BIBLE DAY.

Interesting Exercises by the Children in the Baptist Church.

Everybody loves little children, and whatever the little folks have to say or do in public never fails to be of interest to the older people. Hence when it was announced that several of the Sunday school children were to have Bible Day exercises in the Baptist church, Sunday night, the church being filled with people to hear them was as might have been expected.

The little folks entertained their large audience charmingly, and each rendered his or her respective part with great credit. The children marching in and passing around to the seats arranged for them in rear of the pulpit made a beautiful picture.

These Bible Day exercises are in keeping with a custom of the Baptists of setting apart one Sunday in the year to raise money to be used through their Publication Society to send Bibles to foreign lands and to give them to the destitute in our own land.

Below is the full programme as given Sunday night :

STATE NEWS.

A horse that had broken away from a blacksmith shop, in the southern part of the city, yesterday morning, took to the pavements in front of Cononel John L. Morehead's, on South Tryon street, along which he tore at full speed. In front of Mr. C. N. G. Butt's residence a number of children were playing. All except little Mary Durham, daughter of Mr. J. A. Durham, got out of the way. Mary's little brother being snatched from danger by old Uncle Mose Shipp. The horse ran over Mary, but she escaped miraculously, as it were, with slight injuries. The little finger of her right hand was mashed and one of her legs were bruised.—Charlotte Observer.

During this visit here Editor Robinson of the Durham Sun was shown the wood writing desk made by Mr. W. P. Ormsby, of Salem, who was ten years making it, beginning in 1876 and finishing it in 1886. It contains 10,000 pieces of wood, and in many places a ten cent piece will cover forty-five of these pieces. The material of which it is made represents thirty varieties of wood from every country under the sun. The outside of this desk is inlaid with this wood, in the most unique designs, and the minutest calculations as to harmony, fit, finish and polish. The inside is a revelation of inventive genius.—Winston Sentinel.

Mr. Dan Kelly, who has been running as flagman on the Georgia, Carolina and Northern road for some time came in last night. Mr. Kelly was badly used up in a "scrap" with a gang of circus toughs several nights ago. The train that he was on was taking the W. H. Harris Nickle Plate shows to a point on the Georgia, Carolina and Northern road. There was considerable disturbance going on in one of the cars of the show people, and Mr. Kelly went back to see if he could not quiet them. As soon as he appeared on the scene he was pounced upon by four or five of the toughs who had been raising the row. Mr. Kelly gave them the best he had in his shop, but he was finally overpowered and dealt with severely. Several bad wounds on Mr. Kelly's head and body were the result of the conflict. He came home to get in shape again before returning to his work.—Charlotte News.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Senator Caffery, of Louisiana, predicts that the Senate will pass a Cuban declaration of independence with a whoop, and that Speaker Reed may not be able to hold down the House.

As an example of the firm sway which the bargain craze has over the average woman, it is announced that a girl in Detroit is suing for breach of promise and places her damages at $299.

Wellington's and Napoleon's Horses.

The horse that the duke of Wellington rode at Waterloo was named Copenhagen. When that fearful battle was over, the horse appeared to sympathize with and appreciate his master's success for when the duke arrived at headquarters, and after tossing the bridal reins to a groom, dismounted, the horse kicked up his heels in an apparent ecstasy of delight, saying as clearly as it is possible for a horse to say anything, "Tired as I am, I will make you see that I as well as the rest can show my joy in the victory which my master has achieved."

The duke saw to it that Copenhagen was well provided for in his old age. He had abundant rations, the best of care, and was allowed to roam at will in the park at Strathfieldsaye. "His name lives with his master's, for it is linked with his in history."

Napoleon, when at St. Helena, once said of his horse: "He has memory, knowledge, and judgment. He distinguishes his master from his servants, although these are most constantly about him. I had a horse which distinguished me from the rest of the world, and which manifested, by his bounding and haughty gait when I was upon his back, that he carried a man superior to those around him. He would not suffer any one to mount him except myself and the groom that took care of him. When I had lost my way I threw the bridle upon his neck and let him pick his way, with the inevitable result of finding the right road."—Harper's Round Table.

How a Woman Robbed the Treasury.

During the incumbency of the office of United States treasurer by M. Hyatt, of Connecticut, a woman employed in the redemption division was discovered in a very ingenious scheme for making a fortune at the expense of the United States, says The Rochester Post-Express.

