IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Matters of Interest Over the State.

The North Carolina Penitentiary has leased a farm of 2,500 acres near Wadesboro, and will put 150 convicts at work there by the end of this month.

The Morganton Herald says that Mr. Joseph Whisenant, of Burke, has nine sons, the eldest 30 and the youngest 14, the aggregate weight of whom is 1,806 pounds.

Fifteen hundred bushels of clams were shipped to Northern markets from Wrightsville and Wilmington last week, against 7,000 bushels shipped the week before.—Wilmington Dispatch.

In digging up a large oak in the Capitol square in Raleigh, two negro men found a decayed wooden box; and in that was a tin box containing 85 pieces of silver coin. They quickly carried it off and only gave the number of pieces, not the value of any. It caused quite a stir among the negroes of Raleigh.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The Treasury gold reserve has gone a little below $42,000,000.

Two men were burned to death in a barn near Henry, Va., where they had gone to sleep with a lighted lantern. It is supposed they kicked the lantern over.

Congressman W. H. Crane, of the eleventh district of Texas, died in Washington Monday.

The fifteenth annual assembly of the League of American Wheelmen is in session in Baltimore.

Burglars entered the bank of Earlville Iowa, and secured $100 from the cash drawer. They blew open the safe containing $10,000, but took fright and fled without the money.

Weary of Self Made Men's Brag.

Mr. Moody has a popular and very telling way of "hitting" the errors which are so rife in the theological thinking of many persons today. Speaking of salvation by grace, he says: "It is well that a man can't save himself, for if a man could only work his own way to heaven you never would hear the last of it. Why, down here in this world, if a man happens to get a little ahead of his fellows and scrapes a few thousand dollars together, you'll hear him bragging about his being a self made man, and telling how he began as a poor boy and worked his way up in the world. I've heard so much of this sort of thing that I'm sick and tired of the whole business, and I'm glad we shan't have men bragging through all eternity how they worked their way into heaven."—St. Louis Mid Continent.

It Must Revolve Everlastingly.

The writer remembers of once asking the manager of a great, baking powder house, expending half a million dollars annually in advertising, why the company did not curtail its expenditures in that channel for a single season, and place the amount to their credit in the bank. "To do that," came the quick response, "would be ruinous. Advertising is one of our stocks in trade. To be sure we have a necessary commodity, but to prevail this fact upon the public means that the wheel of advertising must revolve everlastingly to bring success and profit."—Profitable Advertising.

John Joseph and Charlie Sebere, both Syrians, arrived here today. Joseph's wife is with him. They are looking for a house and want to engage in selling notions here.

Danger in a Big Cotton Crop.

Report comes to Raleigh that the farmers in Wake and some of the Eastern counties are making greater preparations than for several years to plant large crops of cotton. The rise in the price has stimulated the increase in acreage. There has been a greater demand for fertilizers, and the prices of mules and horses have gone up by reason of the demand for them on cotton plantations.

This paper is no authority on farming, but it believes that no farmer will be wise to quit raising his supplies to plant more cotton. The experience of the most uniformly successful farmers has been that home supplies ought to be made, and that then as much land ought to be put in money crops, diversified, as can be profitably grown.

A big cotton crop this year means another 5 cent crop. A crop short like that of 1895, means in the neighborhood of 8 cents. Those farmers who are planning for a big increase on the strength of the higher price will find they have made a big mistake if their example is generally followed throughout the South. A crop of fair size will bring as much money as a big crop, and more profit.—Raleigh News and Observer.

The Deacon.

As the preparation of this play for recital progresses it promises more and more to the public. People sometimes complain that there is nothing to entertain them between the acts. This will not be true Friday night. The Forbes orchestra will furnish music for the occasion and this simple announcement satisfies a Greenville audience that the music will be a special feature of the programme. G. E. Forbes will be at the piano, Alfred Forbes manages the cornet and Messrs. A. A. Forbes and Ola Forbes use the violins. This insures the best music had in the Opera House in many a day.

