TO A SOUTHERN GIRL.

Her eyes,
Would match the Southern skies
When Southern skies were bluest;
Her heart
Will always take its part
When Southern hearts are truest
Bright pearls,
The gems of Southern girls,
Her winning smile discloses,
Her cheeks
When admiration speaks
Wear only Southern roses.
Her voice,
By nature and by choice,
E'en those who know her slightest
Will find
As soft as Southern wind
When Southern winds are lightest.
Her laugh,
Is light as wine or chaff,
Breaks clear at witty sallies,
As brooks
Run bubbling through the nooks
Of all her Southern valleys.
Such youth,
With all its charms forsooth—
Alas, too well I know it—
Will claim
A song of love and fame
Sung by some Southern poet,
But she
In some future years may be
These verses will discover,
Sometime
May read this little rhyme
Sung by a northern lover.

VANCE DAY IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The following letter received by the editor of the REFLECTOR, explains itself. The suggestion is a good one and we hope the schools of Pitt county will respond.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C., Dec. 3rd, '95.

DEAR SIR.—At the request of Mrs. Neill W. Ray, of this city, the lady who has given such an impetus to the Vance Monument movement by her charming description of his home life in the recently published Women's edition of the Observer, and, by her example in collecting and forwarding to Mr. Battle a considerable sum of money as a first offering from this community—I wrote to the teachers of the various towns of the State asking them to set apart the second Tuesday in December (Dec. 10th.) as a day for contribution from their pupils to that patriotic work. Her suggestion was that any sums, however small, be received, so long as each child or student had the privilege of contributing something. In response, the movement is found to have met with such approbation and to have gathered such force, that I venture to adopt the suggestion of Superintendent Logan D. Howell, of the Raleigh Schools, that the day above mentioned be "advertized as Vance Day" and that "it be appropriately celebrated in Schools." "This" continues Professor Howell "would help the collection."
E. J. HALE.

What it Costs to Keep a Cow.

Mrs. S. C. Jones, of South Mt. Airy, has furnished the Mt. Airy News with a statement of the actual expense and profit of keeping a cow for one year. For the year beginning November 1st, 1894, and ending October 31st, Mrs. Jones kept an itemized statement of the actual expense incurred in keeping her cow, and it was as follows: Paid out for chops, $29.25; for ruffness, $13; for pasturage, $9.75; total $52. She realized from the sale of milk and butter $61.80, after having supplied her table for an average of 7 persons for the year with milk and butter. She made 239 pounds of butter after having sold one quart of milk every day for the year.

The Washington Gazette says Geo. Credle, of Hyde county, has purchased the Ocracoke Hotel property and will conduct the hotel next season. He can count on a good Greenville delegation.

POINTS OF WISDOM.

Some hens will do a dime's worth of cackling over a cent's worth of egg.

A razor-back hog is a bad beast to ride to dinner on.

A little salt on the farm helps to put salt in the dish.

Don't let the noon hour eat up the other ten.

A small manure heap makes a small corn crib.

Digging six inches deeper on the old farm is better than buying a new one.

An inch of sunshine is worth an ell of shade.

The gentle dew blesses; while the cyclone distresses.

Grass and geese, sheep and swine, corn and kine, make farming fine.

Keep a cat for the rat, and the pig may get fat.

Double the manure pile and you may double the crop. It is better than buying a new farm.

One fat cow is worth a poor coach and scrubby six.

A mortgage on the farm is harder to dig out than a sod of wire grass.

Elbow-grease and self-denial will make a farmer rich on trial.

Protect the birds and the birds will protect the crops.

By flowing streams and hills at hand plant vines and trees to adorn the land.

A dog is more noisy than a pig, and is not fit to eat when he is fat.

"All flesh is grass," says Holy Writ; then grass for flesh is surely fit.

Improve the farm that is under you, and you will soon have something to stand upon.

If you work yourself those around you will work.

A farmer who does not see the sun rise has need for an alarm clock.

No need to buy a new farm so long as you can make the old one better.

Bee Culture at the Experiment Station.

