A TIRED WOMAN'S EPITAPH.

Here lies a poor woman who always was tired,
Who lived in a house where help was not hired.
Her last words on earth were: "Dear friends, I am going
Where washing ain't done, nor sweeping, nor sewing.
But everything there is exact to my wishes,
For where they don't eat there's no washing of dishes.
I'll be where loud anthems will always be ringing,
But having no voice I'll get clear of the singing.
Don't mourn for me now, don't mourn for me never,
I'm going to do nothing for ever and ever."

OBITUARIES.

Died, on the 7th of February, 1896, Albert S. Moore, son of David H. and Addie Moore. He was 22 years of age, and has been a sufferer from dyspepsia and rheumatism for a long time. He was confined to his room sixteen months and most of the time on the bed. He prayed every day to die, and be free from suffering and at last his spirit was wafted away very unexpectedly to us all. God heard his prayer and took him out of his suffering. His will must be done, not ours. He governs all things according to his own will and pleasure, and works in a mysterious way his wonders to perform.

My darling boy, you are free from pain,
Our loss becomes your gain,
Your suffering here was so intense
I hope your happiness is immense.

MOTHER.

Lines in memory of little John David Moore, son of David H. and Addie Moore, who departed this life Dec. 27, 1895.

Dear little darling so full of love,
Your spirit has flown to realms above
And all we can do, is to weep and pray

That we may meet again some day.

You were so merry and full of fun,
That we miss you so, dear little one;
But God took you home to dwell in heaven,

While at the tender age of seven.

Your voice was so sweet and smile so bright,
Your childish prattle was our delight,
And oh! how I miss you, dear little one,

My sweet little darling, lovable son.
God loaned you to us such a little while
And you won our hearts by your winsome smile,
And when he got ready he took you away,

For in this sinful world, you could not stay.

But dear little darling, for you it is best,
That you should so early go to your rest,
And not have to suffer as others have done

In this wicked world, our dear little son.

MOTHER.

Snow Troubling the Trains.

Trains have been badly snow-bound today. On this road it was 10 o'clock before the train could get here from Kinston, but it went on trying to plough its way through the heavy drifts. The train on the Washington branch did not succeed in getting out of Washington until after 11 o'clock. If the main lines are also having as much trouble there is no telling what time any more mail will get in.

Talk For Your Town.

Stick to your town. If it is only a collection of cabins, stand by it and pick out its most attractive features when speaking of it. Your share of the universe amounts to the place where your days are spent. Your city is the best of cities, your people the foremost of all people. Talk it, preach it, teach it till the world believes it, and you will soon get to believing it yourself.

Speak up for your city. No matter where you are, pull for the place where friends are. That is the secret of progress. You can find plenty of objectionable features about any city. Make yourself as nearly oblivious as possible to the shortcomings of your town.

Remember that your people are the people that you know best. As a matter of course, you are more familiar with them than you are with those of strangers, with whose good points only you become acquainted.

Paint out the scars when you draw a picture of your home folks. Leave out the blots when you chart your surroundings. If you practice a healthy, appreciative sentiment in speaking about your own environments you will soon forget your cynicism and your home will become what it should be, the fairest spot on earth.

Stick to your own city. Make its surroundings the most agreeable, its scenes the most beautiful, its location the most admirable, its resources the nearest inexhaustible, of all the places in the world.

Preach it, believe it and impress it upon others. You will be happier, by cultivating such a spirit of patriotism. Your friends will like you better, your association will be more agreeable, your work will please you better if you stick to your city and your people.—Rome, Ga. Telegraph.

Where They Are.

Jarvis & Blow will have their law office in the building on the Blow property, lately vacated by Dr. F. W. Brown.

F. G. James and Moore & Moore will have their offices in rooms of the Hoell Building.

Dr. W. H. Bagwell will have his office in rooms in rear of the store belonging to A. Forbes on Five Points.

D. H. A. Joyner will have his dental rooms on the upper floor of the old Brick Store.

J. A. Smith has opened his barber shop in one room of Sam Cherry's store.

Farmers' Institute!

The farmers of Pitt are respectfully notified that an Institute will be held at Greenville, on Monday and Tuesday, February 24 and 25, 1896, to which they are kindly invited to be present and to take part in.

The Commissioner of Agriculture will be assisted by one or more of Professors from the A. and M. College and by a representative of N. C. Experiment Station.

No politics about it, but such subjects will be discussed as are of general interest to farmers, truckers and fruit growers.

Come and let us have a pleasant and profitable meeting.

S. L. PATTERSON,
Commissioner.

A LITTLE RETROSPECT.

