EUROPEAN LETTER.

ROME, ITALY, June 2, 1896.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

A French writer has said that an Englishman listens to music; a Frenchman hears it; a German analyses it, and an Italian feels it. However this may be, no one can be long in the land of Verdi and Rossini without realizing that this is the country of music; this impresses every visitor with the force of an original observation. There is music every afternoon in the public parks; music as the soldiers march through the streets, music at almost any hour in the countless churches, and what is most striking, the loungers and beggars lift up their voices (and very good voices they are, as a rule) not in the hope of a few extra pennies, but just for the joy of singing. The boys that stroll along the streets sing instead of whistling, and their selections denote a more classical taste than is possessed by their brother gamins in America. One hears the Siciliana from Cavalleria or the solo from Mignon instead of "I Want You, my Honey" or "Paradise Alley." One is liable to be awakened any time between midnight and day-break by resounding choruses, as citizens roam from the cafe-chantants homeward; but instead of arresting them on the charge of "drunk and disorderly" the gendarmes listen with the air of connoisseurs, and show an inclination to interfere only when the singers happen to be off the key. As a matter of fact, they are not drunk; they merely wish to give expression to the music with which every Italian's soul is filled.

For a change, one can hear almost any day the lugubrious chant of funeral processions. The mourners go on foot, and there is always a long line of monks carrying lighted candles and singing. Sometimes they are accompanied by the Misericordia, and then it is a sight worth seeing. This is a charitable fraternity which assists in the last offices for the dead. They wear long white robes with a sort of pillow-slip over the head, holes being cut for the eyes, and they look more like guests at a phantom party than anything else. It is not soothing to the nerves to meet them for the first time when you are in a lonely street, or towards dusk. They glide silently past, their black eyes watching you from behind the white masks. There are a number of noblemen who belong to the fraternity, but they can be distinguished from their companions only by the elegant foot-gear, of which one catches occasional glimpses. Some years ago at the funeral of Prince Barbarni, one of the members of the brotherhood, the entire Misericordia came barefoot, and a lady present told me that it was amusing to see how gingerly some of them walked.

The nomenclature of the streets in Rome is picturesque and varied. When one finds oneself unexpectedly in the street of Purification, the Road of Perfection or the Lane of Penitence, one half believes they have stepped into the Pilgrim's Progress. The streets of the Silver Tower, the Little Cakes, the Five Moons, or the Iron Mountain have a more secular sound. It is startling, when you have lost your way in a forbidden part of the city and are searching anxiously for the name of the street, to find that it is The Broken Head or The Lion's Mouth. But at the next corner you are reassured by finding yourself in Good Company, and your footsteps may presently lead you into the Lane of the Holy Ghost or the Street of the Twelve Apostles. The street of the Twentieth of September, a fine broad avenue, leads to the gate that was demolished on that eventful date in Italian history, when Garibaldi entered the Eternal City and the temporal power of the Pope was overthrown. The street of the Mouth of Truth is so called from a recess in the wall of a church, into which in olden days Romans put their hands when taking an oath—perhaps a more sanitary arrangement than our modern method of kissing the Bible. Then there is the street of the Two Slaughter Houses (now lined with elegant residences); the street of the Crucified, the Alley of the White Cross; and many streets, avenues, arcades and promenades of the Queen Margherita.

Among the most striking figures to be seen in this land of bright colors, are the nurses employed by wealthy families. Their costumes comprise blue or pink skirts (often of stiffened satin) with a wide stripe of a contrasting color around the bottom. On the head is a large bow of ribbon, with streamers reaching to the feet. They carry their charges on pillows, covered with lace and veils until one would think the poor little babies would suffocate. As they march majestically along, they fairly out-Solomon Solomon in glory of attire. The army officer, too, always attracts the eye, especially if it be the eye of a tourist. He wears blue grey pantaloons with a red stripe at the side, a black jacket embroidered in silver and gold, and on cool days he wraps himself in the graceful folds of a Spanish cape and goes forth in the proud consciousness that he wears the prettiest uniform in Europe.

HIS FATHER-IN-LAW EXPLAINS.

MANTEO, Dare County, N. C. July 3.

EDITOR REFLECTOR;—I regret having this painful task to perform, but as the father of Capt. Gilbert's wife I would say in reference to the special from Washington in your issue of June 30th, that we knew nothing of the incident that took place between Capt. Gilbert and the young lady, Miss Beacham. It seems to me that most of the people of Washington knew that Capt. Gilbert was a married man. Mr. Hudnell's was one of the places I heard him speak of visiting and he always spoke in highest terms of the family.

He left home in the best of life and said he was to bring back a load of posts. There never was any trouble between him and his wife and she was just devoted to him. They have one little boy three-and-a-half years old. They have lived in the house with me since they were married, and if there ever was any trouble between them I never knew of it. I cannot see how any disgrace should rest upon the lawful wife and child of Capt. Gilbert. I think the young lady who brought on the trouble ought to be the one to bear it, yet I have no harm to say of her. She will have to answer for her own conduct and so will he.

