Cure Found for Hog Cholera.

The chief of the bureau of animal industry, Dr. D. E. Salmon, has submitted to Secretary Wilson a report upon the treatment of hogs for hog cholera with anti-toxine serum. This serum is made upon the same principle as the anti-toxine of diphtheria. Good serum has been obtained from both horses and cattle, a horse or cow being treated with the hog cholera virtue in small quantities at first, with large doses after suitable intervals of time. The resistance of the animal is thus raised to the highest practicable point. The blood of such an animal when injected under the skin of swine has been found to possess both a preventive and a cure for cholera.

This serum was first tested upon small animals in the laboratory and being found efficacious, was last fall tested in Page county, Iowa, on several herds of swine containing altogether 278 animals. Leaving out one herd, from which definite returns as to cause of death could not be obtained, only 39 died out of 244 animals treated, of which 86 were sick. Consequently 82.8 per cent. of the animals in these herds were saved. Of untreated herds kept under observation during the period referred to about 85 per cent. of the animals died. Dr. Salmon believes that with experience a better quality of serum can be prepared and he has no doubt that this percentage can be maintained hereafter.

Referring to this report Secretary Wilson remarked that undoubtedly the results reported by Dr. Salmon were most encouraging to hog raisers. The cost of the serum now, said the secretary, is but ten cents per head of animals treated, only one dozen being required, and doubtless in course of time this light cost may still be further reduced.

"It is my opinion," said the secretary, "that it is of the utmost importance that this serum for the next year at least be made by the bureau, under our own supervision, and distributed in large quantities in order to demonstrate its efficiency upon a more extended scale. It is absolutely essential that during the experimental stage serum of undoubted quantity be used. Unless the hog growers can obtain it from this department they will be forced to depend upon what can be obtained from private sources, and owing to the novelty of this product, not only will discouragingly exorbitant prices be charged for it, but in many cases inferior products may be offered. This would preclude the possibility of making a satisfactory test on a widely extended scale.

"I propose to ask Congress to provide an appropriation necessary to enable this department to furnish 2,000,000 dozens of serum during the next year, and to make a considerable portion of the appropriation immediately available. It takes three or four months to put a horse or cow in condition to supply the serum; consequently the work upon an extended scale must be under taken at once.

"The losses from hog cholera are so enormous and have weighed so heavily for years upon our farmers that I can not imagine that Congress will hesitate for a moment to make the appropriations necessary to carry on this work thoroughly. Indeed, apart from the great stake the farmers have in this matter, to refuse to provide for a thorough test of this remedy now would be, indeed, pennywise and pound foolish; for the discovery of this serum has involved already many years of work and a very large sum of money. It would be a great mistake, now that so great a discovery seems to have been made, not to finish the work by giving it a thorough and extensive test."—Washington Dispatch, 16th.

The People Responsible.

As we have said before with reference to this matter, we do not believe that the people of North Carolina, or the people of the several counties most intimately concerned in the threatened repudiation are, taken collectively, anything else than honest and true. We believe that there could be found among them few men who would consent to take advantage of a twist or turn in the law to refuse the payment of a debt which they know to be just.

The trouble is, as the Observer declares, that "the repudiation county governments are mere miniatures of the present government." The people have placed their affairs in the hands of this political combination, and now they are reaping the fruits of their folly. Because they were credulous and impressionable enough to fall into the trap laid for them by political sharpers and wire-pullers they now find themselves about to be braided to the world. Those who are close at hand and are acquainted with the trouble know that it is not caused by any desire of the citizen body to spurn its honest obligations, but the great world takes no account of the difference between government and people in such matters—it has neither the time nor the inclination to investigate these things for itself. It sees only the important facts that bonds are repudiated, and that these bonds were issued in the name of the people of such or such a county in such or such a State.