Shut your eyes and try to look five years back in your memory. Can you remember hearing anything in those days about the sub-treasury about $50 per capita, and about the government issuing money direct to the people at a low rate of interest? Yes you do. And do you remember how you were told that the sub-treasury bill was explained before the Senate committee, how that "not a sentence of our statement before the committee has ever been contradicted," and how the great petitions that beat against Congress in behalf of the bill were pigeon-holed, and how it was resolved to change the form of petition and file one about 5 1/2 to 6 feet long, weighing from 160 to 200 pounds, with brains at one end and boots at the other, and how "then shall we be heard?" Yes, you do; all these things are fresh in the memory.

And do you remember how that in those days Congress came very near giving the people free silver, and we were all told that free coinage wasn't worth the snap of your finger for relieving the people? Yes, you do; you remember all these things.

Now open your eyes and read about things that have happened within the past ten days. The supreme council of the National Farmers Alliance adjourned in Washington a week ago today. Read this so far undeniable report of this body's action taken from the Washington Post of last Friday:

"In renewing their demands, so often set forth, the council reluctantly cut adrift the weather-beaten sub-treasury plank, which formed the burden of its lay for years. It came out strongly for free silver again at a ratio of 16 to 1, however."

Cut adrift from the sub-treasury? Can one believe his own eyes? There it is; read for yourself. And came out strongly for free silver at a ratio of 16 to 1, when it isn't worth the "snap of a finger? Certainly it did.

The petition with brains at one end and boots at the other surely hasn't got to Washington yet.

It may have been noticed already that the government hasn't yet issued any great floods of money direct to the people at a low rate of interest. On the contrary, it was only last week that the people loaned the government $100,000,000, in gold and wanted to make it $500,000,000, all at a low rate of interest, too!

What changes, what great changes, may be wrought in five years! We may yet hear something about $50 per capita and free silver, but they are in the same boat with the sub-treasury. In five years we may look for them all to be sleeping in the same pigeon-hole of oblivion. And over it will be written—ECHO:—Gastonia Gazette.

The Almighty Dollar.

What a despot, what a tyrant, what an idol. People are swayed by it, ruined by it, and are made to bow down to it in fondest and most willing worship. It makes people mean and corrupt and dishonest. It makes them cheat and lie and swindle and steal and rob and murder. It destroys the noblest impulses of the human heart, and plants in their place the noxious weeds of that deadly avarice that endangers the soul and threatens it with everlasting ruin and destruction. It turns sister against brother, father against son, wife against husband. It sows weeds of discord and briars of estrangement where flowers of concord and kindest feelings once bloomed in richest luxuriance and sweetest beauty. And yet with all of its power and with all of its influence it cannot bring peace to the mind, and a solace to the bosom; and neither can it purchase the blessed hope of blissful immortality. When death comes and the grave opens its sodded arms to receive into its pulseless embrace the lifeless form, then its power is all gone, and its memory becomes a curse to those who once had been its worshippers. It will be a curse, for its false glitter and useless value have so ruined the heart, that it will shut out those richer and grander and sublimer scenes which will burst upon the enraptured vision of those who have purchased by faith and obedience a birth right to the fadeless crown of eternal glory so gloriously and so radiantly studded with jewels of everlasting peace and rest.—Orange Observer.

Hill Down on Society.

In an interview in the Brooklyn Eagle Senator Hill gives evidence that he has fallen a victim to the "war fever" that is sweeping the earth. More daring than Senators Lodge or Chandler, or President Cleveland, who have challenged England, the Senator from New York has declared open hostilities against the women of Washington. He says:

"I think it would be a good idea if the women were packed away and sent out of Washington and the men left alone here to attend to the business that they are sent here for by the country. The trouble is there are too many dinners, with too much social dissipation in official circles at the capital. No man can go to these fashionable dinners night after night and sit up until morning attending to social functions and be in any condition to grapple with the knotty problems of finance and affairs that are at this time forced upon the consideration of our public men.

"I know that I am called a crusty old bachelor, but if any sane man will think over what I say, I believe that he will agree with me and acknowledge that I am right. This criticism applies to members of the Senate and of Congress and to officials of the administration. I attribute a good many foolish blunders made by the public men of late to just these things—too much society and not enough attention to the study of public affairs."

The ridiculous mystery which is thrown around the marriage engagements of young people serves no possible end, unless to give either of the parties a chance to play fast and loose. In Europe the engagement is looked upon as very much more binding than here. In Italy it is looked upon as so binding that a young woman who has been engaged and has broken the engagement is forever after called a civetta, "an owl," and is sedulously shunned by young men. Such a young woman rarely succeeds in making another marriage engagement. While this might be a little hard on our capricious American girls, none the less it would be much better for them, as well as for their intended partners, if they would frankly announce their engagements.

