HOUSE.

The house met at 10 o'clock.

Bills and resolutions were introduced as follows:

White, to repeal the act to establish a true meridian in the state for correct retracing of surveys.

Carter, to work convicts on public roads in Nash county.

Eddiner, to require deeds in trust and mortgages to be canceled by record within ten days after they have been paid.

McCrary, to provide that authority to collect arrears of taxes shall cease two years and three months from March 2, 1895.

Pool, to appropriate $2,000 annually to the colored normal school at Elizabeth City.

Currie, to extend the corporate limits of Maxton.

Leak, to revise the charter of Morven.

Dockery, to amend the law regarding analysis of fertilizers, by providing that if the analysis shows presence of hair, hoof, meat, horn, leather, scraps, marl or other deleterious materials, publication shall be duly made and such fraudulent fertilizers shall be seized and condemned.

The bill to make it indictable to interrupt a public speaker came up and caused a lively debate. The text of the bill was: "Any person who shall wilfully interrupt or disturb any political meeting, lawfully assembled, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding $50 or imprisonment not more than thirty days."

The resolution placing in the hands of the governor $1,000 to be applied to the erection of a statue of George Peabody in Statuary hall at Washington, was taken up.

Lusk antagonized it, while enlogizing Peabody, and said if the latter could speak he would say use the money for schools.

Alexander said he was surprised at any one antagonizing the resolution.

Sutton, of Cumberland, moved to indefinitely postpone the resolution. This prevailed.

THEY ARE ONE.

A Brilliant Church Wedding.

JAMES WHITE.—A most beautiful and impressive marriage was witnessed in the Memorial Baptist church, Wednesday evening, the contracting parties being Mr. Herbert A. White and Miss Jennie L. James.

The church was elaborately decorated for the occasion. The choir recess just behind the pulpit was transformed into a superb bower of cala lilies, roses, hyacinths, palms, holly and hot house plants of every description, backed by French mirrors, with wax tapers neatly arranged so that their glow cast a beautiful effect on the surroundings. An arch over the front of the pulpit was encircled with tapers and ornamented with rare flowers. A marriage bell was suspended in front of the arch where the bride and the groom stood. Floral gates were at the end of the aisles, with arches bearing in silver letters the name "James" and "White."

At an early hour the church was filled, the large audience being promptly and systematically seated by the clever and polite ushers, Drs. E. A. Moye, C. O'H. Laughinghouse and Zeno Brown and Messrs. L. I. Moore, J. W. Wiggins and J. L. Starkey. Under the skillful touch of Mrs. J. B. Cherry, on the organ, the beautiful strains of "Mendelssohn's Grand Wedding March," were sweetly rendered as the bridal party entered. Masters John Shelburn and Bert James first marched down the right and left aisles and swung open the floral gates. Following these came the ushers, three up each aisle, and occupied the front pew. The bridesmaids entered the rear door in couples, separating at the pulpit, one going up the right and the other up the left aisle, crossing at the front vestibule and joining the groomsmen at the two front entrances, then marching down the aisles in the following order:

Miss Carrie Cobb with J. B. Cherry, Jr., Miss Lena Harriass with E. B. Ficklen, Miss Myra Skinner with J. L. Fleming, Miss Sallie Lipscomb with R. D. Cherry, Miss Rosalind Bountree with Jarvis Sugg, Miss Delia Marshall with W. J. Corbett, Miss Bettie Tyson with G. J. Woodward, Miss Lula White with R. M. Moye, Miss Lizzie Blow with P. H. Gorman, Miss Lillian Cherry with J. B. White. Next came the flower girls Little Misses Mary James and Rue Clark strewing flowers as they went. The maid of honor, Miss Bessie Jarvis, preceded the bride with a silver tray in the shape of a heart bearing the wedding ring. The beautiful bride, Miss Jennie James, entered leaning upon the arm of her brother, Hon. F. G. James. The bride was joined at the altar by the groom, Mr. Herbert A. White, with his best man, Mr. S. T. White, they coming through the rear door. Rev. E. D. Wells, with a most beautiful and impressive ceremony united them in the holy bonds and pronounced them man and wife.

From the church the bridal party repaired to the elegant residence of Hon. F. G. James where a reception was held from 9 to 11 o'clock. The various rooms of the building were appropriately decorated. The bride and groom occupied the west parlor and there received the congratulations of a host of friends.

In the drawing room opposite the parlor were displayed the bridal presents. These comprised about ninety different presents, many of exceeding beauty and value being among them.

The bride, who is one of our most charming young ladies, never looked more beautiful than in her perfect fitting wedding robe of white satin. She and each of the bridesmaids carried exquisite bouquets of bride roses furnished by Riverside Nurseries. The groom, always a handsome young man, looked his best on this occasion. He is a native of Greensboro, but has been engaged in the insurance business here for the last few years. Both share a large measure of popularity among our people, and it is the wish of all that their wedded life begun so auspiciously may be an uninterrupted voyage of happiness.

PARIS GREEN ON TOBACCO.

