IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Matters Of Interest Over the State.

Mrs. W. C. Jones, wife of Deputy Sheriff Jones, of Forsyth county, was killed by lightning at Walkertown Sunday evening. She was in the house holding her two-year old child when the flash came and she fell to the floor dead. The child was uninjured. The house caught fire and came near being destroyed.

Yesterday in the State Auditor's office, among a lot of old records, an interesting letter from Governor Benjamin Harrison, of Virginia, to Governor Alexander Martin, of North Carolina, was found. This Harrison was the great-grandfather of the present Benjamin Harrison, ex President of the United States.—Raleigh News and Observer.

In the store of R. C. Josey & Co. may be seen a last year's water melon. It was kept under the shelves all the winter without any special effort to protect it. Mr. R. L. Hardy, one of the salesmen, says it was put in the store about October. It has been kept there, then, about 8 months, and is in pretty good condition yet. Since writing the foregoing it has been cut and was well preserved.—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

MRS. A. M. CLARK DEAD.

The old and the young alike have to meet the reaper, Death, when the summons comes to them. At 6 o'clock Wednesday evening, just as the bell began tolling the hour for the burial of little Gladys Shelburn, the spirit of Mrs. Alvania M. Clark took its flight from earth.

Mrs. Clark was in her 81st year, and was the oldest lady in Greenville. She felt the approach of age, realized that life's span could not be lengthened many years at best, and was fully prepared for the end whenever it should come. She was confined to her bed about two weeks prior to her death.

Mrs. Clark was the widow of the Hon. S. Clark, who in ante-bellum days was a member of Congress from this district. He was also a lawyer of wide prominence and is remembered by our older people as a man of great ability and influence.

Mrs. Clark was a woman of rare culture and refinement, her gentleness and kindness winning to her the esteem of every one. In her early years she was converted and united with the Baptist church, her life always being that of an earnest, devoted christian. She was a woman of means and gave liberally to many objects of charity and benevolence, though always in a quiet way, her gifts being for sweet charity's sake alone and not for the praise of the world.

As a business woman we doubt if Mrs. Clark had a superior. Through the many years of her widowhood, she managed her own affairs and possessed qualifications of mind and a knowledge of business matters acquired even by few men.

Mrs. Clark leaves no children. In Greenville she has two half-sisters and one half brother now living. These are Mrs. H. A. Sutton, Miss A. M. Perkins and Mr. J. J. Perkins. She was also a great-aunt of Miss Louellie Pool, of Williamston.

The funeral will take place Friday morning at 11 o'clock at Cherry Hill Cemetery.

The attending physician has pronounced that the little child of Mr. A. H. Critcher has scarlet fever. Mayor Forbes has ordered the house quarantined.

A LETTER FROM THE SEASHORE

I am waiting by the sea,
Dearest—dearest love, for thee;
Waiting where the billows roll
House-high o'er my anxious soul.

Hasten, love, across the land—
Hasten to this pearly strand;
Haste to hear the ocean's song,
And bring your salary along!

P. S.—Bathing suits are dear,
When you have to hire them here;
Mine, if you will only look,
Is home there, in my pocket book.

TOBACCO AGAINST COTTON.

BY O. L. JOYNER.

We frequently hear farmers say that if tobacco should go down in price to 6 or 7 cents per pound they would be forced to go back into the cultivation of cotton or some other crop and leave off tobacco entirely. Now while we are not an advocate of growing large crops of poor tobacco, but rather small crops of superior quality, yet let's look at the figures and make some comparisons between tobacco and cotton—tobacco at 7 cents and cotton at 7 cents.

We have consulted a number of practical farmers and they say they can grow and house an acre of tobacco for from $25 to $35.00. Now on an average say it costs $30.00 an acre to grow and save it, and on this acre you get from 500 to 1000 pounds, say on average of only 600 pounds and it will average that the county over. You sell this 600 pounds of tobacco at 7 cents a pound and realize $42 for the acre. Now as we have taken a minimum average on the acre of tobacco we will apply the same rule to the acre of cotton. We will assume that the cotton land of Pitt county will average a half bale to the acre or 225 pounds of cotton which at 7 cts. a pound is $15.75. So you can plainly see that the profit on an acre of tobacco above all actual expense and cost is nearly equal to the entire gross amount of an acre in cotton.

As to the cost of growing and saving an acre of cotton we have not considered that at all. We shall leave the reader to make his own calculation.

