LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOTTINGS.

BY O. L. JOYNER.

Heavy breaks every day and prices well sustained.

At the rate tobacco is coming in now there will be over five million pounds by January 1st, 1896.

We heard a gentleman from Danville, Va., say a few days ago, that nearly all the Danville tobaccoists could spot the Greenville tobacco from the other tobacco sold on other markets in eastern part of the State. He said the tobacco sold in Greenville was much more desirable than the other markets.

Another in expressing himself about Greenville said that he had decided to locate here, that for the last three years he had been watching eastern Carolina and that he had long been convinced that Greenville was THE market of the east. This same gentleman is casting around now expecting to make some investments here. He is a tobaccoist and has been on the largest tobacco markets in the world all his life. He told the writer yesterday that he had made up his mind to come here to live. He predicts that within five years Greenville will sell fifteen million pounds tobacco.

Miss Emma Blakely, who is well and favorably known by our people, was married on Tuesday the 10th to a gentleman by the name of Parshal.—Washington Progress.

WEATHER CROP BULLETIN.

The reports of correspondents of the Weekly Weather Crop Bulletin, issued by the North Carolina State Weather Service, for the week ending Saturday, September 14th, 1895, indicate a favorable week in most respects. The weather has been unusually warm for the season, the temperature averaging over five degrees per day above the normal. The precipitation was much less than the average amount, except near the immediate coast. A few heavy rains occurred in two or three eastern counties. Beneficial local showers occurred on three days. The amount of sunshine was abundant. These conditions were very favorable for saving fodder and late hay, and for cotton, which is opening well. Tobacco-curing is finished in the east. The weather has been too dry for fall crops and for fall plowing. Some winter oats have been sown. Both early and late corn are safe.

EASTERN DISTRICT.

Excepting near the coast and a few counties in the southern portion of the district, where a good deal of rain occurred, the week has been very dry and warm, and the whole quite favorable for work now being done. Cool nights did not set in until the end of the week. Fodder-pulling is about completed, except some late fields in the north, and was nicely saved in large quantities. Fall crop of hay is also being cut and easily cured. The week was very favorable for cotton, which is opening well, and picking is progressing, though slowly at present. A few complaints of boll-worms were received. Early and late corn both safe. Tobacco is about all cured. Sweet potatoes are coming into market. Sorghum cane is very fine, and undoubtedly large quantities of syrup will be made. The field-pea crop is one of the finest for several seasons. Away from the coast it is beginning to get too dry for fall crops.

Court is moving along finely.

Wonderful Cotton.

One of the attractions at the Exposition grounds will be a model cotton crop by George W. Truitt, the famous Troup county planter. The cotton is in splendid condition and will be a curiosity to many exposition visitors. It illustrates the methods of a man who has made the most remarkable record of any cotton grower in Georgia. A few years ago he bought a Troup county farm which had been practically abandoned by its owners and by work and intelligent cultivation he has made it famous for its fruitfulness. In 1886 on five acres of land Mr. Truitt raised fifteen bales of cotton, which beats the record in Georgia if not in the country. This year he has four hundred acres in cotton and will make three hundred bales.

He will also have a surplus of corn, oats, meat, peas and potatoes. He has demonstrated the possibilities of farming in Georgia, and his improved cotton seed have benefitted thousands of planters in the South.

In the Journal office there is now a branch of a cotton stalk which was broken off in one of Mr. Truitt's fields a few days ago. In a space which a man's two hands can easily cover are twelve cotton bolls. A healthier specimen of cotton could not be found and a thicker growth of bolls we have never seen.

What George Truitt has done any other farmer in Georgia can do, and his example has moved many to improved methods and more profitable results of their work.—Atlanta Constitution.

EVERY AFTERNOON (EXCEPT SUNDAY)

There is much talk just at present about a third term for Mr. Cleveland. We presume this is disturbing other people more than it is President Cleveland. Nobody has ever called him a fool, whatever else they may have said and we don't believe that he will ever give them any evidence that he is one.

J. C. Logan Harris says he has been misquoted as saying that he would carry fifty negroes to the silver convention. He says he has received many letters from them asking if they were invited and that he has in every case responded in the affirmative, and that to his knowledge many of them will be in the convention. He says he only wants about fifteen minutes of the time of the convention. Says he cares more at present about principles than party. Whew!

There is no doubt but that a great many Democrats feel in reference to the silver convention which is to meet in Raleigh on 25th inst. about as the one quoted below, and who illustrates his position by a very apt fable. We give what he says:

"Are you going to attend the silver convention in Raleigh on the 25th?" asked one silver Democrat of another yesterday.

"I don't know," was the reply. "I am a 16 to 1 man, all wool and a yard wide, and if the silver convention can advance the cause of the white metal without hurting other things, I'd like to be present. What do you think about it?"

