Vol. 3.

GREENVILLE, N. C., TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 1896.

No. 461

C. T. MUNFORD.

We are showing an elegant stock of Wash Fabrics, all new of this season's production, and just the thing for the warm weather, such as Dimities, Organdies, Batiste Spiral Cloths, Ducks, Ginghams, Plisse and Fancy Swiss Muslins. World call special attention to the beautiful selection of White Goods, Laces and Embroideries we have on hand, and still we are adding something new every few days. The prices are greatly reduced. The people are coming our way. Everybody admires our spring and summer styles of clothing. No wonder the crowds come to our place one reason is, because they can buy suits that suit them, another reason is, because we have the courage to accept small profit. Low prices are quick travelers. Men who want style, elegance and durability at low cost should see our line. Our's are the worthiest garments to be found anywhere at anywherenear the price. Our customers demand Clothing of character and refinement—something above the ordinary "refinement"—fine grades, perfection of make, best taste, moderate prices are the prominent points in our clothes. We also have beautiful line of Gents Furnishing Goods which we are offering at surprisingly low figures.

IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Matters Of Interest Over the State.

A number of anti-Russel colored Republicans have called a State mass meeting in Raleigh July 2nd, and they say that they favor Mayor W. A. Guthrie, as their gubernatorial nominee.

Some one at Hillsboro, in the Hillsboro Observer, of last week, asked why it is that University Station is like the Gubernatorial prospects this year in North Carolina? He answered by saying that at University Station you change cars for Chapel Hill, while the Democratic party will charge Car(r)s for Governor.

R. H. Battle, at the Normal commencement: Vance, the mountain boy, was walking with Dr. Mitchell, the learned geologist, one afternoon at the University. They came to an old mill with a broken dam. Vance pausing for a moment looked at both mill and dam, and said to the good old doctor, with a straight face: "Doctor that mill ain't worth a dam!" The doctor thought that was just about the size of it.—Greensboro Volunteer Fireman.

Hookerton Items.

HOOKEKTON, N. C., June 8, 1896.—W. F. Edwards, who has been right sick, is better now.

Potato crop is short and very small this year.

Dr. Thomas M. Jordan's son is again very sick.

F. A. Mosley went to Seven Springs Friday and returned Sunday evening.

Tobacco is still a growing in this section. Crops are very fine.

D. H. Dixon & Co. are having a porch built to their store.

Drummers are coming often and thick now.

Mrs. Julia Creach, and daughter, Miss Rosa, were visiting Mrs. John Taylor Sunday.

Mrs. Nancy McGowan is the guest of Mrs. Zack Taylor this week.

WANTED.—A wife who can cook and keep a good nice home. Apply to W. M. E.

Oakley Items.

OAKLEY N., C. June 8, 1896.—Mrs. Bettie Andrews left Monday to visit her uncle, Mr. Batt Weathersbee, near Newbern.

Miss Crissie Carson died at the home of John H. Whitehurst, Friday, after a long illness with typhoid fever.

W. H. Williams, of this place, went to Tartoro Saturday to visit his nephew, H. L. Williams, who is very sick with typhoid fever.

Crops are looking well in this section and are in good condition.

In our next we shall give an account of some of Cupid's caperings at this place.

The Irish potato crop is moving and is very good. If they don't fall too low our people will clear something on them.

Three Kegs in One Buggy.

A horse drawing a buggy, but having no driver, was stopped Monday night by people living on Cotanch street. In the buggy were three kegs of liquor. A few minutes later a stranger walked up hurriedly, thanked those present for having stopped his horse, got up in the buggy and drove off leaving them wondering if the three kegs meant "moonshine" whiskey or somebody preparing for a big log-rolling.

CHEAPER WHEELS.

Bicycles are cheaper this year than ever before, but still the bottom figure cannot be reached as yet. No longer ago than last year people hesitated before buying a cheap wheel, or one of a model that had not received the test of several seasons; and with reason. Those who bought a low-priced wheel for economy often had to trundle it home as the result of a breakdown, or spend nearly the machine's price in keeping it repaired.

