Aid Tells of Business, Crops, and Other Things.

ATLANTA, GA., July 28, '98,

EDITOR REFLECTOR—Had a splendid run to this place where I am for 2 hours. Glad to have 2 hours in such a nice place as the Kimball where I spent a royal time 27 years ago with a party of school friends.

Well, everything seems cheerful. Even Bro. Caddell, of the Recorder, is above par on his usual bearings. I saw business men yesterday and last night and they are all of the opinion that the bottom of the switchback has been reached and there will soon be a very decided betterment. In fact, it is being felt already. The country can now have a rest is the common sentiment, and when there is rest business will assert itself.

The gold finds in Mexico and the Alaska finds have their effect and already Mexico is agitating the adoption of the gold standard.

Have never seen crops looking so well in North Carolina on the railroad route. Could not tell what they were in South Carolina, but learned they were good—very good ones.

In Georgia so far corn and cotton look well. But no crops I have seen are up to the great "State of Pitt."

I was showing my samples of bright tobacco on train yesterday to some people "way down South in Dixie" and also some from Canada. It was a curiosity to them to see it and then look out on the green crops growing along the road. You see I do not miss a chance to talk old Pitt county. When I get down in Texas I shall have to include the Old North State and Pitt in particular.

I am in good trim and if I continue so will let you hear from me again when in Nashville or Galveston, or some other point. I am not decided whether I will go to Nashville or go direct to Texas. The further south I go the more cheerful and contented I find the people.

Yours truly,
ISAAC A. SUGG.

Base Ball.

Louisville, July 28—The Colonels played stupid ball and the trolley dodgers won without the slightest trouble today. Fisher kept the home team's hits scattered while Frazer was hit hard. Score. Louisville, 2; Brooklyn, 12.

Pittsburg, July 28—The only interesting incident in the two games today was in the first, when Pittsburg made a rally in the ninth and came within one of tying the score. The Philadelphia pitchers were entirely too much for the home players. The last game came near being a farce. Score. Pittsburg, 5; Philadelphia, 6.

Second game—Pittsburg, 3; Philadelphia, 13.

Chicago, July 28—The Colts gave a good exhibition of how not to play ball today, piling up about as many errors as the visitors made hits and presented them with all their runs. The Reds played a perfect fielding game, Irwin's work in accepting eleven chances at third being especially brilliant. Score. Chicago, 3; Cincinnati, 6.

Washington, July 28—The Senators lost the game today through poor fielding and base running and in the last inning by reason of McJames' inability to hold down hits. Nops was substituted for Pond in the seventh inning. Score. Washington, 7; Baltimore, 14.

Cleveland, July 28—The Giants fell on Young for eight hits in the first inning of today's game. Seven runs was the result. After that they could not hit him effectively, while the Indians drove Seymour out of the box in the second inning. Meekin, who took his place, was pounded hard. Score. Cleveland, 14; New York, 8.

St. Louis, July 28—The Browns won from the Browns today by superior playing. Lucid was benched in the sixth inning and Grimes, the home team's new twirler from the defunct Central league, took his place and acquitted himself very favorably. Score. St. Louis, 1; Boston, 8.

The Wilmington, Newbern & Norfolk Road.

Judge Simonton, presiding in the United States Court at Wilmington, has issued a decree confirming the recent sale of the Wilmington, Newbern and Norfolk railway to Mr. Warren G. Elliott, president of the Atlantic Coast Line, who purchased the road under foreclosure proceedings, at $300,000, after sharp bidding against representatives of the holders of the bonds of the Wilmington, Newbern and Norfolk company's original issue.

It was predicted as early as last April, when the sale was ordered by the Federal Courts, that the purchasers of the property would be the Atlantic Coast Line, whose magnificent system of trunk lines and branches then touched almost every important point in Eastern North Carolina except Newbern. Kinston was the nearest point to that progressive city, reached by the Coast Line, and The Virginian remarked that it would have been at variance with road's progressive policy of extension had it allowed the excellent system embraced in the Wilmington, Newbern and Norfolk line, tapping the fertile alluvial district and valuable timber lands of the great sound country of Eastern Carolina, to pass into other hands.