The Experiment Station has recently completed arrangements for carrying on some work in Bee Culture, both to disseminate information as to the best methods to follow in bee-keeping, as well as to conduct tests to determine what plans should be adopted in North Carolina to make this particular industry as profitable as possible. In many sections of the State bee culture now yields handsome returns when carefully managed. With proper use of the improved methods of late years this result might be largely increased. It will be the purpose of the Station to endeavor to aid in the extension of the industry, and with the possible improvement of the culture where it has now found a foothold. For this purpose the co-operation of two experienced bee-keepers has been secured, Dr. J. W. Hunter and Mr. W. H. Hall, both of Forsythe county. It is expected that results interesting to bee-keepers will be reached during the coming season. In the meantime items of timely interest will be distributed upon the various phases of the subject.

As the Station desires to enter into correspondence with every bee-keeper now in North Carolina, each one is cordially requested to send his name and address to Dr. H. B. Battle, Director, Raleigh, N. C. Any items as to the stocks, hives, etc., on hand, and the success or failure heretofore met with, will be gladly received. Doubtless the correspondence will be mutually helpful.

THE MESSAGE.

Following up our extracts of yesterday taken from the President's message, we give today his views on the silver question.

FREE COINAGE OF SILVER.

It is neither unfair or unjust to charge a large share of our present financial perplexities and dangers to the operation of the laws of 1878 and 1890, compelling the purchase of silver by the government, which not only furnished a new treasury obligation upon which its gold could be withdrawn, but so increased the fear of an overwhelming flood of silver and afforded descent to silver payments that even the repeal of these laws did not entirely cure the evils of their existence.

While I have endeavored to make a plain statement of the disordered condition of our currency and the present dangers menacing our prosperity, and to suggest a way which leads to a safer financial system, I have constantly had in mind the fact that many of my countrymen, whose sincerity I do not doubt, insist that the cure for the ills now threatening us may be found in the single and simple remedy of the free coinage of silver. They contend that our mints shall be at once thrown open to the free, unlimited and independent coinage of both gold and silver dollars of full legal tender quality, regardless of the action of any other governments, and in full view of the fact that the ratio between the metals which they suggest calls for 100 cents worth of gold in the gold dollar at the present standard, and only fifty cents in intrinsic value worth of silver in the silver dollar. Were there infinitely stronger reasons than can be adduced for hoping that such action would secure for us a bi-metallic currency moving on our lines of parity, an experiment so novel and hazardous as that proposed might well stagger those who believe that stability is an imperative condition of sound money.

No government, no human contrivance or act of legislation has ever been able to hold the two metals together in free coinage at a ratio appreciably different from that which is established in the markets of the world.

Those who believe that our independent free coinage of silver, at an artificial ratio with gold of 16 to 1, would restore the parity between the metals, and consequently between the coins, oppose an unsupported and improbable theory to the general belief and practice of other nations, and to the teaching of the wisest statesmen and economists of the world, both in the past and present, and what is far more conclusive, they run counter to our own actual experiences.

Twice in our early history our law makers, in attempting to establish a bi-metallic currency, undertook free coinage upon a ratio which accidentally varied from the actual relative values of the two metals not more than three per cent. In both cases notwithstanding greater difficulties and cost of transportation than now exist, the coin whose intrinsic worth was under-valued in the ratio gradually and surely disappeared from our circulation and went to other countries, where their real value was better recognized. Acts of Congress were impotent to create equality where natural causes decreed; even a slight inequality. Twice in our recent history we have signally failed to raise by legislation the value of silver. Under an act of Congress, passed in 1878, the government was required for more than twelve years to expend annually at least $24,000,000 in the purchase of silver bullion for coinage. The act of July 14, 1890, in a still holder effort, increased the amount of silver the government was compelled to purchase, and forced it to become the buyer annually of 54,000,000 ounces, or practically the entire product of our mines. Under both laws silver rapidly and steadily declined in value. The prophecy and the expressed hope and expectation of those in Congress who led in the passage of the last mentioned act, that it would re-establish and maintain the former parity between the two metals, are still fresh in our memory.

Hints to Maidens.

A girl cannot expect a man to be made on purpose for her.

A girl who cherishes an ideal man that is half a woman courts certain unhappiness.

The happiest marriages are those which develop and intensify the mental distinctions due to sex—not efface them.

The "friendship of chums" can never be arrived at by the man trying to become a woman, or by the woman trying to become a man.

Every feminine gift has its masculine counterpart; and they are never the same. Therefore, a girl should look for unlikeness, not likeness.

A wife's duties depend largely on the income. If a girl marries on a small income, she must not mind having to do some of the household work.

Both Wondered.

