WHEN THE CIRCUS COMES TO TOWN.

When posters yellow and red and green
Are spread over everything,
To tell the magical sights to be seen
In the tent of the sawdust ring,
When jockey and elephant march in
The real
Of the painted and pallid clown.
We know we have reached the time of
The year
When the circus has come to town!
Each youngster rushes to follow and look
When the blare of the band he hears
And grandma beams from over her book,
"I guess that I'll take the dears!"
And papa, of course, has to go with the rest
To attend to the matter of cost,
And brother is suddenly much distressed
Lest the young ones might get lost!
And mamma concludes she'll have to go,
For with all of them out of sight,
With the lions and tigers around, at the show,
She'd be sure to expire of fright.
And sister, all suddenly, too, displays
An affectionate mild distrust Lest they might run away with the circus craze,
And declare that go she must!

The minister watches the gay parade
With a twinkle in his eye, in a frown,
And he seldom inquires where his little boy played
When the circus has come to town!
For a real boy once, is a boy though grown,
On the day of the sawdust ring,
When the children bow at the gilded throne
Where the tinsel clown sits king!

Original Observations.

Perfume is the soul of the flower.
Love and liquor do not long inhabit
the same house.
It is scandal's slimy story that makes old Satan smile.
'Tis the convict who makes a grate study of life.
Food for reflection never yet filled an empty stomach.
Democratic faith in Cleveland is not well grounded.
Many "heavy swells" float on the bill-owes of credit.
It certainly is not a mistake for a man to marry a widow.
A long engagement is what we would call a slow match.
The best religion of all is that which makes us love our fellow-men.
Printer's ink when used as paint, will make a sinner look a saint.

Maid of Orange, sweet little dear, have you proposed during leap year?

Never judge a moustache by its color, nor call it by such a name when its down.

The number of people engaged in crushing truth to earth is surprisingly large.

People who start libel suits are seldom enabled to dress better as a result of the same.

It makes us feel very cheap to hear our sweetheart singing, as we approach the house, "Nobody Loves Me."

net, and of the person who sends out words to sting and raise swellings in the heart.—Orange (Va.) Observer.

WANTED CIGARETTES.

Got Them and Got in Jail too.

On Sunday night about 1 o'clock officer Murphy saw a colored man acting suspiciously in the neighborhood of J.
B. Cherry & Co's store and kept an eye on him. A dog following officer Murphy noticed the man and went to him and laid down. The officer went to ring the one o'clock bell and on his return missed the man and dog and saw someone coming out of Morris Meyer's fruit store. The man ran, the dog following him. The officer awoke Mr.
Meyer and upon investigation found that the double-front door had been forced open and that a few packages of cigarettes were missed. A search warrant was issued by J. A. Lang, J. P. and officer Murphy having received information arrested Isom Griffin, a colored boy about 17 years old. Upon being searched six packages of cigarettes were found. He was tried this morning before Justice J. A. Lang and bound over to the Superior Court under a $200 bond. He failed to give it and was placed in jail to await the next term of court.

A Peppery Convention.

Some years ago, a famous English actress, having been disengaged for some time, had packed her wardrobe in pepper, to preserve it from moths.
She was called upon to take the part of the queen in "Hamlet." Being rather late for her first scene, she omitted to shake out her royal robes, and her dignified entrance had an astonishing effect. The king, after a brave resistance, gave vent to a mighty sneeze that well-nigh made the stage vibrate.
All the royal courtiers and maids of honor followed suit sympathetically.
Hamlet came on with a most sublime tragedy air, but after a convulsive movement of his princely features, he buried them in his robe, while sneeze after sneeze was all the public heard from him. Amid the hubbub on the stage, and the shrieks of delight from the audience, the stage manager, between sneezes, rang down the curtain.

Aerial Navigation.

It is almost here.

