LONG LIVES HAVE THEY

Come hearken to my ditty.
'Tis a mild and simple strain
About a Cuban general
Who went to war with Spain.
Oh, he was a doughty patriot,
A fighter to the brim—
But, listen and I'll tell you just
What happened unto him
He was hanged and drawn and quartered,
Stabbed and poisoned, drowned and shot.
Every cemetery claimed him
For its choicest corner lot.
He was slaughtered fifty-seven times
And buried forty-four,
Yet he's alive and kicking still,
And hungering for more.
Now ye of little faith, who fear
My rhyme the case distorts,
Go scan the well-authenticated
Cuban war reports.
And if you wish to reach a green
Old age, this is the way—
Go be a Cuban general and Get slaughterde once a day.

—Truth.

In some respects hard bicycle riding may prove injurious to the rider, but as an appetizer, if Mr. Winchurch, of England, be a sample, it is a success. He ran a twenty-four hour race a few days ago, and, according to the paper which tells of it, not only got away with his competitor, but also with "six chickens, two shins of beef, two sixteen-ounce bowls of soup, six pounds of tomatoes, four pounds of grapes, four pounds of pears, a basket of apricots, fifty bananas, eggs (number not given), jellies and custards, washed down with a pint of port wine, a pint of sherry, some champagne, milk and chocolate," which we suppose about cleaned out the restaurant. If this be a true bill of fare Mr. Winchurch has missed his calling. He should abandon the wheel as a racer and pose as the champion gormadizer.—Wilmington Star.

A WONDERFUL MAN.

Goshaun, the Famous Mind Reader, Performs Marvelous Feats.

Goshaun, the mind reader, in his public test here Tuesday and entertainment at night, fully proved all that he claimed for himself. He made a short explanation before a crowd near the post office of what he could do, then requested two gentlemen to go anywhere they pleased and hide an article and he would go find it. They went up the street and hid a small article in a knot hole on a tree near the Court House and returned by another route to where Goshaun was. He bandaged his eyes, put a heavy cap over his entire head and face, took the gentlemen by the hand, led them over the exact route they had gone, stopped wherever they had stopped on the way, went on to the tree and found the article, then led them back to the starting point. This was a wonderful feat and witnessed by a large number of people.

At night in the Opera House ex-Senator Jarvis selected a committee of seven gentlemen, neither of whom knew before their names were called that they had been selected, and these went upon the stage to make the tests for Goshaun. The committee, one at the time, would think of some person in the audience and what was wanted done, when Goshaun, blindfolded, would take the committeeman by the hand, descend the steps of the stage, go to the right person and do just what was thought of. There were many roars of laughter as bald heads were patted, ears pulled, beards stroked, etc.

A very trying test was when one of the committee hid a cigar in one part of the audience, a match in another part, then thought of who he wanted to smoke that cigar, when the mind reader went and found both articles and put the cigar in the mouth of the person who was wanted to smoke it.

BOYS MEN

My New Suits

are here.

Come and see them.

FRANK WILSON,

The King Clothier.

The severest test of the evening was one of the committee taking a knife and going through the motion of cutting a man's throat and stabbing him, hiding the knife, then gathered up several articles from various persons in the audience which were tied up in a handkerchief and hid. Goshaun first found the knife and went through the same motion of cutting the man's throat and stabbing him, then found the bundle, opened it, and took each article to the owner.

His feats were interesting, and the people are convinced that Goshaun is just what he represents himself to be—a wonderful mind reader.

When a man is drowning a line often saves him. Similarly, when a merchant's trade is at very low ebb a line in a widely read paper is often the first means towards business revival.

"Mortgage the farm, if necessary to send the boy to college" says the Religious Herald. "Mortgage the farm for nothing on earth" says the Biblical Recorder.

Weather Crop Bulletin.

