LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOTTINGS.

BY O. L. JOYNER.

Communicated.

MR. JOYNER:—I have been wanting to say something for some time and after reading your article tonight in the Daily of the 10th inst., I will do so. I don't know much about tobacco farming but I do know if building up and developing the tobacco trade of Greenville had been left to the old original Greenville its branches of industry would be flowing down the same old channels that it did ten years ago. In bringing about this change who is it that deserves the credit? Who was it that took hold of the tobacco interest here when there was not a tobacco warehouse in Greenville and kept it on through the thickest of the opposition until today it is one of the best tobacco markets in the State? In a community, about three miles from Greenville, on the Tarboro road, not over two miles in length, the boys of the families of that section headed by Gus Evans and Olthus Joyner aided in their efforts by the friendly pen of Dave Whichard, who has at all times actively supported and encouraged these gentlemen in their efforts in building up the tobacco market, have doubled the business interests of Greenville giving employment to hundreds of idle loafers, and in many instances by so doing put bread in the mouths of the hungry, and increased the trade of the merchants of the town a great many of whom would not lend either one of them a dollar today, if they wanted to borrow unless they would give them two dollars of security for every dollar that they lent them, and increased the value of real estate around the tobacco warehouses on an average of 100 per cent and in some instances 1000 per cent. Leon Evans and Ola Forbes and their comrades with the three above name have been worth

RICHER AND HANDSOMER

Than any ever produced. My Clothes, Hats and Furnishings, I'm talking about. Look over the stock; it's complete now, and see if you don't agree with me. One of two things I always mean to do: To sell you better goods than you get elsewhere for the same price; to sell you the same goods lower than you get them.

FRANK WILSON,
The King Clothier.

more and done more in getting new enterprises to Greenville than some men in the town worth a thousand dollars to their one and who have actually fought them in their efforts especially when they first came to Greenville. I have nothing invested in the tobacco interests here and don't know that I am well posted on the subject of your articles but what I have said is my observation and I am one that believes in fair play and in seeing that every man gets his just deserts. Every business man in Greenville should have the utmost respect for every one these boys and for old man Gus Evans they ought to pull off their hats out of respect whenever they meet him.

B. F. HEARNE.

The above communication was intended for Saturday's daily but was received too late. We want to express our deep feelings of appreciation for the kind and encouraging words spoken about us and in doing so we only voice the feelings of every one of the others referred to.

DID YOU BUY YOUR HUSBAND

His last Suit of Clothes? Most ladies do buy their husband's Clothes. Its right that they should. A man don't know what looks well on him and besides he don't know a good piece of goods from a common piece. His wife does and its to his interest to let her buy his Clothes. He saves money by it and is more becomingly dressed. Speaking of Clothes I have a very nice line for Men I bought at a bankrupt sale which I will sell at a very low price—about one-half its real value. I have Suits from $2 up. Don't fail to see me before buying. I have also a nice line of Dress Goods and Notions that I am selling cheaper than any man in town. When in need of SHOES remember my stock is complete and will sell them cheap.

Mr. John R. Morris, so well known in North Carolina, in an interview in News and Observer says that John E. Hurst will be elected Governor in Maryland, that the Democrats will win, that he is a Gorman man because he and his followers represent what opposes Republicanism. Mr. Morris is just from this State and has been taking part in the campaign. He is a fine talker and one of the most polished writers in this State.

Mr. D. T. Swindell, of Raleigh, died on last Saturday morning. He was one of the foremost business men of the State. His mercantile business in Raleigh was probable second to none in North Carolina. He was originally from Washington N. C., where he began the mercantile business in 1880. His business increased rapidly here and about nine years afterwards he went to Raleigh where he could have a wider field. He is said to have commenced business on $180, and his career shows what energy and pluck can do.

It is said that Secretary Olney has told the Spanish Minister at Washington that Spain had better hurry in her efforts to crush the insurgents in Cuba, intimating very strongly that if this was not done before Congress met in December the United States might interfere. This is not believed however as this would be contrary to the policy heretofore pursued by the United States. If the strife continues though it will be interesting to see what action Congress will take. There is a growing sentiment of sympathy for the Cubans.

Some Mysterious Disappearance Explained.

A London special tells the strange story of a mysterious disappearance.

