PITT COUNTY TAKES THE LEAD.

She Has Tobacco Lands That are Unsurpassed.

BY O. L. JOYNER.

There is no section of North Carolina, excepting not even the far-famed south side in historic old Granville, that rivals the section just below Greenville known as Red Banks, in the production of bright tobacco.

For the last seven or eight years the people of this section have been cultivating tobacco in a greater or less degree and never do we remember any year, however unfavorable the circumstances might have been, that a fair crop was not made and of such quality that it sold for leading prices.

There are several reasons which can be very properly assigned for the good crops that are made in this section. First and most important is the nature of the land. It is of a light gray loam and just undulating enough to make the drainage about natural, hence there is but little damage to the crops from wet weather. The primitive growth of this land is oak, dogwood, hickory, and pine of course, but it is almost universally true that when dogwood, hickory and oak constitute the primitive growth of land tobacco can be successfully grown.

Another very important agency which contributes its full quote toward making successful crops is the industry of the people. A class of people live there that do the most of their work. In other words they are a hard working class of people and when they employ help they make the help help something, which is very commonly neglected here in the south, and last, but by no means the least to be regarded, is the fact that the majority of them are small farmers who own from forty to one hundred and twenty-five acres of land, and who cultivate their land more upon the intensive than the extensive system. Small farms are to-day becoming popular all over the south and in some sections of our southern states where a few years ago were large areas of land from a thousand to five thousand acres in a single tract are to-day divided up and constitute a number of farms. The old time southern farms of ante-bellum days with their princely homesteads are annually becoming more dilapidated and are being rapidly converted into smaller farms, and where a few years ago one man owned and controlled his thousands of acres which were cultivated by slow labor to-day is divided up into one hundred acre farms and to all appearances this class of farmers are getting along and doing better than the large land owners. Why this is, no one seems to know except that it is so. Our conditions are changed and the methods must necessarily be changed also, but the writer is not one that believes that large farms cannot be managed as profitably to-day as formerly, although it is a popular idea and is advocated by our most scientific agriculturists, and practically demonstrated by a great many of our farmers, notably those that we have described above.

Yet we firmly believe that if proper business methods were employed, the large farms could be made to pay as profitable dividends in proportion to the price of farm products as formerly, and we believe in a few years this will be practically and conclusively proven. Suffice it say in this connection that we believe that our people are too slow to adapt themselves to the changing conditions that are constantly going on and in this we believe lies the secret of the failure of a majority of large farms. As this article was not intended for a discussion of large and small farms we take occasion to say that we shall revert to this subject at an early day.

Small farms cultivated upon the intensive system as a matter of logic will pay better than a large farm loosely managed. This section that we have above referred to which is about 5 to 8 miles wide and 10 to 12 miles long is managed and cultivated upon the intensive system, hence we give it as one of the reasons for the successful farmers in this section.

A SONG OF DAYS.

Lazy days an' daisy days,
An' time to take yer ease,
Rollin' in the clover,
Or hummin' with the bees.
Merry days an' berry days,
An' time to slip away
Where the river's makin' music
Under mosses cool an' gray.
Singin' days an' swingin days,
An' ain't you reelin' fine
When you're tangled in the blossoms
Of a honeysuckle vine?
Lazy days an' hazy days,
An' wouldn't life be sweet
With a green bank fer yer pillow
An' lilies at yer feet!

We expect to go to the seashore as soon as there is room enough for us in the ocean.

We are no longer in the race for congress. Our wife locked up our wooden leg and we can't run.

We are willing to accommodate a liberal quantity of summer relatives who bring their grub and house rent with them.

During the hard times last summer we swallowed a lightwood-knot and we are now threatened with appendicitis.

As a rule, our candidates don't have to do much speech-making. Money talks in this neighborhood.

We take silver on subscription, principle and anything else that you can lay it on.

Exercise for All.

"What do you think of the bicycle craze?"

"Great thing! I never took so much good exercise before in all my life."

"Why, I didn't know that you were riding."

"I'm not, but I have to cross the street once in a while."

Sixty-Six Negro Delegates.

The matter of accommodating the negro delegates to the Republican National Convention at the St. Louis hotels has begun to assume some troublesome importance. There are sixty-six of these including contestants.—Raleigh Press-Visitor.