As is well known, the department redeems at full face value any portion of a bill, provided no more than one-third is missing. This woman would take a package of $20 bills, say, and would tear a fraction, perhaps three quarters of an inch long, from one of them. She would secrete this portion and in a short time would take another bill of like denomination and tear off a piece twice as long, substituting the smaller piece from the first bill so as to bring the note up to the limit of length required. Proceeding in this way, she would in course of a few hours secure for herself one extra bill.

Just how much the woman stole was never ascertained, but she succeeded in saving enough money out of a salary of $900 a year to build a beautiful house in a semi fashionable quarter of the city, and to supply herself with valuable bric-a-brac, and even a horse and carriage. It was the fact that she generally drove to the department every morning in this vehicle that attracted attention to her mode of living, and eventually led to the discovery of her method of speculation. She was indicted by the grand jury, but was never tried, as she died from cancer before the day set for her trial.

The amount of money which this thrifty "countess" secured was estimated at all the way from $10,000 to $50,000, but there is absolutely no means of discovering just how much she did secure from her dishonest practices.

The Charlotte News prints the following:

Discrimination by newspapers is becoming dangerous. A few days ago a prominent elder in a Baptist church became incensed because he thought a Methodist editor did not write up a Baptist church entertainment as extensively as he might have done, saluted forth and killed the editor. Now the Roxboro Courier, of our own State, is in trouble. That paper says:

"One of the prisoners, who has been in jail for several months for blockading, took offence at the Courier last week. He said when he was put in jail we didn't say a word about it, and when 'another gentleman' was put in for robbing the mails we gave him a long write up."

"Not the least appalling feature," says the Greensboro Telegram, "of a possible war with Spain is the multitude of pensioners who would come out of the struggle to deplete the government Treasury for the next five hundred years." We have had this in mind all along and consider it one of the most appalling features of a prospective war. The people of this country are now and have been for years overburdened with public expenditure. The thinking and conservative people of this country need to consider seriously not only the cost in life and money of carrying on a war but the never ending and ever increasing pension list that would come after it, before they allow the jingoes to involve them in a war with anybody.—Statesville Landmark.

A Fruitful field for Fakirs.

A good many of the school committeemen of North Carolina need to be put in the public schools themselves and kept there until they learn something. Last year a lot of fakirs traveled the State over selling worthless school charts at exorbitant prices to gourd headed committeemen, and we observe that they are at the same business again this year. The school chart fakirs, the range and kitchen cabinet men and the thimble-rigger who travels with the circus all find North Carolina a fruitful field. The green goods circular has caught a good many of our fellow citizens and if a man with a gold brick should come among them he would make his fortune. We believe we will go along with State Superintendent Mebane on his proposition for compulsory education, provided he will agree that the law shall be extended to the committeemen as well as the children.—Charlotte Observer.

M'Kinley a Disappointment.

McKinley has been weighed in the balance and found wanting. He has quite lost his halo. The people voted for a statesman and find that they elected only a trading politician, who had pawned in advance the patronage of the presidency to the motleyest crowd of heelers and scoundrels that ever maneuvered and intrigued and howled in the interest of an unprincipled candidate.—Minneapolis Times.

Man Wears Woman's Clothes.

A rather unusual sight in Esq. Baucom's court on Friday last was a man apparently 20 or 25 years old dressed in female apparel. He hails from below Cairo somewhere, and is dressing in such a garb, so we are told, because it is cheaper than ordinary men's clothing. We'll bet 16 to 1 that is the most striking illustration of poverty under the gold standard that is on record.—Monroe Enterprise.

"There is nothing new under the sun," said the wise man. This truth is exemplified in the chrysanthemum, which is now at the flood tide of popularity in the flowery kingdom. This, says an authority, is a very old flower. Fifty years ago it grew in neglect and for decades and generations wasted its beauty on an unappreciative public. It was then known as a fall or winter pink. Today it is the most popular flower in the United States. You never know when the bottom rail will get on top.—Statesville Landmark.

It is about to come to light that scores of the penitentiary convicts escape and not a word is said about it. No notice is given to the county authorities where they were convicted and they simply go scot-free. Undoubtedly the present management of things is the corruptest and the most disgraceful in the annals of this State. What are we coming to? When will the true manhood of North Carolina assert itself?—Lexington Dispatch.