Butler and Grant.

News comes to Raleigh to the effect that Maj. H. L. Grant recently said, in answer to a question whether Butler would vote for him, "No; Butler has never regarded a single promise he ever made and is totally unreliable."

News comes to Raleigh, all the way from Washington that Butler heard about Grant's statement and has written to Goldsboro for permission to denounce Grant for thus talking about him.

These things may or may not be so but they are talked about freely among Fusionists who are high up in the synagogue.—News and Observer.

Advertising a New Business.

Advertising a new business is, to a certain extent, like advertising in the dull season. It is the after effect that must be looked at and not the immediate returns. Even if a new man were to meet his prospective customers, personally, it would be some time before he would make actual buyers of them. It is this way with traveling salesmen. The first few trips in a new territory do not consume very many pages of his order book. In the meantime he is getting acquainted—advertising. He is letting people know who he is and what he is doing and what he wants. If he is pleasant and courteous and persistent he will win trade, but it will take some time. Do not expect an advertisement to do more than a man.—C. A. Bates.

TURKEY'S CAPITAL.

Some Fresh Facts About the City of the Golden Horn.

Past and Present Aspect of the Great Metropolis of the Mohammedans—The Population and Principal Buildings of the City.

Now that public attention is so keenly drawn to the almost anarchic state of Turkey, the following particulars of the capital of the Ottoman empire will be of interest: Byzantium, Istanbul, or Constantinople as the place has been variously called, is situated at the junction of the Bosphorus and the Sea of Marmora, and may be said to be composed of three distinct towns, viz., Stamboul, Pera-Galata and Scutari. The two first named are on the European shore, and are divided by the creek called the Golden Horn, while Scutari lies on the Asiatic side, and is separated from them by the Bosphorus. Stamboul, or Constantinople proper, occupies the site of ancient Byzantium, and, like ancient Rome, is built on seven hills. On the first of these are the Old Seraglio and the famous mosque of Santa Sophia. Stamboul lies on a triangular promontory washed by the waters of the Golden Horn on the north, and by the limpid Sea of Marmora on the south, while the swift current of the Bosphorus flows past its eastern front.

Scutari, although a suburb of Constantinople, is practically a separate town, the distance across the water being about two miles. It largely resembles Stamboul, both externally and internally, with its numerous mosques, its bazaars, public baths and manufactories. It will be remembered chiefly by English readers on account of its hospital having been used by the Anglo-French army in the winter of 1854-5 and by reason of its beautiful English cemetery with its monument to the heroes of the Crimean campaign. Its population is now about 60,000, that of the whole capital being about 1,500,000.

Stamboul is the native city, and contains most of the government and public buildings. Here are situated for instance, the sublime porte (a gateway of justice, from which the government of Turkey takes its name), the war office, the seraglio, the law courts, the railway station, the custom house, the mosques of Santa Sophia and countless others; the mint and museums, the Ban Yeni, and the Egyptian bazaars. The landward side of the city of Theodosius, rebuilt in 447 A. D., and now in a ruinous state.

Pera-Galata is the European or Christian town, and the center of business, the Imperial, Ottoman and other banks, the exchange, and steamship and merchants' offices being in Galata. Most of the embassies are situated on the hill of Pera. The principal street of Constantinople, where all the European shops are, is the Grande Rue de Pera, and the next in importance is the Rue Tepe Bachi, along which the Pera-Galata trams run, and where the best hotels, the British embassy and the Petits Champs Municipality gardens are situated. The Yildiz Kiosk, where at present the sultan resides, is practically in the country, about four miles from the sublime porte. The palace is surrounded by barracks, where a large force of the Imperial Guards is quartered; and no strangers are allowed to enter the gates.

The Golden Horn—La Corne d'Or, Chrysos Keras—call it what you will, the name of the classic waterway is one with which to conjure. That its greater glory is now gone is not to be disputed; that it still remains the most interesting strip of water in the world is as little to be denied. On one side of it rises a lordly line of mosques, those of Santa Sophia, Sultan Mahmoud, Sultan Selim, Sultan Bajazet, of Sultan Mahommed conqueror of the Christians—who shall say how many more? Up the heights on the further shore climb the palaces of the foreign ambassadors, that of Britain, as is meet and right, standing above them all.