Wheelmen say that their experience with cheap wheels this year has been different. They believe that the very fact of old bicycle makers having made so great a reduction in the price of their '96 wheels, together with the increased facilities for manufacturing, is proof that there is a chance for a still greater drop in price.

A few years ago one invested in a bicycle as he would in a horse or a buggy. He had no intention of selling or trading it at the end of six months. A bicycle of any sort was a luxury, and its rider became more attached to it each year. Wheels were but slightly modified from year to year, and to ride one machine five or six years was not at all uncommon. Like fiddles, bicycles were said to grow better with age. Now, it may be said, a wheel must be built for the occasion. "Mine is the latest '96 wheel," is the proud boast of cyclists to-day.

This desire for new wheels of the latest pattern has done much to benefit manufacturers young in the wheel-making business. Cyclists feel that while a wheel may not have great endurance, it will suffice for a season or two, when they want a new one anyway.

It has been rumored that a consignment of bicycles is likely soon to arrive here from Japan, and that they will sell at a surprisingly low figure. Whatever may be the truth of this report, it is generally believed that bicycles should be cheaper than they now are, and that bright prospects await the concern which will furnish a rich man's wheel at a poor man's price.—New York Sun.

No News.

An exchange has a story of a colored man who went into a fish market in Richmond to buy a dinner for his master. After looking about for a few minutes, he stopped before a pile of shad.

Apparently his suspicions were aroused. He took up one of the fish and held it under his nose.

"What do you mean by smelling of that fish?" asked the dealer, indignantly.

"Didn't smell de fish nohow," answered the negro, "Only speakin' to him."

"Indeed! And what did he say?"

"I jes' ax him for de news at de mouf of de ribber, an' he say he done clean forgot, for he ain't seen no water for fo' weeks." Dats all he said."

TUESDAY, JUNE 9TH, 1896.

A pastor in the north-west received this notice from an attendant at his church: "Please don't preach but 20 minutes," to which the pastor replied, "when your little cup is full, the door is open: Walk right out."—North Carolina Baptist.

Mr. W. E. Curtis is responsible for the statement that the chief of the record and pension office in the war department places the number of deaths from disease, as well as killed in battle in the union army and navy during the rebellion, at 364,116. Let us suggest to the blatherskites in congress who are so anxious to fight England, Spain or anybody else, that we take, say half this number of able-bodied men from the United States and the same number from the country with whom we have a difference of opinion, march them out to the slaughter house and cut their throats; after which we can submit the points at issue between us to an arbitration committee and arrange a treaty of peace. Of course we might just as well make the treaty of peace without the prelude in the shambles, but there would be no "glory" in that. However, we further suggest that if somebody must be killed it would, perhaps, be policy to begin with some of these statesmen, who are pacing the halls of congress like the villain in a melodrama muttering: "Fee, fo, fi, fum! I smell the blood of an Englishman!"—Toledo Bee.

And he Was Run in.

The new bicyclist, colliding with the milk-wagon in the street, curled under his little nickel machine, thrust both his legs through its wire spokes, twisted his arms about the steering gear, and with a wild whoop went hustling into a group of shoppers.

"I arrest yez!" said the policeman, after he had arrived on the spot.

"Wha—what for?" groaned the battered young man, peering up from the ruins.

"Fer havin' yez bisickle on de sidewalk, av course," explained the officer with the lofty air that only a policeman knows how to assume.

Not too Funny.

It doesn't pay to be too funny. A man who formerly boarded at a Maine hotel used always to call for "old hen" when he saw chicken on the bill of fare. The table girl and cook thereupon prepared for him, and whenever chicken was served an old hen was provided, and this particular boarder always got a generous piece of that. After this order of things had continued for three months without the boarder suspecting the joke, one day he called the waitress to him and told her he was getting sick of old hens, and he'd like to have a taste of chicken. "Very well," was the reply, "you can have it, but you ordered old hen regularly, and as this house always pleases its guests when it is possible we've been giving you what you ordered."—Essex.

THE OLD-FASHIONED HEAVEN

SHALER G. HULLYER.

It pears ter me, wife, that the doctrines Which we now hear preached an' sung, Ain't exactly as we heard 'em In the days when we wer' young. They are now not nigh so import'nt, An' they seem to have grown mo' kind—

Is the world mo' larn'd or better That it's leavin' its hardness behind? We don't hear so much about heav'n, Where ther'll be no mo' any night; Where with golden haros we'll be sing-in' 'Round the throne that is great and white.