Thomas J. Jarvis is the man to marshal the Democratic forces in the coming campaign, if he can be induced to accept the position of Chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee. As a political organizer, the Star does not believe he has a superior, if an equal, in the State. Jarvis is a man of the people, and we feel sure he would be willing to assume the laborious duties of Chairman if unanimously called to that position.—Wilmington Star.

WAKE FOREST ITEMS.

One week of vacation has passed, and already we hear much of preparation for the return of the students. Mr. J. H. Gore, of Wilmington, a member of the graduating class of 1896, has bought the lot just north of the campus, formerly belonging to J. W. Bailey and will at once erect several buildings, fitted up with all modern conveniences, such as water works, electric lights, bath rooms &c., &c., for use of students.

The water works are to be improved and rendered more efficient.

Work will begin at once on the infirmary, this will supply a long felt need.

The Summer Law School begins on Monday, 22nd inst. The growth of this School has been more than its most ardent advocates expected, and the coming session will be the most successful in its history. Almost every mail brings letters from young men who wish to study Law and expect to enter this summer. All will receive a warm welcome.

Prof. Cullom has accepted the Professorship of the School of the Bible to which he was elected May 28th. G.

A Piece of Columbus' Flag.

The Trinity College Historical Society have had presented to them a remarkable and highly prized relic, and one that is indeed valuable. It is a piece of the flag that Columbus raised at San Salvador, when he landed on the newly discovered continent of America and took possession of it in the name of Spain. This flag has been long preserved by the Spanish government, and was sent to the World's Fair along with some other relics from the La Rabida convent. The flag was much decayed, and in unpacking it at Chicago, a piece of it fell off. A piece of that piece was secured by Capt. Robert Vandergetz of the U. S. Army, who through the influence of Rev. A. J. Parker, of Williamston, N. C., presented it to the Society. It is so very much decayed that it has to be kept under glass.

It is an interesting old relic, and should be viewed by every one. It is in the museum, and may be seen by visitors at the commencement this week. —Durham Sun.

The Afternoon Nap.

A nap of "forty winks" in the afternoon enables many aged people to get through the rest of the day in comfort whereas they feel tired and weak when deprived of this refreshment. If they rest well at night there can be no objection to the afternoon nap; but if sleeplessness be complained of, the latter should be discontinued for a time. Most old people find that a reclining posture, with the feet and legs raised, is better than the horizontal position for the afternoon nap. Digestion proceeds with more ease than when the body is recumbent.

PROFITABLE PUBLICITY.

Some Fundamental Principles of Successful Advertising.

BY NATH'L C. FOWLER, JR. DOCTOR OF PUBLICITY.

Copyright, 1896, by Nath'l. C. Fowler, Jr.

He, who doesn't advertise, because he knows nothing about it, says that advertising doesn't pay.

Some advertising doesn't pay. Some lines of business don't pay.

It is as absurd for the merchant not to advertise because some advertising doesn't pay, as it would be for him to refuse to do business because half the business men fail.

Ninety-nine per cent. of all business men, who succeed, began to advertise when their business began, continued to advertise, and are now advertising.

One man out of a hundred does business successfully without advertising.

The rule of average is safer to follow than the law of exception.

The experience and success of the ninety-and-nine teach a profitable lesson in profit-making.

Business men don't do business for fun. They do it for profit. Because nearly all of them advertise, and succeed, is both direct and circumstantial evidence that advertising is absolutely necessary to the conduct of successful business.

I don't own any publication; I have no interest in any; I am not an advertising agent; I have no advertising to sell; it makes no difference to me whether the business men of Greenville advertise, or not.

I have no axe to grind. I'm telling you what I know to be the truth, and what every successful man will tell you.

Success in business depends upon five points of trade.

The first point of trade, something to sell.

The second point of trade, something to sell it in.

The third point of trade, management and capital.

The fourth point of trade, salesmen and employees.

The fifth point of trade, advertising. Without something to sell you can't sell anything.

Without a place to sell it in, you can't sell it.

Without business qualifications, and sufficient capital, you can't do business. Without employees you can't do much business.

Without advertising you can't tell people that you are in business.

The strength of all the points of trade is in the strength of each particular one.

Drop out any one, and you may as well drop them all out.

