THEY WILL BE DONE.

Not in dumb resignation
We lift our hand on high,
Not like the nervous fatalist
Content to trust and die.
Our faith springs like the eagle
Who soars to meet the sun,
And cries exulting unto Thee,
O Lord, Thy will be done.
When tyrant feet are trampling
Upon the common weal,
Thou dost not bid us bend and writhe
Beneath the iron heel.
In Thy name we assert our right
By sword or tongue or pen,
And even the headman's ax may flash
Thy message unto men.

Thy will! it bids the weak be strong;
It bids the strong be just;
No lip to fawn, no hand to beg,
No brow to seek the dust.
Wherever man oppresses man
Beneath Thy liberal sun.
O Lord, be there Thine arm made bare,
Thy righteous will be done!

THE QUEEN DISPLEASED.

It now appears that Lord Salisbury has greatly displeased Queen Victoria by the position he has taken towards the United States in the Venezuelan matter, and a cablegram states that Her Majesty has not hesitated to so express herself to His Lordship.

"She does not think the attitude of Great Britain is consistent with a Christian nation, and that the refusal to arbitrate a matter of such comparative insignificance is not setting a good example to less civilized nations."

The writer, who is a distinguished authority in London, says that she has expressed her displeasure at the belligerent tone of Salisbury's reply to Secretary Olney's note, and declares that he should have kept her informed of the status of the case. In addition to this, Sir Francis Knollys, Secretary to the Prince of Wales, cables the New York World, in answer to an inquiry of Mr. Pulitzer, expressing in the name of the Prince and the Duke of York, that "they earnestly trust, and cannot but believe, the present crisis will be arranged in a manner satisfactory to both countries, and will be succeeded by the same warm feeling of friendship which has existed between them for so many years."

The Queen desires that the closing days of her reign should see England at peace with all the world and looks with horror upon war.

As she grows older she desires that England should set an example of Christian forbearance to other nations and to exalt herself as the ideal of civilization." In reviewing the attitude of the Queen, the same authority states that the United States will never be involved in a war with England over the Monroe doctrine or any other question so long as Her Majesty survives; besides, the expressions of Wales and York conforms very closely to the disposition of the Queen and, certainly in so far as they are concerned an armed conflict between the two countries is not among the probabilities of the near future.—Norfolk Virginian.

Mr. Charles Rountree Dead.

Information came by wire today that Mr. Charles Rountree, of Charlotte, was dead. His remains are now on the way to Greenville and will reach here on the evening train. Mr. Rountree was in his 81st year and moved from here to Charlotte about five years ago. He has two children living here, Mr. C. D. Rountree and Mrs. I. A. Sugg. We did not learn what arrangement had been made for the funeral but suppose the burial will take place Saturday near his old home, two miles from town. A sketch of his life will be given later.

MIRTH, MERRIMENT, MUSIC.

A Delightful Leap Year Ball at the Opera House—A Grand Success.

The young ladies of the town gave a very enjoyable Leap Year Ball at the Opera House Thursday night and it was just up-to-date. At 9 o'clock the couples began to arrive and soon the merry laughter of the dancers, was heard on all sides. It was the ladies' opportunity and well did they use it. We heard a lot of noise on the side near the stage and it sounded like the popping of champagne corks and turning to Bo. Cherry we asked what it was, and were informed that the ladies were popping the question. We only said "Oh!"

At 10 o'clock the grand march took place led by Miss Eva O'Hagan and Maj. C. T. Lipscomb, of Clifton, S. C., the and manoeuvring was beautiful.

The following couples were in attendance:

Miss Annie Foley and W. B. James;
Miss Jennie James and Herbert White.

Miss May Harris and J. L. Fleming.

Miss Blanch Flanagan and Ernest Forbes.

Miss Ella King and L. I. Moore.

Miss Becca Worthington and W. J. Corbett.

Miss Hennie Sheppard and Dr. Zeno Brown.

Miss Sallie Lipscomb and H. W. Whedbee.

Miss Lillie Cherry and Jarvis Sugg.

Miss Florence Williams and J. W. Higgs.

Miss Betsy Greene and Maj. W. S. Bernard.

