THE BONNER CASE.

The State Rests its Case and Examination of Witnesses for Defense Begins.

[Special to Reflector.]

WASHINGTON, N. C., Jan. 20.—Interest in the trial continues to hold on well, although the crowd at times on Saturday was not so large as upon some other days. Only eight witnesses were put upon the stand that day. Evidence given in by Wyatt and Robert Best corroborated what Mrs. Best said when she was being examined.

The chief witness for the day was M. J. Fowler, chief of police of Washington and a general detective, who has done much in working up the evidence in the case. His testimony was looked for with interest by everybody. He corroborated the testimony of Credle as to the confessions made to him (Fowler.)

E. S. Simmons, counsel for Brantley, was very severe in his cross-examination of Fowler, but the detective did not lose his self-control and gave substantially the same testimony on both direct and cross examination. Mr. Simmons being blind adds interest to his examinations.

Soon after court opened this morning the State rested its case and testimony for the defense was begun. Several witnesses were put upon the stand and it was proven almost conclusively that Uriah was at a dance from 8 to about 1 o'clock on the night that Credle claims they all met and were sworn in. This was about the substance of the testimony given in this morning. Further developments are looked for with interest.

Popular Monthly's Great Lee Articles

There is no American, living or dead, North or South, who stood nearer the hearts of the people, or whose memory is held with more sacred affection, than General Robert E. Lee. All on this side of the wiped out but never-to-be-forgotten "line" feel that they know him; but there is still much of his history and that of his family and his ancestors that has never yet been told. On this account the REFLECTOR is pleased to note the announcement of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly regarding the series of notable Lee papers that begin in the February issue. The first is "The Ancestors of General Robert E. Lee and the Times in Which They Lived," by Mrs. Judge Roger A. Pryor, of New York. The whole series, beginning with the earliest colonial times down to the present date, will be enriched with numerous portraits and illustrations of special interest, heretofore unprinted, and a large speaking likeness in water colors of General Lee. Altogether these articles will form a valuable addition to the history of the great men of the nation.

Hot Shot for Some Husbands.

Many a farmer groans over the hard work of haying and harvesting, but calls his wife faint-hearted and complaining if she is not cheerful with a six-months baby to nurse, three meals a day to get over a kitchen fire, the other children to look after and the house to keep in order, when science proves that nursing alone is fully equal in its drain upon physical strength to his work in the field; all this too when the wife has but four-fifths the strength of her husband. Ten-fifths work for four-fifths strength! Who ought to be ashamed of himself?—S. H. Platt, is Our Health Adviser.

A MONUMENT TO THEM.

The Generosity of the Tobacco Board of Trade.

The members of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade have built for themselves a monument more lasting than marble. As is known to our readers, they were taking steps to have a banquet here at an early day. Saturday the Board had a meeting and decided to contribute the fund they had raised for this purpose to the relief of the family of Mr. L. W. Lawrence, who was burned out Thursday morning. The Secretary of the Board went to Mr. Lawrence to ascertain what the family stood most in need of, and then went to the stores and purchased a quantity of dry goods, crockery and other things to supply them, and also gave them a good purse of money. The contribution from the Board of Trade amounted in all to considerably over $100. Such a step on the part of these gentlemen, most of whom are new-comers to our town, is deserving of the highest commendation. They are big-hearted men and Greenville should be proud to have such among her citizens.

Many of our people contributed generously to the needs of the family, which is in keeping with the characteristic liberality of the town. There is not a better or more kind-hearted people in the world than those right here in Greenville. What they do is without ostentation, but they never turn a deaf ear to suffering.

Two for One.

The really good Clothier does more than sell good clothes. He frequently makes economical suggestions. The finest cloth, you know, is not always the longest wearing cloth, and he will not hesitate to tell patrons they are mistaken when they select goods too fine for business or pleasure. The good Clothier, moreover, will often advise a quality of cloth that will answer two purposes—giving a buyer two suits, practically, for one price. If the buyer used his own judgment, it might be necessary to get two suits.

MONDAY, JANUARY 20TH, 1896.

The following comes very near giving the state of affairs with our Senators at Washington.

The Springfield Republican thinks the North Carolina Senators fair game for Senator Hill because, "they are found voting on opposite sides of about all questions." They vote the same way, and the way that helps the Republican party. They merely talk two ways. Pritchard talks and votes Republican. Butler talks against the Republican party, but votes the way that helps that party best. On one occasion, during a prohibition campaign in Raleigh, a prohibitionist met the keeper of a saloon, and said: "Gen. X is for us." The reply was: "He talks mit you, but he drinks mit me." Butler talks "mit" the opponents of Republicanism, but votes "mit" Republicans.