N. C. AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 9th, 1897.

O. L. JOYNER, Greenville, N. C.

DEAR SIR:—There is a growing practice in North Carolina and in other states, notably Kentucky, whereby Paris green is used to spray or dust growing tobacco to destroy horn worm, bud worm and flea beetle. This Paris green, as you know, contains arsenic which is poisonous in sufficient doses. The strength of the solution for spraying is about four ounces of Paris green to a barrel, or 50 gallons of water, and the application of spray is about three times during the season. The question naturally arises whether this use of Paris green will be detrimental to the future sale and use of the tobacco.

The quantity of arsenic which has been ascertained to exist on the tobacco leaf, as determined by the Kentucky Experiment Station, varies from a trace up to 0.287 grains of white arsenic per pound of dry tobacco leaf, with the most favorable conditions for the retention of Paris green upon the leaf. The minimum fatal dose is about 2 to 2½ grains of arsenic taken at one time. Applied to the quantity of tobacco mentioned, it would take about seven pounds of tobacco leaf swallowed at one time in order to produce a possible fatal dose. To swallow this quantity is out of the question and it seems impossible for an objectionable dose to be taken into the system, as tobacco chewers are not in the habit of swallowing the small amount of tobacco they use.

Whether the continued use of this tobacco with the largest amount of arsenic noted above would result in any objectionable effect is a different question. It is not reasonable, however, to suppose, under the conditions, that this could be possible. Arsenic itself is given as a medicinal dose in some sections, especially for malarial diseases and used as a tonic. It is possible, therefore, that the small (if any at all) that might be detained under the most favorable circumstances instead of proving objectionable might prove advantageous to the health of the chewer. In Kentucky, where the practice of spraying tobacco in this way is followed, many growers do not hesitate to chew their own tobacco sprayed in this way and no harmful results have ever been noted.

Spraying as above to destroy the worms named is a very effective remedy and would result in their destruction before the leaf is ragged, and a consequent marketing of a better grade and more even leaf. The main question, however, is whether the consumers of tobacco, whether by chewing or smoking, would be apt to be deterred from using this tobacco, even though there is no harm whatever that might come from it. Oftentimes scares, although they may be senseless, have quite materially affected the sale of crude products. This has been notably the case in the early history of fruit growing, where spraying with Paris green had been used to destroy insects or fungous diseases upon grape vines and fruit trees. This scare, however, has died out, and is never heard of at present. Paris green is now universally used as a spray for fruits and no harm has ever resulted.

I write you at length and will ask you to kindly write me your opinion upon the subject as to whether the process of tobacco treated in this way would be affected in the market. Kindly consider the question not only from a warehouseman's standpoint, but from the users and the dealers standpoint. The matter is a very important one and I will thank you to write me as soon as possible.

Very respectfully,
H. B. BATTLE, Director.

The above communication from Dr. Battle, Director of the N. C. Experiment Station will be read with great interest by all tobacco farmers.

If any practically harmless means can be used by which the flea beetle can be successfully destroyed, leaving the bud and horn worm out of the question, we can't see why any sensible person should make any objection to it, though there always skeptics and wise men (more of the latter class) who grasp such opportunities as the above to bring themselves into prominence, not being able to do it in any other way. As a matter of course if there is any lawful reason why Paris green should not be used on tobacco then it ought to be known, but practically speaking it has been clearly demonstrated that there can be no harmful results from its use and if by its use these most dangerous pests can be destroyed then the farmers certainly ought to be in possession of all the information on the subject, for the flea beetle alone cost the farmers annually thousands of dollars, in that there is no means by which they can be destroyed and they really do tobacco more harm than the other two combined, for they gather upon the leaves and suck the substance, leaving nothing but a chaffy, fibrous substance that is neither wanted by the buyer nor weighs anything for the farmers.

Remove these three pests of the tobacco plant and the eye sore of tobacco growing is gone. It will be no more trouble to cultivate a crop of tobacco with these out of the way than it will a crop of cotton and if they can be gotten rid of the value of the tobacco plant will be far greater than it is at present.

Bitter Recollection.

A sad looking man went into a chemist's. "Can you give me," he asked, "something that will drive from my mind the thought of sorrow and bitter recollection?" And the druggist nodded and put him up a little dose of quinine and wormwood and rhubarb and epsom salts and a dash of castor oil and gave it to him, and for six months the man could not think of anything in the world except new schemes for getting the taste out of his mouth.

An Orange Battery.

During a lecture on the subject of "Novel Electrical Experiments," delivered before the South African Philosophical society by A. P. Trotter, government electrician and inspecter, the lecturer rang up the Cape Town telephone exchange and asked if any of the longer postoffice telegraph lines were clear. The Port Elizabeth line was then connected up and the lecturer, observing that with the extremely sensitive instruments used in the government offices it was not necessary to use ordinary electric batteries for the signaling to such a distance as Port Elizabeth, disconnected the battery commonly employed, and, plunging a steel knife and silver fork into an orange, sent telegraphic signals by means of the feeble currents thus generated. He then asked the front row of the audience to join hands,
and, putting them in the circuit, sent signals through their bodies to Port Elizabeth and back by means of the orange cell.
