HOW HE SWORE OFF

Said Father Tempus, I have a plan, I'm going to swear off on the first of JAN.

But his resolution began to ebb,
He was two days shy by the end of FEB.

Then he lost his temper and went so far
As to bawl and bluster through
MAR

He puffed and blew till he spoiled his shape,
So he took the water cure in AP.

He took a shower bath every day,
And was most disagreeable all through MAY.

Then summer came and he changed
his tune—
Any fool can be good in JUNE.

But the strain was so great that by and by
He was taken with fever in JULY.

He only escaped the morgue,
His temperature was so hot in AUG.

Never were resolutions kept
So well as in convalescent SEPT.

When he recovered the world was shocked,
For he painted the country red in OCT.

Then he howled and raged like a fiend
in love,
He was full as could be of remorse in NOV.

It's plain, said he, this thing must cease,
I'll swear off again at the end of DEC.

What Advertising is.

Advertising may be done in a thousand ways. Any method which tells anybody about anything is advertising. Advertising is anything which conveys a message about a business or a product.

If a man opens a store and tells his friends about it, he is advertising the store.

If he prints his announcement on cards and hands them to the passerby, he is advertising the store.

If he puts his sign above the door, or goods in the window, he is advertising the store.

If he makes a hundred duplicates of his sign and nails them on fences or dead walls where people can see them, he is advertising.

If he joins a church or a club, or a secret society, his name and his business will become known, and he will still be advertising.

If he causes his sign or his card to be reproduced and printed in a newspaper, he is doing the same thing that he did when he tacked the sign on the fences or handed the card to the passerby. He is putting his sign into the house of every reader of that paper.

This hypothetical man is a retail dealer. He is in direct contact with the people to whom he seeks to convey the news of his enterprise. The principle is exactly the same with the maker or handler of goods that are to have a more than local sale.

Of all the ways of advertising, the best, most certain and cheapest is that of using the columns of a newspaper. Intelligent people with money to spend always read the papers.—Press and Printer.

STATE NEWS

A Republican weekly newspaper is to be started in Raleigh about the first of February.

J. F. Coss, the editor of the Watch Tower, at Washington, has changed it from a semi-monthly to a weekly paper. The readers will be glad to get it every week.

The Raleigh News and Observer says the Baptist church at Newbern has withdrawn fellowship from Robert Hancock, President of the A. & N. C. Railroad, because of the recent scandal with which he is charged.

The house which the authorities of Wilmington had selected in which to isolate the case of small pox in that city, was burned a few nights ago. It is thought that colored people living in the vicinity of the house set fire to it to keep the case from being moved there.

Reports to the labor commissioner, show that in eleven counties in the State there are no railroads. He says these are the counties of Graham, Clay Yancey, Watauga, Ashe, Alleghany, Yadkin, Pamlico, Hyde, Dare and Tyrrell. The total mileage of railroads in the State is 3,726, which gives one mile of road for each 14 square miles of area.

It was stated that the syndicate owning the Seven Springs property had sold the same to Mr. Ivey, but the sale to him was never consummated. The syndicate has sold the property to Mr. George F. Smith, of Pitt county, who will take charge of it soon. Mr. Smith is a clever, first-class gentleman, who will improve the property and put forth every effort to please to people who visit these famous Springs.—Kinston Free Press.

JUST FOR FUN

Sunday School Teacher—"Tell me what you know of the foolish virgins." Elsie—"Why, they went out on their wheels after dark without their lamps."

It was a magnificent dining-room. Bits of rare china were lavishly scattered about. The fair mistress entered with a scowl. "Bridget," she said, "I will deduct it from your wages. That platter cost $25."

Pat—"He's the luckiest man that ever was born." Mike—"Phwat! Shure, mon alive, he jst had wan at his legs cut off." Pat—"Av course. That's phwat Oi mane. He'll only hav t' pay half as much fur shces now."

Duncan Dew's Will Contested.

In the early forties, a representative of the numerous family of Dews of this county, Duncan Dew by name, went to Alabama to seek his fortune. He not only sought his fortune out eventually was so successful that at his death, through his energy and economy, was worth almost a million dollars.

He left a son and a daughter. The son, Duncan Dew, Jr., embarked in business in Mobile, but after many years of unsuccessful business life failed, losing all he had.

But soon after this his sister died without heirs, and her large property went to Duncan Dew, Jr. This property, an immense one, was reduced at Duncan Dew's death to about $125,000. Last June, the 9th, Duncan Dew left his home in Eutaw, Ala., to go to Birmingham for his health. While there he died.