Senator Mills, of Texas, made a speech last week on his resolution, containing what he believes should be declared to the world as the financial policy of the United States. This resolution contains seven distinct declarations, which may be summarized thusly: 1st, against retirement of outstanding legal tender notes; 2nd, in favor of the coinage of the silver bullion in the Treasury; 3rd, in favor of the issue of emergency legal tender notes in case of a deficiency in the revenues; 4th, against the issue of interest bearing bonds; 5th, in favor of paying government obligations in both gold and silver; 6th, repudiating the theory that a public debt is a public blessing; 7th, urging the maintenance of a sinking fund for the rapid extinguishment of the national debt.

Commissioner Lochren's report of the condition of business in the Pension Bureau is an effectual answer to the slanderous slurs upon the administration of that office which are constantly made in certain quarters. It shows that on December 1st, the business of the office was practically up to date. Since then the calls of Congressmen, often nearly 1,000 a day, and largely unnecessary, have resulted in throwing the business behind. Of the interior workings of the office the report says: "I am satisfied that the officers and clerks are bringing every effort to bear upon the prompt and proper adjudication of all the several classes of claims now pending. Cases that are ready for adjudication are promptly disposed of, and apparent delays are usually the result of negligence or inability on the part of claimants of their attorneys to supply necessary evidence, after being notified, often repeatedly, of the necessity for furnishing such evidence."

The National Democratic Executive Committee met in Washington, D. C., Wednesday, and on Thursday decided the question as to where and when the Democratic National Convention shall go. Chicago was selected as the place and July 7th, as the time. There were four cities contending for the place—St. Louis, Chicago, New York and Cincinnati. All the Silver States, except North Carolina, voted for St. Louis. Our vote was cast for Chicago.

There are no important developments in the controversy between the United States and England over the latter's attitude towards Venezuela. There are a number of newspaper rumors as to what England will do, but nothing officially has been received. It is reported that England's cabinet has concluded to re-open diplomatic correspondence with Venezuela, through some American republic other than the United States, which, if done, would be a direct snub to this country. But here is the trouble in regard to the report, it might be construed as a back-down by England as she has already sent her ultimatum to Venezuela. Besides there are other reports that seriously conflict. So nearly every report that is heard can be disposed of. Germany has occupied England's closest attention recently over the congratulatory message to President Kruger, of the Transvaal republic, by Emperor William, of Germany, thereby modifying England's attitude somewhat toward an arbitration of the United States-Venezuela affair. Their modification has also been brought about by the English press counseling its government to go slow and not have too many irons in the fire. But when the excitement over the message of Emperor William subsides, sentiment on the Venezuelan question may revert to the original determination not to allow the United States to interfere. The commission appointed by President Cleveland have had two meetings and are now thoroughly organized and ready for business. The commission has decided that they will have to visit Venezuela and several European countries to obtain access to documents bearing on the disputed boundary line. In anticipation of their visit to Venezuela, President Crespo has appointed a commission to confer and assist them in their deliberation at Caracas, and Holland offers her assistance in their researches at The Hague. The Commissioners say it will take them about four months to complete their investigations and in the meantime England will have plenty of time to carry out any plans she may now really contemplate.

NORTH CAROLINA NEWS-PAPERS.

According to the 1895 report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, there were 219 newspapers published in North Carolina during 1894.

Last year there were 245. Of these 20 are dailies, 170 weeklies, 32 monthlies, 5 semi-monthly. There are 112 Democratic, 12 Republican, 7 Populist, 9 Farmers' Alliance, 10 independent, 5 independent Democratic, 11 educational 28 non-political, 31 religious, 1 fraternal, 9 not classified. Raleigh leads with 23.

This report shows that the newspapers of the State are keeping pace with the general progress being made in manufacturing and agricultural pursuits. In saying this we do not mean to be witty, for really the "keeping pace" is the other way. The newspapers are taking the lead, and if all the papers in the State were as much in earnest as some are, the State would be a new country in a short while.

For many years most of the North Carolina newspapers were run for fun. Nearly every citizen in the State became an editor. The length of time the paper was conducted by the same management depended upon the amount of money the editor could expend in working off a practical joke. The people generally entered into the spirit of fun with some enthusiasm and rarely ever refused to take the paper from the postoffice, but only in exceptional cases would they back up their interest in the joke with cash. After awhile the editor would quit sowing his wild oats and settle down and become a good citizen. Then some other man, generally a young one, would start another newspaper enterprise and keep it up a few months and the people would have all the fun they could stand while it lasted. Most of the papers were strictly party organs. The party they represented was as pure as the morning dew, but the other party was a hideous eruption on the top side of the earth.

