$2,500 DAMAGES.

The Jury Awards This Amount to a Young Lady.

A very interesting suit was tried Wednesday before the Superior Court and ended in a verdict of $2,500 for the plaintiff. This action was a case for false imprisonment and libel brought by Miss Nancy McGowan against W. K. McGowan. We gather these particulars as to the cause of the suit:

About two years ago W. K. McGowan had Misses Nancy and Jacky Ann McGowan, both of them his cousins, indicted under the charge of stealing wood. The young ladies were arrested and brought to Greenville for trial before Justice J. A. Lang. After hearing the evidence the Magistrate dismissed the case at the cost of the prosecutor. For this arrest and the charge brought against them each of the young ladies entered a suit for false imprisonment and slander against Mr. McGowan.

It was the first of these suits that came up Wednesday, the verdict being in favor of the young lady. There were two counts in the complaint, one for false arrest and imprisonment and the other for libel, the jury placing the damage in the former at $1,500 and in the latter at $1,000.

The suit of the other young lady, Miss Jacky Ann McGowan, will be tried at December term of court.

Propheying Warm Weather.

A gentleman who caught a glimpse of the new moon, Wednesday night, remarked that we were going to have some more warm weather. He gave as a reason for this that the moon lay so far towards the south.

WEEKLY CROP BULLETIN.

For Week Ending Monday Sept.
27, 1897.

The week ending Monday, September, 27th, was much lower in temperature, especially on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, which were cold and cloudy, with brisk northeast winds and rain. Rain occurred on three days, but averaged less than one inch for the State and, though of some benefit to turnips and late potatoes, came too late for any other crops. Neither was there sufficient rain to fill water courses or wells. At some points where the rain fell was heaviest a little fall plowing and seeding was done at the end of the week, but at most points but little progress was possible. The last three days of the week were warm and dry, and the drought cannot be considered broken yet. A touch of frost occurred in the mountains without any damage. Cotton is about all matured and upland all open. The rainfall was of no value while the high wind did some damage by blowing out cotton. A further deterioration of the crop took place during the week and conservative estimates place the decline at nearly one third since September 1st. Picking, was interrupted by the rain, has since progressed very rapidly. Late corn did well in eastern counties; elsewhere, on account of drought, it dried immature; it is being gathered. Tobacco is nearly all housed and cured. Sweet potatoes and peanuts were badly damaged by drought; digging peanuts is progressing now. Late Irish potatoes were helped a little by the rain, and turnips, though looking badly, have started growth since the showers. Early sown rye seems to be making a start, but most fall seeds are nearly a failure. Much re-breaking of wheat land has to be done, and all fall work is being delayed. Large quantities of rough flax, fodder and hay, have been saved in good condition. Trees are beginning to shed their leaves.

Laid to Rest.

The burial of the little child of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Riels took place this morning at the Tat grave yard, seven miles below town. Services were conducted by Rev. N. M. Watson at the residence and also at the grave. The pall bearers were Messrs. J. L. Stakey, T. J. Sugg, Phil. Crawford and J. B. White.

The Autumnal Textiles are in radiant profusion on our counters. No store, in the South ever exhibited so much exclusiveness and elegance. There are gorgeous groups of stuffs from Paris, Vienna, Picardy, Roubaix, Glouchau, Gera, Bradford, Leeds, Glasgow and other famous trans-Atlantic manufacturing cities. We selected the best that the makers of France, Germany, Austria, England and Scotland have produced, and you are invited to examine them while they are yet in their exquisite state of freshness and beauty. There are multitudes of plain makes in mono-colors, and an aggregation of fancy effects in multi-colors showing designs and combinations that are too kaleidoscopic for any advertising pen to describe. THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1897.

Swallowed Four Hundred and Eighty Three Oysters.

Ira Chapman came down from Washington's crescent and ate his annual meal of oysters, says the Philadelphia Times. For a quarter of a century Ira has come to Trenton at the opening of the oyster season and eats bivalves in competition with other gourmands or to beat his own record, and no body has been able to outstay him on the contest.

Raws, stews or fries are the same to him. There appears to be no limit to his capacity, and no matter who enters the oyster eating contest with him, he invariably goes away victor, and the wonder is that he is able to go away at all, because he makes no bones of swallowing 300 oysters, and he says if he was put to the test he could swallow twice that number and walk away with them. Chapel is a husky farmer, standing six feet two in his socks. His beard sweeps his chest, and he stands on a pair of legs as steady as an oak. Ordinarily his appetite is not voracious, but he says just as soon as the season for oysters opens he has "a hankering for them, and lights out for Trenton, where he can get all he wants."

He thinks that he inherited his appetite from his father, who was a fisherman all his life, along the Delaware bay, and he tells some wonderful stories about the number of oysters that his sire could eat at a single sitting. But Ira claims to have outdone his paternal ancestor, and holds himself up to be the champion oyster eater of the United States, and says that he is not afraid to tackle anybody from anywhere.