Having never married, his nearest relatives were first cousins, among whom were Mrs. Augusta Winstead, Mrs. Mary Della Wilkinson and Mr. Moses Dew, of this county, and Mrs. W. T. Harris, of Pitt county.

After Duncan Dew, Jr.'s death, J. J. Dew, a distant relative and a lawyer of Eutaw, Ala., produced a will purporting to be the will of Duncan Dew, leaving all the property to J. J. Dew. This will was witnessed by a negro and J. J. Dew. It was soon seen that this will was a forgery, and the first cousins in this county were apprised of the fact.

Hon. F. A. Woodward, of this city, immediately went to Eutaw and instituted a suit in behalf of the four relatives named, with the result that a compromise was effected. By this compromise the heirs, numbering over a dozen, get about $2,600 each.

The estate also owns large plantations in Mississippi and Texas. The laws of these States differ from those of Alabama, in that the second cousins are also legal heirs. A suit will soon be instituted against J. J. Dew on behalf of these second cousins for this property, which amounts to about $40,000.—Wilson Times.

Elmwood Dairy.

Attention is called to the advertisement of Elmwood Dairy in this issue. The capacity of the Dairy has recently been very much increased and improved, and Mr. R. E. L. Crenshaw, who was lately connected with the State experiment farm at Raleigh, now has charge. He is an experienced dairyman and thoroughly understands the work.

Poet—"Oh if you don't want the manuscript, just say so. I have other irons in the fire." Editor—"Ah! Why not put this with the other irons?"

Thanks To our friends and customers for their kind and liberal patronage during the past year. For the coming seasons of 1898 we propose to offer you the choicest of goods in General Merchandise at a reasonable price. During the month of January we will sell all of our surplus stock at a low price to make for spring goods.

SUITS & OVERCOATS

Now for a clean-up. There will be no dull lull here. The holiday rush is over, but we are now fixing the store to rights. Scores of worthy Suits and Overcoats that must go. It's every man's chance—it's a grand time for the hardest earned dollars. The shallowest of purses were never so potent. For the merchandise—quick moving prices. For the customers—money finding prices. There's a prize for every comer.

The Crow and the Pitcher.

The late Mr. Esop, who used to write small, pertinent tracts with large, aggressive morals, for the edification alike of the ancient Greeks and the modern school boys, is responsible for this anecdote.

A crow who had been haranguing a ward caucus all the evening had contracted a large, importunate thirst.

As he was looking about to find some means of relieving himself of this same thirst, he discovered a pitcher which contained water.

But the pitcher was very large, and the quantity of water it contained was small, and reposed at the very bottom.

For anatomical reasons the crow could not dip his bill into the water, and drink from the pitcher as it was.

Nor was there any use in trying to pour out the water, for the crew could not lift the pitcher besides, he had no cup.

But he was a wise crow, and also persistent, and he immediately resolved himself into a committee of the whole on ways and means and hatched out a solution of the problem.

He picked a pebble from many laying around and dropped it into the pitcher.

He kept on propping pebble after pebble into the pitcher, until the water approached near enough to the top for him to drink, and he slaked his thirst with ease.

Moral: It is continuous advertising that pays.

If the crow had stopped after one insertion, merely because he could not see any result, he would be thirsty yet.

Many good items of news are lost to the newspapers by the modesty of the people, who hesitate to tell the reporters matters concerning themselves. Not that they do not want it to appear in print, but they are afraid they would be pushing themselves forward. This is a wrong idea.

From a reportorial standpoint, the man who will stop a newspaper reporter on the street and inform him that he has been to some other city, that he is going to get married, or his wife entertained friends from a distance, is the best man alive. May his keenness increase throughout the earth. If you have done anything mean or disreputable it isn't necessary to tell it, for there are always plenty of people who will do that for you. It is good things about yourself and neighborhood that the newspaper man wants you to give him. There is always some one who will tell the bad news about you.—Durham Sun.

An Honest Man.

An honest man will not buy what he knows he cannot pay for; he will not borrow money when he can see no way to pay it back; if he cannot meet an obligation he will come forward in a manly way and tell his creditor the whole truth; he will not hide out when pay day comes, but will face the world and say: "I cannot now meet it, but give me time and I will; I will not run away from my debts." Such a man as that can always get credit, be he ever so poor.

The business world is beginning to place more confidence in good moral security than in the best of real estate and money collateral. This puts a premium on honesty. A man's money may slip through his fingers, but if he be a man of honor he will always be willing to pay what he owes, and some day God's bounteous hand will be held out to him, and he will not only be willing, but ready. After all, there is much truth in the old saying about honesty being the best policy, and in Pope's famous line:

"An honest man's the noblest work of God."