That day is over. Many of our newspapers are permanent business enterprises and the editors are making a precarious and hazardous living out of them. We all find it hard to get out of the old ruts, and harder still to educate the people up to the true value of a newspaper. But we are slowly, but surely doing it. After a while the leaven will leaven the whole lump, and every family will realize that they must have at least one or two good papers, and they will not hesitate to pay for them. The people will soon learn that a good county or State paper is worth more than a great institution of learning in any country in the State, and we are not detracting from the value of colleges. It costs from two to four thousand dollars a year to run a good county paper, and then the editor and printers only make a bare living, but if eight-tenths of the families in any country would subscribe and pay for the papers the cost of it would be a mere trifle as compared to its value. People should learn that it is just as important to pay for a newspaper as it is to pay for shoes or any article they buy. The publishers of papers are largely responsible for the carelessness of the patrons, and we must adopt better business methods in order to build up the papers on a substantial basis and keep them there.

Some of the editors in the State are angels, but many of them conduct clean, truthful, independent newspapers. If the people will pick out such only as are worthy of patronage, the dross will soon disappear and the newspaper profession will be benefited thereby.—Progressive Farmer.

IF YOU HAD A LOAD OF WOOD TO SELL and told every man you met that you had a load of wood to sell, and every man you met would in turn tell every man he met that you had a load of wood to sell and every man you met would in turn tell every man he met that you had a load of wood to sell, it would, in course of time, become pretty well circulated that you had a load of wood to sell; but why not cut it short—not the wood, but the method—and place a good ad in a good newspaper and tell everybody at once. "Delays are dangerous," and a good newspaper would start in where the last man left off and keep on telling everybody that you had a load of wood to sell; or anything else. ANTARCTIC CONTINENT.

The First White Man to Set Foot on the Icebound Land.

C. E. Borchgrevink, the Norwegian explorer, writes a graphic account of "The First Landing on the Antarctic Continent" for The Century. The writer says:

We landed at Cape Adare that night (Jan. 23, 1895), being the first human creatures to put foot on the mainland. A peculiar feeling of fascination crept over each of us, even to the most prosaic natures in our boat, as we gradually drew near to the beach of this unknown land. Some few cakes of ice were floating about, and looking over the side of the boat I even discovered a jellyfish, apparently of the common light blue, transparent kind. I do not know whether it was to catch the jellyfish or from a strong desire to be the first man to put foot on this terra incognita, but as soon as the order was given to stop pulling the oars I jumped over the side of the boat. I thus killed two birds with one stone, being the first man on shore, and relieving the boat of my weight, thus enabling her to approach land near enough to let the captain jump ashore dryshod.

I had painted a Norwegian flag on a large box, which we fastened on a strong pole near the place where we landed, and leaving the rest of the crew to be entertained by the penguins I proceeded alone to investigate the peninsula and to make collections. I found seaweed on the beach, but whether it had grown on the shores of Victoria Land remains to be ascertained in the future.

I believe that Cape Adare is the very place where a future scientific expedition might stop safely even during the winter months. From the spot where we were several accessible spurs lead up to the top of the cape, and from there a gentle slope runs on to the great plateau of Victoria Land. The presence of the penguin colony, their undisturbed old nests, the appearance of dead seals (which were preserved like Egyptian mummies, and must have lain there for years), the vegetation to the rocks and lastly the flat table of the cape above, all indicated that here is a place where the powers of the antarctic circle do not display the whole severity of their force. Neither ice nor volcanoes seemed to have raged on the peninsula at Cape Adare, and I strongly recommend a future scientific expedition to choose that place as a center of operations. On this particular spot there is ample space for house, tents and provisions.

I myself am willing to be the leader of a party to be landed either on the pack or on the mainland near Colman island. From there it is my scheme to work toward the south magnetic pole, calculated to be in latitude 75 degrees 5 minutes, longitude 150 degrees east. Should the party succeed in penetrating so far into the continent, the course should, if possible, be laid for Cape Adare, there to join the main body of the expedition. As to the zoological results of future researches, I expect great discoveries. It would indeed be remarkable if on the unexplored Victoria continent, which probably extends over an area of 4,000,000 square miles, there should not be found animal life hitherto unknown in the southern hemisphere. It is, of course, a possibility that the unknown land around the axis of rotation might be found to consist of islands joined only by perpetual ice and snow, but the appearance of the land, the color of the water, with its soundings, in addition to the movements of the antarctic ice, point to the existence of a mass of land much more extensive than a mere group of islands.

A Royal Editor.

One of the most interesting of newspapers is the New Zealand Te Pakio Matariki, or Pleiades, or Seven Stars. It enjoys the distinction of having a king for an editor. His royal highness Tawhiao is not, it is true, an independent sovereign like Emperor William, but when he descends from the royal throne to the editor's "easy chair" then, indeed, is he monarch of all he surveys, even of that otherwise independent personage, the "printer's devil."

The Pleiades is a small eight page paper, three columns on a page. It is printed in the English and native tongues. Sometimes the translation is in the center column, sometimes in one of the outside columns.

