LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOTTINGS.

BY O. L. JOYNER.

The young bachelor tobaccoists of Eastern North Carolina are getting a move on them indeed. During this month only five of them have completed their arrangements for severing their connection with single blessedness and Greenville is strictly in the deal, if you don't believe it ask Shrimp Parham.

One of the most striking illustrations of the past and present that we have seen is a photographic view of the Greenville tobacco market five years ago and the present. As soon as the plates can be made we will give the REFLECTOR readers a glimpse of these two pictures. We call attention to this now, in order to show to our people and prepare them to see the great improvement that has been made since five years ago. There is a vast change, it is true in fact, a complete transformation of an old worn out broom sage field into a thrifty, thriving tobacco market, but when we think of the great changes that have been made by the efforts of a few how much greater improvement could we expect by the close of 1900, if our people will all join hands and pull together to get factories here and men with means to operate them. Let everybody hurrah for Greenville.

DID YOU BUY YOUR HUSBAND

His last Suit of Clothes? Most ladies do buy their husband's Clothes. Its right that they should. A man don't know what looks well on him and besides he don't know a good piece of goods from a common piece. His wife does and its to his interest to let her buy his Clothes. He saves money by it and is more becomingly dressed. Speaking of Clothes I have a very nice line for Men I bought at a bankrupt sale which I will sell at a very low price—about one-half its real value. I have Suits from $2 up. Don't fail to see me before buying. I have also a nice line of Dress Goods and Notions that I am selling cheaper than any man in town. When in need of SHOES remember my stock is complete and will sell them cheap.

EVERY AFTERNOON (EXCEPT SUNDAY)

It is thought that our Attorney General takes an extreme view in reference to the position the people of the United States ought to bear towards the Cubans. It is news to the American people that they ought not to hold public meetings and express sympathy for any people who are struggling for freedom if they see fit to do so. They have always done this and will doubtless continue to do the Attorney General to the contrary notwithstanding. Below is found his letter upon the subject:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Inquiries by mail and telegraph have been received in considerable numbers of late at the Department of Justice as to whether it is a violation of the laws of the United States for American citizens to express sympathy for the Cuban insurgents in public meetings and to aid in fitting out expeditions to assist them. One of the most recent is from Mr. Watkins, of Albany, N. Y. In reply to it Attorney General Harmon has sent the following letter, dated October 9th, which represents the views of the administration on the subject:

"SIR:—For some reason your letter of September 26th did not reach me until to-day.

"I hasten to say in reply that the organization of a military force of any sort in the United States in aid of the insurrection in Cuba would be in direct violation of section 6286 of the Revised Statutes of the United States which provides for a fine not exceeding $3,000 and imprisonment not more than three years for every person who in any way takes part in such expedition or enterprise to be carried on from thence against any province, State, etc., 'with whom the United States are at peace.' As the United States are not only at peace with Spain, but have with her a treaty whereby the extradition of prisoners and many other benefits are secured, it behooves all American citizens to have respect for the laws and obligations of their country and regard for its honor, to observe this law in spirit as well as in letter, to be neutral in word as well as in deed. While there is no law to prevent American citizens from speaking their sentiments on any subject, singly or together taking such action as you mention to your letter would, in my judgment, be discourteous in the highest degree to a friendly power and tend to embarrass and obstruct the government in carrying out its determination faithfully to execute the laws and fulfill its treaty obligations.

"Very respectfully,
"JUDSON HARMON,
"Attorney General."

The action of the General Episcopal Convention in Minneapolis in sending fraternal greetings to the Methodist Conference is the first time in the history of the Episcopal Conference that greetings have been sent to a conference of a different denomination. A Florida delegate objected, but the adoption of the motion to send greetings was urged in vigorous speech by Dr. Green, who said that the House should manifest its Christian courtesy and consistency, and rid the church of the oft repeated reproach that it simply spoke empty syllables and that its heart was not in the cause of Christian unity. The vote stood 500 to 20.

The world is growing better and the thoughts of men are widening.—Raleigh News and Observer.