While we recognize fully that the people of North Carolina, taken in the aggregate, are as honorable as the people of any other State, they cannot escape responsibility for the acts of their government, whatever that government may be. In the present case, although the plight of the Commonwealth under fusion regime is to be pitied, its citizens are specially blameworthy. They were warned of the unavoidable results of a victory for fusion. Its consequences were predicted by the State press, and by representative men from border to border; but the voters allowed the combination to triumph, and now they are merely harvesting in the fields where they have sown. None can cure them except themselves.—Norfolk Landmark.

Jobs for White Man but None for the Nigger.

Hon. Richmond Pearson and Senator Pritchard seem to be able to find a few places uncovered by the civil service humber to give their constituents: but none are given to the negro. Since the holidays they took a representative of the Asheville Register to Washington and gave him a $75 job on the Senate side of Congress. We asked for a job on the same side, but Mr. Pritchard wrote us a letter of two and a half lines, saying that there were no jobs outside of the civil service. The negroes of this congressional district cast 3,800 votes for Mr. Pearson and the State Representatives that placed Mr. Pritchard where he is, and today we stand without one job in the gift of the party. When we apply, we are told that all jobs are under the "civil service," yet they are continually finding jobs for white men whom they fear will break away from their support if they are not recognized. Three representatives of the Asheville Register have, thus far, received jobs, while the Colored Enterprise, representing 3,800 voters, is told that there are no jobs for the representatives of the Enterprise or the 3,800 it represents. The editor-in-chief of the Register was given a job that pays $100 per month, and a number of others, regardless of the civil service. The civil-service may be set up as an excuse, but the excuse is not sufficient to satisfy all of the 3,800 loyal negro voters who crowned Congressman Pearson and Senator Pritchard with the highest honors respectively in the gift of the people of the State of North Carolina. No, the excuse will not satisfy all, and the same may be treasured up against them when they come to us seeking the same or like honors in the future.—Asheville Enterprise, Colored.

The Same Boy.

A boy, being asked to describe a kitten, said: A kitten is remarkable for rushing like mad at nothing whatever, and stopping before it gets there." It must have been the same boy who thus defined scandal: It is when nobody ain't done nothing, and somebody goes and tells."—Tit-Bits.

It is probable that Congress will take some action to prevent the reduction of the free mail delivery service proposed by the Post Office Department. The reduction was contemplated not as a matter of choice, but as a necessity growing out of the exhaustion of the appropriation for the free delivery service. To cripple the efficiency of mail delivery in the large cities would be an expensive economy.

To Pension the Slaves.

A colored man from the county was telling in an East trade store yesterday of a new scheme the Republicans have of keeping the darkies in line. He said papers were being circulated amongst the darkies getting the names of the old slaves, "so that they could be pensioned." He said there was a good deal of dissatisfaction amongst the negroes, politically, and that the Republicans were trying to get them in line for the next election.—Charlott Observer.

The Old Party in a Bad Way

A certain colored man of Faison rather inclines to the belief that the Republican party is on its last legs! A postoffice appointment in which he is interested has been held up longer than he thinks necessary, and he has become so much exasperated that he asserts that "the party has gone to e—l, from McKinley down to Abe Middleton." It ought to be explained that Abe Middleton is a colored politician of some note in Duplin county.—Wilmington Star.

An X-Ray Cracker.

The very latest thing to be seen at late afternoon teas among the fashionables is an innocent-looking cracker, almost transparent and indicating nothing unusual on its surface, says an exchange. But held to the light a human skeleton is revealed in all its airy hideousness. These gruesome dainties are more popular than one would suppose. They are known as the X-ray cracker, but that is not the name under which they are sold.

Every year the dogs in this state kill an average of twenty thousand sheep. The sheep killing dog is the most worthless animal in all creation. He requires as much food as a child, and is generally kept by a man who spends a considerable portion of his day chasing eight cent rabbits at the rate of one rabbit a day, and half the night hunting possums. We have a law for the protection of possums but the sheep are left at the mercy of the cur. These worthless dogs cost the state thousands of dollars a year and are a menace to our sheep-raising industry. The next legislature should take some measures for the protection of our sheep.—Charlotte News.

