LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOTTINGS.

BY O. L. JOYNER.

Reports from the leading tobacco markets of Virginia are to the effect that this will be a bright crop. These reports were circulated quite frequently last year at this time. The truth of it was, it was the most unsatisfactory crop to leaf men that has been grown in two years.

There is one man buying tobacco on the Greenville market that controls more orders than any one man in eastern North Carolina. He commenced buying tobacco on the eastern markets two years ago, with but little business. Since then he has worked up the largest order business in the east.

To sit out and watch the hands employed in the leaf factories here, coming off their work when the 6 o'clock whistle blows in the evening reminds one of the large factories in some of our manufacturing cities. There are about 300 hands employed here in the tobacco business. They are paid on an average of 70 cents a day, which amounts to over a thousand dollars a week. This money, the whole of it, is spent right here among our merchants, and most of the hands employed were street loafers before we had a tobacco market, and yet only a short while ago there were men here who did all in their power to prevent a tobacco market from being established. In a short while the tobacco market will give this class of people an opportunity of showing their appreciation to those who have helped to build the market.

Our attention has been called to a report that is in circulation in the Ayden section that a certain young man took some tobacco to Henderson, sold it, was satisfied, and came back to drum up a special break of eastern Carolina tobacco for one of the Henderson warehousemen. In doing this, we are informed, and our authority will be produced if necessary, he told some of the Ayden people that one of the buyers in Greenville was buying tobacco and shipping it to Henderson. That the day he was there this said buyer had a lot of tobacco on that market. After hearing this we went to the buyer and told him of it. His reply was that he would state on oath, that he had not sold an ounce of tobacco on speculation in North Carolina or Virginia this year. Further, that he had more orders than he could fill, and that if he didn't, he would not attempt to speculate on tobacco bought in Greenville. When a subterfuge of this kind is resorted to to get farmers to send their tobacco off to sell it, this very fact should be the most convincing proof to them that such methods would not be employed, if any other course or reasoning was left, and when a man, soliciting custom, goes before the people with no more argument than this, no market need have any fear of being much harmed, for those who pay any attention to such reports, will soon learn to their sorrow that they have been following a delusion.

ATLANTA EXPOSITION.

The Gate City of the South

The natural fertility of the soil, vast mineral resources, abundant water power, salubrious climate, and above all the industry, enterprise and National spirit of her people, richly entitle Georgia to be termed the Empire State of the South, and her capital, the city of Atlanta, from its geographical position and the fact that it is a center from which railroads radiate to every section of the country, is aptly named the Gate City of the South.

Atlanta is a beautiful, thriving city more than 110,000 population, rich in factories, mills, large wholesale and retail stores, electric street railways, electric lights, splendid water works system, fine hotels, elegant residences, spacious, well kept and beautiful parks, paved streets and unsurpassed school and sanitary systems, grand public buildings, everything, in fact, necessary to constitute an ideal city and indicate of that thrift, vim and enterprise of her citizens, which has won for their city the cognomen of the "Chicago of the South," and from present indications, in a very few years it may properly and rightly be designated its metropolis.

Such is the Atlanta of to-day, risen from its ashes, brushed off the scars and thrown aside the hates and prejudices engendered by the terrible conflict of arms that raged in and around her and left her desolate indeed, which holds out her hospitable arms to all the world and invites to the Cotton States and International Exposition which was opened on September 18 and to be continued until the last day of the present year, a period of 105 days.

This great undertaking has received the indorsement of the General Government, Congress having appropriated $200,000 for a building and exhibit. The building was designed by a Government architect and will have a floor space of 65,000 square feet. The Government exhibit will represent all its departments and will be in charge of gentlemen selected because of their special qualifications and valuable experience acquired at the Columbian Exposition at Chicago, and these gentlemen have severally promised that the Atlanta exhibit shall in every respect equal if not excel that of the United States at Chicago.

Besides that of the United States and the several State and other buildings, there will be twelve principle structures, as follows: Manufactures and Liberal Arts, Fine Arts, Agriculture, Auditorium, Administration, Fire, Machinery, Mineral and Forestry, Negro, Transportation, Electricity and Woman's. The general style will be Romanesque, and architectural effects will be produced by outline and proportion rather than by ornamentation, and they are well calculated to impress the beholder with their simplicity, stability and adaptability.

In regard to transportation, particularly by rail, in no respect has the South shown her recuperation from the devastations of war and the general prostration incident to a sudden and complete revolution in her labor system, by the abolition of slavery, than in the improvement in her railways, not only in roadbed; motive power, equipment and speed, but in the combination of independent roads into a great trunk system under a single management, which affords facilities for travel and traffic of a character equal to the best in the country. Such is the great system now operated under the name of the Southern Railway, which, like the branches of a great tree, reaches every part of the South and Southwest, with connections to every part of the East, West and Northwest, which is to the entire southern section of the country what the Pennsylvania and New York Central, for instance, are to other sections.

The Southern Railway, therefore, will afford the fullest and best facilities to visitors to the fair, whether from any part of the South, from the East, West, or Northwest, without change of cars, and without the annoyances incidental thereto, and will land them either in Atlanta or in the fair grounds, at their option, and at the lowest rates that may be established.

Standing in Piedmont Park and looking up to the crest of the hill at the grand Auditorium, with its great seating capacity and lofty tower, holding the largest chime of bells ever set up in this country, surrounded by evidences of a new and brighter era of progress and development for the South, remembering that the ground upon which we stand is hallowed by the blood of the thousands who here fell battling for and against the Union, where the arts of war, illustrated by intrenchments, breastworks and rifle pits, have happily been replaced by those of peace and progress, one instinctively turns to the emblem of his country's greatness and sovereignty, gracefully and proudly floating over the picturesque and beautiful scene, feels a thrill of enthusiastic patriotism and rejoices that all sectional lines and prejudices are obliterated, and that the South is henceforth to be a potent factor in the progress in agriculture, the arts, sciences and literature of this great republic, a progress that has been the marvel of the civilized world.

Imagination can then well picture the Exposition in full progress, and people from every section of our own, and other countries happily commingling in the beautiful enclosure. He can hear the strains of sweet music from Sousa's and Innes' and from the renowned United States Marine Band, led by its incomparable conductor, Fanciulli, in the Auditorium, feel the air vibrating with the harmony of the chimes that, but awhile ago, trembled with the thunder of hostile artillery, hear the hum of labor-saving machinery, the roar of railroad trains, and see on minarets, towers and gables the flags of all nations, paying homage to the glorious Stars and Stripes proudly floating from yonder high staff. At such a moment one fully realizes what it is to be an American; to be a part and parcel of this great free government of, by and for the people, which knows no North, South, East or West, but a homogeneous whole, leading all nations in the betterment of the conditions of human life, and in the march to a higher, grander and nobler civilization. There are more suicides in Switzerland in proportion to population than in any other country in Europe. The Government believes that the newspaper publicity given to the suicides has something to do with the increase in the number and has requested the newspapers to say little about them. There is no doubt that the vile rot called "sensation" published by many papers of to-