Miss Bessie Jarvis and J. C. Greene.

Miss Sophia Jarvis and Jesse Speight.

Miss Novella Higgs and J. K. Westbrook.

Miss Bettie Tyson and C. S. Forbes.

Miss Pat Foley and Ed. Foley.

The chaperones were Mrs. and Mr. J. H. Blount, Mrs. and Mr. J. L. Wooten, Mrs. and Mr. W. B. Grimes.

The german followed and was led by Miss Eva O'Hagan and Maj. Lipscomb, music by the harpers. An elegant supper was had at 12 o'clock.

There were three proposals made and accepted, which we think was doing very well as a staster. The Opera House was beautifully decorated with bunting, holly, myrtle and moss.

There were a goodly number of spectators present and they seemed to enjoy it immensely.

The Greenville Lumber Company.

A recent visit to the plant of the above company showed a marked improvement over the old mill. The band saw, now in use by them, is as complete as it is possible to make them. The saw is $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch in thickness, while the old circular saw was $\frac{1}{2}$ of an inch, thereby saving one board in the cutting of ten. Any size log can be cut and they can cut a third faster. It only takes four minutes to change a saw and it runs three hours and a half. They can sharpen one in half an hour. Messrs. Hines & Hamilton showed us the machine for grinding slabs and edgings into saw dust. It is a wonderful invention. A train of twenty-five cars loaded with logs are received daily by them. Every part of the mill plant is as near perfect as man can make it and some parts work like human. They work a large force of hands and their pay roll is a large one and the mill should be patronized by Greenville in preference to all others. The money the company pays out weekly goes to the merchants and when they want any thing in the lumber line this company should have the first chance.

IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Matters of Interest Over the State.

A fire at Asheboro Wednesday burned Boen's Hotel, the stores of E. A. Moffitt, Bayette & Richardson, and several other buildings. Moffitt's loss is $10,000, and the total is nearly $20,000.

The paymaster-general, Colonel Julian S. Carr, has sent a check for $150 to each of the companies in the State Guard, this being the annual allowance by the State. Great efforts will be made to have an encampment of the Guard this year.

Dr. Charlie Killebrew's ginhouse, in Edgecombe county, and contents consisting of sixteen bales of picked lint cotton, together with cotton seed, baskets, gin, and other apparatus, were totally destroyed by fire of an unknown origin on Monday. There was no insurance.

A stranger in town today was enquiring for the telephone exchange. Greenville hasn't one yet, but an exchange should be one of the improvements added to the town this year.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 3RD, 1896.

John W. Creasy, son of Rev. Dr. W. S. Creasy, of Charlotte, loved Miss Clara Gaston of the same city. The parents thinking they were too young to wed, there was opposition from that source. In June last, the young couple managed to get over into South Carolina together and were quietly married, and this little romance was never discovered until within the last few days. They kept their secret well.

Adjutant-General Cameron's report made to Governor Carr says the strength of the State Guard is 1,567. It is composed of twenty-seven infantry companies and three divisions of naval reserves. The troops are better equipped for services than ever before. They have abundant clothing, overcoats, blankets, camp equipage, and ammunition, and can all be concentrated at any point on a line of railway in thirty-six hours, armed, and fully prepared for at least six months' service. Twice during the year, at Bath and at Winston, the troops aided the civil authorities in preventing seriously threatened riots and bloodshed.

IF YOU HAD A LOAD OF WOOD TO SELL and told every man you met that you had a load of wood to sell, and every man you met would in turn tell every man he met that you had a load of wood to sell and every man you met would in turn tell every man he met that you had a load of wood to sell, it would, in course of time, become pretty well circulated that you had a load of wood to sell; but why not cut it short—not the wood, but the method—and place a good ad in a good newspaper and tell everybody at once. "Delays are dangerous," and a good newspaper would start in where the last man left off and keep on telling everybody that you had a load of wood to sell; or anything else. SOME ANCIENT FAT.

Adipose That Accumulated on a Mammoth Tens of Thousands of Years Ago.

Dr. Dall of the Smithsonian institution, during his recent visit to Alaska, secured a natural history specimen that was a prize indeed. It was a bit of mammoth fat from the actual adipose tissue of an animal that had been dead for tens of thousands of years.