Every year since Greenville has had a market the entire sales have averaged, including scrap, over 10 cents a pound. Now when we consider that the average cost of handling an acre of tobacco is $30 and that the average weight is 600 pounds and that the average price has been say only 10 cents, you see that on an average the farmers of Pitt county have realized a net profit of at least $30 for every acre of tobacco grown in the county. Of course every man that has planted tobacco has not made money out of it. Some have lost heavily, but more have lost as they would have done had the county been upon a single cotton basis. There are as a matter of course exceptions to these figures, for instance we know of several farmers who say that to grow and handle an acre of tobacco cost them every cent of $40. There are others who even say it costs more than that figure. This of course depends upon the amount of fertilizer used and usually it is the man who uses heavy applications of manure that gets the most money out of tobacco while we believe that too much fertilizer is frequently used and as this item is one of the chief sources of expense it is one in the use of which great care and judgment should be used in order to get the most satisfactory results.

The principal work of the St. Louis Convention to-day was the adoption of the platform. There was much discussion over the financial plank.

THE SOUTH'S OPPORTUNITY.

The most important question before the South is, how to secure immigration. A large movement of population from the North and West and of the better classes of German, Scandinavian and British farmers to the South would be of incalculable value to this section. It would stimulate the whole South, wonderfully augment the growth of manufactures, enhance the value of all agricultural land and of all city property increase the money-making opportunities of every man, woman and child in the South, bring about better educational facilities, secure the construction of better roads, forever settle all possible race questions, and give to this section a prosperity as much greater than that of the North and West as the natural advantages of the former exceed those of the latter. It is the duty of every man and woman interested in the South to bend their best energies to this great question. It demands the untiring work, the most liberal financial aid and the daily thought of everyone who desires to see the South enjoy the blessings that would come from an ever-increasing southward movement of population. The Manufacturers' Record, devoted to the industrial interests of this section, and reaching the manufacturers of the North and West, and the "Southern States" magazine, published by it, devoted wholly to its immigration and agricultural interests, and reaching thousands of prospective settlers, land buyers and immigration agents in the North and West, will press industrial and immigration matters upon the world's attention more vigorously and on a broader scale even than in the past. Will the people of the whole South, the bankers, the merchants, the manufacturers, the land owners, the railroad companies and all others realizing the vital importance of greater energy in this work and the greatness of the reward that is possible, take up these questions with new activity and enthusiasm?

Congressional Extravagance.

Among the new offices created by Congress, which has just adjourned, was an industrial commission of twelve members, three representatives each of agriculture, labor, manufacturers and business, the salary of each of these commissions to be $5,000 per annum, and each group is to be provided with an attorney at a salary of $5,000. The duties of the sub-commissions are to investigate questions pertaining to their specialties and to recommend legislation to Congress. There does not appear any necessity for the appointment of such Commissioners, and the conclusion, therefore, is that the act is simply a scheme to provide comfortable positions for friends and party workers of Congressmen.

If Congressmen had given more time to legislation looking to the relief of the country instead of creating offices of this kind the public might have less cause to grumble than now seems to be the case. If the fifty-fourth Congress had remained in session much longer its folly and extravagance would have exceeded by far Mr. Reed's famous billion Congress, and it is not altogether certain that even now such is not the fact.—Norfolk Virginian.

SMITHFIELD HAMS.

How These Famous Virginia Hams are Cured.

The following formula is unquestionably the receipt for curing hams which have given the town of Smithfield, Virginia, an international and enviable reputation.

Experts, who have read it carefully, have declared that it is precisely as Mr. Mr. E. M. Todd, of Wight county, treats his hams, that find a ready market at an advanced price.

The following is the receipt, which must be closely followed to attain the same result as Mr. Todd:

1. The hams are placed in a large tray of fine Liverpool salt, and the flesh surface is sprinkled with finely ground crude saltpeter until the hams are as white as though covered with a moderate frost—or use three or four pounds of the powdered saltpeter to the thousand pounds of green hams.

2. After applying the saltpeter immediately salt with the Liverpool fine salt covering well the entire surface. Now pack the hams in bulk, but not in piles more than three feet high. In ordinary weather the hams should remain thus for three days.

3. Then break and re-salt with fine salt. The hams thus salted should remain in salt one day for each pound each ham weighs.

4. Next you wash with tepid water until the hams are thoroughly cleaned, and after partially drying rub the entire surface with finely ground blackpepper.

5. Now the hams should be hung in the smoke house, and this important operation begun. The smoking should be very gradually done, lasting thirty to forty days.

After the hams are cured and smoked they should be re-peppered to guard against vermin and then bagged.

These hams improve with age, and the Todd hams are in perfection when a year old.

Where it is Really Cold.

Cold is merely a relative term. The resident of semi-tropical countries shivers when the thermometer falls to 50 degrees, while the Laplander and Esquimaux think it is comfortable at zero.

