After Twenty-One Years.

Mr. D. V. Dixon, a leading merchant of Hookerton, came to Greenville to-day for the first time in twenty-one years, and he lives only twenty miles from us. Since he was last here he has married and is the father of nine children. Mr. Dixon could not recognize the town when he arrived and did not know which way to go. He said he had no idea that Greenville had undergone such great changes in the last twenty years and was glad to see the town's rapid progress. We hope he will not defer his next visit so long.

INNORTH CAROLINA.

Matters of Interest Over the State.

Asheboro had a $25,000 fire Monday.

C. C. Taylor, while leaning from the platform of a moving train, near Wilson, came in contact with a bridge and was killed.

Yesterday the State Treasurer, on Solicitor E. W. Pou's motion, took judgment before the Clerk of the Superior Court against the sheriff of Jackson county for four thousand dollars.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Capt. Samuel A. Ashe, has been appointed Cashier by Collector Simmons to succeed Mr. F. G. Simmons, resigned. Capt. Ashe will assume charge January 1st. This one of the three places in the Collector's office not under civil service. The salary is $1,800 per annum.—Raleigh News and Observer.

The Herald is told by a gentleman who saw a party from Montgomery county this morning at the depot that a nugget of gold, weighing 31 pounds and 7 ounces, was last week found near Eldrado, in the Uwharrie river district. If this report is true the nugget is the largest ever found in North Carolina or in any other State east of the Rocky Mountains.—Salisbury Herald.

They Buy Shoes Together.

Rather a novel incident occurred here yesterday. Mr. Frank Morgan, of the New York Racket, was called upon to wait upon two men who wanted to buy one pair of shoes, having only two feet between them. The deficiency was made up by what are known as "peg legs." The two men had lived neighbors when boys and volunteered together in '61. They pledged mutual faith, slept under the same blanket, ate at the same mess, and fought side by side. Thus they went through the war and had nearly reached the end before any harm happened to either. But on July 18th, 1864, one of them lost his right leg in battle. Three months later, October 19th, the other lost his left leg. Since they came out of the hospital each has been using a wooden leg, the one right, the other left. One of them now lives in Monroe township, the other in Jackson. Yesterday they met on the street, and as they had done several times before, decided to buy a pair of shoes between them, one taking the right and one the left. They wore the same number.—Monroe Journal.

The Old and New.

The new year was ushered in joyfully. The echo of the midnight gong had scarce died away when the old cannon in its thunder tones told that the old year was no more. The boom of the signal gun was instantly followed by the ringing of all the bells in town, and for many minutes their merry peals chimed a glad welcome to the year just born. May it be a glad new year.

Her Resolution.

At one of the "watch parties" last night, just as the minute and hour hand of the clock were pointing close to twelve, a young lady was noticed to be wearing a very solemn expression and when asked the cause she said she was making a resolution which would soon be uttered. Silence followed for a moment, and as the clock chimed the birth of a new year she spoke solemnly: "Resolved, that with God's help I will get married this year." She was voted the prize for making the best resolution.

Great Men at Rest.

There is something of pathos always in the sight of a great man lost for a moment to the responsibilities of his position, the burden of his own fame, and wrapped in such slumbers as might overtake the meanest son of toil. Whether it be Nelson, snatching a moment's oblivion in sleep amid the restless scene of a Paris gambling saloon, his head on Lady Hamilton's shoulder, she "playing furiously" the while (as Mr. Frith, quoting from the lips of a bystander, Lord Northwick, records) yet evidently taking care not to disturb her hero's slumbers; or Napoleon, before one of his great battles, asleep up to the last moment from sheer exhaustion; or Savonarola, on the eve of his execution by fire, resting with his head on the knees of his black hooded and veiled attendant and smiling and speaking in his sleep; or General Lee, that noblest figure in a fallen cause, lying sleeping, wearied out, by the wayside in Virginia while an army of 15,000 men trooped past so silently that his slumber was not broken; or only Pope, nodding, as he is said to have done, whenever the conversation failed to be epigrammatic.—Temple Bar.