TROUBLES OF BALDER TWINS

Harold Asked Eugene to Take His Place and There'll Be a Run.

When the Balder twins had finished their supper the other night, Harold called Eugene into his room, and, closing the door, said:

"Mother wants to talk to me about something this evening, Gene, but I am engaged for a spin out to Lincoln park with another girl. Now, if you want to do me a good turn, you'll represent me on this occasion."

"Certainly, if the girl don't object," answered Eugene sweetly.

"None of your chaff. You know what I mean. Take my place with mother."

"Thanks, awfully! I like that kind of an engagement. While you are out on a tandem with your best girl I am to stay here and be roasted. Nice prospect for the wrong twin!"

"I have taken many a roasting for you from the gov'nor, Gene. Turn about is fair play."

"All right, Hal, but I wish it was the gov'nor instead of the mater.
She is so awfully particular and keeps a fellow forever. However, I'll stand by you this time. Only suppose she finds out?"

"She won't," said Harold, and he hurried off, leaving Eugene as his proxy.

Mrs. Balder sat waiting for Harold, and when the wrong twin entered her presence with a silent step and subdued air she said:

"I am glad, Harold, that you remembered my wish to speak to you this evening, as I have something particular to say, and I want you to be interested."

"Yes-m-m," mumbled Eugene, who almost lost his head at the start by trying to recall Harold's parental pose.

"I'd give something to know how he acts when he has a private and particular with the mater," he thought. "Does he hang his feet over the back of the chair kind of easy or sit up prim and proper?"
Then he cleared his throat and stared gravely at his mother.

"It is about your brother Eugene I wish to speak," she said, and the wrong twin shot into the air and sat down again.

"I do wish you would be more dignified," urged Mrs. Balder. "Now that you are engaged to be married you should cultivate more repose of manner. You act as flippant as your brother."

"Well, I like that!" said Eugene, forgetting for a moment his role of Harold, but his mother continued.

"I have enough frivolity to contend with in his character, and it is of that I wish to speak tonight. Eugene is much too giddy for his age, and I want you to help me improve him."

"Oh, Gene is all right!" said the wrong twin.

"I would be glad if he took more interest in the society of girls," said Mrs. Balder.

"Is there a society of that name?"
asked Eugene innocently.

"When you are married," resumed his mother, ignoring the question, "I shall hope for a great deal of assistance from your wife's influence. Nothing steadies a young man down like having good woman friends."

Here it occurred to the wrong twin to put in a good word for himself.

"Why is it necessary to steady Gene down?" he asked in Harold's best manner.

"Why, I am sure, son, you are always complaining of him," said Mrs. Balder, and Eugene announced to himself that he had it in for Harold. But he said in a conciliatory tone:

"Mere boyish pranks, mother.
Eugene is a good fellow enough as boys go. I have yet to hear of his doing a dishonorable thing. How could he after such lessons as you have given! (I would like to wring Harold's neck!), I really think you can trust him to come out all right.
(Some day he'll prove another Cain!)

I will look after him myself and advise him if I see him going wrong."
"Spoken like my own Harold!"
said the mother, with fervor. "I love you both, but I cannot close my eyes to Eugene's thoughtlessness, and I look to you to reform him."

Then she kissed the wrong twin for his brother and dismissed him, and Eugene fell over himself in getting out of the room, while he concocted dark schemes of vengeance against Harold, and as he revolved them in his mind he laughed and chuckled like a fiend.—Chicago

Lies in wait—The average weighing machine.

Yes, Maude dear, stag dinners are frequently decried.

A hand-to-mouth existence—That cellar, and a dun on your doorstep with an unpaid ice bill."

"I wonder why Saphead is always so happy?" "Haven't you ever heard that old quotation?" "What?" "where ignorance is bliss."

The poor tramp stopped at the kitchen door. "Kind lady," said he, "will you give me a bite?" Unfortunately she was a very old lady and had no teeth, so she could only hit him with a rolling pin.

"I'm getting tired of trying to elevate the stage," said the theatrical manager disgustedly. "Why?" asked his friend.
"What's the use? The women in the audience will simply build their hats higher proportionately."