They were a couple of "new women"—that is to say, they rode bicycles and believed in a woman's privilege to dress as she pleased and in her right to vote. They were traveling alone and rejoiced in doing so. From time to time, indeed, they congratulated themselves on their freedom and independence and the fact that there were no men around to bother them. One day one of them had her pocket picked. It is not necessary to dilate upon the harrowing details of the affair. Suffice to say that the thief was the porter of the car, and the loss was largely due to the woman's carelessness. This, too, although there were no men around to bother them. After much planning what to do, and after much "doing" of a futile and ineffective sort, the two women sat together for some time in silence. They had plenty of other money with them. It wasn't that that worried them—it was their impotence to bring the thief to justice or to get anybody to do anything at all adequate to the occasion. Finally one of the women observed:

"Oh, dear!"

"What is it?" asked the other woman.

Then the first woman said:

"I was just—just wondering, you know, what a man would do under these circumstances."

The other woman said:

"That's just what I was wondering too."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

City Life and Nerves.

Dr. Burt J. Maycock, in a paper on "Some of the Influences of City Life on the Nervous System," lays great stress on the well-known fact that the average American treats himself outrageously. The best proof of this is the immense sale in every large city of so-called nerve tonics; the trade done in the wines of cocoa and kola and the preparations of phosphorus is almost incredible. This is all wrong. A tired and nervous man does not want hypnotics, but fresh air and exercise according to his strength. In this respect the English are wiser than we are. They keep up their habit of physical exercise until far into old age, and paresis is comparatively little known in England. Dr. Maycock says that American men will have to turn over a new leaf and draw a sensible balance between work and play.

GETTING READY FOR LAUNCH.

The First Preparations Are Made When the Keel Blocks Are Laid.

It has often been said that man begins to die the moment that he begins to live. It might also be said that a ship begins to be launched the moment she begins to be built. The first thing in the actual construction is to arrange the keel blocks on which the ship is to rest while she is building. They must be placed at certain distances apart, and each must be a little higher than its neighbor nearer the water. These blocks are usually of the stoutest oak and are placed from two to three feet apart. They must have a regular inclination, or the ship cannot be launched. In vessels like the St. Louis the incline is about half an inch in height to a foot in length. In smaller vessels it is often more than one inch to the foot. Larger vessels have so much weight that a sharp incline is not as necessary as with smaller ones. The keel of the ship is laid on these blocks, and as fast as the sides of the vessel are built up great props are placed against them to make sure that by no accident will the vessel topple over.

At length the hull of the ship is completed. Then it is that the launching apparatus is prepared. This consists of two parts, one that remains fixed on the ground and one that glides into the water with the ship. The part that goes into the water is the cradle. It is that part in which the hull of the vessel rests snugly, and probably that is why it is called a cradle. When the time comes for the launch, a long row of blocks is built under each side of the ship at an equal distance from the keel blocks and of the same inclination. On these blocks rest first the stationary "ways." These consist of broad planks of oak from 3 to 4 feet wide, capable of sustaining a weight of from 2 to 2½ tons to the square foot. On top of these ways are the "sliding ways," of nearly the same breadth, and between the two the tallow is placed.

A narrow cleat runs along the edge of the stationary ways so that the sliding ways shall not slip off as they carry the ship along. Above the sliding ways is what is called the "packing." This consists of pieces of timber packed close against the curving sides of the vessel to hold it firm to the sliding ways beneath. The curves in the hull vary so much that it would be impossible to fit the sliding ways to them, and so, by means of packing, the ship is fitted to the ways instead. The packing and the sliding ways constitute the cradle, and it is fastened to the ship by stout ropes. Along its length, at intervals of about 18 inches, are big wedges, the points of which are inserted between the sliding ways and the packing. A rope about the thickness of a clothesline runs from wedge to wedge, so that none may be lost when they float into the water.

We are now ready for the launch. Tallow to the thickness of about an inch has been spread between the ways as they were put in position, nearly 60 barrels being necessary for a ship like the St. Louis. The cradle sets snugly against the ship's bottom. The vessel, however, is still resting on the keel blocks. The task now is to transfer the ship from these keel blocks to the launching supports and to take away the keel blocks. Then, when the weight of the ship rests on the launching ways alone, all that is necessary is to saw away the "sole piece" at the bow, where the stationary and sliding ways are fastened together, and the ship by her own weight will probably slide into the water. If she needs a start, several "jacks" using hydraulic power are ready beneath the keel to lift her a trifle and give her a push.—Launching a Great Vessel, by Franklin Matthews.