The reports of correspondents of the Weekly Weather Crop Bulletin, issued by the North Carolina State Weather Service, for the week ending Saturday, September 7, 1895, indicate generally a very favorable week for work and for ripening of crops. The temperature was above normal, excepting on Monday and Tuesday, with maximum temperature as high as 90 degrees. There was abundant sunshine. Local rains occurred on three days, but the weather was very dry the entire week everywhere except a few counties in the south-east and west portions. The week was favorable for pulling fodder and cutting and curing tobacco. Cotton is opening pretty rapidly and picking is going on. The first new bales have been marketed. Light showers are now needed.

EASTERN DISTRICT.

The past week was a most favorable one. Excepting Monday and Tuesday, which were rather cool, the temperature has been above normal. The week was dry, excepting local rains on 1st and 4th in some of the southern counties of the district. The weather was excellent for saving fodder and for cutting and curing tobacco. Cotton is fruiting well; opening generally; some picking is going on now. It is thought that the cotton crop will be all out early this fall. Sweet potatoes have suffered a little from drought. Turnips are doing well. Sorghum cane is ripe and syrup being made. Strawberry plants are being set out. Scuppernong grapes are ripening. Pea-vines are very fine; early planted beginning to ripen and late planted blooming. A good crop depends to some extent on late frosts.

Tennessee's All-Negro Town.

There is an odd little town on Johnson Island, in the Mississippi River, just north of Memphis. It is a negro town and is owned by a negro planter. The island is eleven miles in area and it is under the Tennessee statutes. The town is a taxing district and not incorporated. Judson is the name of the place, named after the white planter whose son is the mulatto owner of the island. The case in which the morgantic son won the rich property in contesting the will of the dead plant er is well remembered, and the courts duly allowed him part of the inheritance, since he was the only living issue of Judson.

So far as known, Judson is the only negro town in America where there is not a white man. Elmer Judson, its wealthy owner, allows no white man to come except on a visit. The town has 450 inhabitants and is well organized, since Judson is a highly educated and progressive man. He owns everything on the island, and most of the inhabitants are his tenants. He is a Justice of the Peace, and has provided happy homes for the men who work for him and enjoy his bounty. The island is about eight miles in length and in a few places is not more than sixty yards wide. The land is unusually rich and fine crops are produced every year. There are sixty stores in the place, with a few shops, two churches and a school.

THE BIRD WITH BROKEN WING.

One day a convict in Joilet prison picked up a scrap of paper from the corridor on which were these lines:

I walked through the woodland meadows;

Where the sweet thrushes sing,
And found, on a bed of mosses,
A bird with a broken wing.

I healed its wound, and each morning
It sang its old sweet strain;
But the bird with a broken pinion
Never soared so high again.

I found a young life broken
By sin's seductive art.
And, touched with a Christ-like pity,
I took it to my heart.

He lived with a noble purpose,
And struggled not in vain;
But the life that sin had stricken
Never soared so high again.

But the bird with a broken pinion
Kept another from the snare;
And the life that sin had stricken
Raised another from despair.

Each loss has its compensation,
There is a healing for every pain,
But the bird with a broken pinion
Never soared so high again.

A hypocrite never fools anybody as bad as he does himself

Every man who lives right helps to make unwritten laws for the good of others.

The Abuse of Witnesses.

Public attention in Virginia was very distinctly called in the trial of the Massey suit at Norfolk to the abuse of witnesses permitted by the Court. It derived peculiar emphasis in that case from the general interest growing out of the prominence of the parties to the suit; but we suppose we do not overstate the evil when we say that it prevails more or less in every court in the State—and, possibly, in every other State—especially among the lawyers of least repute in the profession. The Advocate Reports of the Pennsylvania Legal Intelligencer show that the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania intends to bring to an end this disreputable practice of browbeating in that State. That court, by a decision filed by Justice Green, May 30, 1895, in the case of Holden vs. Pennsylvania Railroad Company, unanimously decided that the abuse and insult of witnesses or litigants, in arguments to the jury, furnish legal ground for an exception on the record to be reviewed by the Supreme Court. In this case the Supreme Court not only sustained the exception as based on good legal grounds, but reversed the judgment of the court below distinctly on the grounds therein stated.

