Enough Left For Seed.

Most of the REFLECTOR roosters are sick and unable to be airing themselves, but the two little fellows above say they are going to crow over the fact that in three townships in Pitt county—Carolina, Chicod and Contentnea—the Democrats elected their candidates for Constables and Magistrates. The county also honored itself in giving 791 majority for that peerless man, William Jennings Bryan, the man whom we owe as well in defeat as if a crown of victory rested upon his brow, and in giving a majority, even though it was only 76, for Cyrus B. Watson.

The Democratic party is not dead. It can be defeated, but the party and its principles never die.

A JARD FROM EX-SENATOR JARVIS.

GREENVILLE, N. C., Nov. 6, 1896.

TO THE PUBLIC:—Sometime in September King's Weekly, a paper published at this place, contained an attack on Mr. Harry Skinner in which my name was illogically and offensively used as a witness against him. It was not the first time my name had been used in that paper in a manner offensive to me, I but paid no attention to it and would not now if the matter involved myself alone. The statement in the paper, as I remember it, is (after making certain changes) that "Governor Jarvis is now in the western part of the State and says these things are true and the half has not been told." If it was meant to charge that I had discussed these things in public the charge is untrue. If it is meant to say that I had discussed them in private, if true, it was gross violation of confidence to give it out for publication, but as a matter of fact, it is not true that I have used the language attributed to me in reference to Mr. Skinner. It is well known that I have assisted in the adjustment of some of his financial matters and it may be that in talking about his indebtedness to some individual creditor I may have said that is not half of his indebtedness; but I emphatically deny that I have ever discussed Mr. Skinner's affairs in the manner or in the spirit alleged in said article.

LUCAS AND SKINNER AT GREENVILLE.

When I was engaged in my canvass in the western part of the State I read a telegram from Greenville published in the daily papers purporting to give an account of an incident between Mr. Lucas and Mr. Skinner in their joint discussion at Greenville. The telegram made Mr. Lucas say, "I have been told here today that Gov. Jarvis said he heard Skinner lobbying in Washington in favor of a bill to pay clerks a salary of $100 a month the year through; and 15 minutes later went on the floor of Congress and made a speech against and voted against the bill." I have quoted from the telegram and I say that I have never made such a statement to any one. I never heard Mr. Skinner lobby for such a bill. I never heard him request any one to vote for it or in any way, directly or indirectly, in any manner whatever, try to influence them to do so; and I have never stated to any one that he did. The facts about what I saw and heard in Washington and what I have stated in private conversations in Greenville are these: I happened to be in the lobby of the House of Representatives last spring when the bill referred to was under consideration. I was in conversation with Skinner and two or three other members of the House when something was said about the matter under discussion. Mr. Skinner remarked that he wanted to see the bill pass but that he could not vote for it; and some of the other gentlemen said the same thing. In a short time thereafter I was sitting with my back towards the members' seats discussing with a gentleman from the West the probable outcome of the Chicago Convention, when I heard a familiar voice on the floor speaking, and raising up and looking in the direction of the voice I saw Mr. Skinner on the floor making a speech against the bill. I have joked Mr. Skinner himself about speaking against a bill which he wished to see passed. I have also stated these facts to and laughed about them with those with whom I am in the habit of associating in Greenville, but it never occurred to me that any one would use them in a political discussion. Nor could I have possibly imagined that any man who aspired to a seat in Congress could so far forget the common proprieties of life as to make use on the stump of a private conversation as coming from me without first getting from me the facts and my permission to use my name in connection therewith. When I read the report of the discussion I felt indignant at Mr. Lucas' conduct and I so wrote him. I trust he may be able to say it was thoughtlessly and not deliberately done. I make these statements of facts because I feel that those who desire to know the truth of the matter may do so; and because I will not allow the course and brutal language reported to have been used by Mr. Skinner on the occasion referred to prevent me from doing him justice in the matter.

THOS. J. JARVIS.

PITT'S VOTE.