Roulette in Russian Drawing Rooms.

To the Grand Duchess Vladimir is said to belong the blame for having introduced roulette as an ordinary form of drawing room entertainment on the banks of the Neva. Russians are born gamblers. But mere cards did not satisfy the cravings of this Mecklenburg princess, whose religious convictions, strange to relate, are so strong that alone of all the foreign wives of Russian grand dukes she has refused to abandon her Lutheran faith for the orthodox church. Nothing but roulette would please her, and as she goes out a great deal in society at St. Petersburg, and as it became known that roulette was indispensable for her enjoyment, tables were soon organized in all the salons that she frequented.—Westminster Gazette.

TWO ABLE KICKERS.

One Was a Hoolier and the Other a Jack-ass, and the Man Won.

In the days of the San Gabriel canyon mining boom in the seventies a large boned and gigantic Indian was known to his rough but kindly associates as Kicking Tom. He had won the nickname by reason of the terrific force with which he could launch his great sinewy foot against an opposing object. One day a miner brought into camp a Mexican burro, which soon obtained a wide celebrity as a vicious animal, who, when excited, would attack man or beast with desperate fury. Several mountain ponies had been kicked to death by him and more than one man had nearly lost his life by the savage heels of the brute. So exciting had become the record of the jack's achievements that they became the subject of universal conversation and inquiry among the miners. Sitting in their cabins they spun wonderful tales of what he had done and was capable of doing.

"He is the liveliest kicker going," said one.

"You are right, old man. That beast can kick the hair off a man's head without touching the skin," replied one of his companions.

That was touching Tom in a tender place, and, after a moment's reflection, he spoke up with the remark:

"He can't outkick me." The observation was received with amazed silence.

"Lord, Tom! Why, he'd make mince meat of you in a minute."

"Would he?" replied the athletic Indian. "Then he can have the chance. I'm ready to kick for $100, and may the best man win."

"Or the best jack," interposed a companion.

"I mean what I say, old man, so don't be too spry with your tongue." And Tom's brow lowered in gathering anger. His friend apologized for the jest, and the crowd dispersed.

The next day the rumor went wild through the camp that Tom was willing to kick the burro for a wager. In the dusk of the evening the miners gathered in from their work and discussed the subject in all its bearings. Opinion as to the match was about evenly divided. If anything, Tom was the favorite. Under these circumstances a mill for $100 a side was easily arranged, between the beast and the man, and it was decided that the conflict should come off next Sunday afternoon.

Promptly at the appointed hour every inhabitant of the canyon and the villages that have since grown into Pomona and Pasadena was assembled in a little level spot just outside the limits of the camp. The preliminaries were quickly arranged, and the fight began. The beast seemed to take in the situation at a glance, and, laying back his ears, he watched his wary opponent with angry eyes. Suddenly Tom leaped forward and landed a terrific kick squarely on the junction of the neck and head.

The brute reeled before the force of the blow, but recovering on the instant he wheeled and launched both heels at his antagonist. The man leaped aside, and as quick as lightning responded with another fearful kick on the burro's neck. And so the conflict raged. Sometimes the jack would get in a savage blow on his opponent, but often the man had the best of it, and at last, putting forth all of his wonderful strength, he landed a kick with the fury and irresistible force of a pile driver on the jack's neck, which had been his objective point from the beginning. The beast reeled back, and with a convulsive quiver fell over. Tom was terribly bruised, but no bones were broken, and in a few days he was as spry as ever.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Lincoln, "the First American."

It was the return of the race to simple conditions, and its long sojourn in these during the pioneer period of the middle west, which enabled it to give us Lincoln, "the first American," as Lowell called him in the deepest inspiration of his own life. It can, of course, justly be said that the conditions in which the race gave us Lincoln were rude, but I think that it is not from rudeness that the love of equality comes. Otherwise I cannot understand how the politest society should always strive for equality among its members and that within its limits it should offer us the truest image of equality now recognizable among men.—"Equality as the Basis of Good Society," by W. D. Howells, in Century.

CRISP ON THE MESSAGE.

Doesn't Believe the Proposed Remedy Will Afford Relief.