Let's be honest; we can't afford to be otherwise. God intended that we be honest and true.—Memphis Christian Advocate.

Mrs. Nack Sentenced to Imprisonment.

New York, Jan. 10.—Mrs. Augusta Nack, jointly charged with Martin Thorn of the murder of William Guldensuppe, a bath rubber, at Woodside, L. I., in June of last year, was today sentenced to fifteen years in the state prison at Auburn. The good time allowance attainable may reduce reduce term to ten years and five months.

Thorn was sentenced to be electrocuted during the week beginning today but the appeal taken by his attorney acted as a stay.

Mrs. Nack received her sentence calmly. She will be taken to Auburn as soon as the necessary forms of procedure can be gone through with.

In sentencing her, the court sought to impress upon her that although she was equally guilty with Thorn, she had made a wise move when she decided to become a witness for the state. Judge Garretson said the court was bound to recognize the assistance Mrs. Nack had rendered in testifying against Thorn.

When Thorn was informed by Warden Sage, of the sentence, he showed but little interest. Thorn said he would rather have died today than have any further delay. He intimated that he did not expect a new trial or a commutation of the death sentence.

It Was an Accident.

It is learned that the accident insurance company, that had a policy on the life of E. G. Barnes, of Henderson, who recently died at Creedmoor, to the amount of $5,000, refusing to pay the policy, an investigation was held in Henderson Monday.

The body of Mr. Barnes was exhumed on the dry named and a post mortem examination was made by young Dr. Royster, of Raleigh, Drs. Sanford, of Creedmoor, A. Cheatham and the other physicians of Henderson—in all seven doctors.

It was found that his brains, heart and liver were all right, except the latter was somewhat enlarged, as is said to be the case in death. It was discovered that his death was caused by an accident; the breaking of an artery in the right leg, between the hip and knee. This was caused by his running to catch a train, and twisting his leg in some way, which was mentioned at the time, and from this accident he never recovered. The doctors agreed that that was what caused his death, and it looks like the opinion of seven physicians should satisfy the insurance company.—Durham Sun.

ROMANCE IN REAL LIFE.

The Story of a Daughter's Devotion and a Lover's Faithfulness.

Twenty-five years ago there was a romance at Maysville—a love story in which there was nothing out of the ordinary. It was like hundreds of others, and there did not then appear to be a possibility that it would become remarkable. It became known there that two young people, who will be called John Smith and Mary Jones, were engaged to be married. John Smith had been paying attentions to the young lady about two years, and the announcement of their engagement did not cause any surprise.

The wedding day was set and nearly all the preparations had been made when the mother of the bride to be became ill. On account of her illness the marriage had to be postponed. In a short time it became apparent that her mind was impaired, and still a little later the terrible truth forced itself on the minds of her friends—the mother of Mary Jones was insane. Arrangements were made to send her to the asylum, and it was then that her daughter raised objections. She would not have her mother sent to the asylum at all and declared that she would devote her life to taking care of her.

When she made that vow, Mary Jones was 18 years old, a bright, intelligent young woman, handsome and talented. In addition to that she was engaged to be married to one of the best young men in the county—a young man of wealth and refinement, to whom she had made a solemn promise. Her father owned a large tract of land and a fine house. He was amply able to employ a nurse for the demented woman as long as she might live, and to his mind there was no reason why his daughter should not marry after a reasonable length of time.

There was a reason, however—the strong sense of duty the daughter had and her resolve that she would never leave her mother while she lived. She triumphed over the arguments of her friends and settled down to a life in which there appeared to be little hope except the reward for filial duty. She put aside all thoughts of the life she had contemplated, and from that day she has been her mother's loving and devoted attendant. The mother's mind is a total wreck. She is not violent, but her mind is gone, and she must have constant care and attention. Twenty-five years have passed since she became demented, and during that time her daughter has not been away from her a single day.

Twenty-five years ago John Smith used to call every Sunday night at the home of Mary Jones. They sat on the cool front porch during the summer and by the fireside in winter. Then they planned their future—the happy life they were to live after they were married.

John Smith still makes the Sunday night visits as regularly as in the olden time. If he should miss one Sunday night, it would be understood at once that he was ill or that some other good and sufficient cause had prevented him from being there on time. His hair is gray, and there are wrinkles in his face. The girl he expected to claim as his bride is an old maid now, and her once bright eyes are beginning to lose the luster of youth, but she is still firm in her determination to remain with her mother as long as her mother lives. The engagement has never been broken. The young man said he would wait until her task at home was over, and he has waited. The years seem long to him, but he is true. If he ever grows impatient, the patient face of the woman whose devotion is more than remarkable is enough to make him ashamed of his impatience. It is said to his credit that he has never made the slightest effort to persuade the daughter to leave her mother.