Vivier, the famous horn player, was an incorrigible practical joker. On one occasion in an omnibus he alarmed his fellow passengers by pretending to be mad. He indulged in the wildest gesticulations, and then, as if in despair, drew a pistol from his pocket. The conductor was called upon to interfere, and Vivier was on the point of being disarmed when suddenly he broke the pistol in two, handed half to the conductor and began to eat the other half. It was made of chocolate.—London Standard.

A Fair Exchange.

Cholly Chumpleigh (tenderly)—Won't you be my queen of hearts? Dolly Durken—Not unless you'll be my king of diamonds.—New York Herald.

The Dejected Young Man.

"Woman," said the dejected young man, "is a fake."
"Yes," spoke one listener.
"Yes. It has not been so many moons since I saved up all my billiard money and lived on beans two weeks to blow myself on an opera and a supper for a young woman. Then I asked her to marry me, and she said she was afraid I was too extravagant to make a good husband."—Indianapolis Journal.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 1st, 1896.

An exchange gets this off: A man named Moon was presented with a daughter by his wife. This was a new moon. The old man was so overcome that he got drunk. This was a full moon. When he got sober he had only twenty-five cents. This was the last quarter.

This is the period of letting star route contracts, and citizens of Kentucky, Tennessee and other States are, as usual, taking contracts in North Carolina, to be sub-let to poor fools here at prices which will not more than pay for horse hire. The contractor makes all the money—the difference between the price at which he takes the contract and that at which he sublets it—and does none of the work; the sub-contractor loses all the money and does all the work. The government is willing to allow fair prices for carrying the mails on the star routes, but the jays who do the work are willing for the middle men to get all the profits. —Charlotte Observer.

And so Mr. Platt, a Republican Senator who hails from the land of wooden nutmegs, was "so full of forgiveness on this day before Christmas that I am ready to forgive the ex-Confederates." Maybe he was full of something else the day before Christmas, and hence these tears. Somehow, we ought to feel happy and thankful and in good condition, but we don't. Not having asked Mr. Platt for his forgiveness the ex-Confederate soldiers can hardly be supposed to care much for it. His forgiveness! and for what? We have done nothing wrong, nothing that we are sorry for, nothing for which we are disposed to ask forgiveness of Mr. Platt or anyone else. —Wilmington Review.

What "Wife" Means.

Says Ruskin: "What do you think the beautiful word 'wife' comes from? It is the great word in which the English and Latin languages conquered the French and Greek. I hope the French will some day get a word instead of that femme. But what do you think it comes from? The great value of the Saxon words is that they mean something. Wife means 'weaver.' You must either be house-wives or house-moths, remember that. In the deep sense, you must either weave men's fortunes and embroider them, or feed upon and bring them to decay. Wherever a true wife comes, home is always around her. The stars may be over her head, the glow worm in night's cold grass may be the fire at her feet, but home is where she is, and for a noble woman it stretches around her, better than houses ceiled with cedar or painted with vermilion shedding its quiet light for those who else are homeless. This I believe, is the woman's true place and power."

Convict Labor in a Cotton Mill.

Alabama has undertaken a novel experiment in cotton manufacturing, the outcome of which will be watched with some interest. The penitentiary board has decided to establish a 5000-spindle cotton mill to be operated by convicts, seven-eighths of whom will, according to a dispatch received by the Manufacturers' Record, be negroes. The building will be 100x200 feet, two stories high, and will be constructed by convict laborers out of brick made by them from clay on the convict farm, and the lumber used will be sawed from trees now standing on the farm and dressed by the convicts. The cotton will be raised by convicts on the penitentiary farm, and manufactured in the mill located immediately on the ground. This will be an unusual experiment in the employment of convict labor, as well as in the manufacture of cotton goods. Though the operatives will be mostly negroes, its success or value will hardly be a fair criterion by which to judge the possibilities of utilizing colored labor in cotton mills. What can or cannot be done with convict labor in an enterprise of this kind is hardly the measure of what can or cannot be done with free labor. Still the progress of this undertaking will command general attention.—Manufacturers' Record.

Please Explain.

