ONLY A LITTLE FLOWER.

BY L. L.

"Good morning Jack, how are you feeling today? a little easier? Well, that is good. You will be all right bye and bye. I have only a rosebud and a geranium for you this morning. I could not make the flowers bloom."

"Oh! Miss Ellen, you are so kind, so good", and the poor fellow's eyes filled with tears that ran down his storm beaten face, which was now almost pale, made so by suffering and long confinement, and his voice choked so he could not say more for some minutes. Do you wonder why we find a lovely young lady in the chairity ward of an hospital talking with a poor sailor, and trying to make the dull days so filled with pain a little brighter? I will tell you, Ellen Hope was a lively, attractive girl about twenty years old. She was rich and popular. Her time after leaving college had all been well occupied with having a good time, not that she was especially thoughtless, but never having seen poverty or suffering she as others never thought about it. One Fall she was visiting Baltimore, and her friends there belonged to a flower mission and Ellen would at times go with them to the Hospital to carry flowers to the patients. She became very enthusiastic about the work so when she came home, she determined to organize a flower mission, thinking then only of the sweet idea of giving flowers to the sick, but how often in helping others we get so much more than we give. One step in the right leads to paths filled with richest treasures, unthought of by those who pass by, as one step downwards leads to depths of wickedness to the pure and innocent.

Ellen's plan was laughed at by some and called a passing fad. There are some people who never do any good themselves, but are very energetic in trying to keep others from accomplishing anything. We will pass them by and speak of the others who entered heartily with Ellen, glad to have something to do. There are many who would like to do good, but just do not know how to begin. A little band was formed numbering twelve. They met once a week and carried flowers to the poor who otherwise would never see any of the beauties of nature telling in such beautiful language of our father's love to them.

We who have so much to enjoy and make us happy can hardly understand what a flower or a kind word means to the very needy, and we will never know unless we go to them and make them feel that we care for and sympathize with them.

Ellen had been visiting regularly, oftentimes stopping to talk, and always leaving flowers. She had taken especial notice of a young man in the sailors ward and though he was rough and coarse looking, his eyes were bright and intelligent and when she would leave him flowers, he would thank her and there was such a wistful look as if he wanted to say more. One day Ellen asked him his name and where he was from, he told her and seemed to appreciate her talking to him, but he was very seriously injured and could not talk much at a time but this day he was to tell her of his life. We will listen to them.

"Now Jack don't think about thanking me. I am glad to come to see you, are you able to talk today? if not I will come again. "Oh, yes, I must talk or it will be too late, my time is almost up, I can feel it." "You are blue Jack; when the spring comes, and the roses bloom, you will be much better, this weather is bad for the sick." "It is not the weather, Miss Ellen, I feel it here, "touching his heart." "Try not to think about your sickness, but tell me of your life." "I hate to tell one so good as you, of my sinful, wicked life. I am not fit even to touch your garment, but you sang to me that 'Christ receiveth sinful men,' then even I can be received, it is too good to be true. I stayed awake nearly all night thinking about it, and now all is changed. My father was a poor man, who drank. I had as good a mother as ever a fellow had, poor mother, what a hard time she had, she loved your Christ and would try to talk to me about Him, but what cared I for Him or anything else good, I, hungry and ragged and cold. My father would come home drunk and abuse us, taking all for himself, mother and I would hide away in some corner to keep from being hurt, I often thought that if I were a man I would kill him for making mother suffer, but she never complained, she was very weak and sickly. One day I went home and found her very ill, she said she was going to die, she told me to be a good boy, and never drink, and God would take care of me. I cried and said I would hate God if he took her from me. She could not talk much, but would press my hand. Oh, how it all comes back to me now, how I thank God for taking her to heaven. She died that night and I was left alone, worse than fatherless. In a few days I heard of a ship going to Europe, and wanted some boys to go. I was young, but strong, I asked to be taken, and was accepted. You have heard of a sailor's life, but you don't know half the hardships and the wickedness. I will not tell you, but you said Christ receiveth sinful men, do you think I am too wicked, Miss Ellen?" "No, Jack, Christ loves you but you must not talk more today, you are tired, and the blood is coming from your mouth." "Miss Ellen, wait, let me talk. I may die in the night as mother did. Read to me that Jesus said, he that cometh —" he could say no more for he was having another hemorrhage. Ellen stayed with him and read while he was quiet, presently he said, "Christ receiveth sinful men." A few moments more and he was with the Christ who come to seek and save those who were lost. Ellen tenderly fixed the rosebud in his hand and left him to others. Those who looked at him said poor fellow, he is dead, he had a hard time of it. Was it death? Yes to sin and suffering, but to the soul a new life had begun, which death is only the gate through which we must pass. If he could now speak to us, I am sure we would hear him say, "O death where is thy sting? O grave where is thy victory."