F. Lennon tells us of a very strange thing that happened last week near his farm in Columbus county. A negro was suddenly taken with a vomiting spell and threw up a snake, that looked like a moccasin, seven inches long. The snake put out his tongue, rolled around and died. The man thinks that he swallowed the snake several years ago while drinking water from a pond in Georgia. He has been in bad health ever since a short while before leaving that State and attributes it to the snake.—Lumberton Robesonian.

No Alternative.

He was a speculator, and for a year past nothing had been coming his way but expenses. One day his daughter informed him in an unfeeling manner that if he did not give her a diamond bracelet worth at least $150 she would elope with the coachman. "Come to my arms, my darling child," he exclaimed, as the tears of joy coursed down his wrinkled cheeks, "come to my arms!" "But shall I get the bracelet?" she asked hesitatingly. "Of course not," he smiled delightedly. "You get the coachman. I owe him eight months' wages." That ended it.—Pearson's Weekly.

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH.

A Pleasant Simple, but Safe Effectual Cure for it.

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable.

The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the heart and lungs and difficult breathing; headache, fickle appetite, nervousness and a general played out, languid feeling.

There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue, and if the interior of the stomach could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition.

The cure for this common and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be readily, thoroughly digested before it has a time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach.

To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is the one necessary thing to do, and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlanston the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Distaste, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux, Golden Seal and fruit acids.

These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and, not being a patent medicine, can be used with perfect safety and assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

Mr. N. J. Booher of 2710 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill., writes: "Catarrh is a local condition resulting from a neglected cold in the head, whereby the lining membrane of the nose becomes inflamed and the poisonous discharge therefrom, passing backward into the throat, reaches the stomach, thus producing catarrh of the stomach. Medical authorities prescribed for me for three years for catarrh of stomach without cure, but today I am the happiest of men after using only one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I cannot find appropriate words to express my good feeling.

I have found flesh, appetite and sound rest from their use.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest preparation as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy for and form of indigestion, catarrh of stomach, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn and bloating after meals.

Send for little book, mailed free on stomach troubles, by addressing Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. The tablets can be found at all drug stores.

raised and ex-President Benjamin Harrison, then occupying his cottage on Second lake, had consented to speak. Campers from the chain of lakes that leads into the Blue mountain region from Old Forge, natives of the neighboring lumber towns, guides and woodsmen, mingled in the crowd that wandered about the hotel, filling the piazzas, and seeking shelter in the little parlor from the drizzling rain and penetrating mountain air without.

In this loitering crowd was a chore boy from one of the Fourth lake camps, a reckless, irresponsible fellow, but of unusual cunning and shrewdness. He had a greedy appetite, and most of the time was foolish with drink. On the morning of this day, while we were sailing down to Old Forge, he had calmly swallowed at one gulp a half pint of whisky, as the initiative to one of his terrible sprees. Later, luck at dice in the barroom and a comming-ling with genial souls had brought him to a condition where his smile never faded and his step was most uncertain.

The ceremony of the pole raising was announced for 2 o'clock. At that hour the ex-president had not arrived at the hotel, and the people who had gathered there were nervously moving about, disgusted with the weather and annoyed at the delay. In the interval George, the chore boy, ventured the remark that if the president didn't hurry he would get out on the piazza and make the speech himself. For this boldness he was dragged from the parlor to the more congenial atmosphere of the barroom.