They are the five links in the chain of business, and as advertising is one of these links, the strength of the chain depends upon advertising.

The value of the best store, the best salesmen, and the best goods, is limited to the number of people who enter the store, or send to the store, and the inventive genius of the world has never produced anything to take the place of advertising, and until it does furnish a substitute, the man who does business, must advertise, or find that he has no business to be in business.

Killing Time.

The number of people engaged in this occupation is amazing. Killing time? Yes, that is all, and death would rid the land of pests any day it visits them. Well, that is a hard saying if it is true. Then who doubts its truth? There are men, able bodied men, who do nothing else but kill time, save eat and drink up what hard worked mothers and children earn, and anything that would rid the family of such a burden would indeed be doing them and the country a blessing. Something can be done by every man able to work; if nothing else a good garden can be made that will furnish wholesome food to a family. Killing time is a poor occupation, without honor. —Burlington News.

Is Cussing Ever Necessary.

There are not a few men, otherwise very good, who believe with uncle Toby that swearing is sometimes not only excusable but necessary, and that while the Recording Angel cannot officially excuse the lapse, he will drop a tear to blot it from the record.

Not a great while ago in the Superior court of a certain county in North Carolina, a Quaker had given certain evidence and the lawyer whose client was injured by the Quaker's testimony was trying to break down the Quaker's character in order to destroy the effect of his evidence. Here were the questions asked by the lawyer and answered by the Quaker:

"Do you belong to the church of the Quakers?"

"Yes."

"Isn't it against the laws of that church to swear?"

"Yes."

"Are you not a very profane man? Don't you swear on all occasions?"

"No sir, I haven't cussed none now for seven years, except one time last fall on the tenth of the eleventh month. Peter X— up here at High Point said I had put a white man between two negroes to dinner at my threshing, and I give him the damn lie."

Then turning to the jury the Quaker said, "I said damn lie twice, gentlemen of the jury."

"Turning to the Judge, with an earnest and honest air, the old Quaker said: "Judge, it does appear like a little swearing at times is absolutely necessary."—Raleigh News and Observer.

Give the Boy Land.

Every boy that lives on a farm, and every girl, too, for that matter, should have the use of a piece of ground. It need be only a small, out-of-the way corner at first, a place for the child to dig and make plans, increasing gradually to the acre of corn or potatoes or turnips, or whatever it may be, as the child grows older.

There are few farms that could not easily spare it, and few children to whom it would not be a benefit.

Books and magazines and games are good, but they are for the mind, and the leisure hours; and while they may keep the children at home, they can scarcely foster a taste for farming without something to supplement them.

A child early learns the meaning of possession, and a few square rods of his own will be more to him than the broad acres of his father. Many a boy has grown to manhood on the farm, and left it at the earliest possible moment after he became of age because he had been made a mere machine—a laborer without a laborer's wages.—The Household.

The North Carolina delegation to the Republican Convention at St. Louis, has not obtained headquarters or hotel accommodations, though National Committeeman Henry J. Cowles, has been written to on the subject a number of times, and has never answered, so the St. Louis papers say. All of the other delegations have made these arrangements.

Too Good to Use in Spanking.

Almost incredible sums are sometimes expended on slippers. Thus not long ago a countess had a pair made, ornamented with rubies, emeralds and diamonds, costing $20,000. But at a masked ball given by the duke of Manchester some years ago a lady impersonating Cinderella wore a pair of slippers adorned with jewelry valued at over $60,000.

Spectacles.

Roger Bacon was the first to suggest the use of spectacles. When they came into use in Italy, about the year 1285, on the recommendation of Alessandro di Spina, a monk of Pisa, women were forbidden to wear them, because it was thought that such facial ornamentations would make them vain.

A Free Press in Austria.

BRITISH HOSPITALITY.

Said to Be on the Decline—The Restaurant Too Convenient.

Is the art of British hospitality on the decline? A writer in the London World believes that it is, and assigns as the cause "the adoption for entertaining purposes of that practice of nomadic dining which has been so largely borrowed of late years from the other side of the channel." The home dinner party is disappearing, he mournfully adds, owing to the multiplication of gorgeous and palatial restaurants, with all their alluring possibilities of vicarious hospitality. No one can seriously pretend that to entertain at a restaurant is the same thing as to entertain under one's own roof. It is a trouble-shirking method of discharging social obligations utterly devoid of the sentiment associated with home.