The Golf Dialect.

A drive that went like a rocket high in the air and far, a brassie approach and two easy puts gave MacDonald the hole in four. He tapped his ball in the drive for the second hole, but it luckily bounded over the bunker. His brassie shot lacked good direction, but an ideal iron approach shot landed the ball dead on the green, and he holed out in four. Sands also topped his drive, but he had the poor luck to go straight into the bunker. He was out in two, the first attempt being a failure. An approach shot that brought him over and into the whins followed, and it took eight to make the hole. —Report of a Game.

President Wright, colored, of the Georgia State Agricultural college has this anecdote told of him: At the close of the war General Harris addressed the pupils of a negro school in Atlanta. "What shall I tell them in the north when I go back?" he said. A negro boy sitting in the front row jumped to his feet and cried, "Tell them we are rising." That boy is now President Wright.

Quill Pens.

Quill pens are still used by some old gentlemen who have always been accustomed to use them. They are used by some attorneys and bank officials in writing signatures. They appear as stage properties in plays in which the action is laid prior to the introduction of steel pens, and nowadays some ladies write with quill pens. —New York Sun.

THE MESSAGE.

President Cleveland's message to Congress is a long document and deals very largely and plainly with the financial question. His utterances are explicit and pointed. Many of them the people will applaud, some of them they will not approve. Mr. Cleveland gives his views and does not straddle any question. One can but admire the manhood he has to express himself clearly upon every issue. We will publish from day to day some extracts from the message bearing upon the questions in which our people are most interested. To-day we give his introductory remarks upon the financial question and what he says about the retirement of greenbacks:

THE FINANCIAL QUESTION.

The compulsory purchase and coinage of silver by the government, unchecked and unregulated by business conditions and heedless of our currency needs, which for more than fifteen years diluted our circulating medium, undermined confidence abroad in our financial ability, and at last culminated in distress and panic at home, has been recently stopped by the repeal of the laws which forced this reckless scheme upon the country. The things thus accomplished, notwithstanding their extreme importance and beneficent effects, fall far short of curing the monetary evils from which we suffer as a result of long indulgence in ill advised financial experiments.

The currency denominated United States notes and commonly known as greenbacks was issued in large volume during the late civil war, and was intended originally to meet the exigencies of that period. It will be seen by a reference to the debates in Congress at the time the laws were passed authorizing the issue of these notes that their advocates declared they were intended for only temporary use and to meet the emergency of war. In most all of the laws relating to them some provision was made contemplating their voluntary or compulsory retirement. A large quantity of them, however, were kept on foot and mingled with the currency of the country, so that at the close of the year 1874 they amounted to $381,999,073.

RETIREMENT OF GREENBACKS.