The above shows that the fusion candidates received larger average majorities than two years ago. The vote of Bryan and McKinley indicates how Pitt county would stand if the white people voted together.

In Farmville township there was a tie vote between two of the candidates for magistrate. Under the election law this will necessitate another election in that township to fill the place, the election to be called by the Superior Court Clerk.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6TH, 1896.

PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION.

Mr. Cleveland Sets Aside a Day for the people to Gather Together and Offer Praise and Thanks to God.

Washington, Nov. 4.—By the President of the United States.

The people of the United States should never be unmindful of the gratitude they owe the God of Nations for His watchful care which has shielded them from dire disaster and pointed out to them the way of peace and happiness. Nor should they ever refuse to acknowledge with contrite hearts, their proneness to turn away from God's teachings, and to follow with sinful pride after their own devices.

To the end that these thoughts may be quickened, it is fitting that on a day especially appointed, we should join together in approaching the Throne of Grace with praise and supplication.

Therefore, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the twenty-sixth day of the present month of November, to be kept and observed as a day of Thanksgiving and prayer throughout our land.

On that day let all our people forego their usual work and occupation, and assemble in their accustomed places of worship; let them with one accord render thanks to the Ruler of the Universe for our preservation as a nation and our deliverance from every threatened danger; for the peace that has dwelt within our boundaries; for our defense against disease and pestilence during the year that has passed; for the plentiful rewards that have followed the labors of our husbandmen, and for all the other blessings that have been vouchsafed to us.

And let us, through the meditation of Him who has taught us how to pray, implore the forgiveness of our sins and continuation of our Heavenly Father's goodness. Let us not forget on this day of Thanksgiving the poor and needy; and by deeds of charity let our offerings of praise be made more acceptable in the sight of the Lord.

Witness my hand and the seal of the United States which I have caused to be hereto affixed. Done at the City of Washington, D. C., this fourth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-six, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and twenty-first.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Seal.] RICHARD OLNEY,
Secretary of State.

McKinley and Russell.

The result of the election is now no longer in doubt. The fight was a hard one, the contest close, but as the smoke of battle clears away it is seen that McKinley has a majority of the electoral college and Russell has carried North Carolina by 6,000 majority.

At 10:30 o'clock this morning the REFLECTOR received the following bulletin from Raleigh:

"Bryan telegraphs last night the following to McKinley:

"Senator Jones has just informed me that returns indicate your election. I hasten to extend my congratulations. We have submitted the issues to the American people and their will is law."

"Russell's majority in the State is 6,000, Bryan's 18,000."

Both Wondered.

They were a couple of "new women"—that is to say, they rode bicycles and believed in a woman's privilege to dress as she pleased and in her right to vote. They were traveling alone and rejoiced in doing so. From time to time, indeed, they congratulated themselves on their freedom and independence and the fact that there were no men around to bother them. One day one of them had her pocket picked. It is not necessary to dilate upon the harrowing details of the affair. Suffice to say that the thief was the porter of the car, and the loss was largely due to the woman's carelessness. This, too, although there were no men around to bother them. After much planning what to do, and after much "doing" of a futile and ineffective sort, the two women sat together for some time in silence. They had plenty of other money with them. It wasn't that that worried them—it was their impotence to bring the thief to justice or to get anybody to do anything at all adequate to the occasion. Finally one of the women observed:

"Oh, dear!"

"What is it?" asked the other woman.

Then the first woman said:

"I was just—just wondering, you know, what a man would do under these circumstances."

The other woman said:

"That's just what I was wondering too."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

City Life and Nerves.

Dr. Burt J. Maycock, in a paper on "Some of the Influences of City Life on the Nervous System," lays great stress on the well known fact that the average American treats himself outrageously. The best proof of this is the immense sale in every large city of so called nerve tonics; the trade done in the wines of cocoa and kola and the preparations of phosphorus is almost incredible. This is all wrong. A tired and nervous man does not want hypnotics, but fresh air and exercise according to his strength. In this respect the English are wiser than we are. They keep up their habit of physical exercise until far into old age, and paresis is comparatively little known in England. Dr. Maycock says that American men will have to turn over a new leaf and draw a sensible balance between work and play.