The New York Advertiser, having indulged in praises of the old soldiers because "they say they will fight if their services are needed to defend the flag," the Charleston News and Courier is moved to say that its "war-like contemporary's praise is well bestowed," but it would like to know how can old soldiers who are drawing a hundred and forty million dollars in pensions on account of "disabling" wounds and diseases incurred in one war possibly fight in another one? We should think, it remarks, that they could only ride in the ambulances or lie up in the hospitals. How could they possibly march about and carry heavy muskets and knapsacks and things, and keep out of doors in all kinds of weather in their shattered condition and health?

Wouldn't Wear It if He Had.

Here is a story about that eccentric character, the late Lord Aylesbury. It has the merit of being true. Lord Aylesbury was standing bareheaded in a well known hatter's shop in Piccadilly while his hat was being ironed. A bishop—who, being still alive, has not yet reached his turn for posthumous anecdotes and must consequently be nameless—entered the shop in full attire, and seeing Lord Aylesbury bareheaded mistook him for a shopman. Taking off his own head covering, the bishop said, "I want to know if you have a hat like this?" Lord Aylesbury surveyed the hat and its owner and turned on his heel with the curt remark, "No, I haven't, and if I had I'm d—d if I'd wear it."—London Realm.

Apple Eating.

It is said that an apple eater will never be dyspeptic or given to biliousness. The lovers of this fruit say that one must always eat it raw, while others consider it only edible when cooked. This latter is wrong, however, as a ripe apple well masticated is a healthy food. Among the excellent ways of cooking apples are apple soufflé, apple gingerbread, stuffed, fried, preserved, jellied and baked.

Spurgeon once described Noah as "sitting outside the ark at twilight reading his Bible." This reminds one of the noted picture by a Dutch artist of St. Peter reading his own epistles bound in leather with a pair of horn framed spectacles.

She Has Objections.

Mildred—So you are going to be married in a week?
Blanche—Yes.
"Will you be married with the ring ceremony?"
"No, indeed. I believe in reformed government, and I object to coming under the domination of a husband by ring rule."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Craven was at first a man who had craved or begged his life of an enemy.

Primrose was at first the prime rose or the first rose that opened in spring.

THREE SONGS.

[To a friend with a nosegay of wild flowers.]

Where the daisy's sunny hymn
With its music, wondrous rare,
Fills the twilight like a prayer—
There we dance and hope and love,
Sheltered by the pines above.
Sister, little sister, take us,
Take us to thy heart;
Happy, happy thou canst make us,
One of us thou art!

MEADOW RUE.

Where the rippling streamlet floweth
Silently we bow and weep,
No one but our Father knoweth
Of our anguish, still and deep.
Close beside the eddying river,
There alone we sob and quiver,
Though the world forsake us,
Take us to thy heart;
Sister, little sister,
One of us thou art!

WHITE VIOLETS.

Where the fern in gladness dances,
Where the sad rue droops and mourns,
Where the streamlet's bright wave glances
When the spring returns,
White as winter's spotless drift,
There our faces we uplift.
When the fern laughs, we are glad;
When the rue weeps, we are sad.
Still we see the stars above us;
Still we trust, because they love us.
Are they flowers in the sky,
Violets that have learned to fly?
We believe and hope and trust,
Know that he who made is just,
And he never will forsake us
While we're white and pure in heart.
Sister, maiden sister, take us,
One of us thou art!
—Willis Boyd Allen in Youth's Companion.

Crushite.

The results accomplished by the use of "crushite," a new material for sawing and polishing granite, stone and marble, are represented as quite remarkable, the material consisting simply of minute chilled cast metal shot varying in size from mere powder to clover seed size. Blocks of granite are now being sawed with this instead of sand at the rate of four inches in depth and hard grit stone at nine in depth an hour with 12 blades in the machine. It is superseding diamond saws and is claimed to be capable of doing the same amount of work at one-tenth the cost, and is also being employed in sand blast apparatus in place of sand and in substitution of diamond drills for boring and drilling. The statement is made that in sawing and polishing one ton of this material is equal to about 300 tons of the sharpest sand. The tiny balls are chilled to intense hardness without being brittle, and when struck on an anvil they indent the latter. As the action of crushite is to roll between the blocks and the saw blade or rubber, doing its work by crushing, it retains its spherical shape and cutting or crushing power, and as it does not become partially imbedded in the blade or rubber, as in the case with sand, emery, etc., it is rolled backward or forward, smoothing the surface by crushing the projecting parts of the block that is being treated.—New York Sun.