When the hand-bills go out to-morrow our people will see what a feast is promised them Friday night. The largest audience of the season will witness the presentation of this play.

Petty Obstinacy.

Councilman W. L. Brown tells us that he has been informed by one of the obstinate Councilmen that there will not be another meeting of the present Board, that is the stay-aways are going to continue to absent themselves from meetings and thus prevent any business being transacted. That is a pretty state of affairs, and men holding positions of trust should be ashamed of such conduct. We are told also that absence from certain meetings means a fine, and somebody had better look out.

Hogs Drowned.

We learn that Mr. Ricky Moore, who lives about five miles below Greenville, lost nineteen hogs by the freshet this week. The hogs were in the low grounds and the water overflowing the place drowned them.

The Colonel Says His Speech.

Representative Skinner spoke 20 minutes, just before 11 o'clock this morning, having had his time extended ten minutes. He regretted his difficulty in securing recognition. His people were a unit for free silver. Here he went into stump speech gorgeousness. The country was mourning, he said from morning to evening. He rustled the leaves of Valambrosa, stirred the stream into "ripples," after which he was fully prepared to speak of "this great and grand sunset continent of ours." By this time Balaklava blunders came pat and he likewise reaped a "harvest of pines," and other things. He was awfully polite, was Harry, in not charging the deplorable blunder he graphically depicted on either Democrats or Republicans, "now." He only said: "Alienate yourselves from the party of the gold standard. He was "not ashamed of his association with Populists." He had "no harsh words for silver Democrats," who, he declared, were as a rule, intelligent and patriotic. Nevertheless he criticised them for voting for Grover Cleveland when they knew what a gold bug he was. "Bimetallism and protection are twin sisters—they are inseparable." While he disavowed Coxeism, he spoke of the people "marching to the polls." The Democrats and Republicans would both nominate gold standard men on a gold standard platform.—Washington Cor. Charlotte Observer.

Advertising and Logic.

The advertising of a firm is built on regular and successive steps. For the great voice in the newspaper tells the world that John Smith has something to sell what it is good for, what it costs, and creates in the customer a desire to find out more about it and to buy it. Then comes the customer to the store. An attractive store has a great deal to do right here, and the customer meets the man who is going to do the selling.
Up to this time the advertisement has been a sort of letter of introduction of customer to salesman. Now this is where a first-class salesman shines. The salesman has most of the question to decide as to whether the customer will buy the goods or not. Of course, conditions may prevent even the best salesman from making a sale, but a great many times he is the master of the situation and can make the advertising of the firm pay or not pay.
Then there is another point: The goods may not be so good as the customer believed them, so that even a good salesman cannot sell them. That's the fault of the advertisements in the first place. To make advertising pay, you have to start—same as in logic—with right premises. If your advertisements are good and in the right places to attract customers; if your store is attractive; if your goods are the same as you said they were and if your salesmen are capable, there's bound to be a sale, some profit and some paying advertising. Under those conditions, alone, your advertising can not help but pay. But if one of the conditions or "premises" are not right your advertising may not pay.—The Hardware Trade.

A FIJI ROMANCE.

There was a young maid in Fiji,
And in number her lovers were three,
But which she loved best
She needed a test
To tell her, so doubtful was she.
So she stirred up a cannibal war
Till the whole land was reddened with gore,
And young man number one
Got slain with a gun—
But her heart was as light as before.
So she knew that she didn't love him,
That her fancy was only a whim,
But still there were two,
Both eager to woo,
And still her love's eyesight was dim,
But youth number two in a fight
Was captured one terrible night,
And they made him the meat
At a cannibal treat—
And she found that her heart was still light.
So she didn't love that one, she knew,
But still she was in doubt what to do,
For young man number three
For all she could see,
Was no dearer than youth no two.
But her fears in due time were allayed,
For the enemy made a fierce raid,
And, with arrow points filled,
Her last lover was killed—
And she lived and she died an old maid.

To Remove Ink Stains.

