BOTH DIED.

Was it the Result of Mental Anguish, or What?

A most remarkable case of superstition, with fatal results has just been reported to us by a gentleman who lives not far from Monroe, and whose word is his bond, therefore the incident is true. It occurred last summer. The gentleman in question had an old couple, man and wife, working for him on the farm. One day while they were planting corn he went out to drop some for them, and by an oversight skipped one of the rows. When the corn began coming up, there was, of course, a vacant row. Im nediately the old couple manifested the greatest uneasiness and declared that the non coming up of the corn was an ill-omen and meant that they were to have some unusually bad luck. They planted the row with the hope that by this the calamity might te averted; but still they were not satisfied, and continued restless and expectant of coming ill, the matter weighing heavily on their minds. Now comes the strauge part. In about two months the wife sickened and shortly died. The husband regarding her death as a fulfilment of the evil prophecy, and expressed the opinion that he was likewise doomed to an early death. Remarkable to say, in about two more months he also sickened and died. It is for the theorists to say whether the disturbance of mind and the fear that something was going to happen the old couple experienced from what they regarded as an evil sign operated to bring on the sickness of which they died, or that the deaths were mere coincidents with the corn planting occurrence. Who can tell? No one, we guess .- Monroe Journal.

The soldiers of the civil war are rapidly going to the other side of the river. There were 31,960 deaths of pensioners last year, the greater number of whom were veterans. It will not be very long before the pension list will contain the names of a larger number of persons who and bowels, cleansing the entire systems were never in sight of a battle- dispel colds, cures headache, fever, hafield than of soldiers who carried bitual constipation and biliousness guns on their shoulders and bore Please buy and try a box of C. Feminine Superiority

It is admittedly true that the hand of small employment hath the daintier sense, and it is also true that as compared with the hand of man the hand of woman exceeds in the delicacy of touch. By reason of this superiority in many employments requiring exceeding fineness and mobility of execution women are preferred, and they are pushing men from their stools. It is announced that "as the result of long and careful experiment, the governor of the Bank of France has now intrusted the work of detection of forged bank notes and of des bentures with altered numbers entirely to a special corps of women clerks. He delares that the keen sensibility of their finger tips enables them in handling a note to distinguish the difference, however slight, between the forged and the real article.' Keenness of sight as well as of touch is necessary in detecting the false numbering of debentures, and success in this work depends upon the discovery of the difference in symmetry of figures and the slight shades of difference in the ink used.

The world has been a long time in finding out and in putting to use the feminine superiorities which make the employment of women in certain lines of work a matter of course as well as of dexterity and profit: but of late years their sphere of usefulness has been rapidly enlarged. Not without demur, but surely, bright women are making inroads upon very many forms of indoor work which were once masculine monopolies .- Philadelphia Rec-

Denounced Cigarette Trust Money as Blood Money

Mr. A. H. Eller, of Winston, was the chief speaker at the Masonic picnic at Mocksville Thursday of last week. The Winston Journal says of his address:

"The speaker denounced, in most emphatic terms, the gifts coming from large trusts and corporations to charitable and educational institutions. He said such gifts were hollow mockery, and declared that the devil had as much right to wear the livery of heaven as the trusts have to wear the mantle of charity, which mantle was only worn to please and placate the people and stay the uplifted hand of popular disfavor which sought to destroy them. He maintained that in giving to educational institutions the coporations dictated the policy to be pursued and the course of study to be taught in such institutions, and cited in proof of his statement the recent call for the resignation of the president of Brown University, on account of his financial views.

"Mr. Eller commended the Quakers for their recent opposition to the gift of the Dukes to Guilford College and spoke of the gifts as blood money. In view of the fact that the Dukes have recently given $10,000 to the Oxford Orphanage these remarks, coming from & Masonic speaker, created something of a sensation."

Imposition in Sale of Books

The State Superintendent of Public Instruction rotifies county supervisors that the text books for the public schools were adopted by the commissioners of each county on the first Monday in June for three successive years and requested that they have the parents and children may know what are required and the price. In some counties he has heard of books being sold higher than the contract price recorded at the register of deeus offices. It is the duty of supervisors to see that the children are not imposed upon. He suggests that the list and prices be printed on heavy pasteboard and placed in every school house.

Schools in the Summer Time.

Would it not be a good thing if a large proportion of the children between six and eighteen, especially in the cities, were in school instead of on the street during the summer? Ir school work is not made too hard, is there any reason other than custom for pupils suspending their work for one fourth of the year? Even if the above is not admitted, would it not be an advantage to pupils to be able to attend at any time of the year which is most convenient? Would not the adoption of the quarter instead of the year as the unit in grading also be of great advantage not only to irregular pupils, exceptionally slow children who now have to advance or tall behind a whole year at a time?

The above facts and questions suggest the idea that possibly we are just entering upon a new epoch in the history of the develorment of education in this country-an epoch in which schools of all kinds will be a continuous instead of an intermittent factor in our national life. It is certain at least that all thoughtful educators will watch with interest the development and spread of the idea as It is discussed in the papers and in educational gatherings and as it is worked out in the schools adopting it .- From "Continuous Sessions of Schools," by Prof. E. A. Kirkpatrick, in American Monthly Review of Reviews for August.