Stories like this are often told in books, but this is one in real life.—St. Joseph News.

Experienced.

"And, now," said the colonel of the sappers and miners, "who will volunteer to crawl through the trench and fire the magazine?"

There was no response.

"It is a dangerous mission," said the officer. "The man who attempts it will find himself in very cramped quarters, and is liable at any moment to get stuck. Who will go?"

There was another brief silence, and then a thin man with a weazen face spoke up:

"I guess I can do it, if any man can, colonel. I used to live in a New York flat."

A Lovely Progeny.

There was perhaps never a time in the State not even in the days of reconstruction, when so much crime and disgraceful conduct prevailed among the public officials. Scarcely a week passes without some new scandal is given to the public. Fusion has indeed produced a lovely progeny.—Salisbury Sun.

The sending of supplies from the United States to aid the indigent population of Cuba has aroused deep animosity among the Spaniards who, it is added, are incensed at the pretext thus given to the American consuls and the Yankee element to interfere in Cuban affairs.

TO CURE NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA

To Gain Flesh, to Sleep Well, to Know What Appetite and Good Digestion Mean, Make a Test of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Interesting Experience of an Indianapolis Gentleman.

No trouble is more common or more misunderstood than nervous dyspepsia. People having it think that their nerves are to blame and are surprised that they are not cured by nerve medicine and spring remedies; the real seat of the mischief is lost sight of, the stomach is the organ to be looked after.

Nervous dyspeptics often do not have any pain whatever in the stomach, nor perhaps any of the usual symptoms of stomach weakness. Nervous dyspepsia shows itself not in the stomach so much as in nearly every other organ, in some cases the heart palpitates and is irregular, in others the kidneys are affected, in others the bowels are constipated, with headaches, still others are troubled with loss of flesh and appetite, with accumulation of gas, sour risings and heartburn.

Mr. A. W. Sharper of No. 61 Prospect St. Indianapolis, Ind., writes as follows: A motive of pure gratitude prompts me to write these few lines regarding the new and valuable medicine, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I have been a sufferer from nervous dyspepsia for the last four years, have used various patent medicines and other remedies without any favorable result. They sometimes give temporary relief until the effects of the medicine wear off. I attributed this to my sedentary habits, being a bookkeeper with little physical exercise, but I am glad to state that the tablets have overcome all these obstacles, for I have gained in flesh, sleep better and am better in every way. The above is written not for notoriety but is based on actual fact.

Respectfully yours,
A. W. Sharper,

61 Prospect St., Indianapolis, Ind. It is safe to say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure any stomach weakness or disease except cancer of stomach. They cure sour stomach, gas, loss of flesh and appetite, sleeplessness, palpitation, heartburn, constipation and headache.

A WOMAN'S GRATITUDE.

She Came to Regard the Gratitude as a Right.

There is no telling where ingratitude begins or ends; there would be fewer good deeds done if every one had a chart of the beneficiaries' hearts.
Of course we are taught to do good for the sake of good itself and are well aware—that those of us who are not pagans—that the eternal reward is to be conferred some time upon those who yield unselfish ministrations to God's poor. But our very education from childhood indulges that instinct to be good because. So that when we have done what we consider a trifle more than our duty, although when we are hard pressed we admit to our pastors and spiritual masters that the needy are really our charges and the main spiritual test of our charity, we are never quite ready to accept the rebuff of thanklessness and ingratitude that is usually the portion of the well-doer. Perhaps there is no fate sterner than that known as the charitable man or woman—the being to whom absolute strangers repair with their request for advices, moneys, sustenance. There is no salary attached to this civil martyr, but his time is employed just as though there were, with other unsatisfactory conditions attached to the office.

If the charitable man or woman who has been so unfortunate as to wear the reputation he or she has earned declines to assist a polite beggar, he may count upon vituperation and an injured reputation
within the s'ennight; which points
a moral to all benefactors, not to let the right hand know, etc., and impress upon your friends that you are not so good as you're painted.
No one will ever find you out from any reports originated by the recipients of your good deeds.