Tear blotting paper in pieces and hold the rough edge on the ink when it is freshly spilled, or cover the spot with Indian meal, or the liquid ink may be absorbed by cotton batting. If the ink be spilled on a carpet cut a lemon in two, remove a part of the rind and rub the lemon on the stain. If the ink stained article is washed immediately in several waters and then in milk, letting it soak in the milk for several hours, it will disappear. Washing the article immediately in vinegar and water, and then in soap and water, is another remedy which will remove all ordinary ink stains. No matter what substance be used to remove ink the stain must be rubbed well. If article stained be a carpet on the floor use a brush.

In a Dreadful Fix.

"Doctor," said a distressed wife to the family physician, as he was coming down stairs from his patient's room, "can you give me no hope of my dearest husband? Can nothing be done?"
"Madame," said the delighted doctor, rubbing his hands, "allow me to congratulate you. Our patient has taken a turn for the better, and now we may hope to have him about again in a few weeks!"
"Oh, doctor!" exclaimed the horrified lady, throwing up her hands; "you told me he could not possibly get better, and I have sold all his clothes!"—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

It is said that the chaplain of the Ohio Legislature asked the members to join with him in repeating the Lord's prayer, and, as he said to know that but few could comply with the request. It is not long, and yet life is too short for many men to take time to commit it to memory. "Forgive our debts as we forgive our debtors." Perhaps after all few of us should offer that prayer. We might be invoking a curse rather than a blessing. Forgive as we forgive. Think of what is contained in that request.

It is an alarming fact to know that photography has reached such a stage that it is possible to take the skeleton of a man in all its parts while the man lives, and the inside view of the house from the outside. The alarm comes in when we think that this may include "the skeletons in the closets." It would be wise to remove them forthwith.

According to the Road Bureau of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, there are in this country 1,300,000 miles of common roads, most of which are commonly bad. These figures with the last three ciphers cut off would probably cover the good roads, if not more so.

The treasury department will resume the coinage of silver dollars and will continue until about $18,000,000 have been coined. The average cost of the silver bullion purchased under the Sherman act was 71½ cents on the dollar, which leaves a gain or seignorage of 28½ cents on the dollar. At this rate the seignorage on the $18,000,000 to be coined would be $5,130,000, which will be accounted for in the available cash on hand, increasing it by that amount.

Chicago is not such a desirable city to live in after all. As in a sudden burst of reform, it is recently stated the authorities passed an ordinance limiting the number of dogs that any one family may keep, to six.

Senator Marion Butler gives it out that he expects this year. As in the past, to do most of the political work through the Farmer's Alliance, says the Washington Star.

Geese from Shellfish.
Everybody in the whole civilized world between the 11th and 17th centuries believed that the "barnacle goose" hatched from that species of shellfish called the barnacle. The story was first told by Cambrensis and was devoutly believed by all christendom for more than 500 years. A well-known scientific writer, reviewing the opinions of Cambrensis, says: "According to our venerable authority, the barnacle goose is generated from logs of wood allowed to decompose in the water. When decomposition has fairly begun small bumps on the log may be observed. Little by little these increase in size and finally assume the form and shape of a mass of barnacles, which is well known as a kind of shellfish. Soon after the shell, or husk, bursts open and a full-grown goose may be seen in the water clinging to the log only by the bill. A few days longer it continues to draw its nourishment from the log, then breaks away in the form of a perfect goose, exercising all the functions of its kind."

IF YOU HAD A LOAD OF WOOD TO SELL

and told every man you met that you had a load of wood to sell, and every man you met would in turn tell every man he met that you had a load of wood to sell and every man you met would in turn tell every man he met that you had a load of wood to sell, it would, in course of time, become pretty well circulated that you had a load of wood to sell; but why not cut it short—not the wood, but the method—and place a good ad in a good newspaper and tell everybody at once. "Delays are dangerous," and a good newspaper would start in where the last man left off and keep on telling everybody that you had a load of wood to sell; or anything else. STRANGE CONTRASTS IN ROME.

All Sorts and Conditions of Men Jostle One Another in the Streets.