Crouching down by the water's edge are the arsenal and the admiralty, barracks and custom houses, prisons and powder magazine; every one who wishes to pile up a block of government buildings seeks a site for it on the shores of the Golden Horn. Until 60 years ago, those who wished to cross the Horn called up a kiosk or waited for a ferryboat; then it occurred to the Sultan Mahommed II. that a permanent way might be an advantage. Accordingly he summoned the grand admiral—no less important an official is custodian of the Golden Horn—and bade him see the thing should be done, the sultan adding significantly that he meant to survey the undertaking in person at a specified date. Georgi, a Greek, took the work in hand and did it well, as his lord attested, when the way was baptized in the name "Noosretiya" (the benefaction). From sunset to sunrise throughout the year it was declared that this bridge should remain open, while during the feast of Rhamazan free passage is allowed throughout the night, that the followers of Allah may visit mosques at their own time.—St. James' Budget.

LONG HAIR FOR MUSICIANS.

Its Value Practically Illustrated Through M. Ysaye.

"Is long hair an unfailing mark of genius?" The answer is: No, not necessarily, but it is certainly a mark of policy. It does not require any profound wisdom on the part of a public performer to know that it is better to be talked about for his ugliness or his eccentricity than not to have his personality discussed at all, and if a man be so unfortunate as to possess a normal face and figure, with the average number of features and limbs, in what quarter must he look for individuality save in his hair?

M. Aime Lachaume, the young French pianist who is this year touring with Rivarde, and who did the same last year with Ysaye, tells how he happened this season to bloom out as one of the long-haired brethren. When he first came to this country M. Lachaume wore his hair in every-day fashion, and also cultivated a rather tentative beard. People heard him play, exclaimed: "How unassuming!" went away, and forgot him. Since his conversion, however, the same persons cry: "How hideous! but the man is evidently a genius. Bravo!" and they depart, and this time do not forget.

It was Ysaye who brought this change about. Last year, in the course of their travels, the two artists found themselves in a town somewhere in the west. They were sitting in a room together, when Ysaye exclaimed: "It's no use, Lachaume, I can't stand that beard of yours any longer; it is too ugly, and it must come off!"

"But, my dear man," answered the alarmed pianist, "I have taken such pains to grow that beard; it has cost me years of labor and anxiety; besides, you know one must have something distinctive about one."

"Yes, of course, I know that, but all you've got to do is to let your back hair grow like mine. And there's no time like the present, either, so you just sit down in that chair there and we'll make short work of the business."

No sooner said than done. In a few seconds Lachaume was sitting trembling in the chair, while the great Ysaye wielded the razor about his devoted chin.

"In future, my dear boy, use a razor, but never scissors, and you are sure to become famous."—London Truth.

BULLION EMBROIDERY.

Little Shops Where Uniforms Are Made Gorgeous with Gold.

One sees from the sidewalk of a quiet street east of Third avenue a big basement shop where two or three girls are bending over well-worn embroidery frames. The samples of their work displayed in the windows show that they are making bullion embroidery to decorate the coats or caps of military officers, policemen, and others whose trades or professions require uniforms. There is less to be done in the bullion embroidery trade in this city than in most old world cities, but there is a constant and growing demand for the handwork of the bullion embroiderers, and the trade is one that keeps its own in spite of labor-saving devices.

Bullion embroidery worked directly upon the stuff of the cap or coat is still the proper thing for the uniformed man who would have all his accoutrements right. The embroidery shops are usually little places, and the proprietor is sometimes a woman. The frame is a simple device of hard wood, enlarged or reduced in accordance with the needs of the particular piece of work in hand. The embroiderers are usually girls, often very young, though the designers are sometimes men. Embroidery designing is not a very difficult business, because little originality is demanded, since the trade has well-established traditions, and there are plenty of books to guide the designer. There are no new designs to be made in masonic, military or naval emblems, and even the myriad shooting clubs of the German quarter are not likely to require anything that will demand great ingenuity of the embroidery designer.

The girls that do the actual work of bullion embroidery are often native Americans, though the trade is mainly controlled by foreigners, French and German for the most part. The particular shop here indicated is managed by a Hebrew, and the pretty girls visible from the street as they lean over their work seem to have Jewish features.—N. Y. Sun.

Fend Settled by Marriage.

A feud lasting over ten years, in which blood was twice spilled, once on a church step, has ended by the marriage of William Hyland and Jessie Poyter at Maidstone, Ont. A decade ago William began to court Jessie, and her parents seriously objected, even to the point of kicking Hyland from the house, setting the dog at him, blating away at him with a shotgun, and later attacking him on the church steps. The church, even, was divided on the affair; families were set against each other, and two or three court cases grew out of it. Hyland had perseverance and Jessie was constant, and, despite the combinations of clubs, shotguns and fierce dogs, they succeeded in ending their ten years' courtship. When Jessie's father and brother heard of the ending they decided that Hyland had fairly won his bride, and sent word to him to come over to the house, that all was forgiven. Maidstone people are singing psalms of rejoicing over the happy culmination of the long fight.

