EDITORIAL NOTES.

Missouri and Georgia Legislatures are also making war on foot ball and taking steps to prohibit the brutal game in those States. Let the movement go on until the game is driven out entirely.

Cabinet pudding is the kind of dessert that the mouths of a considerable number of prominent politicians waters for at the present time, and a great many of them will come off without a slice of this particular pie. That pudding will be dished out according to Cook Hanna's direction.

Notes and Accounts Unpaid Should Be Reduced to Judgment.

There is absolutely no investment that a business man can make which will yield a larger return for the outlay than that necessary to reduce his uncollectible notes and accounts to judgment, and have the judgment docketed in the Superior Court. It is the custom with a large number of business men when a note or account cannot be collected to charge it up on the profit and loss account, and let it run out of date. This is great folly. It costs but a very small sum to reduce a claim to judgment, and even though the debtor had nothing at the time, yet it will be that in a surprisingly large number of cases, the debtor will acquire something before the judgment runs out of date. We know of at least two instances where judgments were taken against parties who were wholly insolvent at the time, but the judgments were collected years afterwards out of the insurance money coming to the judgment debtors upon the death of certain relatives. For a much stronger reason, if the debtor has any land at all; a judgment should be taken, because the judgment, if properly docketed in the Superior Court, will become a lien upon the land, and will be collected some day, when the homestead right fails in; and in the meantime any person who purchases the land from the judgment debtor, will take it subject to the lien of the judgment.—C. W. Tillet, in Charlotte Observer.

Few Rules for "Getting on."

1. Be honest. Dishonesty seldom makes one rich, and when it does, riches are a curse. There is no such thing as dishonest success.
2. Work. The world is not going to pay you for nothing. Ninety per cent. of what men call talent is only a genius for hard work.
3. Be independent. Do not lean on others to do your thinking or to conquer difficulties.
4. Enter into that business or trade that you like best, and for which nature seems to have fitted you, provided it is honorable.
5. Be conscientious in the discharge of every duty. Do your work thoroughly. No one can rise who slights his work.
6. Don't try to begin at the top. Begin at the bottom and you will have a chance to rise, and will be sure of reaching the top sometime.
7. Trust in hard work. Inscribe on your banner, "luck is a fool, pluck is a hero."
8. Be punctual. Keep your appointments. Be there a minute before time if you have to lose your dinner to do it.
9. Be polite. Every bow, every smile will be money in your pocket.
10. Spend less than you earn. Do not run in debt. Watch the little leaks and you can live on your salary.
21. Be generous. Meanness makes enemies and breeds distrust.

PROFITABLE PUBLICITY.

Preliminary Publicity.

BY NATH'L C. FOWLER, JR., OF NEW YORK, DOCTOR OF PUBLICITY.

Necessities always sell. What folks must have they must buy.

What folks want they will buy, if they can afford to.

What folks can't afford to buy to-day they will buy tomorrow, if they can.

Necessities excepted, few things are purchased on the spur of the moment. Buyers think before they buy.

They may think they don't think, but they do think.

The man who wants a coat talks it over, and thinks about it before he buys it.

The woman does not think she wants a dress at the breakfast table and buy it before dinner.

She may not buy it for three months after she first began to want it.

Nobody paints a house, buys furniture or carpets, or anything else except what they must have, and have at once, until the matter has been given the consideration it deserves, and time and consideration go together.

The good of good advertising is more in the future than in the present.

True bargain advertising will help to sell goods at once, but the rank and file of advertising has more latent, than surface power, and its value is not what it is worth today, but in what it is worth tomorrow and for many days to come.

The general advertisers, who reckon advertising by the closest and most tested methods, long ago decided that it is as necessary to advertise goods before season as during season.

Good advertising may begin to pay when it first appears, and generally well written retail advertising shows its power immediately, but the real good of it is in its permanency, and in what it will do in the future, for no strong advertisement, unless of some special bargain is ever forgotten by the reader, although the reader may think he has forgotten it, but it again appears before his mind whenever conditions suggest it.

Extensive advertising before season when people are thinking about what they will buy during the season, more than doubles the value of advertising in season.

Killed on the Railroad.