An' we don't hear much uv the man-sions,

An' the street uv shibin' gol', An' how we'll be like ter the angels When we're safe with the fol'.

An' these days we hear but little Uv that other old-fashioned place That was made fur the fallen angels An' the lost uv the human race, Uv its fires forever ragin', An' the worm that dieth not: Uv the wrath uv God unfailin' An' the soul's unchangin' lot.

An' wife, there's a sight o' comfort In that dear old-fashioned heav'n, Where, within a glorious mansion, We'll be safe with our childrun sev'n,

But then—but then, supposin'— Now Jack, as we know, from a lad Was a little wild; jest a little; (He loved us too well to be bad).

So, away from his home he wander'd, An' we know not where he's stray-in',

Only know that the rover is ours, As when he around us was playin'— Supposin', I say, when up yonder We're safe with the six who're here, Do you think you'll be happy, mother, If you find our Jack is not there?

I know you too well ter b'lieve it; All your thought would go after the lad;

The harp in your hands would be silent,

All the glory could not make glad, An' ther'd be no end ter your sorror On account o' the one down below; You'd rather, be there yourself, mother,

Than ter have him there, don't you know!

Jenny Lind Sung For Him.

Edward V. Eccles, the veteran musician, who died within the past week at his home on North 13th street, was fond of telling this anecdote of his youth: "It was about the beginning of the war," he invariably began. "I was then a clerk in a large music-publishing house on Chestnut street. One day a well-dressed quiet little woman entered the store and asked me to show her some music of a classical nature. We struck up quite a conversation, in the course of which I asked her if she had heard the great Jenny Lind, who was then the talk of the town. She laughed and said: "Oh, yes, I have heard her. Have you?" I told her that I hadn't had that pleasure and that I had very little prospect of hearing her the price of admission was so high. She laughed again and then she handed me a song she had picked out and asked me to play the accompaniment for her while she tried it. She sung so beautifully that I played like on: in a dream. When she had finished she thanked me and with a rare smile she said: 'You cannot say now that you have never heard Jenny Lind.' She thanked me again and left me dumfounded."—Philadelphia Record.

What One Man Did.

Dr. William Moon, the famous blind philanthropist, who has just died at Brighton, England, lost his sight when he was twenty-one. He at once set about learning the systems of reading for the blind then in vogue; but finding them all imperfect, he invented a new system, which is now widely used in institutions for the blind.

The alphabet in his system consists of only nine characters, placed in various positions. They are composed of the simplest geometrical figures.

Dr. Moon's success in this direction determined him to devote his life to the welfare of the blind. Languages were his special study, so that he might give all nations the advantage of his alphabet. During his fifty-five years of blindness he adapted his embossed alphabet to 476 languages and dialects, and his books have circulated all over the world.

The number of volumes issued in his type up to the close of 1892, was 194,993. He also wrote music for the blind, and drew embossed geographical and astronomical maps, as well as pictures. He established numerous free lending libraries and home teaching societies for the blind.—The Household.

Just at This Time o' Year.

New York is standing aghast over the disappearance of the wealth of its millionaires. The Vanderbilts who have suffered from inflationist reports that they are worth $200,000,000 or $300,000,000 are hardly able to scrape up $8,000,000 to put on the tax lists. The Goulds some time ago felt so poor that they retired to agricultural life in New Jersey to economize on tax. All the rest of the circle erroneously reported to be gilded, from Chauncey Depew down—or up—have been before the tax commissioners swearing that their possessions have been greatly over-rated, and that they are only worth various sums, alarmingly modest in comparison to the general estimates. There is nothing like an assessment blank for shrinking a man's property values.—Raleigh Press-Visitor.

The Boy in Business.

"What kind of a boy does a business man want?" replied a shrewd practical man of many concerns, the other day. "Well, I will tell you. In the first place, he wants a boy who doesn't know too much; business men generally like to run their own business, and prefer some one who will listen to their way rather than to try to teach them new kinds; secondly, they want a prompt boy—one who understands seven o'clock as exactly seven, not ten minutes past; third, an industrious boy, who is not afraid to put in a little extra work in case of need; fourth, an honest boy—honest in his service, as well as in the matter of dollars and cents; and fifth, a good-natured boy who will keep his temper even if his employer loses his own now and then!"—Selected.