Not twenty-five years will elapse before it will be accomplished and we shall waft ourselves through space by means of some more or less complicated pinions. When balloon voyages to the North pole are seriously contemplated by foolhardy explorers, and Prof. Langley's air ship makes a flight of a half mile, we are approaching very rapidly the solution of a problem that has charmed the world ever since Daedalus and Icarus tried to make their way across the sea with waxen wings, and getting too near the sun, tumbled in. Aerial navigation is no longer a dream, a chimera, an idle fancy, it is a scientific fact; imperfect it is true, but budding into perfection very rapidly. Its great promoter and helpmate, of course, in the end will be electricity, and as inventions in that line progress so the airship will come nearer and nearer practical perfection.

One can hardly estimate the magnitude of the revolution which will be wrought in matters of transportation, both of men and material, when this new agent comes upon the scene. Distance will be still further annihilated and journeys across land or sea, no matter how far, regarded no more than a ride on the street cars nowadays. The airship, brought to a state of perfection, will make it possible to travel from New York to London in a couple of days, and we shall be able to leave Washington on Monday morning and be in San Francisco by Tuesday night, or perhaps even sooner.

Of course, there are doubting Thomases who will smile pityingly and incredulously at these predictions; but they or their kind did the same thing when the telegraph was suggested, or the telephone, or the phonograph. The marvel of to-day is the commonplace thing of tomorrow, and so it will be with man's flying through the air.

—Washington Times.

No Humor For Him.

The train boy was passing along with a stack of comic literature. The kind-faced gentleman looked interested and the boy stopped, says the Detroit Free Press.

"Haven't you anything except funny literature?" he asked.

"Not this trip," was the answer.

"Don't you like to laugh?"

"Very much, indeed. But I'm afraid my mind is of too practical a turn to develop what you might call a delectate responsiveness of humor."

"You want facts?"

"I'm afraid so. When I was a young man and went courting the young lady never ordered more dinner than I could pay for; neither did she use the palpable subterfuges to get me into the vicinity of an ice cream parlor. Although I was not enjoying a large income, her father never threatened to kick me down the front doorstep, nor did he keep a bull dog where he would be likely to bite me. My mother-in-law is a most estimable lady, whose presence in our household has always been a joy, and never in my life have I been obliged to get up in the night and walk the floor with a crying baby. These circumstances have had a tendency to make me distrust the accuracy of humorists, thereby, no doubt, materially lessening my appreciation of their efforts."

The train boy looked at him pityingly and said:

"No. There ain't no use o' you're tryin' to laugh. Wait till we get to the next station and I'll get you a dictionary and a pocket encyclopaedia."

ADDRESS TO A FLY.

You little busy, buzzing midget,
You put me in a nervous fidget
And make me scratch with every digit
Like Con-ou-i-thes.

You make the old bucks stamp and tussle,
You make the young ones jump and bustle,
You make the bald heads hunt and hustle
To save their top knots.

You are in the soup and in the pie,
You're on my nose and in my eye,
I'm fairly "caught out on the fly"
And clear off my base.

I was a christian up to date,
But you have vexed me so of late,
I blaspheme like a second mate
Or Texas colonel.

Last night I donned my Sunday clothes
And to my sweetheart did propose—
You lit upon my rec, red nose
And spoiled the tableaux.

You tease and fret the whole creation
And fill them full of irritation
And cause more oaths and fierce vexation
Than all the gin mills.

Chief of all the insect batch,
You do one thing that's worth a match,
"You bring mankind up to the scratch"
And keep them moving.

—Guy H. Avery in Charlotte Observer.

What Does it Mean?

Last week's Winston Republican has no word of comment about the Republican State convention, but supplies a new piece of information about the tricks in the committee on credentials as follows:

"Before the hearing of the Perquimans county case next morning and while the committee was waiting for some of the members, a young man from the Russell headquarters came to the committee room and called for Wheeler Martin, a member of the committee, and said to him in the presence of another member of the committee and the door-keeper, that Judge Ewart, who had appeared before the committee on behalf of the Russell delegates from Mecklenburg, had betrayed them and that he, Wheeler Martin, must file a minority report. Up to that time the report snowed 15 delegates for Russell and 17 for Dockery. This so incensed the committee which had already given the Russell men the benefit of every doubtful case in order that minority reports should not be offered that it caused a reconsideration on some of the cases settled the night before which brought about the following changes: Edgecombe was divided; Cumberland and Mecklenburg were given solidly to Dockery.