Saved From a Lion by Pillow.

An English officer was shooting recently in Somaliland. One night when he was in bed inside his tent a lion sprang over the rough thorn fence, which it is usual to throw up round one's encampment at night. Instead of picking up one of the men or animals that must have been lying about asleep inside the fence he would have none but the sportsman himself, made a dash into his tent and seized him—fortunately only by the hand. Then by some wonderful piece of luck, as the lion changed his grip for the shoulder, he grabbed the pillow instead and so vanished with his prize. The pillow was found the next morning several hundred yards distant in the jungle, and outside was also the spoor of a lioness, who had evidently been awaiting the return of her lord with something eatable.—Scribner's.

Words in Famous Books.

The total number of distinct words in the New Testament, excluding proper names and their derivatives, is 4,829. The vocabulary of the Old Testament is much larger. According to Gesenius' "Lexicon," the Old Testament contains 5,810 distinct words, not counting proper names and obsolete roots. A few comparisons with the above may not prove uninteresting. The "Iliad" and the "Odyssey" together contain 9,011 distinct words. Milton used 9,028 different words and forms of expression in his entire works, and Shakespeare, the peer of all language twisters, used over 15,000, or one-third more than was used by all the writers of both the Old and New Testaments.—St. Louis Republic.

Safe.

"Who's there?" cried little Binks, egged on by his wife, who insisted that there was a burglar in the room.
"Nobody," returned the burglar.
"There, my dear," snapped Binks, "that's exactly what I told you. Nobody's there, so do go to sleep."

A FRENCH SQUIRE.

How He Dressed, His Weakness For Perfume and What He Ate.

The squire's shoes were of a very plain and solid make, little better than those provided for his laborers, and such was his economy that he bought leather and had them re-soled by a cobbler living at the chateau. He was much more particular about his headgear. Felt hats were brought by sea from Rouen to Cherbourg. Gonberville paid 25 francs for his own, while those for his servants were not more than a third of that price. His rich velvet caps cost nearly 40 francs.

The squire had a peculiar weakness for perfumes, which he distilled on the spot, such as rosewater, Damascus water. "eau a la mode," etc., and he did not think it beneath his dignity to go and gather the pinks at a neighboring monastery. He was also very fastidious with regard to his gloves and would pay 12 francs a pair for them.

A word may be added as to the arrangements for the table at the chateau. The flour was ground and the bread made at home, although when there was not time to do so a loaf of 12 pounds would be bought from the baker for 3 francs. He paid a higher price when he expected friends, and especially the cure of Cherbourg, who was somewhat of an epicure. There is little said about pastry except the "gateau des rois," so essential to the festivities of Twelfth Night or Epiphany. The desserts consisted of cheese, honey, fresh and dried fruits, oranges and grenades from the south, with a great variety of wines. Generally the preference was given to solid food. Sometimes oxen and sheep were slaughtered at home; sometimes choice morsels were bought at the town, and wonderfully cheap they were. On one occasion the half of a calf and a pound of candles are purchased for 5 francs. Kids were much in request for special entertainments. Pork was then, as now, a favorite article of diet among the peasants. One day, when going to the chase, he rose at a o'clock and breakfasted on pork and herrings himself. The fact speaks well for his digestive powers—unless he had reason to repent of the indulgence.

Special luxuries were occasionally provided at his table, as when the servant of a neighbor brought him an Indian cock, and then he was so pleased that he gave the messenger a pourboire of 4 francs. This little circumstance is not without interest, as showing that the turkey was not then unknown in France, and throwing doubt on the common tradition that this bird was first introduced there by the Jesuits and served at the royal table of Charles IX, 1571. Fish appears often on the squire's board, as his chateau was near the sea, and the rivers also furnished a good supply.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Slack Mindedness.