Imprudent, But Gushing.

Young women who take books at the circulating library are imprudent to use their pages as blotters. They are doing wrong also, for it is against the rules. A copy of "Lord Ormond and His Aminta," which has been in use in a Philadelphia library, held in front of a mirror revealed the inscription: "I send you my heart with a kiss." All women finish their letters with that phrase, which cannot therefore betray anybody, but in this case the signature was there.

Shoes of the Gauls.

Before the Gauls were conquered by the Romans they had boots or shoes with soles in which were silver-headed nails. Some of these have been discovered in late years. The latter kind of boots and shoes—the long pointed ones—so familiar in pictures of the 14th century, and others, are more generally known.

Sabbath in Scotland.

Scotland's Sabbath is losing its sanctity. Driving, cycling and golf on Sunday have now been followed by a vote of the Glasgow corporation throwing open the public bath-houses for four hours on Sunday morning.

A FAMILY CURSE.

It Seems to Have Held On for More Than a Century.

For more than 100 years, it was said, a fatal spell hung over the Goldsmids. Toward the close of the 18th century there died in London the Rabbi de Falk, who enjoyed a high reputation as a seer. He left to Aaron Goldsmid, a great-great-grandfather of the late member for St. Pancras, a sealed packet, with injunctions that it was to be carefully preserved, but never opened. The old Dutch merchant who founded the branch of the Goldsmid family in this country was warned that as long as his order was obeyed, so long would the Goldsmids flourish like a young bay tree. If it were disregarded, ill-fortune would for all time dog the footsteps of the race. Aaron Goldsmid left the packet inviolate for some years. One day, curiosity becoming ungovernable, he opened it. When his servant came to call him he was found dead.

Aaron Goldsmid left a large portion of his fortune to two sons, Benjamin and Abraham. These went into business on the London stock exchange, and vastly increased their patrimony. Benjamin founded a retail college and performed many acts of his known generosity. He lived long, but the curse of the cabalist overtook him. Enormously rich, the delusion that he would die a pauper fastened upon him, and to avoid such conclusion of the matter, he, on April 5, 1808, being in his 55th year, died by his own hand. Two years later his brother Abraham, being concerned in a ministerial loan of £14,000,000, lost his nerve, blundered and bungled, sank into a condition of helpless despondency, and on September 28, 1810, a day on which a sum of £500,000 was due from him, he was found dead in his room.

The fortunes of the family were restored by Isaac Goldsmid, nephew of the hapless brothers and grandson of the founder of the English house. Like all the Goldsmids, Isaac was a man of generous nature and philanthropic tendencies. With him it seemed that the curse of the cabalist had run its course. It is true that before he died he lapsed into a state of childishness. But he had at the time passed the limit of age of fourscore years, after which as one of the kings of his race wrote centuries back, man's days are but labor and sorrow. Isaac Goldsmid was succeeded in his fortune and his baronetcy by his son Francis, on whom the curse of the cabalist seemed to fall when he was fatally mangled between the engines and the rails at Waterloo station.—H. W. Lucy, in "From Behind the Speaker's Chair."

WOULD NOT CUT HIS HAIR.

Marshal Canrobert Refused to Obey the Army Regulations.

It was a singular fact that the late Marshal Canrobert, the last of the French marshals, offered in himself a constant example of the violations of the regulations of the army in which he was so conspicuous an officer. Throughout almost the whole of his military service Canrobert wore long hair flowing down his shoulders, and this hair was a sort of oriflamme to the soldiers. But ever since the year 1833 the French army regulations have positively required that every officer and soldier shall wear closely cut hair, "without any tufts, curls or ringlets whatsoever," and severe penalties are provided for persistence in letting the hair grow long.