The road, however was, as here predicted, purchased by the Atlantic Coast Line and at a price far in excess of any sum that could have been realized on the property had it been sold to any one else. The company proposed to operate the road from Wilmington to Newbern as a part of the system of branch lines, which ramify throughout Carolina, but it now appears probable that the road may be extended under its franchise to this city. Branches of the Coast Line reach both Washington and Greenville, and to either point a link could be built from Newbern and direct connection made by the Norfolk and Carolina railway via Hobgood, to this city. The link from Newbern to Greenville would be about forty-five miles long, or if built between Newbern and Washington, thirty-five miles.

This would give Norfolk direct rail service to Newbern, an advantage the two cities have never before enjoyed. It is quite probable that the work of making the connection referred to will begin at an early date.—Norfolk Virginian.

COMMUNITY DEPENDENCE.

People some times fail to realize the full significance of their relation to the community in which they live. They lose sight of the fact that the growth and success of a town or village depends to a great extent upon its business men and citizens. It is a rare exception to find a place which has such great natural resources and advantages that it will grow and prosper despite internal and external opposition. A town may be practically killed in various ways by its inhabitants.

First, by calamity howlers who can see nothing good in their surroundings and are continually singing dirges to every stranger that comes along seeking for investments.

Second, by opposing all public improvements of whatever kind, notwithstanding that the public welfare and rapid growth of the town demands them, and acting upon the assumption that every promulgator of an improvement or enterprise is a rascal seeking whom he may devour to inhance his own financial or political ends.

Third, by a total indifference to every enterprise, content to let well enough alone and become a drone in the busy hive of progressive workers who have plunged into the wilderness far in advance of civilization and built up flourishing towns and cities with schools, churches and great manufacturing enterprises. Such men are the life and strength of every city, village or nation.

Speak a good word for your town at any and all times and prove your loyalty by patronizing the home grocer, dry goods man, butcher and printer for every dollar spent away from home is an injury to your town to that extent. —Henderson Gold Leaf.

Wise Words.

Prudence and love are inconsistent; in proportion as the last increases the other decreases.

It is the unmarried woman who can give her sister points on the art of how to manage a husband.

Imagination is the stairway which the mind uses when taking the measure of some lofty projection.

Some people have the knack of making other people uncomfortable to make them comfortable.

The man who can write love letters without making an ass of himself has kept the matter very quiet.

Some people are of the opinion that the horse is doomed to become extinct, but the "ass" will continue to flourish.

There is nothing that helps a man in his conduct through life more than a knowledge of his own characteristic weakness. —Sis Southwest.

Two Brothers Killed.

Waco, Texas, July 28.—In the stock brokerage office of C. E. Trice & Co. today, B. F. Kivett and W. W. Kivett were shot and killed by W. Lamden, a member of the firm. Bad feeling has existed between the Kivett brothers and Lamden for some time, growing out of charges made by the relatives of Lamden against a sister of the Kivetts. The shooting between the brothers and Lamden occurred during the busiest part of the day when the office was crowded and it caused intense excitement. Two more of the Kivett brothers armed themselves and proceeded to the scene of shooting, threatening to kill Lamden, but they were not allowed to enter. The killing is universally looked upon as justifiable.

About a month ago the Kivetts attempted to kill Lamden, inflicting a knife wound on him, and they had frequently threatened to kill him since then. This morning they appeared in the doorway of Trice & Co's office. Lamden was informed of their coming. As they appeared in the door way they drew their pistols, but Lamden fired with a shot gun before they could shoot, killing B. F. Kivett instantly. W. W. Kivett rushed on Lamden with his revolver and as he pulled the trigger, Lamden struck the weapon up and then grabbed it. The men wrestled over the weapon which Kivett succeeded in firing several times without result. Lamden finally succeeded in drawing his revolver and shooting Kivett three times. Lamden was uninjured.

[The Kivetts were from North Carolina.]

Home Making.