The Maori language is a Polynesian dialect. It closely approaches that of the Sandwich Islands, of the Navigator's group and of Rarotonga. Natives of these mutually understand one another.

THE BOER WOMAN.

Plain Enough, but Kissed From the Cradle to the Grave.

The Boer woman is unlovable in appearance. Graces and modern accomplishments are unknown to her. Handsome she is not, nor is her temper angelic. Her cooking would often kill an ostrich, and her voice is not attuned to harmony. All that notwithstanding, the most kissed being on earth is the Boer woman.

From the cradle to the grave she is kissed—by great-grandfather and great-grandmother, by her grandfather and grandmother; of course she is kissed by her parents. She is kissed by her grand uncles and aunts, by cousins male and female to the last degree of kinship. She is kissed by the relatives of the above and by their relatives. Her brothers and brothers-in-law, her sisters and sisters-in-law and all their children kiss her. So does her sweetheart and all her female friends and acquaintances. Her husband and children and all her relatives and female friends, residing long or short under her roof, kiss her repeatedly every day.

Whether she and her husband are in good circumstances or not, he buys or sells nothing without asking her advice and abiding by it. He undertakes no work without her sanction. She commands her married son of 50 in the same way that she did when he was 5. He obeys and kisses her just as childlike. She calls her husband by his Christian name to her friends. To others she speaks of him as "the baas." Ask her if he is her "baas." "No," he is her "man." "What white woman," she asks you, "ever had a master? Do you take me for a Kaffir woman?"

The Boer woman could not conceive the idea of having a master. In poverty most dire she has had from infancy at least one black servant. Like her mother before her, she would see her daughters perish with hunger before she would allow them to go as domestic servants. They are in her eyes the equals of the most high born dames in any land, and servants they shall never be. She detests the thought of her sons working for an employer, but often has to give way on that point.

The Boer woman has often been held up as lazy, dull, stupid and dirty. A greater calumny has never been uttered against any woman. Her intense pride and love of independence make her appear so to the European lady or gentleman who knows nothing of the conditions of life that have formed her customs and made her what she is at present.

The Boer woman, with her children, would retire to the most arid desert of Africa and live on air sooner than dwell at ease and in luxury where she contrasted unfavorably with her neighbors. She scorns the slightest patronage extended to her, no matter from whom.

She has inherited an innate love of bright colors and beautiful things. When she cannot obtain these things, she is content to wear the saddest colored garments and not be troubled by the most sordid and dreary surroundings.

She rules her "man" kind with a rod of iron. They do not know it, however, nor does she suspect it. All of them would take oath that the exact reverse was the case. Ask her to speak in church or on a platform anywhere, and she would imagine you to be crazy. "That is a man's business," she would say. Nevertheless Mrs. Boer would see to it that her "man" or son would say in church or on a platform just exactly what she wished said. Woman's rights as understood by the American woman would be utterly incomprehensible to the Boer woman were they ever so clearly explained.—Boston Transcript.

He Drew the Line.

Little Johnny Fizzletop is a Manchester boy who has been obliged for many years to wear the cast off clothing of his elder brother Bob. Johnny never gets anything until Bob has finished with it. A few days ago Bob had a dreadful toothache, and it was decided that the aching tooth should be extracted. "You may pull all his teeth out if you like," said Johnny, "but I ain't going to chew with them afterward. I can tell you that straight."—London Globe.

[Special to Reflector.]

TARBORO, N. C. Jan. 20.—Mr. H. B. Bryan, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of this town, died at 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He was 74 years of age, and has suffered greatly during the past few weeks. He was proprietor of Hotel Bryan here.

To our Many Friends.

Accept, through this medium, our most heartfelt thanks for your kindness, sympathy and generosity to us in our recent trouble. Words are inadequate to express our gratitude to you all.

Not only to old friends do we turn with grateful hearts, but comparative strangers, numbered among the Tobacco Board of Trade, came forward and donated most liberally, in a manner as delicate and sympathetic as a woman, with all the noble bearing of true gentlemen.

May God bless and prosper you all in this life, and give you an everlasting inheritance hereafter, will ever be the prayer of

HE HAD BEEN THERE.

When a man ain't got a tent, and he's feelin' kind o' blue.

And the clouds hang dark an' heavy, an won't let the sunshine through,

It's a great thing, O my brethren, for a feller just to lay

His hand upon your shoulder in a friendly sort o' way.

It makes a man feel curious; it makes the teardrops start.

An' you sorter feel a flutter in the region of the heart.

You can't look up and meet his eyes; you don't know what to say

When his hand is on your shoulder in a friendly sort o' way.

O, the world is a curious compound' with its honey and its gall,

With its cares and bitter crosses, but a good world after all.

And a good God must have made it—leastways that's what I say

When a hand rests on my shoulder in a friendly sort o' way.
