this year we notice that nearly everybody is priming tobacco rather than cut the stalk. This may be the best way to get the most money out of the crop, but this writer does not believe it, and while we do not pretend to advise others as to the best method, frankly we believe that a wrapper crop will not sell for much over half primed off the stalk what it would have sold for had it been cut. We have written to the largest manufacturers of this country and as soon as we hear from them will publish just what they have to say about priming tobacco in their own words, then farmers can be their own judges as to the best method. We have heard a good many say they sold primings for more money than their stalk cut tobacco. This may be true in a few instances, but there is just no telling what primed tobacco would have brought had it been cut.

Big Breaks.

The breaks out at the warehouses to-day looked almost like fall times. There was between 15,000 and 20,000 pounds on the floors. The Eastern led off with the first and largest break, the others following well. Prices were good.

STATE NEWS.

Record of Matters of General Interest

The Wilson Advance has changed its form to an 8-page paper.

Rev. Alex Walker and wife, of Durham, have just celebrated their golden wedding.

Mr. J. M. Leach of this place made 950 gallons of blackberry wine last month.—Pittsboro Record.

A young man named J. V. Jones, committed suicide in Durham by butting his head against a post.

The Goldsboro Headlight is making arrangements to publish an afternoon daily. Roscower is a hustler.

The Governor has transferred to the school fund, to be distributed among the counties in accordance with the laws of 1895, the balance of the direct tax fund, amounting to $27,000.

Mr. Wm. Black, of Union county, has a bale of cotton in his warehouse which is ten years old. He is keeping it, he says, for hard times. Times have never gotten so hard yet as to force the sale.—Charlotte Observer.

Miss Myrtle Beaver, daughter of Mr. David Beaver, of the Organ Church neighborhood, met with a terrible accident Monday. She was helping make preserves out in the yard when her dress caught fire and was entirely consumed. Her body was burned so badly that her life has been despaired of.—Salisbury Herald.

This is Good.

The rebuilding of the business portion of the burned district is progressing finely. Hotel Tull is nearly completed. Mr. J. T. Ball has moved into his new brick store. Mr. J. W. Collins' store is nearly finished. Work on the splendid building of Oettinger Bros. is going on rapidly. Mr. S. H. Loftin is having the foundation prepared for a brick building on the east side of Queen street. By the fall Kinston will be prettier than ever.—Kinston Free Press.

to make room for them. Come, name your figure and take the goods.

FRANK WILSON,

The King Clothier.

A Short Sermon.

If you make a man a promise to perform an obligation at a certain time be sure that you keep it. On the strength of your promises other promises may have been made, and failure to keep your word may cause others to fail also. Be honest in your dealings, and truthful in your promise, and the world will get along better.

Take a New Census.

Gastonia, Lenoir, Morganton and Asheville have recently taken a census of the number of inhabitants and the aldermen of Charlotte have ordered a census of that city taken. We are satisfied that within the past five years—since the last census was taken—there has been a large increase in the population of Greenville, and would like to see a new census taken so the exact number of people here could be known.

A very pleasant sail was given complimentary to Miss Bessie Jarvis on Tuesday evening last. There were sixteen in the party, and the evening was much enjoyed by all. We went to the Small villa, and enjoyed a melon party.—Washington Progress.

The Effect of Pulling Fodder.

Stripping the leaves from the standing stalks of corn while in their best green condition is quite a common practice in some sections of the country. When properly cured and bound in bundles they make excellent winter fodder, and it is generally considered that the pulling of the leaves cause no decrease in the production of grain. To test the question of loss or gain, experiments were made on 16 plats at the Georgia station. From one half of each the leaves were stripped and the fodder carefully dried.

The plats from which the blades were stripped yielded 23.9 bushels of shelled corn per acre. The unstripped plat gave a yield of 27.3 bushels per acre, a loss of 3.4 bushels as the result of pulling the fodder. But the yield of fodder was 270 pounds per acre, at a cost for pulling and curing of 81 cents. In other words there was a loss equal to 190.4 pounds of corn and a gain of 270 pounds of fodder.