Canrobert had a profuse mass of hair which he was very proud of. It was cropped to his great grief when he went into the military school of St. Cyr in 1826, but when, as a young officer, he went into the Algerian war in 1835 he profited by the relaxation of many regulations there to let his hair grow down his shoulders again. Several years later, also, in Algeria Col. Canrobert, bareheaded, led a heroic charge at Zaatcha and his long floating hair, in the thick of the combat, served as a rallying sign to the zouaves as they swarmed through the breach. After this war Canrobert's head of hair had already become so famous that no superior ventured to command him to cut it off, though Gen. Pelissier, who hated him, once called him "professor" in a cafe in Paris, and by way of excuse affected to have mistaken him for a doctor of philosophy on account of his hair.

The emperor Napoleon III. did once venture to remonstrate with Canrobert for wearing long hair. The marshal's response was very "Frenchy."

"Sire," he said, "my hair belongs to history!"

He did not cut it off. It floated all through the French and German war, becoming legendary among the soldiers. Long since it became snow white and fell upon the old marshal's shoulders in his declining days, and it clustered about them as his body lately lay in state in Paris.—London Tit-Bits.

Cool Enough.

A Massachusetts congressman who was on board the train which was wrecked at Hyde Park, Mass., last fall, says that when the shock came one of the passengers was pitched over several seats just in time to receive the contents of the water-cooler, which tipped over and soaked his clothing with ice-water. A highly-excited passenger rushed up to him and told him to keep cool.

"Go way," said the wet man; "I am the coolest man in the car. I have just had two buckets of ice-water emptied down my back."

NORTH CAROLINA TEACHER'S ASSEMBLY.

Asheville, N. C., June 16—30, 1896.

For the above occasion the Southern Railway will sell round trip tickets at the rate of one fare for the round trip plus two dollars Membership Fee. Tickets will be sold June 13—27 inclusive, good to return till July 20. Rate including Membership Fee from Goldsboro, $12.45. Selma, $11.70. Raleigh, $10.80. Father Pat's Hospitality.

As to Father Pat's hospitality, it may be rude and rough, but there is no mistaking its warm and generous whole-heartedness. The dinner in a country parish invariably consists of a roast turkey, a boiled leg of mutton with turnips, boiled bacon with cabbage, and potatoes served in their jackets. Claret is the wine principally drunk. It is only on very important occasions that champagne makes its appearance, but there is always a plentiful supply of the best Irish whisky, and, if made in the district, of "potheen." Father Pat has, it must be admitted, a liking for whisky punch after dinner, in judicious moderation, of course, and his only other dissipation is a smoke—always a clay pipe, never a cigarette or a cigar. When a "suspended" or disrobed priest is met with in Ireland—and that very rarely happens—his misfortune is usually to be traced to drunkenness. There is never a lady in the case.—Contemporary Review.

Gluten Gravy.

To one pint of good milk add one tablespoonful of gluten meal. Leave it surrounded by boiling water 15 or 20 minutes. Salt to taste and thicken with flour to the desired consistency.

Three More Brick Stores.

We understand that Mr. C. M. Bernard is negotiating with contractors for three brick stores on his property adjoining the Elliott block.

Since the above was put in type Mr. Bernard has closed a contract with Barnes & Riddick for the three stores. The contractors had ground broken this afternoon for the walls of the building and will push the work to completion.

Will Marry Wednesday Morning.

Dr. Charles O'Hagan Laughinghouse left this afternoon for Snow Hill, where he will be married at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning to Miss Carrie Dail, of that town, Rev. Mr. Earnhardt officiating. Immediately after the ceremony the couple will drive to Goldsboro where they will depart on a ten days' bridal tour.

There is no young man in Greenville held in higher esteem than Dr. Laughinghouse, and there is no more charming and accomplished young lady in our sister county than the one he wins for his bride. Their host of friends wish for them a long life of unbroken happiness.

It must be gratifying to the Charlotte Observer that its own county, Mecklenburg, showed such a large majority in favor of free coinage at the precinct meetings on last Saturday.

The Methodist Sunday school went out this morning to the Pollard place, three miles from town to spend the day on a picnic. They were a merry party when they left and anticipated a day full of pleasure.

Information reached here today of the death of Rev. W. J. Solomon. He was once pastor of the A. M. E. church here, and was as well thought of by everybody as any colored man who ever lived in the community.