A Bern newspaper contained the following prospectus of a hotel: "—, in the Bernese Oberland, is the favorite place of resort for those who are fond of solitude. Persons in search of solitude are, in fact, constantly flocking there from the four quarters of the globe." I gather from my informant that this is either a copy or a translation of the prospectus. But I forbear to give the name of the favorite retreat, partly because I have not myself seen the advertisement and partly for fear that many of your readers might be tempted to swell the crowd in that haunt of populous solitude.

In my Harrow days it was reported that the very clever and kind hearted but irascible and sometimes inconsequent second master (long since dead) once called out to the boys in his form, "If one boy prompts another, the boy who prompts shall have ten times as many lines to write out as the boy who is prompted, and the boy who is prompted just the same."—London Spectator.

A Display of Confidence.

On one of the busiest corners of Chicago is a newsstand. The young man who sells papers has a large and abundant confidence in human nature, for as soon as he gets his papers displayed at the stand he empties a handful of nickels and pennies on top of a paper. He cries his wares without intermission, for he holds a bundle of papers under his arm. But for every paper he sells from the bundle he carries he sells two from his stand. His customers, who know him, pick out their papers, lay the coins on the stand and walk away. If they lay down a nickel or a dime, they make change for themselves from the loose coin placed for that purpose.

The Republicans are in power in Congress. They can prevent another bond issue if they desire to do so. Unless they act, the entire responsibility for bond issues will be upon them. The President cannot move if they say stop. —Raleigh News and Observer.

It was a real pleasure to see Miss Clara Bruce Forbes out today, looking as bright and cheerful as this new year day. She has been kept at home by sickness for several weeks.

We learn that the storm Monday night nearly blew the Methodist church building at Ayden off the foundation. The building is considerably careened.

There was another marriage in the Register of Deeds' office Tuesday afternoon, the contracting parties being colored. Squire J. A. Lang performed the ceremony.

A Big Record.
During the month of December Register of Deeds, W. M. King, issued 66 marriage licenses, the largest number for any single month of which he has record. The total number issued for the year 1895 was 271.

Tournament At Farmville.
There was a large attendance upon the tournament at Farmville on Tuesday, but a small number of riders—only five. Bert Smith crowned Miss Ada Fields queen, James Hinson crowned Miss Bettie Tyson first maid of honor, James Tugwell crowned Miss Florence Lang second maid of honor. The coronation ball took place at night.

OBITUARY.

The subject of this memoir was little L. MAYBELLE MAYO, daughter of Lula S. and L. A. Mayo. She was born to them July the 24, 1893, and died with laryngitis December 23rd, 1895. When she took cold we did not suspect that death, cruel death, would so soon invade our home to rob us of our good, bright, beautiful child.

But in the cold chilly winds of December

It came without warning,
To take her while young and tender,
As the rose bud in the morning.

It is hard to give thee up dear child,
To bury thee in thy little grave,
But we must and wait awhile,

For the summons from Him who came to save.

No she is gone, yes, left us,
Her little chair is empty by our hearthstone.

Death, cruel death, has bereft us,
Now our Savior calls her his own.

Her little toys are about our room,
We will preserve them with care,
It may be on soon,

We'll go to meet her over there.

Dangerously Wounded.

Mr. H. B. Clark, who returned from Washington this morning, tells us that Mr. C. F. Ellison, of that town, was dangerously wounded Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Ellison was out hunting and in some way his gun accidentally discharged, the entire load striking him under the arm and completely shattering his shoulder. Physicians who examined his wound say that the chances of recovery are very much against him, and even if his life can be saved he will lose the entire arm. Those who know Mr. Ellison here will regret to learn of his meeting with such a terrible accident.

A New Bank.
On the very first day of the year the REFLECTOR is enabled to announce a new enterprise for Greenville. Higgs Bros. will open another banking house here and state that they will be ready to begin business by the 15th inst. Thus Greenville is keeping pace with the march of progress which is now so prevalent throughout the South. Her increasing business makes room for another bank, and these enterprising young men, recognizing the benefit of such an enterprise, have taken the steps to establish it. Higgs Bros. have been very prosperous as merchants, and we bespeak for them much success in the banking business.