From the above and a similar trials preceding it, the conclusion is reached that the strongest argument against the practice is the meagre results in fodder compared with the amount of labor involved. The same labor employed in mowing grass or any good forage crops, even without the use of improved harvesting machinery, would yield vastly greater results.

Willing to Oblige.

They are telling a story at the expense of a young North Carolina girl. The girl is charming, but like a great many other charming people, she is poor. She never had more than two evening gowns in a season, and the ruin of one of them is always a very serious matter to her. She went to a little dancing party last week and she wore a brand new white frock. During the evening a great, big red faced perspiring man came up and asked her to dance. He wore no gloves. She looked at his well-meaning but moist hands despairingly, and thought of the immaculate back of her waist. She hesitated a minute, and then she said with a winning smile:

"Of course, I'll dance with you, but if you don't mind, won't you please use your handkerchief?"

The man looked at her blankly a moment or two. Then a light broke over his face.

"Why, certainly," he said.

And he pulled out his handkerchief and blew his nose.—Life's Calendar.

Mr. J. M. Mewborne, of Lenoir county, while in Raleigh recently, told a newspaper correspondent that he thinks the Populists hold the key to the situation and that they are the "mountain" to which "Mahomet"—that is the Democrats—must come. He says he regards ex-Senator Jarvis as a "back number," but thinks Lieutenant Governor Doughton the strongest man the Democrats could nominate for Governor.

The Free Press observes that the Populist politicians are doing their best to injure Jarvis. This indicates that they fear him. Kinston Free Press.

It Covered the Ground.

"The late editor's wife is something of a humorist."

"Indeed?"

"Yes; took a line from his original salutory and placed it on his tombstone."

"What was it?"

"We are here to stay."—Atlanta Constitution.

From the many instances appearing in print of serious consequences and often death resulting from giving a wrong dose of medicine, it looks like it is becoming almost dangerous for anybody to administer medicine but to attending physician.

A Georgia boy has written the following on "The Mule": "The mule has four legs—two in front and two behind, but if a mule ever kicks you, you'll think he had forty, though in most cases you ain't well enough to think—after he lets his legs fly."

Heavy-Grade Locomotives.

Two big locomotives have been turned out of the Schenectady locomotive works, in fact the largest and heaviest ever built at the shops. These engines are for the Central Pacific railroad, and are to be used in heavy mountain work. They have four pairs of drivers and two pairs of truck wheels. One of these engines weighs 173,000 pounds. The tender weighs, when loaded, 93,800 pounds, and carries 4,000 gallons of water and 12 tons of coal. The boiler is 72 inches in diameter and contains over 300 flues. Its size can be imagined from the fact that a six-foot man can stand upright inside of it. The cylinders are 22x26, and all other dimensions are in proportion.—Albany Journal.

COLLEGE MEN.

England Delights to Honor Men Bearing a Degree.

The prejudice which exists here against college men in politics evidently has no place in public life in England. Indeed, it is very doubtful whether an uneducated man could maintain permanently any significance in the legislative affairs of England, even supposing it possible that he could obtain such a place. Every one of the chief members of the new English ministry bears a college degree, and the coincidence certainly proves that a B. A. or an M. A. or LL. D. is no bar to advancement in English public affairs. Salisbury is a graduate of Oxford and a chancellor of the university. Balfour, his nephew, got his schooling at Eton and Cambridge; he is lord rector of St. Andrew's university and of Glasgow university and lord chancellor of the University of Edinburgh. Chamberlain, the beau and dandy of the ministry, acquired learning at the university college school in London, and he always said that his Greek and Latin did him no harm as a business man when he became a manufacturer in Birmingham; he is a fellow of the Royal society. The duke of Devonshire was made an M. A. at Trinity college, Cambridge, in 1852, and ten years later the same college bestowed upon him an LL. D.; he is now a chancellor of the University of Cambridge. Hicks-Beach went from Eton to Christ Church college, Oxford, where he took successively the degrees B. A. and M. A. Goschen was an honor man of his college and won distinction as an economist and as a writer in his book: "The Theory of Foreign Exchanges." Almost every one of the subordinate members of Salisbury's cabinet has achieved a college degree, either before or since entering public life.—Illustrated American.