Immediately after that date, and in January, 1875, a law was passed providing for the resumption of specie payments, by which the Secretary of the Treasury was required, whenever additional circulation was issued to national banks, to retire United States notes equal in amount to 80 per cent, of such additional national bank circulation until such notes were reduced to $300,000,000. This law further provided that on and after the 1st day of January, 1879, the United States notes then outstanding should be redeemed in coin, and in order to provide and prepare for such redemption the Secretary of the Treasury was authorized not only to use any surplus revenues of the Government, but to issue bonds of the United States and dispose of them for coin and to use the proceeds for the purposes contemplated by the State. In May, 1878, and before the date thus appointed for the redemption and retirement of these notes another statute was passed forbidding their further cancellation and retirement. Some of them had, however, been previously redeemed and cancelled upon the issue of additional national bank circulation as permitted by the law of 1875, so that the amount outstanding at the time of the passage of the act forbidding their further retirement was $346,681,016. The law of 1878 did not stop at distinct prohibition, but contained, in addition, the following express provision: "And when any of said notes may be redeemed or received into the Treasury, under any law, from any source whatever, and shall belong to the United States, they shall not be retired, cancelled or destroyed, but they shall be re-issued and paid out again and kept in circulation."

This was the condition of affairs on the 1st day of January, 1879, which had been fixed upon four years before as the date for entering upon the redemption and retirement of all these notes, and for which such abundant means had been provided.

The government was put in the anomalous situation of owing to the holders of its notes, debts payable in gold on demand, which could neither be retired by receiving such notes in discharge of obligations due the government, nor cancelled by actual payments in gold. It was forced to redeem them without redemption and to pay without acquittance.

Kit Carson's Sister.

We have all heard of Kit Carson, the famous hunter and scout, whose stirring adventures in the first half of the century have furnished foundations for no end of border tales. But perhaps few persons know that the sister of the redoubtable Kit still survives in the person of Mrs. Mary Carson Ruby, who resides at Warrensburg, Mo. She was born on May 25, 1814, in Cooper's Fort, Howard county, Mo., her father, Walter Lindsay Carson, having moved there a short time before from Madison county, Ky.

Mrs. Ruby's earliest recollections of home picture a log cabin strongly barricaded to protect it from predatory bands of Indians. One of the stories she tells her grandchildren is how their granduncle Kit came to be a great hunter and scout. He was such a bright boy that it was intended to make a lawyer of him, but this plan was frustrated by the early tragic death of his father. Poor Kit was then apprenticed to a tanner. He objected to this heartily, and begged to accompany his brothers to the far west. But, as he was only 15, they refused to take him.

Kit had a will of his own, however, and after they had started he got hold of a mule and caught up with them at Independence, Mo. That settled it, and Kit went west. The brothers did not return for 15 years, and Mrs. Ruby saw Kit only twice after the day he galloped off on his mule. Long after, when his name had become a household word throughout the fast growing west, he was called to Washington in connection with important business concerning our government and that of Mexico. When it was concluded, he returned to his old home, where he died a few days later.—Denver Field and Farm.

An Amateur Postmaster.

A member of the government was visiting the other day at a hall in the neighborhood of Doncaster. Having a pretty wide correspondence and there not being any postal delivery in the village, the lady at the hall took a bundle of letters to the church on the Sunday evening and gave them to the churchwarden, thinking he would be able to get them sent to the Doncaster post-office.

He, not catching what she had said about them, came to the conclusion that they were something for him to distribute in the church. The lady took her seat at the organ. Then the churchwarden commenced to take them from pew to pew as far as they would go.

One young person, looking at hers, said to him that it was a stamped letter and did not belong to her. He said: "Hold thee noise and put it in thee pocket and read it when thee gets home. There's something in it that will do thee good."—Pearson's Weekly.

A QUEER PROPOSAL.

It Was Made on the Fly, but It Caught the Girl.