Capt. Gilbert never started to Washington. He told me he should come home on Monday and should leave soon for Powell's Point to take a load of melons to Baltimore. I was horrified upon receiving a telegram from Washington which Mr. Chauncey was kind enough to send me, and I feel under obligations to you for the publication you made, as up to that time we had no light on the matter or how he came to his death. Please publish this for me.

Yours respectfully,

C. E. HOOPER.

Governor Carr has issued a proclamation in regard to the quarantine of cattle in certain counties in western North Carolina. The government at Washington had quarantined against Texas or Southern fever in cattle which worked great hardship on marketing North Carolina cattle, and the Gov. got secretary Morton to modify the order so as to allow cattle shipped for market, but the Gov. warns the quarantined district not to ship cattle into the uninfected districts.

The Way of the World.

There is no such thing in this life as complete satisfaction. If a man has no money he is always wanting it and is therefore miserable and if he has plenty of money he still wants more and does not know how to invest what he has got, fearing to risk much for fear he will lose all. There is no business that pays all the time, not even stealing, for you are liable to be caught up with and thrust into prison. Better try to earn an honest living than to gain something by speculation, which eventually brings on ruin and misery.

"A MILLION DOLLARS FOR MY SIGHT."

"A million dollars for my sight!"

Such is the offer made by Charles Broadway Rouss, the eccentric New York millionaire, to any one who will restore his eyesight, recently lost.

He has issued a statement which is genuinely pathetic in its simplicity. It reads as follows:

$1,000,000 REWARD.

To physicians, surgeons, scientists, wise men and all others whom it may concern; Be it known that I, Charles Broadway Rouss, who possess considerable wealth, hereby agree to pay the sum of one million dollars to any human being who restores to me my sight.

Pathetic? Indeed it is. Here is a man possessed of millions, with the power to enjoy life to the full and the promise of a goodly number of years before him, cut off from the light of day, the world's brightness and beauty a sealed book to him, and he stretching out his helpless hands with the almost despairing cry:

"A million dollars for my sight."

Mr. Rouss is peculiar. His eccentricities have made him a reputation, and his queer ways have often turned the public eye upon him. But he had these same queer ways before he was a millionaire, and his oddities were not born of the possession of wealth, but have always characterized the man.

Naturally his offer has attracted replies from hundreds and thousands of cranks, who think that all they have to do is to walk up, exploit their little theories, and carry off the million dollars. Mr. Rouss' office force has been overburdened with the work of attending to the correspondence relative to the matter. Several secretaries had spent days in selecting from the vast piles of letters those containing the smallest glimpse of sense or intelligence and those in themselves form a curious collection.

A young man named Martin, who was formerly employed by Mr. Rouss, is also blind, his trouble being the same as that of his employer—paralysis of the optic nerve. Since Martin's affliction, Mr. Rouss has taken great interest in his case and has done everything in his power to help him. In return for this, Martin has volunteered to take the various kinds of treatment proposed for Rouss, in order to test their efficiency and at the same time save the millionaire much time, anxiety and pain.

One of the first answers sent Mr. Rouss was from a Chicago doctor. He said:

"Unfortunately I am unable at present to go to New York, but if you will come to Chicago and remain under my treatment for two weeks, I feel confident that I will get the million dollars."

Mr. Rouss' answer was as follows:

"My Dear Sir; I would not stay in Chicago for two weeks to make one million dollars, much less to spend it."

A female physician called on the blind man with a theory which he considers idiotic, but which Martin is having tried on himself.

"Scientists have discovered," explained this person, "that paralysis of the optic nerve is explained by the presence of a yellow fluid, which saturates the nerve tissues. Now I have devised a lens which is powerful enough to draw out this fluid, if held before the eyes in a strong glare of sunlight."

Mr. Rouss said he would try it. It consisted of an amber colored whiskey flask filled with water. It irritated the sufferer's eyes very much, and he turned it to Martin. Martin has given up lens, too.

Then a man came along who wanted to puncture the skin and inject Croton oil. Martin tried him until his face was like a sieve; then he stopped.

Another could not consent to operate without a deposit on account $1,000. He was persistent and Mr. Rouss ordered an attendant to remove him.

"I don't want to bother with quacks," said Rouss, "but if there is anybody in or out of the medical profession who can cure me I want to find him. I have a million dollars to hand him the minute the work is done."

Can anybody do it?

Volcanoes and Icebergs.

In recent years the size and number of icebergs seen in the south Atlantic and south Pacific oceans have both been enormous, and various suggestions have been made to account for the phenomenon. Evidently something unusual has been going on in the unknown regions surrounding the south pole. The latest suggestion bearing on this subject comes from Mr. H. C. Russell, who has presented it before the Royal Society of New South Wales. His idea, in brief, is that there has been an extraordinary outburst of the great volcanoes known to exist within the Antarctic circle, and that the consequent shaking of the ice-clothed shores of the Antarctic continent has resulted in the breaking off of immense fragments of ice, which have afterward been driven northward by winds and currents.—Youth's Companion.

LOCKE GRAIG, W. C. DOUGLAS,

It is said that there is nothing new under the sun, yet the Republican party has made a brand new discovery and its name is Hobart. He is the tail end of the McKinley kite. But the old kite is top heavy. It is weighted down with a high robber tariff and gold bonds and will not sail into the white house yard.