A MONSTER FACTORY.

Government Cigarette Works at Seville, Spain.

One of the sights of Seville, Spain, which no tourist misses, is the cigarette factory, in which the government employs nearly two thousand women and girls, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch. The showing about of visitors is accordingly looked upon as a regular source of income by the porter and matrons. After getting permission to enter, you are placed in charge of a matron, who shows you through her own department and then passes you on to another, and so on, until your stock of pesetas and half pesetas, put aside for fees, is exhausted.

These matrons accompany the visitors, not in order to prevent the girls from flirting with them (nothing could do that), but to see that no tobacco, picadura or cigarettes may disappear. Before entering each room a bell is rung to warn the girls, who are in great deshabille on account of the sun, to put on their wrappers, and as the door opens scores of round arms and pretty shoulders are seen disappearing, while several hundred pairs of coal-black eyes are fastened on you.

The passages are lined with cradles and the young girl-mothers to whom they belong implore you with eyes and hands for a penny for the Murillos of the future lying in them. These girls are more frank than subtle in their flirtations. There is not one in the crowd who will not be immediately conscious of a man's gaze fixed on her, nor will she be the first to turn her eyes away. Some will wink and even throw a kiss from a distant corner at the rich Ingleses (all foreigners are supposed to be wealthy Englishmen).

They are a merry lot on the whole, these poor girls, the quickest of whom make only two shillings a day, for which they have to toil ten to twelve hours. They are allowed to smoke if they wish and they make use of this privilege. They are remarkably deft at rolling the cigarettes, but not all seem eager to make as many as possible, for some are idling and others are asleep; but not one cares, as each one is paid according to the number she twists up, aided only by a piece of specially made cartridge paper and a small tin affair on her little finger.

DIED WITH HIS CHUM.

An English Soldier's Deed of Marked Heroism.

In the reminiscences of Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood, himself a brave English soldier, a touching instance of courage and self-sacrifice is given. One fine day in 1855, a detachment of English marines were crossing the Woronzow road under fire from the Russian batteries. All of the men reached shelter in the trenches except a seaman, John Blewitt. As he was running a terrific roar was heard. His mates knew the voice of a huge cannon, the terror of the army, and yelled:

"Look out! It is Whistling Dick!"

But at the moment Blewitt was struck by the enormous mass of iron on the knees and thrown to the ground. He called to his especial chum:

"O, Welch! save me!"

The fuse was hissing, but Stephen Welch ran out of the trenches, and seizing the great shell tried to roll it off his comrade.

It exploded with such terrific force that not an atom of the bodies of Blewitt or Welch was found. Even in that time, when each hour had its excitement, this deed of heroism stirred the whole English army. One of the officers searched out Welch's old mother in her poor home, and undertook her support while she lived, and the story of his death helped his comrades to nobler conceptions of a soldier's duty.—Youth's Companion.

The Gazette reports a meeting in the Court House at Washington being broken up by fleas. The court room was alive with them. Some Judges ought to be given a chance to hold court there now so they could fine the fleas for contempt.

The September number of Toilettes, issued August 1st, is the handsomest fashion magazine we have yet seen. Formerly books on fashion at this season of the year contained but little that was either instructive or attractive. Toilettes certainly does not travel on the same road with others of its class, for each issue appears to excel all preceding ones for the beauty of its illustrations, the simplicity and elegant taste displayed in the selection of its numerous costumes. And the clear and concise articles on the styles that are and that are to be, written by its many correspondents abroad, place a stamp of authenticity and refinement upon the magazine that every lady of taste appreciates.

Still a greater reduction in summer goods at Lang's.