Finally the former chief executive arrived. The crowd, which had formed on the slope of the lawn before the hotel, immediately revived and hurrahed and cheered the noted guest. The formalities of the ceremony were quickly disposed of by the long suffering committee and the chairman took the earliest opportunity to introduce Mr. Harrison.
The ex-president rose and stood by his chair, which had been placed some distance back from the piazza rail. An instant he regarded the crowd below. Apparently he was about to speak when the group that had pressed about the parlor door opened and George the chore boy, his trousers tucked into the tops of his great, coarse boots, his coat-sleeves falling over his hands and almost concealing them, his flannel shirt open at the neck—George, with his smile and his stagger highly developed—stepped out before the astonished assemblage and walked quickly to the railing.

Uncovering with great care his frouzy head, he laid his broad brimmed hat on the secretary's table.
Wholly unmindful of the gentleman over whose distinguished face there fluttered a half quizzical, half amused look, he turned to the crowd, and with all the confidence and assurance of a speaker who is conscious of the power of his words, said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I presume you came here to hear me speak." The presumption was too greatly exaggerated to pass unnoticed. Before George could further indicate the supposed desires of his audience, he was struggling in the hands of the irate committeemen, and the nails in his boot heels were drawing parallel lines on the boards of the piazza. His exit was through the same door that had marked his triumphant entry, and it was just inside this opening that he fell in a heap and the smile collapsed. After thus forcibly dismissing the intruder the members of the committee returned to their seats.

And then the president spoke.—

A Tune For Grant.

While Meade's army was marching out of the Wilderness, a drum corps in passing Grant's headquarters caught sight of the chief and at once struck up a then popular negro camp meeting air. Every one began to laugh. "What's the fun?" inquired the general. "Why," was the reply, "they are playing, 'Ain't I glad to get out ob de wilderness!'" The general smiled at the ready wit of the musicians, and said: "Well, with me a musical joke always requires explanation. I know only two tunes—one is 'Yankee Doodle,' and the other isn't."—San Francisco

FARADAY'S ANCESTRY.

It Proves Acceptable to the Sensitive English Upper Crust.

With a sigh of relief our English contemporaries announce the result of the investigation into the ancestral history of Michael Faraday.
Dismay and consternation were plainly visible everywhere when the insinuation was made recently that the family of the famous scientist occupied a humble place in the lower walks of life. The "nice people" who had been admiring the genius of Faraday were horrified at the thought that among his progenitors was a common "day laborer." This impression is now corrected, and joy and gladness fill the hearts of the fraternity on the other side.

A representative of the family,
"John W. Faraday of Hayle, Cornwall," furnishes the information that "one Robert Faraday married Elizabeth Dean, the owner of Clapham Wood Hall, in Yorkshire. This hall, it is said, was of some beauty, and of a style peculiar to that part of the country; architecturally, it was very effective. Robert Faraday was the great scientist's grandfather, his own father, Barnabas, being born at the hall." It is explained that he was one of a large family, the members of which had to shift for themselves when they left the parental abode, but particularly emphatic is the statement that "in no instance was their condition in life anything approaching that of a 'day laborer,' a class of men whose position at that period was peculiarly miserable and degraded."

Faraday's father was verger and sexton of the village church, leader of the choir and a shoemaker by trade. Faraday's uncle was the owner of a neighboring quarry and employed a number of "day laborers" and "was noted for his kindness to his employees." Faraday's father, James, formed an attachment for Margaret Hastwell, whose "father was a farmer and also an employer of day laborers." He was averse to the match, being ambitious for his daughter to marry some one who had more cash than a youth who came from Clapham Wood Hall was likely to have. It is also said that James "followed the calling of a blacksmith" in London, and eventually married Margaret and took her to London, where he had to fight his own battle, and like many another found it hard enough.
Michael's earlier years are described as a struggle against poverty.

All of which is very interesting, but scarcely worth the fuss that has been made about it. However, it seems as if old world prejudices must be consulted even when the recognition of genius of the highest order is involved.—Western Elec.

Many men who voted for the fusion ticket in the last election say they will not do it again. No man can afford to stand in the way of his own good. He who stands up and says I did wrong once but I will not do it again is made of the kind of stuff that God Almighty intended to put into men's composition.