Places to Keep Money.

Several years ago before banks were convenient to our people, they selected their own places for the safe keeping of money. A citizen of Gastonia plowed an entire summer with $800 in bills in a wad in his breeches pocket. Another man, a well known citizen of the county, kept 2,000 in silver for quite awhile covered up in the ashes of an unused fireplace. These were indeed unique banks of deposit, but it must be said that they did not lose a dollar of the funds deposited and that the money was always ready for withdrawal without notice.—Gastonia Gazette.

How it Stands to Date.

There will be 910 delegates in the National Democratic convention, requiring 465 to control. A little more than one-third of the delegates have been chosen, and it is evident that the vote is going to be closer than is comfortable, though there is every reason to believe the silver men will have a good working majority. The vote to date stands:

A Pair of Them.

Lieut. Fauntleroy, of Simm's Confederate States battery, had a confirmed habit of stammering. One day, during the retreat from Camp Disland, Louisiana, while riding along the road he came up with a stragler from the St. Mary cannoners who, it seems, was similarly affected in his speech. Him the lieutenant accosted in his peculiar vernacular.

"H-h-h-o-o-w f-f-f-t-a-a-r is the a-r-r-r-tillery ahead?"

"D-d-d-darn f-f-f kn-n-n-ow," stammered the boy.

In a rage the lieutenant out with his sword and was about to go for the offender, when the soldier held up both hands, crying, "H-h-h-o-o-l-d on, I lieutenant, I-I-I-s-s-wear I c-c-cant talk a d-d-darn bit b-b-b-etter than you can."

—Southern Bivouac.

The Dejected Young Man.

"Woman," said the dejected young man, "is a fake."

"Yes?" spoke one listener.

"Yes. It has not been so many moons since I saved up all my billiard money and lived on beans two weeks to blow myself on an opera and a supper for a young woman. Then I asked her to marry me, and she said she was afraid I was too extravagant to make a good husband."—Indianapolis Journal.

Sympathy.

There are those who never take a stone out of the way, never put any light into darkness, never any comfort into sorrow. But there are those, too, who have much of the milk of human kindness, whose hearts are tuned to the key of tenderness, whose faces beam and scatter sunshine.—Rev. W. H. Moore.

STRANGE CONTRASTS IN ROME.

All Sorts and Conditions of Men Jostle One Another in the Streets.

Perhaps it is true that the impressions which Rome makes upon a thoughtful man vary more according to the wind and the time of day than those he feels in other cities. Perhaps, too, there is no capital in all the world which has such contrasts to show within a mile of each other—one might almost say within a dozen steps.

One of the most crowded thoroughfares of Rome, for instance, is the Via del Tritone, which is the only passage between the Pincian and the Quirinal hills, from the region of Piazza Colonna toward the railway station and the new quarter. During the busy hours of the day a carriage can rarely move through its narrower portions any faster than at a foot pace, and the insufficient pavements are thronged with pedestrians. In a measure, the Tritone of Rome corresponds to Galata bridge in Constantinople. In the course of a week most of the population of the city must have passed at least once through the crowded little street, which somehow in the rain of millions that lasted for two years did not manage to attract to itself even the little sum which would have sufficed to widen it by a few yards. It is as though the contents of Rome were daily drawn through a keyhole. In the Tritone are to be seen daily magnificent equipages, jammed in the string, between milk carts, omnibuses and dustmen's barrows, preceded by butchers' vans and followed by miserable cabs, smart dogcoats and high wheeled country vehicles driven by rough, booted men wearing green lined cloaks and looking like strange bandits. Even saddle horses are sometimes led that way, to save time, and on each side flow two streams of human beings of every type to be found between Porta Angelica and Porta San Giovanni.