"Flat life" is another "foreign" abomination which is contributing to the downfall of the once cherished British institution. Home life and flat life are two totally distinct things, and to a large extent antagonistic. Flat dwellers are debarred from entertaining in any but the most restricted manner, and their only resource is the restaurant. Again, the art of conversation, on which the home dinner depended so much for its success, is on the decline, for to-day "so great" is the dread of mutual boredom that hosts and guests at restaurant dinner parties frequently take the precaution to arm themselves en masse with tickets for the play, and thereby escape from the necessity of entertaining each other for a moment longer than is absolutely necessary by adjourning to the theater immediately the repast is concluded."

IN THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS.

Rather Spicy Sport in the Fishing Line Reported.

An Englishman tells in the London Field of a painful experience he had at the Andaman islands with a parrot fish. The parrot fish was of a dirty olive tint, with brown spots, and was possessed of a formidable beak, not unlike a macaw's, only the points met instead of overlapping, and it was composed of bone instead of horn. It was brought to the surface by some experimental torpedoes, and the Englishman picked it up and began poking his finger about it, supposing the brute to be dead. All of a sudden the open beaks came together with a snap and the Englishman lost the top of his thumb. The chunk bitten off was given by the coxswain to a panther (leopard) club.

The same coxswain and a number of sailors were drawing a seine for carnation carp, whose scales were the size of rupees and skin as tough as leather, when, as the seine closed up, a big fish fetched the coxswain a blow in the abdomen that knocked him galley-west over the boat's rail and into the water. That upset the boat, but all hands were rescued, and the fish were taken out to be eaten.

The Andaman islands furnish considerable sport with guns as well as rods, snipe and wild pigs being abundant at proper seasons.

A CURIOUS MIRROR.

Had Something of the Novelty of Famous X Rays.

A copy of the London Philosophical Journal of 1832 contains an account of a curious Chinese mirror, which had the power to reflect upon a screen by the aid of the sun's rays objects on the back of the mirror, the mirror being made of Chinese silver, a composition of tin and copper. The Journal stated that there were but few of the mirrors then in existence, and that they were evidently the remains of a lost art. From this it is inferred that the X ray was originally discovered by the Chinese. This claim will surprise no one, for sooner or later every great discovery that has tended to advance civilization is attributed to the Chinese, and yet, strangely enough, the Chinese are now hostile to the civilization that has grown out of their discoveries.

The Housewife Speaks

If an article that has become rusty is soaked in kerosene oil for some time, the rust will become loosened and come off very readily.

A little kerosene is an excellent thing for cleaning a zinc bath tub. Apply with a soft woollen cloth then wash off with hot water—no soap in it—and polish with powdered bath brick.

An excellent cure for hoarseness is to roast a lemon until it is soft all through; do not allow it to burst. While still hot cut a piece from the end and fill the lemon with as much granulated sugar as it will hold. Then eat it while hot.

To prevent pie juice from running out in the oven make a little opening in the upper crust and insert a straw or little roll of white paper perpendicularly. The steam will escape through it as through a chimney, and all the juice will be retained in the pie.

To clean a white sailor hat which is soiled remove or cover the band, and scrub thoroughly with 5 cents' worth of salts of sorrel, dissolved in cold water. Be careful not to bend the hat out of shape, as it becomes very stiff when dry. Place in the sun to dry.

Wife—George, didn't you say you were the heaviest batter in the nine last summer?

Husband—Yes dear.

Wife—Well, would you mind beating a carpet for me about half an hour?

OLA FORBES, Mayor. C. C. FORBES, Clerk.

There is a good story of a traveler in the backwoods of America, coming to a log hut, where he was obliged to put up for the night, and the occupant of the hut had so uncouth and repulsive an appearance that the traveler did not feel quite easy in resigning himself to sleep; but on looking through the crannies of the logs into the other room, where the light was shining, he saw his uncouth host bending by the firelight, over an open Bible, and without a moment's hesitation, he turned himself to sleep, convinced that he was safe in that remote dwelling. It tells its own tale. If you find a workman, if you find one of your children constantly retiring to study the Bible, you soon find that his character is growing better; he is more trustworthy and more helpful for the making of man or master.—R. F. Horton.
