HIS OPINION OF BRYAN.

The Man the Country Needs for President.

The New York World wired ex-Congressman W. A. B. Branch, of this district, asking his opinion of W. J. Bryan, Democratic nominee for President and what he thought of his administration if elected President. Mr. Branch sent the following to the World, which the REFLECTOR has been given permission to publish:

"Bryan as President will be the equal of any since the days of Jefferson. Raised among the people he has seen and felt their troubles and sufferings caused by a high protective tariff and an ever increasing standard. His heart is full of sympathy for all. He will as President know no section, no class, but be the President of the entire country. Being unmortgaged to the trusts and other interests which oppress a great people, he will be free to use every means at his command to place the entire country upon the high road of prosperity, to start every wheel of every manufacturing industry from Maine to Texas, from North Carolina to California, to adjust the currency of the country to a basis that will make panics unnecessary and the manufacture of them impossible; to give those who desire to earn an honest livelihood a chance, and to give the sons of toil, whether in the mines, in the cities, or under the midday sun of the open fields, an opportunity once more to prosper and to live as free men and Americans. His action immediately after his nomination in declaring that under no circumstances if elected would he be a candidate for re-election marks him as honest, sincere and trying to put himself beyond the power of doing things to serve his own ambitious ends."

QUAINT AND CURIOUS.

Blue-eyed cats are said by Darwin to be always deaf.

The hog eats fewer plants than any other herb-feeding animal.

The tail of a beaver is a regular trowel, and is used as such.

Carnivorous animals seldom produce more than two young at a birth.

Deep and rapid breathing is recommended as a means of stopping hic-cough.

It is said that the new rifle adopted by the Italian army will shoot right through a brick wall three feet thick at 440 yards, more than a quarter of a mile.

A Fairfield (Mich.) man has a colt, which possesses but three legs. Its hind legs are all right, but in front there is only one, which grows in the middle of the chest.

Louis Darwin, of Black River Falls, Wis., was only 107 when he died, but his wife lived to be 101 and they celebrated together the eightieth anniversary of their wedding.

A cambric shirt worn by Louis XVI, on the day before his death, realized $570, and the napkin used at mass on the morning of his execution $890, at a recent London sale.

Just Two.
July is a little past one-third gone, but Register of Deeds King has issued only two marriage licenses since the month came in, one for white and one for colored. The white couple were R. W. Smith and Cora Hart.

ORIGINAL OBSERVATIONS.

It is a strange thing that the man who knows exactly how to run a newspaper is always engaged in some other kind of business.

The old fashioned schoolmaster differed from lightning, because he struck several times in one place, if it was broad enough.

When the girls order slippers two sizes too small for them, you can make up your mind that the croquet season is on its way.

It's a poor farmer that doesn't know how to "hoe his own row," but, like a soldier, he must learn the drill thoroughly before he can expect to rake in the shining shekels.—Orange (Va.) Observer.

It is Superb Agony.

Is there any agony worse than the pangs of pain that shoot through a fellow when he sees the collector of bills coming toward him on the first of the month. The boy with the bill will come to the outside of your office door and there stop and shuffle his bills—looking for your name. That is almost terrible. If he would shoot right in and present the bill it would not be so bad, but to stop and look, and look, and keep you in suspense is more than man can stand. He begins to feel faintly and his heart comes near his mouth till the bill-boy misses the name and goes clear through the list. His heart falls back, thinking perhaps the boy has given him a false alarm and no bill is there, but, the agony sets in anew when the bill-boy starts over the list again.

If he is writing, reading, eating or what not, the work is stopped till the boy presents the bill. But, it is the hardest part of a fellow's life when the boy stands outside and shuffles the bills, especially when you have company.—Charlotte Democrat.

If people would keep their bills paid up without waiting for a collector to call on them this is one agony that could be avoided.

Printing Office Etiquette.

A lady asks us whether etiquette requires one to knock at the door of an editor's sanctum before entering. We hasten to reply. If you are coming to pay your subscription or bring in a nice, juicy item of news, don't stop to knock, but just walk right in as if you owned the place. If, on the other hand, you are out on a collecting tour, you should make the fact known through the window, and then knock at the door until the editor opens it. You may sink down from exhaustion before he does so, but you will be adhering to the printing office etiquette that is bound to please the average editor.—Ex.

"One at a Time."

A ticket seller in a theatre once owned a parrot that was quick at learning to repeat the phrases he heard. Thus among other things, he was soon able to exclaim "One at a time gentlemen! one at a time, please!" for this sentence was constantly in the mouth of his master. The ticket man went to the country for a summer vacation and took the educated parrot along with him. One day the bird got out of his cage and disappeared. His owner searched all about for him and finally toward evening found him dispoiled, half his feathers sitting far out on the limb of a tree, while a dozen crows were pecking at him whenever they could get a chance. And all this time the poor parrot, with his back humped up, was edging away and constantly exclaiming: "One at a time gentlemen! one at a time, please!"—Harper's Round Table.

MONDAY, JULY 13TH, 1896.

Convention Dates.

Populist National Convention, St. Louis, July 22.