FAMILY AFFAIRS.

In Other Words Folks Whose Names Get In Print.

Miss Julia Foley is sick.

L. I. Moore returned from Whitakers Monday evening.

W. B. Wilson and his little boys returned from Plymouth Monday evening.

W. W. Green, fertilizer inspector of the State Agricultural Department was here Monday afternoon.

B. F. Metzger, of Norfolk, was here Monday rollicking 'round in the snow. He found that the fire had broken up the demand for cigars for the present.

Sidney P. Owens, who formerly lived in Greenville but is now with Dun's Commercial Agency at Norfolk, was here Monday night to get a report of the fire.

E. H. Shelburn is occupying a portion of King's Weekly building temporarily. See his notice.

The snow continued to fall steadily through most of Monday night until it reached a depth of 9 inches on a level.

Workmen have commenced repairing the wing of the old Daney building that was left standing so it can be used.

Blount & Fleming have rented Mrs. Hoell's dwelling house and rooms and will make a law building of it. They will sub-let apartments for offices.

The Victor safe of Governor Jarvis stood the fire so that nothing was damaged in it. The safe was in the hottest part of the fire, it being under the stairway of the Opera House.

Let it Come.

It was reported this morning that the Greenville Lumber Co. was going to establish a brick yard right away. We have not seen a member of the company to ascertain the fact, but hope the report is true. The way to get new buildings started quickest is to have plenty of material in readiness.

Don't Hinder, But Help.

While so many people have been burned out and are looking for places to get in, we hope no one will show a disposition to take advantage of the unfortunate. Extend them all help possible and all work together to get the town on the road to prosperity again.

Want More of Them.

Monday we asked Mr. J. N. Hart, of the firm of Baker & Hart, who had just started opening their hardware business here and lost in the fire all the goods that had been put in the store, if it was his purpose to remain here. "Yes," he replied, "we will stay in Greenville. If we can't get a building for our business any other way we will buy a lot and build one." That's pluck, and was the kind of talk we like to hear. Greenville needs that sort of men now.

Look Up.

Kind nature has sent a snowy mantle and even robed in white beauty the dismal wreck that covers a portion of the town. Maybe this was to shut it out from view for the time being, keep us from looking despondently upon the ruins, and give us time to take heart and resolve to again bring beauty out of the chaos underneath. If we only try to look on the bright side, leave the past behind and turn our faces hopefully to the future, all will be well.

F. M. HODGES, N. G.

C. D. ROUNTREE, Sec'y.

Notice.

Since the fire White & Speight have made their headquarters in the old Bank, and are still writing insurance. Our Mr. Speight also wishes to announce that he is ready to continue the sales of his celebrated Brands of Fertilizers, Krimt and Cotton Seed Meal. Don't forget where to find us.

WHITE & SPEIGHT.

Notice.

I would like to say to my friends and customers that I am endeavoring to secure a place to commence business again. I would be glad to retain your trade and trust that you will make no permanent arrangement for trading until my announcement is made.

Respectfully,

JOHN S. SMITH.

P. S. If I fail to reopen my store I will probably be with some one and would be glad to have you as my customers.

Do Something at Once.

The citizens of the town should not neglect another day to do something toward getting a water supply. They should hold a meeting at once and take such action as will compel those obstinate Councilmen to perform their duty. There has been folly enough along this line. If another fire should occur how much better prepared are we to fight it than before? Do you propose to sit still until the remainder of the town is destroyed?

WHITE & SPEIGHT.

REPRESENTED BY

Union Central Life Insurance Company,

OF CINCINNATI, OHIO.

LOUIS MOLLENHAUER, Director, Henry Mollenbauer's Collection of Music, New York, N. Y., Feb. 1902.

Messrs. John E. Stratton

Dear Sirs.—I am using your Violin Strings and must say without flattery that I never used a more durable and more perfect String. I have had one length of it on my Violin five days and it is to-day just as good as when I put it on, and I average playing eight to ten hours daily. The sale of these strings should be enormous. Send me at once two bundles of Strings.

Yours truly, LOUIS MOLLENHAUER.

Not Taking Advantage.

I am thankful to say that I was not in the fire, and inform the public that they can get goods as cheap at my store as anywhere in town. Special low prices to everybody.