Mr. Parrott Cade, who lived about three miles from town, was killed a little beyond Mr. S. H. Abbot's prize house by a special A. & N. C. train Saturday night about 7 o'clock. The engineer did not see him and didn't know his train had killed anyone. The body was discovered by a colored man about half an hour after the train passed.

He seemed to have been struck only in the face, one side of which was mashed, and there was a big hole in the back of the head. A bottle of whiskey in the man's pocket was not even broken.

It is surmised he was drunk and was walking along the side of the track, and stumbled against the train as it came up.

The deceased was a hard working man.—Kinston Free Press.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2ND, 1896.

THE LATE MRS. WALLACE.

On October 22nd, Mrs. Fannie T. Wallace, a former resident of Greenville, died at her home in Trinidad, Col. The REFLECTOR made a note of her death at the time, but has deferred until now giving a more extended sketch of her.

Mrs. Wallace (nee Miss Fannie Parker) was born near Greenville Sept. 9th, 1843. Her parents moved to Greenville in 1851, and the remainder of her childhood and early womanhood were spent in this town. She was well educated, and as a young lady is remembered by many of our people as being one of marked culture and refinement, and greatly loved for the gentleness and purity of every thought and act, and for her lovely character.

On May 22nd, 1864, she united with the Greenville Baptist church, and was baptized by Rev. Henry Petty. She was devoted to the church and its work and proved one of its most faithful members. She esteemed it a privilege to serve her Savior and every duty was a pleasure.

On June 17th, 1868, she married Rev. S. S. Wallace, then a minister of the Baptist church. They lived here until 1874, when they went out west, first locating in Denver, Col., and later in Trinidad, in the same State, which place they made their permanent home. Though far away she never forgot North Carolina and occasionally came back to her old home to visit the family of her sister, Mrs. M. A. Jarvis, and greet her host of friends who were always glad to welcome her.

The best evidence of the esteem in which she was held in her distant home is portrayed in a tribute by a joint committee from the church and Ladies Society of Trinidad, which was published in the Morning Chronicle of Nov. 12th. A friend has kindly loaned us a copy of that paper and we take pleasure in publishing the tribute that here friends here may read it. It is as follows:

In paying this tribute to the memory of our dear sister, Mrs. Fannie F. Wallace, who departed this life Thursday, Oct. 22nd 1896, we feel that we cannot frame into words that will convey to others, the affections we all bore her, and the esteem in which we held her, for words can never express the loss we sustain in her death, neither can we write of her life and character, her long and constant devotion to the church, her integrity of purpose, purity of heart and gentleness of manner; these and many more of kindred virtues that were here to an eminent degree. To feel and know that these virtues were hers, one had but to know her.

She was courteous and considerate always, even in her long and serious illness, ever appreciative of every attention and mindful of the comfort of others,

She died trusting in the Lord and has gone to her reward.

In the death of Sister Wallace the church has lost a true friend, her husband a loving and devoted wife, and the community in which she lived a valued member of society.

Particularly will she be missed by the members of the Ladies Society, of which she had been a member since its organization, and whose efficient treasurerer she had been for several years.

WHEREAS: In the Providence of God, our Heavenly Father, He has removed from us by death, our beloved sister, Mrs. Fannie T. Wallace, who was an earnest, faithful and consistent member of the Baptist church and Ladies Society of Trinidad, be it

Resolved, That we deeply feel the loss of this dear sister, who had so endeared herself to all; of this efficient worker, who so faithfully served the society and church as treasurer and who was ever ready to follow the path of duty.

Resolved, That we shall ever hold her memory sacred and her Christian life and example as one worthy of emulation.

Resolved, That we extend to her beloved husband, and sister and family far away, our deepest sympathy in this sad hour, knowing that we sorrow with them. May they look to Him who is ever ready to comfort the afflicted.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the records of the church and Ladies Society, that they be published in the city papers and that a copy be presented to the husband and sister of the deceased.

Dropped the Subject.

A country schoolmistress had much trouble with her pupils, and to avoid it had examples placed before them of an explanatory or illustrative character. The effect was often unexpected. On one occasion, in going over their usual reading lesson a line was chosen by the lady on which to test the merits of the scholars. The line read: "And he was a man of unlimited credit in business." "Now, Johnny, can you tell me what is meant by the word 'credit' when used as in this lesson?" Thus she addressed one of the stumbling blocks of the school.