A Shrewd Fruit Dealer.

An ingenious device for attracting custom was that of a fruiterer in a midland town. Instead of ordinary plate glass a large number of rough magnifying glasses formed the window. Seen through one of these panes, an orange looked as large as a pumpkin, and cherries as large as apples. A great disadvantage attaching to this novelty was the fact that at the distance of a few yards from the window it was quite impossible to see into the shop. Everybody knows that you must hold a magnifying glass very close to the eyes to see anything through it. Nevertheless, for some time, at all events, the enterprising shopkeeper did a splendid trade.—Liverpool Mercury.

Boston's Famed Brown Bread.

For one large loaf of bread use three pints of sifted cornmeal, three pints of rye flour, one cup of good hop yeast and one cup of molasses. Mix very soft with warm water, pour the mixture into a round pudding tin and allow it to stand until light. Bake with a steady fire for three hours.—Ladies' Home Journal

Darwin's Theory in Majolica.

Mrs. Brightwen, in "Inmates of My House and Garden" (Unwin), a very interesting and tastefully illustrated little book in which she describes her experiences in taming and keeping birds and animals of different kinds, tells a good story of unlooked-for intelligence. One day in the dining room she was talking to her cook on culinary matters when the latter suddenly looked up at a majolica plate over the doorway and said: "That's a mythological subject, isn't it, ma'am?"

Mrs. Brightwen replied that it was. The cook then said:

"Is that Pan in the foreground?" Mrs. Brightwen said, "No, but it is a satyr."

"Well," replied the cook, "I was saying the other day to the butler if there were creatures of that sort to be seen nowadays it would go far to prove the Darwinian theory. Wouldn't it, ma'am?"

"History," adds Mrs. Brightwen, "does not record my reply."—Westminster Gazette.

Wouldn't Wear it if He Had.

Here is a story about that eccentric character, the late Lord Aylesbury. It has the merit of being true. Lord Aylesbury was standing bareheaded in a well known hatter's shop in Piccadilly while his hat was being ironed. A bishop—who, being still alive, has not yet reached his turn for posthumous anecdotes and must consequently be nameless—entered the shop in full attire, and seeing Lord Aylesbury bareheaded mistook him for a shopman. Taking off his own head covering, the bishop said, "I want to know if you have a hat like this?" Lord Aylesbury surveyed the hat and its owner and turned on his heel with the curt remark, "No, I haven't, and if I had I'm d—d if I'd wear it."—London Realm.

Apple Eating.

It is said that an apple eater will never be dyspeptic or given to biliousness. The lovers of this fruit say that one must always eat it raw, while others consider it only edible when cooked. This latter is wrong, however, as a ripe apple well masticated is a healthy food. Among the excellent ways of cooking apples are apple souffle, apple gingerbread, stuffed, fried, preserved, jellied and baked.

Spurgeon once described Noah as "sitting outside the ark at twilight reading his Bible." This reminds one of the noted picture by a Dutch artist of St. Peter reading his own epistles bound in leather with a pair of horn framed spectacles.

Queer Kinds of Spectacles.

Spectacles, to enable the user to see objects near at hand or at a distance, are made in a variety of forms. In a common form the glasses are in two parts, joined at the center, the upper halves being of a power suited to distance and the lower halves to reading. Sometimes a piece is cut out of the glass and a piece of a different power is put in its place. Sometimes the variation is made by cementing a wafer of glass over a part of the spectacle glasses, and sometimes by grinding away a part of the spectacle glasses. There are made also spectacles with crescent shaped glasses, the upper part of the glass being cut out entirely; the wearer reads through the glasses and looks over them to see at a distance. There are spectacles called clerical glasses, that are like glasses with the upper halves cut off; the wearer looks down through the glasses to read, and he can see over them without effort when he looks at the congregation.—New York Sun.

Breach of Discipline.