There is an ocean of difference between housekeeping and home making. One is a business; the other is an art. Many women who make great success in the business will fail absolutely in the art. Their houses are perfectly kept. Every department is run with care and exactness. There is never a failure to meet demand; but it is not a home. A home exists for the comfort, happiness, and health of the family. There is no department of house keeping that is not made to yield to the needs of any member. There is never a crisis of temper in meal is too late or the convenience of a member demands a change in the hour. A few minutes—yea, even a number of minutes—spent in kindly converse in the morning, the call of a friend, or the sudden desire for an hour's outing, never seems to the home maker a violation of the moral code. Dust does not cause nightmare, nor disorder a display which love and charity agree to call nervousness. Not things, but souls, are the objects of the home seeker's care. She values peace more than system, happiness more than regularity, content more than work accomplishes. Yet with it all, her house, when she touches perfection, is the essence of regularity, order, and quiet. It is this that makes home making an art. And she alone is a home maker who has a true sense of proportion.—The Outlook.

Now is the time to select the seed corn for next year by observing and making the most vigorous stalks. Later on the ears can be observed, and when the time arrives for saving seed it should be taken from the stalks that are marked which may be done by fastening strips to them. The selection of the ears is no more important than securing vigor in the stalks. Not only the grain, but the fodder, and the adaptability of the plants to the conditions of growth, are essential in selecting seed.

When Victoria began to reign, there were only twenty five States in the American republic; there are now forty five. In 1837 the population was 14,963,000; in 1897, 72,000,000 is the estimated number of inhabitants. In 1837, the country's wealth was about $5,000,000,000; now it reaches a total of $90,000,000,000—an enormous increase. In 1837, the railway mileage of the United States was 1,497; it is now 179,821, or greater than that of all Europe

GRANT AND SHERMAN.

Their Generous Appreciation of Each Other's Abilities.

In The Century, General Horace Porter says, in the course of his "Campaigning With Grant."

A little before 9 o'clock on the evening of Sept. 4, while the general was having a quiet smoke in front of his tent, and discussing the campaign in Georgia, a dispatch came from Sherman announcing the capture of Atlanta, which had occurred on Sept. 2. It was immediately read aloud to the staff, and after discussing the news for a few minutes and uttering many words in praise of Sherman, the general wrote the following reply: "I have just received your dispatch announcing the capture of Atlanta. In honor of your great victory I have ordered a salute to be fired with shotted guns from every battery bearing upon the enemy. The salute will be fired within an hour, amid great rejoicing."

In the meantime the glad tidings had been telegraphed to Meade and Butler, with directions to fire the salute, and not long afterward the roar of artillery communicated the joyful news of victory throughout our army and bore sad tidings to the ranks of the enemy. An answer was received from Sherman, in which he said: "I have received your dispatch and will communicate it to the troops in general orders."

"I have always felt that you would take personally more pleasure in my success than in your own, and I reciprocate the feeling to the fullest extent."

Grant then wrote to Sherman: "I feel that you have accomplished the most gigantic undertaking given to any general in this war with a skill and ability which will be acknowledged in history as unsurpassed, if not unequalled. It gives me as much pleasure to record this in your favor as it would in favor of any living man, myself included."

The above correspondence with Sherman recalls the letters which were interchanged between them after General Grant's successes in the west. The general wrote to Sherman at that time: "What I want is to express my thanks to you and McPherson as the men to whom, above all others, I feel indebted for whatever I have had of success. How far your advice and assistance have been of help to me you know. How far your execution of whatever has been given you to do entitles you to the reward I am receiving, you cannot know as well as I. I feel all the gratitude this letter would express, giving it the most flattering construction." Sherman wrote a no less manly letter in reply. After insisting that General Grant assigned to his subordinates too large a share of merit, he went on to say: "I believe you to be as brave, patriotic and just as the great prototype, Washington; as unselfish, kind hearted and honest as a man should be, but the chief characteristic is the simple faith in success you have always manifested, which I can liken to nothing else than the faith a Christian has in the Saviour."

"I knew, wherever I was, that you thought of me, and if I got in a tight place you would help me out if alive." The noble sentiments expressed in this and similar correspondence were three bright spots which served to relieve the gloomy picture of desolating war.

His Eye Teeth.

"Atter," said the good wife, "I wish you would stop at the store and get me a rubber ring for the baby to cut his teeth on."

"S'pese you give him that there gold brick in the cupboard?" said the farmer, with a grim smile. "It worked all right with me."—Cin.