"I am opposed to it, because I believe that it is going to have too many political tricksters in it—men who have deceived the people upon other matters, and now think to reinstate themselves by clamoring loudly for silver. There are going to be good men there—some of the best, no doubt—but they will go into the conference with a suspicion of their associates. Only yesterday I heard a Democrat who is going into the conference say: "Yes, I am going, but I am going to keep a sharp eye on Otho Wilson." Men who confer together ought to have a better opinion of one another. I am going to keep out of the Convention because, while if I should go into it, I would be fair and square with all my confreres, I am afraid Loge Harris, Marion Butler or some of the other fellows would seek to obtain a political advantage at any expense.

"That reminds me of a story. Once upon a time, there was a great convention of animals, and a resolution was reached and a compact made that for the future all warfare should cease among them and that they should associate upon terms of equality, free from all apprehension of danger from one another.

The next morning a fox came trotting up the road where a hen was feeding. Seeing the fox, the hen flew up on the branch of a tree and sat there.

The fox said, "Good morning, Mrs. Hen," and Mrs. Hen responded, "Good morning, Mr. Fox." The compliments of the season were passed and the fine weather spoken of.

"Come down, Mrs. Hen," said the fox, "and let us take a stroll."

"I thank you, sir," said Mrs. Hen; "I am very comfortable."

"Why, Mrs. Hen," said Mr. Fox, "you are not afraid to come down; you remember that we are all friends now and are bound not to molest each other?"

"Oh, yes! I remember," she said, "and I am not at all afraid; but I prefer to sit up here and chat with you. By the way there comes Mr. Hound along the road."

The fox looked around and saw Mr. Hound coming, and he said, "Well, Mrs. Hen, I guess I'll move on; I'm in a little hurry this morning."

The hen said, "Oh, don't go Mr. Fox! it is very pleasant to talk with you. Sit down and let's continue the conversation."

"I thank you," said the fox, "but I guess I'll go on. I have to go some distance through the woods over here."

"Why, Mr. Fox," said the hen, "you're not afraid of Mr. Hound, are you? You remember the agreement made among us?"

"Oh, yes!" said the fox; "I remember it, but I am afraid this d—d hound coming up the road has forgotten it."

The Atlanta Exposition opens its gates to-day. It will surpass anything of the kind ever held in the South. Round trip rates from Greenville are $12.40, tickets limited to ten days.

TO MAINTAIN GOOD VISION.

A Few Simple Rules For Preserving the Sight Until Old Age.

A few simple rules carefully obeyed will do much to preserve the eyes in health. Light and color in rooms are important. The walls are best finished in a single tint. Windows should open directly upon the outer air, and light is better when they are close together, not separated by much wall space, not distributed. Light should be abundant, but not dazzling. It should never come from in front, nor should sunlight fall upon work or on the printed page. Never read or sew in the twilight after an exhausting fever or before breakfast. Look up frequently when at work and fix the eyes upon some distant object. Break up the stretch of wall by pictures that have a good perspective. These rest the eyes, as does looking out of a window.

When at work on minute objects, rise occasionally, take deep inspirations with the mouth closed, stretch the body erect, throw the arms backward and forward, and step to an open window or out into the open air for a moment. Two desks of different heights are valuable for a student or writer, one to stand by and the other to sit by. Plenty of open air exercise is essential to good eyesight.

The general tone of the nervous system has much to do with the eyesight. Prolonged or excessive study frequently has pain or poor vision as symptom. The use of tobacco may bring about defective vision, and alcohol sometimes destroys it utterly, owing to nerve inflammation that it sets up.

City life, with shut in streets and narrow outlook, favors the production of errors in vision. When looking at distant objects, the normal eye is at rest. To see near by, muscular effort is required. This effort, when constant, changes the shape of the eyeball. After the eighteenth or twentieth year parts of the eye that earlier showed signs of bulging or becoming nearsighted may acquire new strength, and those who escape myopia up to this time are usually free from it after that. The children of nearsighted parents are in special danger. They require constant care. It is best to have all children's eyes examined for defects when they are 10 years old.

Nearsightedness and color blindness are barriers to the army and navy, to certain fine and mechanic arts and to many industrial pursuits. Their early recognition saves time and money and often prevents the discouragement of defeat.

Ounces of prevention are better than tons of cure. There are but few forms of partial or total blindness that were not at one time the reverse of hopeless. In view of this fact the duty of parents and guardians is clearly manifest. Ignorance must be replaced by knowledge.

carelessness by enlightened forethought. Precautions in the way of type, light, color and rest and exercise, together with occasional calls upon the oculist, will probably secure fair eyesight for life.—Outlook.

The Indian Oriole.

There is a common belief in India that the Indian oriole lights his hanging nest with fireflies. It is said that the bird catches the insects and fastens them head first in a bit of moist clay. Naturalists have found the insects thus imprisoned.