Bodies of mammoths in a fresh state have been dug up from time to time in arctic Siberia, preserved in natural cold storage since a period probably antedating the first appearance of man on the earth. That is an old story, but this is the first known instance in which the soft parts of a beast of this species have been found on the American continent. It is easy to imagine the scientific interest attaching to the discovery.

Ages ago this mammoth died under such circumstances that its corpus was buried in mud. At about that time there was a great and permanent change in the temperature of circumpolar regions. The climate had been subtropical. It suddenly became frigid. The mammoths were literally "frozen out," the last of the species perishing of cold. This particular individual, frozen in a bank of clay, had every prospect of "keeping" for an indefinite period.

Hundreds of centuries later a stream flowing through an Alaskan valley tackled the clay bank referred to and began to cut it away. At length some big bones stuck out, and a native of exceptional courage dug out one or two of them. This required more of that quality known in civilized countries as "nerve" than might be imagined, for strange monsters, however long they may have been dead, are regarded with superstitious awe by savages.

However, the natives finally summoned courage enough to drag the remains of the mammoth out of the clay bank piecemeal. The body of the animal had been preserved so well that a fairly perfect cast of it was found in the matrix. A quantity of fat, which overlay the intestines, was obtained and was used for greasing boats. Dr. Dall secured a piece of it and fetched it back to Washington.

In the office of Osteologist Frederick A. Lucas, at the National museum, is a mammoth's molar tooth, to which an odd story is attached. It was got from a spring at Paso Verde, in the country of the Papago Indians. Ever so many centuries ago a mammoth in its dying agonies sought that spring for water and fell into it, too weak to climb out. There its bones remain to this day, and the Indians believe that if they were removed the spring would dry up. Of course such an event in that region means the destruction of a village.

Mastodon bones, of course, are frequently dug up in the United States. The mastodon was a kind of elephant, but it did not belong to the genus elephants. The mammoth did not belong to that genus, being known to modern science as Elephas primi genus. It often happens that farmers plow up the osseous remains of mastodons, particularly in reclaimed swamps, where anciently the gigantic beasts became mired and died from sheer helplessness to get out. The tusks are commonly found so far decomposed that the ivory crumbles between the fingers.

The first mastodon ever dug up was found in 613. The remains of mastodons are by no means confined to the United States. They are discovered all over the world—in Europe, Asia and Asia Minor. They are much thicker set than the modern elephant. The lower jawbone of the full grown specimen weighs nearly 100 pounds. The first mastodon bones that were dug up were supposed to be those of giants of an earlier epoch.—Washington Star.

Biographies.

Mrs. Humphry Ward, in the course of a recent address on the subject of books and their uses, reminded her hearers of the prediction of Dr. Jowett, once master of Balliol, who said: "We shall come in the future to teach almost entirely by biography. We shall begin with life which is the most familiar to us—the life of Christ—and we shall more and more put before our children the great examples of persons' lives so that they shall have from the beginning heroes and friends in their thoughts."

Homely Metaphor.

You can no more escape the annoyance of your misdeeds than a boiled lobster can climb a telegraph pole.—New York Herald.

between now and 6 o'clock P. M. on Jan 11th, 1896. Two subscribers for 6 months or four subscribers for 3 months will count the same as one yearly subscriber. This is no catch penny device but a bonafide offer, and if only one subscriber should be brought during the time specified the boy who brings it will get the scholarship. Of course we expect more than one subscriber to be brought in, for this is a prize worth winning and many boys will work for it.

In order that there may be an incentive for every boy who wishes to enter this contest, we offer a cash commission of 10 per cent on all subscribers, so that those who fail to get the scholarship will be paid for their work, but the one who wins the scholarship will not get the commission. Now boys get to work with the determination to win this prize. You can get as many sample copies of the REFLECTOR as you need by applying to the office. If you decide to enter this contest send us your name as we wish to know how many boys are working for the prize. We will publish the result of the contest with the name of winner in the issue of the REFLECTOR of Jan. 15th, 1896, giving the successful boy time to enter school on the opening day of spring term Monday, Jan. 20th.