"I dunno, marm," said Johnny, looking sheepish. "You don't know?" said the mistress. "Well, listen. Supposing your mother was to be short of money at the end of the week and needed provisions, now what would she do?" She was satisfied that her illustration was plain, and awaited the answer, which came thus: "Well, marm," replied Johnny, "I dunno what she would do unless she pawned dad's Sunday coat, for she's pawned everything else." The subject was instantly dropped, and the teacher now says she has lost faith in that style of illustration.—Hartford Times

He Needed Air.

He was sick, or at least said that he was, and the other day he entered the office of a well known physician up town and sank into a leather covered armchair in the anteroom waiting his turn on the list. At last it came, and the doctor examined his tongue critically, felt of his pulse, inquired as to the symptoms of his illness and then looked wise. Taking a pad from the table, he wrote a prescription calling for bread pills and distilled water or something of that sort. Then, turning in his chair, the physician said: "I cannot see that anything serious is the matter with you. What you need is plenty of air!"

The patient smiled a broad, bland smile, but said nothing.

"Take this prescription regularly every night, but above all things get plenty of air. Good, wholesome outdoor atmosphere, that is what you need more than anything else."

"Ha! ha! ha! I need air, do I?" shouted the man. "Well, that is funny."

"Why, what do you mean?" inquired the doctor.

"Mean? Why, I am a street car driver."

He is laughing yet.

THE "CUNGER BAG."

How the Negroes of the South Protect Themselves.

One of the most remarkable mysteries connected with the life of the southern negro, especially those of Georgia and Florida, is the wonderful and abiding faith they have in the power of the "cunger bag." When cornered, however, with the question as to whether they carry concealed about them an article of the kind, or whether they ever pay a visit to the "doctor," every last one of them will stoutly deny the soft impeachment; yet, as a matter of fact, a large per cent of the colored population of the south are firm believers in voodooism and faithfully spend a portion of their earnings each month in procuring imagined security from enemies and evil spirits, or in laying up a supply of good luck for future use.

"Cunger bags" are of two kinds. The one made of yellow flannel is to ward off evil spirits, the other of red flannel is supposed to insure good luck, or bring to pass some cherished desire of the owner. The contents depend upon circumstances, and the cost is from 25 cents to a dollar.

The doctor hears the visitor's story, and, after deciding what the remedy shall be, selects a small bag of the proper tint of red or yellow, and puts into it something like the following:

A piece of hair or whiskers; some earth that the right or left foot has trod at the hour of midnight at a certain designated spot; a relic of a dead friend; a clipping of the applicant's finger or toe nail; a piece of money from the person, or belonging indirectly to the candidate, which must be soaked so many hours in vinegar, alcohol or whisky; a few watermelon seeds; a little gunpowder, perhaps, or maybe a pinch of snuff or a piece of "Little David root" will do the business. What "Little David root" is no mortal but a voodoo doctor has ever been able to find out, and yet the greatest possible faith is placed in its powers by the superstitious darkies, who believe anything the doctor tells them. It is a peculiar growth that looks very much like slippery elm, and the secret of its origin or place of hiding is held in common only by the doctors and the priests who practice this style of "black art."

Among other things that an applicant is told to do is to place a piece of this root in his or her mouth. It is almost immediately dissolved into a kind of soft paste, and when pressed between the palms the future can be as easily foretold as if read from so many pages of typewritten manuscript. At least the astonished negroes think so, and thoroughly believe in it. "Little David root" is responsible for a great deal of superstition in the south.

There is now living in a suburb of Atlanta, Ga., a fine, fat negress, weighing 250 pounds or more, who has the reputation of being the most successful voodoo doctor in these parts. Her cabin is a veritable curiosity shop, which is hung about with more symbols and charms than an Indian's wigwam.

Among other things her supply of "cungers" is unlimited, and these are sold to visitors (unbelievers included) at an average rate of 50 cents each. If a higher degree of potency is desired, of course, the charge is higher.—St. Louis Republic.

Deaf Mutes' Ideas.