Perhaps it is true that the impressions which Rome makes upon a thoughtful man vary more according to the wind and the time of day than those he feels in other cities. Perhaps, too, there is no capital in all the world which has such contrasts to show within a mile of each other—one might almost say within a dozen steps.

One of the most crowded thoroughfares of Rome, for instance, is the Via del Tritone, which is the only passage between the Pincian and the Quirinal hills, from the region of Piazza Colonna toward the railway station and the new quarter. During the busy hours of the day a carriage can rarely move through its narrower portions any faster than at a foot pace, and the insufficient pavements are thronged with pedestrians. In a measure, the Tritone of Rome corresponds to Galata bridge in Constantinople. In the course of a week most of the population of the city must have passed at least once through the crowded little street, which somehow in the rain of millions that lasted for two years did not manage to attract to itself even the little sum which would have sufficed to widen it by a few yards. It is as though the contents of Rome were daily drawn through a keyhole. In the Tritone are to be seen daily magnificent equipages, jammed in the string, between milk carts, omnibuses and dustmen's barrows, preceded by butchers' vans and followed by miserable cabs, smart dogcarts and high wheeled country vehicles driven by rough, booted men wearing green lined cloaks and looking like strange bandits. Even saddle horses are sometimes led that way, to save time, and on each side flow two streams of human beings of every type to be found between Porta Angelica and Porta San Giovanni.

A prince of the holy Roman empire pushes past a troop of dirty school children and is almost driven into an open barrel of salt codfish in the dock of a poor shop by a black faced charcoal man carrying a sack on his head more than half as high as himself. A party of jolly young German tourists in loose clothes, with red books in their hands and their fieldglasses hanging by straps across their shoulders, try to rid themselves of the flower girls dressed in sham Sabine costumes and utter exclamations of astonishment and admiration when they themselves are almost run down by a couple of the giant Roul grenadiers, each 6 feet 5 or thereabout, besides nine inches or so of crested helmet aloft, gorgeous, gigantic and spotless.

Clerks by the dozen and liveried messengers of the ministries struggle in the press; ladies gather their skirts closely and try to pick a dainty way where, indeed, there is nothing "dainty" (a word which Dr. Johnson confesses that he could not find in any dictionary, but which he thinks might be very useful); servant girls, smart children with nurses and hoops going up to the Pincio, black browed washerwomen, with big baskets of clothes on their heads; stumpy little infantry soldiers in gray uniforms; priests, friars, vendors of boot laces and thread, vegetable sellers pushing handcarts of green things in and out among the horses and vehicles with amazing dexterity and yelling their cries in superhumanly high voices—there is no end to the multitude.

If the day is showery, it is a sight to see the confusion in the Tritone when umbrellas of every age, material and color are all opened at once, while the people who have none crowd into the codfish shop, and the liquor seller's, and the tobaccoconist's, with the traditional con permissio of excuse or entering when they do not mean to buy anything, for the Romans are mostly civil people and fairly good natured. But, rain or shine, at the busy hours the place is always crowded to overflowing with every description of vehicle and every type of humanity.—Marion Crawford in Century.

CATS AND DOGS.

The Moods, Tempers and Natures of the Canines and Felines.

Cats do not take punishment as dogs do. Their tempers rise, and if struck they are apt to strike back, but beyond a gentle cuff to a kitten now and then I find a scolding or an exclamation of rebuke enough. They are also less intelligent and forgiving than a dog if unintentionally kicked or trodden on. There is no more beautiful expression in a dog's face than the look he turns to his friend who has involuntarily hurt him before there is time to explain. His whole demeanor expresses the highest magnanimity, not only the foregone pardon, but the eager desire that the offender shall think no more of the matter.

In many respects cats are more like men and women than dogs are. They have moods, and their nature is complex. A dog is very much of a piece. He is a good dog or a bad dog, brave or cowardly, honest or a sneak. The canine intelligence is much higher than the feline, but the disposition is simpler.