Commenting on the President's message, ex-Speaker Crisp said: "I heard with some surprise and great regret that part of the message relating to our finances. That relief is needed no one doubts. That it can be found in the direction indicated in the message, I don't believe.

The President makes as strong an argument as can be made in favor of the single gold standard, but I don't think he fairly states the case. He announces throughout his message that our obligations are payable in gold. There is no law on the statute book justifying this assumption. All bonds, Treasury notes and other obligations of the United States are payable in coin, that is gold and silver of the present standard of weight and fineness and if the Treasury would exercise the option which the law and contract gives of paying in that metal most convenient to it our difficulties would be less.

I am opposed to the retirement of the greenbacks and Sherman notes because it would ruinously contract our currency. Neither can I approve the propositions recommended enlarging the privileges of the national banks. I have no doubt the President honestly believes he is right, and I know I as honestly believe he is wrong."

CLOSING HIS WORK.

Rev. G. F. Smith's Four Years Ministry in Greenville.

On Sunday Rev. G. F. Smith will close his four years' work as pastor of the Methodist church here. At the morning service the usual sermon will be preached, but at the night service he will give a historical sketch of the organization and work of the Methodist church in Greenville.

Mr. Smith received his first appointment to the pastoral charge of this church at the Conference which was held here in 1891, and every Conference since has re-appointed him to the charge. By an established rule of the Conference no minister is permitted to hold a charge longer than four consecutive years, hence Mr. Smith will be sent to another field next year, but his entire church, and the people of the community generally, would rejoice could he be continued here. He is an earnest worker, a consecrated Christian, and has a firm hold on the esteem and affection of all our people regardless of denomination.

In his four years here Mr. Smith has received 126 members into the church, and the contributions for all purposes have aggregated about $8,400. In the immediate membership seven deaths have occurred, the loss of members by removal, certificate, etc. is 87, leaving a net gain of 32. Beside this increase in membership during his ministry, the church has been greatly strengthened in all the branches of its work. Mr. Smith has gone up to Conference no year from here without every pledge of the church to the different objects being paid in full. He has been faithful in the discharge of every duty and is justly entitled to the plaudit "Well done, good and faithful servant."

A Small Boy's Wish.

The idea of heaven possessed by young hopefuls was well expressed by a South side lad of 4 years the other day. It was during a thunderstorm. He was with his mamma at home.

"Mamma, does God make thunder?" he asked.

"Yes, Willie, God makes thunder?"

"Well, mamma, do you know what I am going to do when I get to heaven? I'm going up to God and ask him, 'Dear God'—and I'll say it very gentle mamma—'dear God, can I make just a little thunder? I'd like to make some ever so much.' Do you think he will let me make thunder, mamma?"—Ex.

A Good Rule.

If you write to any one on your own business be sure to enclose a government envelope stamped. It is enough to expect a reply, the person written to furnishes his time, labor, information and writing paper. This is right and proper. One letter or one stamp does not amount to much. But an hundred letters to be written, the stationary and postage to be supplied by the one written to amounts to a great deal. In a year, if an editor, you will probably receive a hundred letters about other people's affairs, and not even a stamp enclosed. It is surely enough to be burdened with the toil of answering, without being taxed to do the gratuitous work. It is astonishing that people do not stop to consider before acting this way.—Wilmington Messenger.

Joe Evans says he was driving along the road this morning, and crossing a branch found the ice thick enough to support the weight of his cart.

The Eastern Reflector

between now and 6 o'clock P. M. on Jan 11th, 1896. Two subscribers for 6 months or four subscribers for 3 months will count the same as one yearly subscriber. This is no catch penny device but a bonad-fie offer, and if only one subscriber should be brought during the time specified the boy who brings it will get the scholarship. Of course we expect more than one subscriber to be brought in, for this is a prize worth winning and many boys will work for it.

In order that there may be an incentive for every boy who wishes to enter this contest, we offer a cash commission of 10 per cent on all subscribers, so that those who fail to get the scholarship will be paid for their work, but the one who wins the scholarship will not get the commission. Now boys get to work with the determination to win this prize. You can get as many sample copies of the REFLECTOR as you need by applying to the office. If you decide to enter this contest send us your name as we wish to know how many boys are working for the prize. We will publish the result of the contest with the name of winner in the issue of the REFLECTOR of Jan. 15th, 1896, giving the successful boy time to enter school on the opening day of spring term Monday, Jan. 20th.