The testimony of educated deaf mutes regarding some of their ideas before instruction is very interesting. Some fancied the wind was blown from the mouth of an unseen being. A number supposed that rain and lightning were caused by men in the sky pouring down water and firing guns. One who had seen flour falling in a mill thought that snow was ground from a mill in the sky. Some of the stars were candles or lamps, lighted every evening by inhabitants of the heavens. Only one said she had "tried to think" about the origin of the world and its inhabitants. All had a great terror of death and being put in the grave; one had been haunted by fear that she might awake in the grave unable to call for help. One thought death was caused by medicine administered by the doctor. Deaf mutes have refused to go to bed when ill, from observing that sick persons have taken to their beds before death. Those who were taken to church by their parents said they had little idea before education of the purpose of this assembly. One testified: "I thought that the people were in the church to worship the clergyman of the greatest dignity and splendor."—N. Y. Times.

When William Hunts.

When the German emperor goes hunting he arrays himself in such gorgeousness that the game ought to be proud to fall before so magnificent a conqueror. His hunting costume was designed by himself, and he is said to be so much taken with it that he omits no opportunity of wearing it. It consists of a bluish-gray tunic, with a short cloak of the same material, both garments having green facings and broad epaulettes. The emperor has around his waist a broad belt of green leather, from which hangs a huge hunting knife, the handle mounted with the imperial crown of gold. He wears very high lacquered boots, gold spurs and a Tyrolese hat of gray felt, edged with green and adorned with an enormous plume of feathers, which quiver at every step.—Troy Times.

The other day I made a trip with Secretary Morton about his preserves. Every once in two or three months the secretary makes a progress through his domain, which extends as far as the experimental station at Bennings, near Washington, D.C., and about four miles from what might be called his headquarters in the Mall. As we stepped out of the door of the agricultural building Secretary Morton pointed to a small brick structure to the east.

"That was all he said, but it was full enough for our purpose. Of course, we didn't get the information scientifically, but we got it just the same, and it only cost 75 cents instead of $100.

TRAINS GOING NORTH.

"There's nothing like science," remarked the secretary, "or scientists to bring some bald detail of government properly to bay.

"Still, there is nothing like science," continued the secretary, "only one should be mighty careful how he fogs with it. A scientific mishap is apt to broaden into a disaster rapidly. It was only recently that some earnest French scientist imported from Europe an insect called the 'gypsy moth.' He intended to cross this foreign moth with some local bird of kindred feather, and, while I'm not clear as to his ultimate expectations, my impression is that he thought that this mule moth which he was after would take some important part in silk culture.

"For instance, there was Prof. Harrington, at one time chief of the weather bureau. He was a scientist, and a good one, and used only scientific methods in everything to which he turned his hand. For example, one day our weather fellow at Baker City, Ore., failed to send in a report for four straight days. We didn't know whether he was in the midst of storms or calms; we couldn't hear from him. This Baker City silence grew tedious. My first notice of it, however, was one morning when I received a communication from Prof. Harrington, wherein he set forth the deathlike stillness which prevailed in the case of our Baker City man and wound up by recommending that a gentleman named Smith in San Francisco be instructed to proceed to Baker City at an expenditure not to exceed $100, and explore the observatory, as well as the man in charge, and discover the reasons of his silence. It struck me as a scientific case of going all about Robin Hood's barn, and I remarked to the professor after reading his recommendation:

"So he brought a family of gypsy moths and established himself with these interesting insects in some town in Massachusetts. He had them all locked up in a sort of a mosquito-netting cage. This was hanging near an open window, in order to give the captives a chance at the fresh air, and a wind came along, when the Frenchman's scientific back was turned, and blew the whole business out of doors. The gypsy moths got away and since then they and their descendants have nearly eaten up every green thing in Massachusetts, except Congressman Morse. I hear the moths missed him. It's the truth; the moths simply laid waste the state, and the legislature has already been driven to appropriate over $400,000 toward their extermination. That happened as the result of that scientific experiment. Oh, no! I am not saying anything against science; I only wish to emphasize the fact that people who fool with it ought to have a care."—N. Y. Journal.

Pulling for the office through the snow.

Big Snow Storm.

Early risers this morning discovered that it was snowing, and by the time those who indulge in a late nap got out the ground was showing an inclination to turn white. The snow kept coming down steadily all day and showed good sticking qualities. At three o'clock the ground was covered to a depth of about 6 inches and the flakes were still falling thick and fast at the rate of half inch an hour, with no indication of stopping any time soon. It is the first snow of the season and in size makes a pretty good beginning for the winter.