Silver National Convention, St. Louis, July 22.

"NO CROWN OF THORNS, NO CROWN OF GOLD."

These were the concluding words of William Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska, the standard bearer of the Democratic party in the campaign for the Presidency of the United States.

He closed the debate for the silver forces on the platform, replying to Hill, of New York, and Russell, of Massachusetts, the gold leaders. It was a critical position, it captured the convention. It was the speech that the convention had waited for and wanted to hear, not knowing whence it would come and was the speech that boomed him for the nomination. His chances were merely a possibility, but after his speech he arose as a mighty avalanche and rushed to the goal on the fifth ballot the great Democratic convention nominated him. Among all the excellent men named in connection with the nomination, the right man for the high place was elected. Under all circumstances, taking all in all, he is the best possible candidate. He is a strong man, a true Democrat, a most faithful friend of silver, and has done a great deal to make it popular. Mr. Bryan comes from the right place, and was born in the best place. He was born in Illinois on the 19th, of March, 1860, and was 36 years old last March. He was graduated from the Illinois College at 21 with the highest honors. He read law and moved to Lincoln, Nebraska, in 1887. He served through the Fifty-first and Fifty-second Congresses, and was re-elected to the Fifty-third Congress. He is an out and out free silver man of the real stamp. He is a brilliant speaker and campaigner, and has talents of the highest order. He is extremely popular and has been very successful in politics and will make a campaign long to be remembered. He is just old enough to be President. He looks like a composite of Edwin Booth, John W. Daniel and McKinley himself. His voice is superb, his gestures dramatic, his utterances epigrammatic, his manner intensely earnest, and his every point telling. More than this he shows high logic ability. With this man as a candidate for President swinging round the circle of the States the Democratic party would make a campaign unparalleled. Mr. Bryan is a fine lawyer and newspaper man that is an honor to the profession.

North Carolina was for Bryan from the start and stuck to him from first to last. When he had finished his speech the North Carolina delegation went wild. He went over to the North Carolina delegation and took his seat, and when enthusiasm seemed to have subsided soon it broke afresh.

Capt. R. B. Peebles, J. H. Curry, Chas. F. Warren, J. W. Grainger, Tom Emery, W. C. Hamner, W. C. Dowd and others lifted the Nebraskan on their shoulders amid deafening applause, and it was some time before he could gain his seat again. North Carolina had its share in making the splendid platform. Originally it read: "The best protection to labor is the exclusion of foreign pauper labor so as to prevent its coming in competition with home labor." On the suggestion of Senator Jarvis a change was made, whereby the convention pledged itself to protect labor in all its rights. Our representative on the platform committee, Maj. Hale, drafted the plank on the income tax.

The vote on the platform and amendments was ayes 623, noes 301. The vote on Hill's (of New York,) gold substitute—ayes 303, noes 626. The vote endorsing Cleveland was ayes 357, noes 554. Hill's other financial amendments were killed without call of States.

The South must do her duty and roll up a great majority for Bryan.

North Carolina has pledged herself to work and win in this great campaign.

Pitt county has a hard road to travel but the REFLECTOR believes she will do some of the hardest work and accomplish more this campaign than she has ever done.

Now for a long pull, a strong pull and a pull altogether and victory will crown our efforts and William Jennings Bryan will be inaugurated the 4th day of March 1897.

This week belongs to the newspaper men in North Carolina, and many of them will gather in Wilmington to attend the Press Convention and enjoy their annual mingling together.

The taxable valuation of real and personal property in the city of Philadelphia foots up $801,028,552, as compared with $782,677,694 for last year, a gain of $18,350,858.

The Monroe Journal says the 5-year old son of Mr. Marion Sutton, of Union tied a billy goat to a bee gum. The goat upset two gums and the bees swarmed out and stung him to death.

Waynesville takes the palm for the first campaign club. A Bryan and Watson club was organized in that town Friday evening at 5 o'clock, just after the news was received that Bryan was nominated for President. Raleigh organized a club that night.

August Belmont, a man with close to $40,000,000, has few leisure hours. He is at his office at 9 o'clock in the morning and leaves it only when work for the day is over. Sometimes that is as late as 7 or 8 o'clock in the evening. His leisure consists of a month at Newport in the season and an odd night at the opera.

It is related of the veteran conductor, Sig. Ardit, who is about to celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of his debut as a boy violinist in Milan, that at a concert he made this original apology for the non-appearance of one of the singers: - "Ladies and gentlemen, Mile de Lido is undressed in a box, but she will sing if you weesh." It developed that Mile de Lido had been detained in a railway accident and was in street costume.

A Poison Window.

James W. Gordon has arranged a unique "poison show-window" at Hutchinson's drugstore. Little piles of various deadly drugs are placed in a semi-circle around a human skull. In the centre of the semi-circle are the words: "Everything in this window is poison." Besides the drugs the other poisons are: A cigarette held between the jaws of the skull, a deck of cards, some dice, a quart of whiskey, and a quart of wine. The cigarette seems to be voted the most "deadly" by the passer-by.—National Tenn. Advocate.