For real cold and plenty of it, one must go to the Polar regions. Think of living where the mercury goes down to 35 degrees below zero in the house, in spite of the stove. Of course, in such a case, fur garments are piled on until a man looks like a great bundle of skins.

Dr. Moss of the polar expedition of 1875-'76, among other odd things tells of the effect of cold on a wax candle which he burned there. The temperature was 35 degrees below zero, and the doctor must have been considerably discouraged when, upon looking at his candle, he discovered that the flame had all it could do to keep warm.

It was so cold that the flame could not melt all the wax of the candle, but was forced to cut its way down, leaving a sort of skeleton of the candle standing.

There was heat enough, however, to melt oddly-shaped holes in the thin walls of wax; and the result was a beautiful lace like cylinder of white, with a tongue of yellow flame burning inside it, and sending out into the darkness many streaks of light.—Popular Science News.

The Big Mill Failure in Georgia.

The Eagle & Phenix mills, at Columbus, Ga., went into the hands of receivers last Saturday. The indebtedness of the mills is $1,121,000. It is the largest manufacturing enterprise in the South and its weekly pay roll to hands is $5,500. When Sherman passed through Georgia on his march to the sea he applied the torch to this property and left it in ruins. When the war closed the owners decided to rebuild, and instead of one mill they put up two, and since then the property has been known as the Eagle & Phenix mills.

The petition for the receivers recites the fact that on Feb. 17, 1873, the Eagle & Phenix Manufacturing Company was granted permission by the legislature to operate a savings bank in connection with their other business, and began operating accordingly. More than $1,000,000 was deposited in this department and among the depositors were the petitioners. It is alleged that none of this money was used for loan purposes as is usual with savings banks, but that it all went to build additional mills and increase the facilities of the Eagle & Phenix company. On Feb. 14, 1891, the savings bank department was abolished or discontinued. At that time bonds were issued to pay the depositors. The petitioners wanted money when it was due, and demanding it, failed to get it.

Told of Daniel Webster.

It is never safe to say things to the ragged, unkempt men one sees and meets a-fishing by some mud pond or stream. This truth is illustrated by the case of Daniel Webster.

Webster was a fisherman and had sloops and a smack in which he used to enjoy the pastime. He was not over-fastidious in his fisherman's dress. If he tore his clothes he did not take the trouble to have the rent sewed up, and when enjoying his sport he was a tolerably rough-looking customer, according to a Rochester paper, whose reporter interviewed Mrs. Dawes, a resident of Marshfield in Webster's days.

Webster and Mrs. Dawes' uncle were fishing one day from the shore of the bay, when a stylish young fellow, a visitor at Marshfield, tumbled head over heels into the marsh. The tumbler yelled at Webster, asking how much he'd charge to haul him out and carry him over the mud.

"A quarter!" answered Webster, and the deed was done. Whereupon the quarter was turned over and Webster had started away, when the mud-stumbler asked:

"To whom am I indebted?"

"Only Daniel Webster."

The man said afterward that he apologized for his superciliousness, and did not reckon other people up according to the number of tears and patches and mud on their clothes.—New York Sun.

The Billville Banner.

We recently purchased a bicycle. The doctor say that with careful nursing we will be out in six weeks.

We lost one leg in the war and the other running for congress. We are still able, however, to play a full hand.

There is only one goldbug in Billville now, and he's in a dime museum under the direction of a silver manager.

There is no use to run for coroner in Billville. The only time a man drops dead here is when some one goes crazy and pays him $10 on account.

Money is so scarce in Billville that we are compelled to run for office on the installment plan; but it looks like we'll never be fully installed.

TOLD BY THE TEETH.

Character Revealed by the Formation of the Ivvories.

Large Teeth Indicate a Broad Temperament and Small Ones Show a Mentality of the Minute Order—An Interesting Study.

Have you ever thought that you may tell a person's character long after his death, when his body has decayed and there is nothing left but a few bones? Probably you have not, but it is quite possible, for character may be judged by the teeth.

In one important respect, character reading by means of the teeth is more reliable than that by means of the hands, lips, nose, eyes, feet or other parts of the body, valuable as they may seem in some particulars. It has been said that a man's mode of inner life, the working of his conscience, will leave some visible trace, some material influence on his general appearance, thus, in a measure, thwarting the original design of nature. For, by properly reflecting the light from a face, a person's character may be made to take a decided downward turn, a mouth may be made to droop at the corners, wrinkles may be induced at the corners of the eyes, the contour and lines of the hands may change and the feet may take on a different expression.

But the teeth are exceptional. No habit of thought will have any influence whatever in their shape and character. As far as concerns them Mrs. Nature has laid her plans with a determination that they shall not be modified.