An aristocratic young lady of Magdeburg, Germany, had spent some time at the country seat of her uncle, and a young cavalier from Berlin had been paying much attention to her. Everybody thought it would be a good match for both, and affairs went on swimmingly, until the day drew near when the young lady was to return home. The nearer the day came the more disappointed were the young miss and her mother at the failure of the young man to ask the all important question. Finally they left their relative's house in great dismay, and just before leaving the young lady remarked to her uncle that it probably was as well for both, as her mother had not much use for such a "chicken hearted son-in-law." They left on the train on the narrow gauge railroad connecting the valley with the nearest town.

After they had gone the young man questioned the uncle why the young lady had gone away so angry and hardly noticed him when bidding goodbye. The uncle, a blunt ex-soldier, repeated the remark made by his niece when leaving to the young man, who was touched to the quick by the insinuation of cowardice contained therein. He was very much in love with the lady and had abstained from broaching the subject on account of his not considering it proper to propose anywhere but at the young lady's home, which he intended visiting before long.

This remark, however, roused his sense of honor, and, without saying another word, he mounted his horse, which happened to stand ready for an outing, and galloped after the train, which had gone a quarter of an hour before. Owing to benign Providence and the management of the country railroad he caught the train before it had reached the next station—Cracow. He spied the young lady at the window of a first class compartment, and, riding up to the train before it came to a full stop, almost shouted breathlessly: "My dear Miss —, I ask for your hand. Yes or no?" In the Station Cracow, just as the train arrived, a "Yes" was joyfully given by the young miss and tearfully approved by her mamma.—Exchange.

Unsafe Criticism.

It is not quite safe to criticize Americans in the "higher circles" of British society, unless the critic has studied thoroughly the pedigree of those whom he addresses, so many American girls nowadays are becoming a part of the "effete" aristocracy of the old world.

Not long ago at a reception given in Rome at the British embassy, an Italian baron, who was presented to the Duchess of Manchester, sighed deeply, as with relief, and said to her:

"Ah! How glad I am to get from those Americans there! We come across them everywhere, don't we, duchess? You can't imagine how happy I am to converse with you; there is such a contrast between the manners of English and American women!"

The duchess let him go on as long as he liked in this way, and then said, with a gracious smile:

"Perhaps you are right, baron, but being myself an American I am, no doubt, incapable of judging."

The baron wished that the floor would swallow him up and reflected that he should have known, as every one else did, that the Duchess of Manchester was a New Yorker.—San Francisco Post.

A Shrewd Fruit Dealer.

An ingenious device for attracting custom was that of a fruiterer in a midland town. Instead of ordinary plate glass a large number of rough magnifying glasses formed the window. Seen through one of these panes, an orange looked as large as a pumpkin, and cherries as large as apples. A great disadvantage attaching to this novelty was the fact that at the distance of a few yards from the window it was quite impossible to see into the shop. Everybody knows that you must hold a magnifying glass very close to the eyes to see anything through it. Nevertheless, for some time, at all events, the enterprising shopkeeper did a splendid trade.—Liverpool Mercury.

Boston's Famed Brown Bread.

For one large loaf of bread use three pints of sifted cornmeal, three pints of rye flour, one cup of good hop yeast and one cup of molasses. Mix very soft with warm water, pour the mixture into a round pudding tin and allow it to stand until light. Bake with a steady fire for three hours.—Ladies' Home Journal

CAPTAIN KIDD'S HOUSE.
Still Standing Near Allenwood, N. J., and an Object of Interest.

Between the quaint little hamlet of Allenwood, N. J., and the village of Sea Girt, made famous through the annual encampment of the New Jersey state militia, stands an old fashioned shingle house which antedates the recollection of even the oldest resident and has become the show place of the country. Not only does the great age of the old house make it interesting to visitors, but also the story that the body of the late lamented Captain Kidd, whose treasure is buried somewhere along the coast and has been searched for from Florida to Maine, lies uneasy in its grave and makes periodical visits to the house once occupied by that wealthy but somewhat erratic gentleman.