Annual Chestnuts.

The commencement season is now on. Mary's little lamb still follows her where'er she goes, the boy is still on the burning deck, the Turk still sleeps in his guarded tent, the star-spangled banner still waves over this free land from cold blue lakes on the Canadian border to where the warm waves lap softly upon the yellow sands of the gulf, and the effusive high-school girl, bless her dear little white-robed self, writes original essays on subjects too deep for mortal ken, the marshal is abroad in the land in all the glory of blue sash and variegated rosette, and the medal-winner spouteth on every hill-top and orateth in every valley, and the band plays marbles—Ex.

THEY DIED TOO SOON.

George Washington was President and honored in his day,
He was the father of the land and all things came his way;
He had a basketful of fun, a wagonload of fame—
But he never was a rooter at a baseball game.

Napoleon conquered half the world and had a crown of gold,
And in his time his cup was just as full as it could hold.

It looks from here as though he should have had his share of fun—
But he never strained his vocals when the home team won.

And also Alexander, he turned most every trick,
And then shed tears because there were no more worlds left to lick.
He climbed 'way up the ladder, as high as people get—
But he never pawned his sceptre to pay a baseball bet.

—Chicago Record.

A Piece of News.

A little girl came home from Sunday school not long ago with an air of great importance as she bustled into the room where her parents were sitting. "Mamma," she cried, "did you know the widow of Nain's son was dead?" As her mother started at her utter bewilderment she went on importantly: "He is. I heard it in Sunday school this morning."

Jewels That Live.

Beauty, money and fame cannot be carried beyond the horizon line that shuts around this cradle of a world, but love, joy, peace, gentleness, faith, meekness, temperance are jewels which by their very nature will survive the transit of the world invisible.—F. E. Willard.

THE MUSTACHE.
How It Became a Symbol of Liberty and Fraternity.

The mustache, that questionable adornment of a man's upper lip, is trembling in the balance. The fashionable man of the hour who eschews this time-honored ornament will tell you that it is a crying and unnecessary evil, and is bound to go. And where can one find a better criterion of such momentous subjects than the fashionable man of the hour? In years to come the grandchildren of a beardless race may have to turn to their encyclopedias to find out what a mustache was. Anticipating this, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, a sort of advance sheet may be found in the following:

The home of the mustache is in Spain. After the Moors first invaded the country the Christian and Moslem population became so mixed that it was difficult to say which were Moors and which were Spaniards.

The Spanish then hit upon a means by which they could at once distinguish their brethren. They did not shave their lips any longer, and they allowed a tuft of hair to grow below the mouth, so that their beards formed the rude outline of a cross.

Thus the mustache became a symbol of liberty and fraternity.

Distorting the Sun.
Observations made at the Kharkoff observatory last year indicate that the forces which produce the black spots on the sun may have a wonderful effect in heaping up the solar surface in the neighborhood where the spots exist. Some of the measurements showed that a line through the center of the sun from a group of spots to the opposite side was as much as 200 miles longer than other adjacent diameters of the sun. This seems to show that the surface of the radiant globe is swollen out at the points where great eruptions occur.—Youth's Companion.

Sailing Round the World Alone.
Capt. Joshua Slocum, who sailed from East Boston nearly a year ago to circumnavigate the globe in his 40-foot sloop Spray, has been heard from as being at Sandy Point, in the Straits of Magellan, on February 16. His original intention was to make the trip to the westward by the way of the Isthmus of Panama, but finding that it would be impossible to transport his vessel across the isthmus, he determined to make the journey by sailing east. He crossed the Atlantic, and had reached Gibraltar, but hearing there that there were pirates in the Red sea, he again turned westward, and after a tempestuous passage across the Atlantic, reached Pernambuco, Brazil, on October 5, which was the last heard of him until the news just received.—Boston Transcript.

I'm expecting its going to rain every minute," said a fellow as he jumped in the REFLECTOR office this afternoon to get out of the storm. And he was just in time, for right behind him
the rain came down in torrents.

The good reports coming up from Ocracoke about the excellent way proprietor George Credle is conducting Hotel Ponder, is taking the Greenville folks down there. Parties are going every Saturday to enjoy that delightful place.

Saved His Barn.
Saturday morning Mr. J. K. Mc-Gowan, of Chices township, was killing out a barn of tobacco. The tobacco took fire, but, wonderful to relate, the barn was saved. Mr. McGowan kept a barrel of pickle setting by the barn door. As soon as the tobacco took fire he threw several buckets full of this pickle on the flues and shut up the barn. He hurried to the well for water, and by the time he got back to the barn the flues were cool enough for him to go inside and fight the fire which the pickle had partially subdued. He went to work in a hurry and though most of the tobacco was ruined he saved his barn. You don't often hear of a tobacco barn being saved after fire
has caught inside of it.

Come to Greenville.
The tobacco farmer who is wise this season will sell his tobacco on the Greenville market. It can't be disputed that Greenville has four of the best warehouses to be found anywhere,
and our warehousemen are determined that no market shall outsell them either in quantity or price.

The nomination of Hon. W. A. Bryan