Cats are exceedingly irritable by temperament, sensitive to changes of the weather, to frost, to thunder. They are excitable and naturally disposed to bite and scratch when at play. There is a curious tendency in them, as in ill balanced or overstrung human beings, to lose their heads when in high spirits, and the self command most of them show when full grown in resisting these impulses is a striking proof of conscious responsibility. A full grown pet cat scarcely ever scratches a young child, no matter how much mauled by it. Besides being irritable they are moody and subject to depression, probably a physical reaction from the former condition. Princess, though not a sullen cat, would sometimes forsake the hearth or veranda and pass days by herself on a garden wall or under a bush, not ill or out of temper, but out of spirits, morbid and wishing for solitude instead of the sympathy which she always sought in her real ailments and bereavements.

Her peculiarities, both of race and individuality, were remarkably defined, even when she held them in restraint; but, with one exception, all the cats I have known are capacious. Their instinct when ill or sad is to be alone, but this is entirely neutralized by petting. They become as dependent on caresses and sympathy as children and much wiser than children when they are ill or injured, as they apply for relief with the most unmistakable suggestions, sometimes indicating plainly where they are in pain and presenting the suffering member for treatment. They are not so patient as dogs in taking medicine or submitting to surgical care, but show their recognition of its benefit by coming back for it under similar circumstances.—Temple Bar.

Great Men at Rest.

There is something of pathos always in the sight of a great man lost for a moment to the responsibilities of his position, the burden of his own fame, and wrapped in such slumbers as might overtake the meanest son of toil. Whether it be Nelson snatching a moment's oblivion in sleep amid the restless scene of a Paris gambling saloon, his head on Lady Hamilton's shoulder, she "playing furiously" the while (as Mr. Frith, quoting from the lips of a bystander, Lord Northwick, records) yet evidently taking care not to disturb her hero's slumbers; or Napoleon, before one of his great battles, asleep up to the last moment from sheer exhaustion; or Savonarola, on the eve of his execution by fire, resting with his head on the knees of his black hooded and veiled attendant and smiling and speaking in his sleep; or General Lee, that noblest figure in a fallen cause, lying sleeping, wearied out, by the wayside in Virginia while an army of 15,000 men trooped past so silently that his slumber was not broken; or only Pope, nodding, as he is said to have done, whenever the conversation failed to be epigrammatic.—Temple Bar.

An All Round Raise.

A man owning a double house sublet the half he did not occupy to a noisy tenant. Such a racket was kept up that he notified the party to quit.

"What's the matter with me?" he asked, much hurt in his pride.

"Ah, you raise too much noise all the time, and I can't stand it."

"Why don't you balance matters by raising something yourself? I don't object."

"Don't you? Well, I'll just raise the rent," and he did to such an extent that the tenant left.—Strand Magazine.

Effective Weapons.

During the sieges of medieval times it was very common for the besiegers to throw from their catapults and other military engines dead bodies of dogs, swine, together with pieces of horseflesh and similar carrion, into the city or castle besieged, in order that the defenders might, by the stench of this putridity, be forced to a surrender.

A Big Success.

The masquerade party in the Opera House Tuesday night, was largely attended both by spectators and participants. There were more young people in masque than were ever seen assembled at one time here. There were a few very handsome costumes, but most of them were on the comic order, some being exceedingly grotesque and laughable. We sent a reporter up to get a list of the names and characters each represented, but he said the crowd was so large and they unmasked so soon that it was impossible to get them. The occasion was quite enjoyable. After unmasking the dancing continued until about 2 o'clock.

A Good Reply.

Some days ago Henry Blount was on the cars on his way to fill an engagement, when his attention was attracted by two smart Alecks who were ridiculing everything they saw in North Carolina. Seeing a tobacco barn, they asked if that was a North Carolina residence, whereupon Henry Blount, who is quick at repartee as he is good at compliment, retorted that it was a dry house. They wanted to know what was a dry house. He replied, a house where we put green-horns to dry them out to keep the cows from eating them. It is needless to say they made no more remarks about North Carolina.—Rocky Mount Phoenix.