It is not infrequently that the attorney, in default of having impeached the witness by evidence, proceeds to impeach him on his own account by attacks on his veracity, honesty and general character, which attacks often serve, as they are intended, to create the impression with the jury that they are founded on something more than the audacity of the man who utters them. This impression indubitably sways the ordinary jury in making up the verdict. The decision of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court is, it seems to us, based on common sense, as well as a desire to elevate the profession above a role that ill befits the better class of its members.—Staunton Vindicator

Paid the Penalty of Stupidity.

The late Lord Exeter's father was a Tory of the most bigoted and intolerant type, and he worked irreparable harm to his family by his fatuous opposition to the Great Northern railway.

It was intended to carry the main line through Stamford, but Lord Exeter's senseless pertinacity in obstinately rejecting all proposals caused the directors to change their plans. The line was therefore taken through Peterboro, to the great advantage of that city, which reaped all the benefits that Lord Exeter had declined for Stamford.

The end of the matter was that in a few years Lord Exeter was obliged to construct at his own expense a branch line from Stamford to Essendine on the Great Northern, but this has not proved a lucrative speculation, nor has Stamford or the Burghley estate derived much benefit from it.

Lord Exeter also embarrassed himself by keeping a large and costly racing stud and by a too extravagant mode of living, so that the family estates were considerably incumbered when he died in 1867 and he had alienated the London property. His reception of the queen and Prince Albert at Burghley in 1844 cost a frightful sum, which he could ill afford. Some of the art treasures have been sold, but the stately house still contains Verrio's finest ceilings, the superb carvings by Grinling Gibbons and some noble works by Holbein and Carlo Dolci. — London Truth.

An Unfortunate Little Girl.

Dear Mr. Editor—I have written a novel in 3 volumes, and if you will take great care of it and not let it get dirty, you may read it. As it is a sycological (sic) novel, and I have taken great pains with it I think you ought to pay me something large for it—perhaps 5 pounds. I want a new frock, and the money would be nice. I have tried before to write, but the world is dreadfully unkind to me, and indeed I have sometimes suspected that there is a conspiracy against me. But I thought, Mr. Editor, that you would be fair. My life has been of no use up to now, and I am 15; so, dear Mr. Editor, please write soon to your little friend.—Good Words.

Then and Now.

We ask our readers to contrast Greenville of to-day with Greenville of five years ago. Count the number of beautiful new residences that have sprung into existence and you will be astonished. Listen at the music of saw and hammer in nearly every portion of the town and it will fill your heart with pride because of the progressive spirit that has been awakened. Note the hustle and activity around every store and business house. Watch the large crowds that come to town every day and note the expression of contentment that lights nearly every face and you will be ready to exclaim, what a change!

Go out in the country and in every section of the county can be seen evidences of prosperity and thrift. New life has been enthusied everywhere, the people seem inspired with new hopes and are putting forth new energies.

Approach a man on the subject of politics and you can hardly get his attention at all. His mind is on his crop or his business, and political matters hardly get a secondary consideration. What to do to improve the farm or the business is the foremost idea.

The people of Pitt county stood the depressed condition of the last few years with heroic courage, and they have now come to the realization that we have the greatest county in the State.
There is now more contentment in every vocation, and they are looking to a brighter and still brighter time coming.

The stimulus to the county
caused by the high prices paid
for tobacco on the Greenville market is magical—it is almost electrical. The outside world should know that this is a prosperous county, abundant in resources, fertile and healthy.

Those who come and look are convinced that Greenville is a live town and that Pitt is a great county.

This is the place for men of enterprise. Men who have money to invest could reap a harvest by establishing manufacturing industries here. The time is ripe for them and the people should be uniting in this direction. Work for Greenville, work for your section, and you are at the same time working for yourself.

Anent the scarcity of small change, a gentleman suggests that if there was a general opening of the children's savings banks, and the pennies, nickles and dimes exchanged for larger money, it would help the circulation of change amazingly. That's a fact, bring out the banks.