Phrenologists have not agreed upon any stated set of rules for judging a person's character from an inspection of his teeth. The best that they pretend to do is to arrive at a general estimate. This is not as satisfactory from the point of view of completeness and minuteness as the methods of reading character by means of other parts of the body; but it has its advantages in its increased reliability. By a careful examination of the teeth it may be definitely announced whether or not a person is a coward or high-spirited, weak or strong-minded, slovenly or punctilious. This determination will reveal the character as it was at birth—the native character. There are thousands of cases where individuals have "lived down nature," so to speak, and have evolved an artificial character of one sort from a natural character of the opposite sort. This, provided the change has been from a poorer to a better character, is highly commendable, and is a strong argument against the doctrine that has recently been promulgated, to the effect that most criminals should be excused because they were born with criminal instincts, and couldn't help it.

And yet, after all, when you are dealing with a man you will be better satisfied to know his real, than his artificial character, and so you may know it only by an examination of his teeth. This examination will usually have to be conducted covertly, as it is not likely that the general run of persons whom you meet will lend themselves to a minute investigation of their dental arrangement.

You may start out with the general broad statement that small teeth mean smallness, and big teeth mean bigness. It makes not much difference to what qualities you apply these terms. A man with small, short teeth can hardly be concerned in anything big—be it charity, or crime, nobleness or deviltry. His temperament is of the minute order; his compass is limited. If engaged in business, he will work on a basis of hundreds, when a man with large teeth would be dealing with thousands. If he engages in crime, he would be far more apt to steal coppers from a newsboy than to explode a bank safe.

On the other hand, a man with large teeth is a man who goes into things on a big scale. His mind, like the law, does not care for trifles, "non minima curat." If he is charitable, he is generous to a fault, and will be dividing his last penny with a needy friend, while the small-toothed man would hedge on his charitable instincts as soon as he saw that they were beginning to cause him the slightest inconvenience. The man with the big teeth, if a criminal, would revel in holding up trains and in robbing them single-handed—in picking the pockets of the chief of police, and in administering knock-out drops to the commissioners. Bigness is his watchword.

But it is possible to read by means of the teeth finer shades of character than merely those of bigness and littleness. We may also note insipidity, courage, heedlessness, ferocity, ideality and other qualities. If you will examine the accompanying sketches you will observe many types that are no doubt familiar.

You will find it of interest to compare some of these teeth with those of animals, and to speculate as to whether a similarity in this respect means a similarity of character. Canine and feline teeth are remarkable for their pointiness, being larger at the base than at the tip. This characteristic may be observed in some human teeth, and there are those who say that it denotes the possession of canine or feline instincts.

Teeth which are separated by a gap denote, usually, a heedless, thoughtless, or even slovenly character. On the other hand, teeth which are close together denote alertness of the mind. Whether this alertness is directed toward great or small things depends upon the size of the teeth. When the teeth slant in one direction, as is rarely the case, they indicate insipidity.

Firmness, courage and great executive ability are indicated by teeth which are of large size, set evenly in the gums, and possibly slightly protruding. Small teeth which point inward denote opposite qualities.—N. Y. World.

As To The Eyesight.

Owing to the continual complaint of the eyesight of many of the pupils in the public schools of the city of Baltimore, the school authorities a short while ago decided to employ a number of oculists to examine into the cause, and the result was that out of a total of 53,097 pupils it was found that 9,051 were troubled with defective eyes, and the majority of those so troubled were pupils in the lower grades. In their report the oculist declare that the defective eyesight among the pupils is the result of not placing the maps and blackboards in the proper light for them and that hereafter all pupils should be examined as to the condition of their eyes when they first enter the schools, that their seats may be properly adjusted. The examination is to be repeated every year of all the pupils.

The matter of proper light in our schools is one which should not be overlooked, as there is no doubt that a failure in this regard has a great deal to do with the bad eyesight of many of the school children who are now compelled to wear glasses.

The milk stations are an oddity of Chul life. Here and there on all principal streets is a platform or which a cow is tied, attended by a milkmaid. When a customer calls for milk the cow is milked by the girl. On a nearby table are to be found glasses and brandy and a thirsty man can mix himself a punch if he desires. In the morning these stands are surrounded by servants waiting with cans and buckets, and as soon as one cow is exhausted another is driven upon the platform.

A White man who was intoxicated fell in to the store of D. C. Ruffy, in Statesville, last Friday evening at about 6 o'clock. He was promptly locked up by an officer and left until about 10:30 o'clock, when the officer visited the guard house to look after his man, but he found him stone dead. The coroner was called, summoned a jury and rendered a verdict that the man came to his death from heart disease.