A prince of the holy Roman empire pushes past a troop of dirty school children and is almost driven into an open barrel of salt codfish in the door of a poor shop by a black faced charcoal man carrying a sack on his head more than half as high as himself. A party of jolly young German tourists in loose clothes, with red books in their hands and their fieldglasses hanging by straps across their shoulders, try to rid themselves of the flower girls, dressed in sham Sabine costumes and utter exclamations of astonishment and admiration when they themselves are almost run down by a couple of the giant Roal grenadiers, each 6 feet 5 or thereabout, besides nine inches or so of crested helmet aloft, gorgeous, gigantic and spotless.

Clerks by the dozen and liveried messengers of the ministries struggle in the press; ladies gather their skirts closely and try to pick a dainty way where, indeed, there is nothing "dainty" (a word which Dr. Johnson confesses that he could not find in any dictionary, but which he thinks might be very useful); servant girls, smart children with nurses and hoops going up to the Pincio; black browed washerwomen, with big baskets of clothes on their heads; stumpy little infantry soldiers in gray uniforms; priests, friars, venders of boot laces and thread, vegetable sellers pushing handcarts of green things in and out among the horses and vehicles with amazing dexterity and yelling their cries in superhumanly high voices—there is no end to the multitude.

If the day is showery, it is a sight to see the confusion in the Tritone when umbrellas of every age, material and color are all opened at once, while the people who have none crowd into the codfish shop, and the liquor seller's, and the tobaccoist's, with the traditional con permiso of excuse or entering when they do not mean to buy anything, for the Romans are mostly civil people and fairly good natured. But, rain or shine, at the busy hours the place is always crowded to overflowing with every description of vehicle and every type of humanity.—Marion Crawford in Century.

There is no building material so durable as well made bricks. In the British museum are bricks taken from the buildings in Nineveh and Babylon which show no sign of decay or disintegration, although the ancient did not burn or bake them, but dried them in the sun. The baths of Caracalla and of Titus in Rome and the Thermæ of Diocletian have endured the ravages of time far better than the stone of the Colosseum.

Why the Boiler Maker Called.

"Do you know," said Mr. Gratebar, "that for a long time I couldn't imagine what brought our neighbor, Mr. Anthony Hammerby, in to see us so often. Mr. Hammerby was a retired boiler maker and then a boss, and having made a modest fortune he had retired to enjoy it. He lived only two or three doors from us, and he used to come in often evenings. He seemed particularly to like to hear the children play on the piano, and if they didn't play he would always ask to have them. I used to wonder at this, because I never had any idea that Mr. Hammerby was especially fond of music, and one day I asked him about it.

"Well, you see," said Mr. Hammerby, "I suppose that every man has a feeling of affection for the trade or profession that he was brought up in. I know that I have that feeling for my own, and when I hear your children play duets or the piano with the hard pedal on all the time, it makes me think of the dear old boiler factory."—New York Sun.

He Returned From Heaven.

The absentminded man, who is also religious, walked into church while the organ was breathing forth a long, low melody that seemed to be the music of heaven. And as he listened to it his air grew more preoccupied, a light not of earth came into his suffused eyes, all the better elements of his nature were moved in accord with the melodious strains, and for that moment he was not of earth.

Then he walked into his pew and started to take off his overcoat. So preoccupied was he that he did not realize he was pulling off his other coat until he stood there in his shirt sleeves in full view of the worldly congregation, which tittered so it could be heard.

Then the man who had been in heaven a moment before came suddenly back, and his feelings were like unto those of the suffering souls in hades.—Louisville Post.

Content.

The fountain of content must spring up in the mind, and he who has so little knowledge of human nature as to seek happiness by changing anything but his own disposition will waste his life in fruitless efforts and multiply the griefs which he purposes to remove.