In February, 1748, Lord Robert Bertie, third son of Robert, first duke of Lancaster, afterward general in the army and colonel of the Second regiment of foot guards, received a reprimand, such reprimand being conveyed to him by the Duke of Cumberland's aid-de-camp. His military offense was that he had blown his nose, as he relieved guard, beneath his grace's window in St. James palace; this, and this only was all he had done.

Some Actresses.

"Actresses who can't act were perhaps never more numerous than they now are," said one of our best dramatic critics a little time since. "They have pretty faces, charming figures and can smile most bewitchingly. What more can the most exacting playgoer require?"

In like way Charles Mathews, writing in 1875 to a country manager, said: "From my experience of provincial managers I should say that a young and pretty woman who is an acquisition, particularly when she wants no salary for her ignorance. Now, such a one my son asks me to offer you. The lady is clever off the stage and has the advantages I have named above, and he gives me his word of honor that so far as he knows she can't act a bit and looks upon a salary the first season as positively nauseous. She is anxious to come to your theater and show her insufficiency or anything else the public may require. She may be a genius or a duffer. She doesn't know what she can do, being like the man who didn't know whether he could play on the fiddle or not, having never tried. She wishes, at any rate, to put her foot on the stage, which generally means putting her foot in it. Will you give her a trial? If she turns out worth anything, I pledge myself to remove her at the earliest possible opportunity. If not, you are welcome to her so long as you find her thoroughly incapable."

SOME CURIOUS WORDS.

Origin of "Gas" Unexplained and "Caprice" Relates to the Goat.

One need not search far in the dictionary to find curious words. Most words have an interesting history as to development and change of sense, and the regular processes of formation by compounding different elements into one new vocable are very interesting as a study. If you desire to know the English language well and to be able to express thought clearly, you cannot afford to neglect the study of etymology.

One of the most interesting discoveries made by the student of etymology will be the unaccountable origin, or rather the utter absence of systematic origin, of some of the commonest words. Thus gas is a name that has never been explained beyond the mere statement that it was invented by a Belgian chemist named Van Helmont. Guesses have been made about what suggested it to him, but he gave no information as to its source, but merely wrote in Latin, "This vapor hitherto unknown I call by a new name, gas." Caucus and teetotal are common words without satisfactory explanation, but with very interesting histories.

Certain snakes are called adders. Is it not a curious fact that the name adder originated simply through erroneous understanding of sound? The Anglo-Saxon word was naeder, and the German is natter. Adder comes from misunderstanding a nadder as an adder, and the Century Dictionary says that apron, anger, orange and umpire arose through a similar mistake.

Just opposite to this peculiar change from nadder to adder is that which gives us the name newt for what used to be an ewt.

A common saying is that a surprised person is taken aback. This is said to have originated from the same expression used nautically, as in saying that sails are taken aback when they are driven by the winds back against the mast. Probably it would be hard to prove that either of the sayings had its origin in the other, for they both use the word aback in its literal sense—backward. Aback and similar words disclose a curious fact in their etymology—namely, that the first syllable is merely a letter that stands for the original Anglo-Saxon word on, which meant not only what our present "on" means, but also at, to, in, into or almost anything of that kind, according to circumstances.

Accord, concord and discord come from what seems a queer thing to suggest such words for the sense in which they have always been used. In each the second syllable is from the Latin word for heart. Accord in its elements means "to the heart." Real agreement or harmony must have been considered so sweet and so rare that the only fitting name for it must contain that of the heart as the seat of human affection.

Caprice and capricious seem to arise from the fact that people could find no better comparison for certain actions than the capering of a goat. The etymology of these words that connects them with the Latin word for goat is questioned by the Century Dictionary, but there is no doubt that caper is from that Latin word.

Pilgrims were so called for a very queer reason, and the word was made in a queer way. They walked through the land, and as this was their prominent characteristic it suggested the name for them, which is made from the Latin words per, meaning through, and ager, meaning land.—Philadelphia Times.

A Crocodile Fight.