A well dressed lady of evident respectability was found sitting on the promenade at Brighton, and was taken in charge by the authorities. She was unable to give her name, address or any facts connected with her life.

There was no mark on her clothing to indentify her, and she was sent to the workhouse.

The doctors soon found that she was an educated woman, and she was suffering from the sudden loss of her memory. Her mind was an absolute blank as to her past, and she said that she had felt something break inside her head. She talked well and wrote like a person of education.

The woman was described in the newspapers, and in a few days her husband, who is a London civil engineer, turned up and was recognized by her. She left her home a week ago but does not know how she reached Brighton. The doctors say that while she was trying to remember her name she often said it was "Triby." She signed her notes "Mrs. Anybody."

The case is attracting attention and it is believed that many mysterious disappearances may be attributed to the same cause—loss of memory.—Atlanta Constitution.

Ebenezer's Explanation.

Two darkies were exercising their brains on scientific matters when they ran up against the telegraph. Sam wondered how messages could be sent over a wire, and Ebenezer, not wishing to appear ignorant, sought to explain the mystery in the following manner:

"S'pose dar am a dog free miles long"

"Go way, you fool niggah, dar nibber was sich a big dog," interposed Sam.

"But s'posin dar was, and his front paws was on de Chelsea sho' and his hind feet on de Boston sho'. Now, s'posin you step on dat dog's tail on de Boston sho', whar'll dat dog bark?"

"In Chelsea, I guess," replied Sam.

"Well, dat's jess de way de telegraf works," remarked Ebenezer triumphantly.—Telegrapher's Herald.

FROM THE MUSTY PAST.

A Peep at the Interesting Old Records of an English Parish.

The village church at Shoreside, England, writes a correspondent of the Boston Herald, was built soon after the Norman conquest. There are records to show for the statement. But the purely parochial books do not date back so far. In the rectory is an ancient chest filled with musty documents, among which are three long, narrow, flexible books, two written on sheepskin and the other on paper. The rector, in an hour of confidence, bids me overlook these volumes at my leisure. The invitation accounts for the present printing.

I know a neighboring parish where the clerk wrote on a certain memorable day:

"God be praised! Here endeth ye Rump parliament!"

But in Shoreside there were no such ecstasies on the part of the parish officer. He confined himself strictly to business, having first set down on a flyleaf a brief account of the origin of parish registers—which, it appears, were introduced in Henry VIII's time, another Cromwell, Thomas, having had, as the history books tell us, a finger in the ecclesiastical pie. Thus writes the parish clerk:

"It was first ordered in 1538 by Ld. Cromwell wh he was vicar general yt Register Books should be in every parish."

One of the volumes in the rectory chest is inscribed:

"A Register Book for the Parish of Shoreside of all and every person buried in ye parish or precincts thereof according to an Act of Parliament made [the year of the reign is indecipherable] Caroli 2d, entitled An Act for Burying in Woolen."

They were rare protectionists and subsidizers in those days. The deceased subjects of Charles II were by law compelled to be "buried in woolen," because the woolen industry needed stimulating.

The paper book provides more diversion. It contains the accounts of the churchwardens for 105 years. It is a young thing in volumes—a mere juvenile—compared with the Tudor-Stuart-Cromwellian sheepskin, for it harks back no further than 1720, the year of the South sea bubble. What first interests me is to find in these accounts the same names, family and Christian, that appeared for 200 years before in the earlier book, and that are extant in the village today, many of them connected with the same plots of ground and the same bricks and mortar that their ancestors tilled or lived behind when great Elizabeth was queen.

"Ah!" says the rector, "if you wish to find instances of the survival of typical old English family names look for them among the common people rather than among the aristocracy."

But there is more than the survival of names here in Shoreside. By the parish books I can trace 300 years of blacksmithing, of innkeeping, of carpentering and various forms of purveying in the families whose representatives now follow these livelihoods. These are points of heritage wholly strange to American experience. As for the traces in the churchwardens' book, I find but few changes in 175 years.

Signs of a Hard Winter.

The goosebone is nearly white this year, and the result will be that snow will be on the ground from early December until late in April. A cold, long winter filled with blustering storms is ahead. There are other signs that confirm this. Acorn and other nuts are plentiful, corn husks are unusually thick. The above is from an old resident, a firm believer in the goose bone business. Gracious knows, we all hope he may be mistaken.