J. T. Cash, a farmer living near town, and who has given the financial condition of the country a good deal of study and thought, comes in to tell us a dream he had "night afore last." He says he dreamed that "England had twice tried to conquer us with the sword and failed and now she was whipping us with the gold pen." There is something in that idea when viewed in the light of present financial actions of England in gobbling up our gold: It also shows that great minds will run in the same channel, for Lord Lytton once said that "the pen is mightier than the sword."—Durham Sun.

At East Liverpool, O., last Wednesday the six-year-old son of Andrew Vandyn was burned at the stake by five companions and so badly injured that he cannot recover. Some men happened to see the performance and tried to rescue him, but his clothes had taken fire and he was badly burned, and the physicians say it is impossible for him to live. A Wild West show exhibited there about a month ago and since that time the boys of the town have been playing Indian.

SNAKE BITES.

How They Are Cured by the Natives of South Africa.

The following extraordinary "cure of snake bite" comes to us through a South African newspaper under the narrator's full name as a fact: A Kaffir servant accompanying a party "trekking" (traveling) was bitten by a venomous snake, a yellow cobra, and when found was commencing to get into a comatose state. As the only recourse, as the party were without medicines, antidotes or brandy, a Hottentot shepherd and snake doctor was fetched to the patient. This is how the physician is described: "A man of apparently between 55 and 60 years of age, face repulsive in the extreme (Hottentots are proverbially not Adonislike) wearing a pair of corduroy trousers and on his head a dirty linen cap." Mark the linen cap! When called to the patient, he prescribed, and an hour afterward the Kaffir was as sound as ever. The process of the "cure" is thus described: The "doctor" was in the habit of extracting and drinking the venom of the snakes which he captured. It intoxicated him. He would then sleep off the effects. His cap was never off his head. The poison in his system would work itself into the cap whenever he exerted himself and became heated—in the same way as perspiration exudes and soaks the leathern band of the billycock of civilization. The cap was saturated to such an extent by the venom that whenever a snake bit him it had not the least effect. He imbibed the poison thrice a week.

One cap lasted him a year, sometimes longer, after which it was carefully hung up in his hut, and another headpiece, which he manufactured himself, donned in its stead. When he wished to cure any one bitten by a snake, all he did was to take a cup of boiling water, and after cutting a piece from the cap soak it in the boiling water, rub and squeeze it until the water was discolored in proportion and then give the liquid decoction to the patient to drink, forcing it down his throat. The cure was invariably effective. Such is the story, but whether our readers will believe it is quite another question.

The same narrator tells of a friend who cured himself by particularly intrepid means. He says: "I have heard of a fellow who was bitten in the left arm by a very poisonous snake in Natal named a mamba while out shooting near Pietermaritzburg. He was quite alone, not a house within two miles of him where he could obtain medical treatment or any assistance whatever. He knew that he had but a short while to live unless he could devise some means of ridding himself of the poison. What do you suppose he did? With his knife he hacked and slashed the wound until it bled freely. He next rubbed some gunpowder into the afflicted place and set a light to it. He literally blew the poisoned flesh out of his arm. It saved his life, but the bone of the arm is exposed and blackened by the gunpowder to this day. I fancy that fellow must have had a drop of Spartan blood in his veins." At the Exposition in Atlanta each Southern State is represented by the portrait of some celebrated beauty from among its women. The Constitution has the following to say in reference to the representative from this State:

Miss Frances Wheat Shober, North Carolina's representative, is rather of the Lady Clara Vere de Vere type, stately, tall and regal, carrying herself as "the daughter of a thousand earls." She is a finished woman of the world, has seen much of society in Philadelphia and the South, and comes from one of the proud families of ante-bellum days. Leo Wheat, the noted pianist, is her uncle. Her home is in Salisbury, where her family has long been celebrated for the beauty of its women. In the painting Miss Shober is shown reclining in a Louis Quinze chair of white and gold, gowned in most exquisite taste. The bodice and skirt of this costume are of white silk, showing a tiny stripe of pale blue satin. The sleeves are of turquoise blue velvet, covered with Mecklin lace. Ropes of fine pearls are wound around her shapely throat, and in one white gloved hand she holds a loose cluster of lilies of the valley. Her wavy chestnut hair is parted and surmounted by a fleur de lis of tortoise shell and her large gray eyes have a fixed and rather dreamy look from under her dark-arched brows.