In fact the silver cyclone that will sweep in from the West, gaining strength in the South, will catch the thing up and dash it to pieces against the strong holds of the monopolists. It is the people in the fight against the money power and the people are in the majority and must win.—Weldon News.

If Walter N. Owens, a farmer of Oklahoma, had not been such a close observer and clever imitator he might not now be in the penitentiary. He was a citizen who stood well and was therefore frequently called upon to do jury service. One of the last cases upon which he was called to serve was that of a man indicted for counterfeiting. The tools were brought into the the jury room where they were closely studied by Owens, who concluded that counterfeiting was an easier and a quicker way of making money than farming, so he made a "kit" and proceeded to business. But unfortunately for him he hadn't proceeded very far in shoving the stuff before he was overtaken by a minion of the law and is now leading a retired life in the Leavenworth, Kansas, penitentiary.—Wilmington Star.

PEACE

No superior work done anywhere, North or South. It has now the best faculty it has ever had. The advantages offered in Literature, Languages, Music and Art are unsurpassed. Address

As a rule, the northern newspapers have referred very kindly to the confederate reunion in this city. But, as might have been expected, the Chicago Tribune and a few others of that billious type have criticised the sentiments expressed here. The Tribune argues strenuously against Governor O'Ferral's view of the secession question, but eminent northern writers and speakers—some of the ante-bellum and some of the post-bellum period—could be quoted in support of the correctness of the Governor's position. Upon the whole, the press of the country, North and South, have had so many kind things to say of Richmond that we cannot consent to be disturbed in mind by the objectors and critics aforesaid.—Richmond Dispatch.

THE MUSTACHE.
How It Became a Symbol of Liberty and Fraternity.

The mustache, that questionable adornment of a man's upper lip, is trembling in the balance. The fashionable man of the hour who eschews this time-honored ornament will tell you that it is a crying and unnecessary evil, and is bound to go. And where can one find a better criterion of such momentous subjects than the fashionable man of the hour? In years to come the grandchildren of a beardless race may have to turn to their encyclopedias to find out what a mustache was. Anticipating this, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, a sort of advance sheet may be found in the following:

The home of the mustache is in Spain. After the Moors first invaded the country the Christian and Moslem population became so mixed that it was difficult to say which were Moors and which were Spaniards.

The Spanish then hit upon a means by which they could at once distinguish their brethren. They did not shave their lips any longer, and they allowed a tuft of hair to grow below the mouth, so that their beards formed the rude outline of a cross.

Thus the mustache became a symbol of liberty and fraternity.

Distorting the Sun.

Observations made at the Kharkoff observatory last year indicate that the forces which produce the black spots on the sun may have a wonderful effect in heaping up the solar surface in the neighborhood where the spots exist. Some of the measurements showed that a line through the center of the sun from a group of spots to the opposite side was as much as 200 miles longer than other adjacent diameters of the sun. This seems to show that the surface of the radiant globe is swollen out at the points where great eruptions occur.—Youth's Companion.

Sailing Round the World Alone.

Capt. Joshua Slocum, who sailed from East Boston nearly a year ago to circumnavigate the globe in his 40-foot sloop Spray, has been heard from as being at Sandy Point, in the Straits of Magellan, on February 16. His original intention was to make the trip to the westward by the way of the Isthmus of Panama, but finding that it would be impossible to transport his vessel across the isthmus, he determined to make the journey by sailing east. He crossed the Atlantic, and had reached Gibraltar, but hearing there that there were pirates in the Red sea, he again turned westward, and after a tempestuous passage across the Atlantic, reached Pernambuco, Brazil, on October 5, which was the last heard of him until the news just received.—Boston Transcript.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. E. O. McGowan died at their home, one mile from town, on Sunday at noon. The burial took place in Cherry Hill Cemetery Monday. They have the sympathy of our people.

A Georgia candidate made a bad "break" in church the other day. The preacher asked some one to start a hymn, and the candidate burst forth with: "From Greenland's Icy Mountains." But he caused a slight sensation among the brethren when he rendered one of the concluding stanzas as follows:

"Waft, waft, ye winds, the story
And you, ye waters, roll!

Till like a sea of glory

They vote from poll to poll!"

There is no telling where he would have brought up if the good brethren had not called him down.

Billville Literary Notes.

Many of the Billville poets made enough money by voting in the recent primary to publish their books this fall.

We had a literary barbecue on Wednesday last. There were present three cows and sixteen poets, and all went merry as a cattle bell.

The literary strawberry festival for the benefit of the new church steps was a great success. Seven razors were raffled and we predict that Billville will soon be livelier than ever.

A man who was trying to sell a soldier's prayer book was in town last Saturday. When told that Lee had surrendered thirty years ago he called the town marshal a liar, greased his gun and cussed out the yankees, "for," said he, "hain't I jest hearn tell er Gin'ral Gordon goin' ter Richmond an' hugging' Jeff Davis?"—Atlanta Constitution.

The attendance at the Farmers Institute to-day has not been attended by as many farmers as should have been present. The subjects discussed were of an interesting nature.