GUNS LOADED WITH FOOD.

A Laughable Incident That is Said to Have Occurred During the War.

Major Thomas Q. Farquhar of Anniston, Ala., on a visit to Buffalo recently, told an Express reporter a humorous story of the war. During the siege of Vicksburg he was in command of a Confederate regiment
outside of General Grant's lines.
"We had plenty of food," he said.
"It was a fertile territory that we had to draw from, and there was no difficulty in getting enough to eat.
We intercepted a poorly guarded supply train of the Yanks and had enough to feed a regiment for a month stored right in our little camp. In spite of Yankee vigilance, spies would now and then steal out of the city and we saw and talked with several of them. Each had a pitiful story to tell of how the inhabitants of Vicksburg suffered for food, and we raked our brains to devise some means of sending them
a portion of our plenty.

"An old negro who was acting as a gunner under me was the one to suggest what looked at first like a feasible plan. His idea was to load supplies into the four cannon which we had and fire them bodily over the heads of the Yankees into the city itself. It was a great idea, and after some study we decided that it was worth while making the experiment. The supplies which we had captured consisted of hard tack in tins, that would go into the guns
like grape shot, and we calculated that by giving them plenty of elevation we could send the food directly into the city, where even such morsels would be welcome. I was in command of the detachment and gave my consent to what an older and more experienced officer would probably have frowned upon as being contrary to all the rules of war.

"Next morning at sunrise we loaded the guns. We put a plentiful charge of powder in each and then rammed home as many cans of hard tack as would equal in weight an ordinary cannon ball, and that was not a great many, I assure you. In one of the guns we put four cans of tomatoes. This we considered an experiment, as we had little hope that such fluid stuff would survive the impact of falling in the city, but it was worth trying. We pointed the guns, and just before the lanyard of the first one was pulled our old negro gunner ran a few rods down the hill, where he would be below the line of smoke and able to see where our novel shot struck.

"The first gun to be fired happened to be the one we had loaded with tomatoes. The gunner pulled the lanyard, there was a roar and a puff of smoke that obscured our sight for an instant, then it blew away and we saw, running up toward us, our old negro, covered from head to foot with what looked like blood, while he waved his arms wildly and shrieked: 'I'm killed! I'm killed! O Lord, have massy on my soul!' We were alarmed and ran down toward him.
He still screamed, and shrieked, and fell down in a faint as he saw us.
We rushed up to him, and then every man of us burst into a laugh that would have waked the dead. It roused old Tom, who opened his eyes and shrieked the louder when he saw our apparently inhuman levity.
As soon as we were able to speak or move we picked the old negro up, stood him on his feet, to assure him that he was still alive, and then ordered him to scrape the tomatoes off himself. He was the most thoroughly debauched specimen I ever saw.
You see, the heat of the discharge of the cannon had melted the solder in the tomato cans, and they had simply dropped to pieces on leaving the gun, while their contents had been propelled just far enough down the hill to spatter all over the old negro." The major paused and chuckled again.

"How did the hard tack work?"
asked the reporter.
"We didn't get a chance to try it,"
was the reply. "The Yanks, thinking that we were about to bombard them from the rear, started up the hill after us, and as there would have been no use in making any resistance against so superior a force,
we spiked the guns and retreated.
What they thought when they found the hard tack in them I never learned, but I suppose it only confirmed their idea that we were going to attack them."

Wisdom for a man's self is, in many branches thereof, a depraved thing. It is the wisdom of rats, that will be sure to leave a house some time before it falls. It is the wisdom of the fox, that thrusts out the badger who digged and made room for him. It is the wisdom of the crocodiles, that shed tears when they would devour.—Bacon.

Two Full Moons in December.

Probably not many people are aware that December just passed was different from any other since the beginning of the Christian era. December, 1895, enjoyed the unique privilege of having two new moons, which is a phenomenon that has not occurred in any December in 1,896 years.

The coincidence of the last event of this kind happening in the same year as the birth of Christ was not widely noted, however, or it would probably have been looked upon by many as significant. The occurrence was a purely astronomical one.—N. Y. World.