This little preamble was inspired by several stories that have come to the writer direct from one of the noblest women of God's fashioning, whose life is devoted to the pursue of all good. For some months she has been intermediary in a little matter of $5 which a worthy individual instructed her to place each month where it would do most good.
There had been for some time on her hands a woman with several children and a sick mother; so she appropriated the money to their use, that amount paying their rent. As usual, last month, Miss S— mailed the $5 to the woman, but to her surprise received a call a few days later from this beneficiary, requesting the usual stipend. Miss S— was surprised, and told the woman that as usual she had posted the amount.
"It's very strange," replied the ingrate, "because I should have received it if you had mailed it. I think you must be mistaken." Miss S— assured her that she had done
so. "Well, I've moved since last month, but I left word to have any letters forwarded to me, and they would certainly have done so had you sent me that money. I think that person who gives you the money
for me ought to know about it."
Miss S— almost choked with mortification, but (foolishly enough) gave her a $5 bill, which she could ill afford, and told her she would look into the other matter. The letter was found at the postoffice and delivered by the postman with an explanation, whereupon the woman called again upon her best friend.
"I am glad the money was traced,"
she said, "because it raises all suspicion against yourself. As to that $5 bill of yours, I needed something, so had it broken, but here is what is left." The astonished Miss S—saw the woman deposit the change
on the table and walk out.

Polygamy.

The Ogden (Utah) Commonwealth
says that while it is true that polygamy still exists in Utah it is nevertheless dying out. It affirms, what has been doubted, that the church
no longer favors it and those Mormons who return to polygamous
connections do so with more or less secrecy. It thinks that the Mormon people desire and really intend that the practice of polygamy among them shall cease, though a minority cling to it with firm domestic herism, setting an example to malcontent gentile husbands, who often find a single wife one too many for their powers of management and discipline.

Birmingham's American Ride.

An American who visited Birmingham, England, not long ago
found that in constructing the street trolleys there the rails are made in Pittsburg, the cars in Philadelphia,
the boilers in Erie, the engines in Milwaukee and the general electric fittings in Schenectady.—Philadel-

BUYING A HORSE.

Points That Should Be Carefully Noted In Making a Selection.

The greatest strength of a horse is limited by his worst point, and it is wrong in principle to buy a horse because he possesses one or more desirable qualities.

A horse should be rejected for one bad fault, while, if an attractive horse is rejected on account of bad points and a plain one secured, there is the satisfaction of knowing that a horse with no bad qualities is at least a serviceable animal.

In selecting a horse always stand behind him as he walks away. This is the surest way of ascertaining whether his action is true and straight.

In judging of the height and size
by sight be sure that the animal stands on a level with yourself. Let him go away from you, and as he goes observe him closely from behind. Then as he is turned round let him come to you while you watch his movements. Then stand on one side and observe him closely. From these observations you can draw your own conclusions, taking into consideration the following points:

You do not want a horse with a big, coarse head, nor with a small,
sunken eye, nor with a long, slack back or a hollow back. Such an animal cannot carry weight. A horse with flat sides or with flat loins is usually a bad feeder.

Reject a horse with a short, thick neck, as usually with a clumsy neck
the head is badly set on.

Reject a horse with low withers or
that is very short.

A horse with a narrow or shallow chest has not sufficient capacity for his lungs; neither has one whose fore legs stand close together.

A horse whose fore legs are not straight will lack endurance.

A horse that is light immediately
below the knee is weak.

Short pasterns make a horse unpleasant to ride, while one with long pasterns is more subject to sprains.

A horse whose fetlocks turn in is apt to cut or brush.

A horse whose hind legs are too far behind will lack in propelling power, as will also one that shows much daylight between his thighs.

Medium sized feet are best. A horse with very small or very large feet should be rejected.

Reject a horse that is straight in the shoulder and long from the point of the shoulder to the upper part of the forearm.

Reject a horse that crosses his legs in walking or trotting. He will be unsafe.

A good, sloping shoulder is an important item in a riding horse.

Freedom, power to move along easily is quite an item in a young horse. Action should always be light, easy, free and straight.

Always reject a horse that does not walk well. In nearly all cases a horse that walks well will trot well, but a horse may trot well and yet be a poor walker.—St. Louis Republic.

The Fife.

It is said by some that we owe the fife—"ear piercing," as Shakespeare calls it—to the Swiss, and Sir James Turner, who busied himself in writing on military matters, names it the "Allemaine whistle." In France it was employed at least as early as 1534, in which year it was ordered by Francis I that each band of 1,000 men was to have four drums and two fifes.

A few years later in England we find "drommes and flyffes" included in the muster of London citizens.
Shakespeare refers to the musician,
not the instrument, when he speaks
in the "Merchant of Venice" of "the vile squealing of the wry necked fife." An old writer observes, indeed, that a "fife is a wry-necked musician, for he looks away from his instrument." About the reign of James II the fife lost its popularity
for a time, Sir James Turner observing, "With us any captain may keep a fifer in his company and maintain him, too, for no pay is allowed him
—perhaps just as much as he deserveth."—Chambers' Journal.