The house is a two story structure, conspicuous chiefly for the fact that instead of having only a shingle roof, as was customary in the days when the house was built, it is constructed altogether of shingles and presents the appearance of having been built with the idea to repel an attack should any such emergency occur. The old men of Allenwood say that the house was built years before Washington assumed the office of president of the United States, and that one of the early settlers in that part of the country, Morris by name, cut each and every shingle by hand and with only the assistance given by a strong pocket knife.

The house is at the junction of three roads, one leading to Allen-wood, one to Sea Girt and one to Brielle, another small town four miles away. A mile or two from the house the Manasquan river flows steadily on its tortuous route to mother ocean, and several times in the memory of the present inhabitants the banks of the river have been searched for relics of Captain Kidd, while many persons have gained permission from the farmers and armed with charts and maps have dug for miles around for the missing buried treasure. Even now a party is hard at work on the Toms river, but ten miles from the house, diligently working on the old claim and believing that each new day will see discoveries which will make work for the treasure hunters unnecessary in the future. And still the glittering prospect is held as a bait before their eyes, and when the patience of one party of searchers gives out another is ready and waiting to take up the pick and shovel and keep up the good work.

The old Morris house, as it is still called, is now on the Tilton farm, old Grandfather Tilton having purchased the farm from the Morris many years ago. The farmhouse of the Tilton family is but a stone's throw from the old house, which is tenanted by several of the farm helpers during the busy season. The room in which it is alleged that Kidd's ghost walks is at the top of the house, and it is said that when traveling through that part of the country he would always stop at the Morris house, where he was sure of a welcome and a bed. I could find nobody during a recent visit to that part of Monmouth county who would confess to having seen the ghost, but it is a fable which has been handed down from father to son that on stated occasions he would be heard moving about in his room until early in the morning, as he was wont to do in the early days of the settling of New Jersey when visiting at the old house.

The house was built with but few windows, and although several have been added recently there are only eight, and two doors on the front, while the sides have one each. Captain Kidd's room was under the eaves of the roof, and only one window furnished him with light and air when he slept in it. The window opened out on the rear of the house, and it is said that even now on stormy nights the captain's head is often thrust out, as though surveying the heavens and figuring upon the kind of weather a day would bring forth.—New York Herald.

Chinese and English.

Some years ago in Worcester, Mass., says The Gazette of that city, when Chinese laundries were a new thing, a man went to a Chinese laundry with some shirts, and thinking that he could only be understood in "pidgin" English opened the conversation as follows: "Hello, John! You washee washee this shirt. You makee all lites. Me payee you, eh?"
To which the Chinese laundry-man replied as follows: "Oh, yes; I will wash it. On what day would you like it back?"

True Bills Against Him.

The grand jury of Beaufort county Superior Court have found true bills against the four men arrested for the murder of J. B. Bonner, at Arrora. The Board of County Commissioners will ask the Governor for a special term of court in January to try them.

Moved Too Slow.

While a case was being started on trial this morning, two of the counsel on opposite sides began holding a little caucus to themselves. Judge McIver spoke to them to go ahead with their case, when one of the attorneys remarked "We are just conferring a little together to enable us to expedite matters in the case." "All right," replied his Honor, "I will agree to anything that will expedite matters."

Civil Trials are Tedious.

Matters in Court are progressing slowly, as they usually do when civil trials are in progress. At the noon recess today they had just started the last case for the second day on the calendar. There is not much interest around the court room and few people are there outside of those connected with the cases. An officer remarked to us this morning that he did not believe a two years' continuous term of civil court would clear up the docket in Pitt county.

A Look Ahead.

A gentleman said to the REFLECTOR this morning, "I want to make a prediction and you can mark it down: By the close of the year 1900 you will see Dickerson avenue, Ninth street and Evans street paved; a good system of water works and sewerage will be in operation, and Greenville will have a population of not less than 5,000."

To all of which we add a hearty amen! with the further prediction that in the meantime there will be some half dozen factories established here.

IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Matters of Interest Over the State.

Sheriff W. J. Hardison, of Martin county, is the first to make full settlement of State taxes for 1895, paying in $5,500.

Next week is the time for the special term of Jones county court to meet at Trenton for the trial of the Beaufort insurance cases.

Winston sold 3,043,896 pounds of leaf tobacco during November, an increase of 1,880,389 pounds over the same month last year.

Gov. Carr has issued an order for a special term of Greene court, December 30th, for the trial of civil cases, Judge Graham to preside. The election cases, over the offices of sheriff and clerk of court, will be tried.

The Danbury Reporter says the wife of Lenn Bennett, of Stokes, was buried last Wednesday week and the Sunday night following he was married to Miss Eliza Bennett. It was a runaway affair. The marriage ceremony was performed by a squire in a mountain path under the moonlight. The girl's father-cursed.

THE PLANT ASSURED.

Greenville Will Have Electric Lights.

Greenville takes another step forward, and the establishment of an electric light plant is now a certainty. S. C. Hamilton, manager of the Greenville Lumber Co., went before the Board of Town Councilmen at their meeting Wednesday night, and submitted the proposition to put in a plant if the town would agree to rent lights for the street. The Councilmen accepted the proposition and appointed a committee to draw up the necessary contract. The Company will go ahead and put in the plant.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The President has nominated Hon. Rufus N. Peckham, of New York, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

John H. Royster, a native of this State, was killed in Atlanta Tuesday. A freight train stopped at the street crossing over which Royster wanted to pass, and Royster growing impatient started to crawl under one of the cars. The train moved while he was under the car and his body was cut in two. The horrible accident was witnessed by several hundred people.

HER WEDDING INVITATION.

It came today, and I must confess. That it brought a sweet emotion As I thought of the time when my happiness Was measured by her devotion.

'Twas the honest love of a pure, strong boy, With plans for our future union, And the troubles of life, with their base alloy, Never entered our sweet communion.

But the broadening tide of my life swept on In a full and joyous measure, And I found that the boyish love had gone With many a worthy pleasure.

Many years have passed since I vowed that love In my frank, impulsive fashion, And my mind has swept to a plane above My most ardent dream or passion.

But I think of those dear old southern days When my heart was young and tender, And that little girl, with her dainty ways, Was the shrine of my love's surrender. —Edmond Picton in Detroit Free Press.

Sulphur Showers.

In spring, and especially in early spring, it frequently happens that after a shower the edge of every pool of water in the streets and along the sidewalks will be bordered by a rim of pale yellow color. As the water evaporates this ring remains as a fine, powdery mass, so much resembling sulphur as to have given rise to the popular name of sulphur showers. This so called sulphur is, of course, not really sulphur, but when examined under the microscope is found to be made up of a mass of the yellowish pollen grains of pine trees. A writer in Popular Science News gives an interesting description of this pollen of the pine.

Instead of consisting of a single cell, as do most pollen grains, that of the pine consists of three cells, the two larger end ones being filled with air and the other containing the ordinary fertilizing principle. The two air containing cells are larger than the other and act as balloons to buoy it up in the air.

In pines and allied trees fertilization of the cones, by which they are enabled to set and develop seeds, is accomplished by the wind. That is, the pollen is produced in immense quantities and is then transported through the air to the cones, which are often on separate, widely distant trees. Thus it often happens that the pollen gets up in the higher currents of the air, is carried for long distances and is only brought down to the earth by the rain, producing the so called shower of sulphur.

A shower of this kind occurred in Washington in March, 1886, and was sufficient in amount to be very noticeable. By careful investigation it was determined that no pine trees could possibly be in flower nearer than Alabama, Georgia and the Carolinas. It was recalled that the rain had been preceded by a strong wind from the south, which had borne the pollen for hundreds of miles and precipitated or deposited it during the rainstorm.