Two years ago Chapel walked into Hilderbrecht's restaurant. There was a crowd of his acquaintances there he said:

"Boys, I've got an oyster appetite on me today as big as a load of hay, and I'll bet I can eat them as fast as two men can open them for fifteen straight minutes."

"How much'll you bet?" asked one of the men in the restaurant who didn't know Ira's peculiarity.

"Ten dollars and the price of the oysters," replied Ira.

"It's a go," said the man, and the money was put up.

Two men were put behind the oyster bar, and at a signal they began work. Ira pushed oysters into his face with both hands. There was no intermission. There was an unbroken procession of bivalves slipping down his throat. He kept it up for fifteen minutes, and by actual count swallowed 473 Maurice cove oysters, No. 1. The man who had bet with him handed him over the $10 and paid for the oysters. To his amazement Ira slowly folded the bill, stuck it in his pocket, and turning to the waiter said:

"Charley, bring me a good big steak, rare, and all covered with onions. I feel as if I had order have something to stay my stomach. Oysters are pretty good fillin', but they don't stick to a fellow's ribs worth a darn."—Atlantic Journal.

Saved by a Wasp and Sympathy.

"By what a slender thread," etc. you know the quotation," said the lawyer who went west thirty years ago to win his spurs and then came back to civilization to win fame and fortune. "I'll give you an illustration. "After I had been out there long enough to get acquainted with the people and their ways I was called upon to defend a young tenderfoot charged with murder. There was not the slightest doubt, from a legal standpoint, of his guilt. The only thing to be urged in his behalf was the fact that he had been bullied and frightened into a state of irresponsibility. I put up the best fight I could to save his neck, but the entire community was then under the influence of a strong reactionary sentiment. Lawlessness had gone too far of late and there was a stern determination to make an impressive example whenever opportunity offered. I was really without hope of securing an acquittal. But fate intervened in a way that was without precedent.

"The man best calculated to dominate the jury was baldheaded, large, big voiced and pugacious. The twelve good men and true had scarcely entered the jury room when a wasp flew into the open window, was attracted to the shining pate of the big man, and resented an argumentative gesture with a sting that elicited a howl followed by a volley of expressive frontier oaths. Two or three of the jurymen laughed and the bald-headed man made a dive for the place usually occupied by his six shooter. It was missing, and by the time he got a 13 inch bowie knife from his bootleg he was being held and asked into reason. He realized how a slight provocation had put murder into his heart and how nearly he had committed the very crime on which he was sitting in judgment. They brought in a verdict of 'not guilty,' and the big fellow told me afterward: 'If that devilish wasp had been anywhere else that afternoon, your tenderfoot would have hung. But after that prod he had my sympathy.'—Detroit Free Press.

Yellow Fever Germs

breed in the bowels. Kill them and you are safe from the awful disease. Cascarets destroy the germs throughout the system and make it impossible for new ones to form. Cascarets are the only reliable safe guard for young and old against Yellow Jack. 10c, 25c, 50c, all druggists.

How liable the pension system is to abuse is shown in a small way here in North Carolina. We pay our ex-Confederate soldiers and their widows a mere pittance, and yet we see this pittance made the object in many cases, of an indecent scramble. There are about 1,200 new applications for pension on file and the Raleigh News and Observer quotes Auditor Ayer as saying that "the pension list is being badly imposed on;" that a man who has served a term in the penitentiary is on it, and that in one county a pension warrant for $65 has been received when there is no person in that county of the name mentioned in the warrant, who is entitled to a pension of that size. If we see this thing here in North Carolina, where the temptation to wrong doing to get pension money is so slight, what may we not imagine is going on by the way of fraud in the national government in the matter of pensions?—Charlotte Observer.

That was a most generous act of Mr. Dennis Simmons, of Williamston, in purchasing clothes and shoes for all the inmates of the Nursery at the Baptist Orphanage at Thomasville. When people do wicked deeds much is written and said about it, and we ought to be as free in commending good deeds, especially when done for the poor and needy. Mr. Simmons' example in helping take care of these unfortunate children might well be followed by other men of means in the land.—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

DISMISSING A WEAKLING.

Reginald Hanscomb stopped in the hall and nervously tumbled at the rim of his hat meanwhile gazing into Pocahontas Poinexter's eyes with a fondness that the beautiful girl could not mistake, says the Cleveland Leader.

He opened his lips as if about to speak, but the words he sought to utter would not come, and the fair maiden gave a low, sweet sigh that was calculated to fill his heart with blow-blow.

Yet he stood there, and she stood in front of him, looking and longing, and wondering why he hesitated.

Once she was almost tempted to take him back into the parlor and tell him that it was alright; that she knew how he felt about it, and she would just take it for granted without the usual formality. But her maiden modesty rose in rebellion, and she said to herself:

"No; if he is too timid, too cowardly to say the words, it will perhaps be better for us both if we take diverging ways."