Crocodiles are very apathetic, and fights among them are rare. A short time ago, however, two of the six crocodiles in the zoological gardens at Antwerp had a serious disagreement, and one of the saurians, with a vicious snap, closed his iron jaws on the upper jaw of the other.

During the ensuing battle the locked jaw broke in the middle. The assailant swallowed the "fragment," teeth and all. This ended the unpleasantness, both at once assuming their former listless attitude. The vanquished animal now presents a horrible sight; part of its tongue and the front half of the lower jaw, bristling with teeth, are exposed to view.

But the maimed animal shows no sign of suffering—not even the proverbial crocodile's tears.—London Globe.

Above all things, railery decline; it is in ablest hands a dangerous tool, but never fails to wound the meddling fool.—Stillinsfest.

Words in Famous Books.

The total number of distinct words in the New Testament, excluding proper names and their derivatives, is 4,829. The vocabulary of the Old Testament is much larger. According to Gesenius's "Lexicon," the Old Testament contains 5,816 distinct words, not counting proper names and obsolete roots. A few comparisons with the above may not prove uninteresting. The "Iliad" and the "Odyssey" together contain 9,011 distinct words. Milton used 9,028 different words and forms of expression in his entire works, and Shakespeare, the peer of all language twisters, used over 15,000, or one-third more than was used by all the writers of both the Old and New Testaments.—St. Louis Republic.

Safe.

"Who's there?" cried little Binks, egged on by his wife, who insisted that there was a burglar in the room.

"Nobody," returned the burglar. "There, my dear," snapped Binks, "that's exactly what I told you. Nobody's there, so do go to sleep."

Janin's Advice.

One day a rich but ill natured man who made sad havoc of the French language called upon Jules Janin, the famous French critic, and began a tirade upon some trivial matter in execrable French. After listening politely for some time Janin at last replied to his visitor in Latin.

"What do you mean, M. Janin?" demanded the man angrily. "I don't understand you. I can't speak Latin."

"Try, sir; try!" cried the great critic. "You could not speak it worse than you do French."

Town Council Affairs.

At the meeting of the Board of Town Councilmen Thursday night a trade that had been in existence as to the office of night police was unearthed.

One of the colored Councilmen moved that the salary of night policeman Murphy be increased from $20 per month to $40. During the discussion that followed this motion a colored member made the side remark to Murphy that the latter had not been dividing the last month or so with Henry Brown, a colored man who had been officiating jointly with him. Murphy replied that he could not divide, because the business men of the town seeing that a colored man was serving with him had withdrawn their subscription to the night police service. This let the cat out of the bag, the motion to increase the salary evidently being with the intention of dividing it between them.

When the motion was put it was lost, whereupon Murphy tendered his resignation. The Board then elected J. L. Daniel to fill the place.

Another matter discussed by the Board was the discovery of such errors in the town tax list, which was compiled by F. J. Johnson, colored, and for which he has already been paid, as to necessitate a revision of the list. W. P. Ormond was chosen to do the work of revision.

As the minds of the people will now be free from political agitation the business men should get in their best advertising licks.

Though the result is not what we hoped, we are glad the election is over. People can now go to work and get their minds on other things.

Wilson Air-Tight Heater.
With Patent Automatic Smoke Doors.

The Wilson Heater, which is a stove for house heating, is the most remarkable that has ever been patented.

In the first place it radiates more heat than any stove known, and will save 25 per cent. in fuel over any stove made.

Second, with two or three ordinary sticks of pine stove wood it will keep the fire from 36 to 48 hours, and with ordinary care the fire will never go out.

Third, being entirely closed at the base there is no danger of fire, and it is the cleanest stove in use. It is not necessary to remove the ashes oftener than once a month. These stoves are made of different styles—the small one, which is made for bed rooms, is specially recommended for health as well as comfort.

The Wilson Heater has a great advantage over any similar stove, because it has Patent Automatic Smoke Doors, which prevent the smoke from coming into the room when you take the top off to put in the wood. These doors are so constructed that they can be taken off and put back on in one minute. These stoves can be seen our store, come and look at them.