Then speaking aloud, she said: "Well, good night," he said. "I guess I must be going."

"Well, good night," she said again, holding the door open for him.

"Well, good night," he said, passing out through the vestibule.

She shut the door with a bang and sat down upon the stairway, and buried her face in her hands and sobbed. But half a minute later she heard him returning. Her heart gave a glad leap and she rushed to the door to a limit him.

He stood looking down into her sweet, expectant face for a moment after the door had swung back, and then clearing his throat, he said:

"Some pesky kid punctured my tire while I was inside. I wonder if I could borrow your mending outfit for about two minutes?"

"No," she replied; my repairing outfit is up in the attic, and I can't find it tonight. Walk home. It'll do you good."

Then she slammed the door in his face, and he tried to think—poor fool—as he wended his way homeward, what he had done to offend her.—New York Post.

Yellow Jack Killed.

Cascarets, Candy Cathartic kills Yellow Jack wherever they find him. No one who takes Cascarets regularly and systematically is in danger from the dreadful disease. Cascarets kill Yellow fever germs in the bowels and prevent new ones from breeding. 10c, 25c, 50c, all druggists.

Suits Against the Ex-Public Printer

State Treasurer W. H. Worth has brought suit against M. I. and J. C. Stewart, the ex-State Printers, and their bondsmen, W. B. Ellis, of Forsyth county, for the recovery of about $10,000 for over charges and unlawful charges in public printing.

Two actions are instituted, one against their bondsmen, W. B. Ellis, who is surety to the amount of $5,000.

The action against the Stewarts is for over charges, and that against their bondsmen is for unlawful charges for printing, by breach of contract.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Strange Coincidents in Regard to Birthdays.

Mr. W. J. G. Kuydendall's record in the family Bible, will read differently from that of most people, as his is a record of coincidents. He was born on the 23rd of April, and he has seven children all of whom were born on the 23rd of April. His father had the same birthday, also two of his brothers. Mr. Kuydendall has three sets of twins, and altogether his family in points of numbers and dates is an interesting one.—Charlotte Observer.

Yellow Jack Preventative.

Guard against Yellow Jack by keeping the system thoroughly clean and free from germ breeding matter. Cascarets Candy Cathartic will cleanse the system and kill all contagious disease germs.

When One Can Work Best.

At what hour of the day is a man at his strongest, and so fitted to do hard work with the least weariness? Probably the answer occurring at once to most persons will be, "When he gets up in the morning." This is by no means the case; on the contrary, ac- cording to experiments of Dr. Buch- with the dynamometer, a man is pre- cisely at his weakest when he turns out of bed. Our muscular force is greatly increased by breakfast, but it attains its highest point after the midday meal. It then sinks for a few hours, rises again toward evening, but steadily de- clines from night till morning. The two chief foes of muscular force, ac- cording to Dr. Buch, are overwork and idleness. Sweating at work de- teriorates the muscles. Many of the great workers of the world have been early risers. But early rising, accor- ding to Buch's doctrine, ought to be supplemented by early breakfasting.— Selected.

Burned in a Cotton Press.

Mr. T. C. Williams' cotton press near Essex caught fire last Saturday from a spark from the engine. A colored boy named Tom Burt was in the cotton press at the time and the cotton burning from the top the boy could not get out until the sides were knocked down. He was so badly burned that it is thought he will not live.—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

Salaries Paid in Tobacco.

A writer in the Arena says that in pre-revolutionary times prices in the Southern States were reckoned in salaries paid in tobacco, and that is still an officer in Washington whose salary by law is so many pounds of tobacco, but it is now paid in terms of present money.

State Treasurer Worth will save a little money during the fight on Rail- road Commissionership, as he will not pay any one save Dr. Abbott and the courts decide who are the real officers. He says: "If the new men get in, of course their pay begins the day they were appointed. Yet the officers are de facto Commissioners and will con- duct business just as usual.

JUST FOR FUN.

"This man is a dead ringer for me," remarked the undertaker who had secured the job of burying the deceased sexton.

"The man who marries for sympathy," says the Manayunk Philosopher, "generally gets more from his friends than from his wife."

Sappy—"Do you believe that a fool and his money are easily parted?" Costique—"Not at all; you have been rich for years."

Hobson—"Do you know, I often wonder how a man should treat his inferiors." Wigwag—"If you have to treat them at all, treat them good enough."

Nell—"You should have seen the way he stared at me." Belle—"He was probably watching your nose." Nell—"My nose?" Belle—"Yes; he's a reporter, and is supposed to keep his eye on everything that turns up."

STATE NEWS.

After a long contest over the Salisbury postoffice between two Ramsays—J. H. and John A.—the plum falls to the former. He held the office under Harrison.
